

GOLDBERG, LAWRENCE
JUL 2-17-12

Lawrence (Larry) Y.
Goldberg, 80

ELSEWHERE - Lawrence Goldberg, who had served on the national staff of three Republican presidential campaigns, and who served in the Nixon White House, died Jan. 29.

Educated at Brown University and Harvard Law School, he spent his life participating in the electoral process, helping implement public policy and serving as a leader both locally and nationally. His major motivation was as a lifelong Zionist and the importance he attached to having both major political parties seek support from the Jewish community.

A national co-chair of Republicans for Clinton-Gore in 1992, he held national leadership positions with the American Jewish Committee, American Israel Public Affairs Committee, CAMERA, Anti-Defamation League, UJA, HIAS and other organizations. In Rhode Island, he served as founding chairman of the Community Relations Council and vice president of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island. He was instrumental in the fight to bring Jews out of the former Soviet Union.

Born in Providence on July 21, 1931, the son of Jean and Jesse Goldberg, he is survived by his wife Nancy; children, David (Roslyn) and Melissa Bailey (Chris); stepchildren, Jonathan Barker (Angela) and Lori Barker; and grandchildren, Benjamin Goldberg, Amanda Bailey, Harrison Bailey and Adam Barker.

Contributions may be made to the Palliative Care Program of Jewish Family and Children's Services of San Francisco, or the Community Relations Council.
