How to Build a Better Resume:

TOP 5 DOS AND DON'TS

Are you a recent graduate or a student? Is your work experience limited or even non-existent? Don't panic! You can still create a compelling resume. Follow these guiding principles from URI Alumni Career Services and you'll be off to a great start!

The Top Five Resume Dos and Don'ts:

Dos

1. Do review and customize your resume as needed for each submission. It's your primary promotional tool, which means it should be tailored for each potential employer.
2. Do include volunteer work, part time work, complex academic projects, awards, and internship experiences. All contribute to your story!
3. Do include a summary immediately after the header on the first page.
4. Do label your key sections and capitalize the section titles: Summary, Education, Experience, Awards, etc.
5. Do study your resume before each interview. Interviewers will ask about anything on the resume, so be prepared!

Don'ts

1. Don't use color, symbols, or logos that will draw attention away from your content—keep the resume simple.
2. Don't use multiple font styles and don't highlight words through a combination of italics, underlining and bolding. Just use bold to highlight.
3. Don't limit yourself to a one-page resume if you have enough internship and project experience, and other relevant information to take up two pages.
4. Don't write a one-line career objective. Instead, write a three- to four-sentence summary that highlights relevant academics or experience. Tailor the summary for each specific job.
5. Don't list all academic classes on the resume, just a few that are relevant to the job for which you are applying.
