Mark I. Goldman; English professor at URI

NORTH KINGSTOWN — Mark I. Goldman, 68, of 205 Sea Breeze Drive, an English professor at the University of Rhode Island for the past 35 years, died Sunday at home. He was the husband of Grace Frenzel.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., a son of the late Solomon and Bessie (Michaels) Goldman, he lived in Kingston for 27 years before moving to North Kingstown seven years ago.

Mr. Goldman was an Army veteran of World War II and served in the European Theater. He received a bachelor's degree from Syracuse University in 1949, and a doctorate from the University of Minnesota in 1955.

He taught at Rensselaer Polytechnic Instutute, Troy, N.Y., before joining the URI faculty, where he was associated with Hillel, and served as an adviser to many students seeking advanced degrees.

Mr. Goldman was author of numerous works, including a book on Virginia Woolf as literary critic. He was also author of several works of poetry, and a book of poetry, My Father's Spats and Other Poems.

"He was an absolute delight to work with," said Associate Professor of English Sally F. Burke. "He was always a gentleman, always willing to share ideas about literature."

Besides his wife he leaves a son, Eric Goldman of New York; two daughters, Leda Bartee of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Yael Goldman of Kingston; a brother, Sam Goldman of Las Vegas, Nev.; a sister, Myriam Duchin of Livingston, N.J., and two grandchildren.

A graveside service will be held Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Rhode Island Veterans Cemetery, Exeter.
