Jamestown man killed when his car hits a tree

SOUTH KINGSTOWN — Jonathan Freiman, of 566 East Shore Drive, Jamestown, died yesterday afternoon after his car swerved off the eastbound side of Route 138 and hit a tree near Old Rose Hill Road.

According to South Kingstown Police Officer Caleb George, the accident reconstructionist who responded to the case, Freiman told a witness before passing out that he had fallen asleep while driving. The witness, a registered nurse from New Jersey, asked not to be identified.

George said that Freiman was in his late forties; his exact age was unavailable.

Freiman, who was alone and driving a green 1997 Jeep Cherokee Sport, was wearing his seat belt.

South Kingstown police, who received a call about the accident at 4:30 p.m., called a Connecticut-based Life Flight helicopter to the scene. George said that when Freiman went into cardiac arrest before he could be put on the helicopter, Life Flight followed its policy of not flying patients who do not have a good chance of survival.

Freiman was taken to South County Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at approximately 6 p.m., according to a hospital spokesman.
