alone in a Ford station wagon, veered across two lanes and slid broadside into the front of a Cadillac Seville driven by Alveri Costa-Mello Sr., 71, of Rickard Road, Foster, the police said.

A state medical examiner pronounced Goldfine dead at the scene. Costa-Mello was taken to Rhode Island Hospital, where he was reported in stable condition last night.

His son Larry Costa-Mello, 41, who was a front-seat passenger in the Cadillac, suffered multiple injuries including a broken collarbone, and was also taken to Rhode Island Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Goldfine's car, which was heavily damaged on the passenger's side, spun on impact and came to a rest on the side of the road, the police said.

Its hatch, detached by the crash, lay on the ground 20 feet away.

The front end of Costa-Mello's car was heavily damaged. It came to a rest facing southeast in the lane where it was hit.

Foster Police Chief Donald Kettelle said yesterday's accident was one of the worst he has seen.
