JEWISH WELFARE DIRECTOR IS DEAD

Isadore Gandal, 41-year-old executive director of the Jewish Family Welfare Society, was found dead this afternoon in a second-floor storeroom of the Jewish Clothing Centre at 26 Lonsdale street.

His body was found hanging from a cord in the storeroom after police had been asked to investigate by Mrs. Tilda Kessler, Mr. Gandal's secretary, who became alarmed when she found notes he had left on his desk at the welfare society's office, 100 North Main street.

Mr. Gandal became director of the society, an agency of the Providence Community Fund, in November, 1937. A native of Bethlehem, Pa., he had served on the examining board of the New York Civil Service Commission before coming here and was a graduate of Lehigh University and Muhlenberg College.

He lived at 42 Benevolent street and leaves his wife, Mrs. Rose Gandal.
