DANIEL FISHMAN, 92, of 21 Pleasant St., a social worker for the City of Providence for 50 years before retiring in 1978, and known as "The Mayor of South Providence," died Thursday at Miriam Hospital. He was the husband of Mary (Kaplan) Fishman. Born in Providence, a son of the late Louis and Sarah (Spivack) Fishman, he had lived in Cranston for 22 years.

In his youth, Mr. Fishman won many trophies and medals as a track athlete in South Providence. Known as "The Home Run King," he was a star baseball player for the South Providence Grays, a team of the old Tim O'Neil Amateur League. His career ended when he was struck on the head by a pitched ball. He was associated with Progress for Providence.

Besides his wife he leaves a daughter, Selma "Mitzi" Resnick of Cranston; a sister, Mildred St. James of Cranston; two brothers, Irving Fishman of Providence and Harold Fishman of Warwick; and two grandchildren.

A graveside service will be held tomorrow at noon at Lincoln Park Cemetery, Post Road, Warwick. Burial will follow.
