Foster man is killed by car while walking

FOSTER — A 49-year-old Foster man died after being struck by a car late Friday as he was walking along Hartford Pike (Route 101).

The man, Steven L. Horovitz, of Hartford Pike, was taken by Foster Rescue to Rhode Island Hospital, Providence. He died of his injuries either en route or soon after arriving, according to Foster Police Chief Robert E. Coyne.

Coyne said Horovitz was walking "partially in the lane of travel" on a dark stretch of road about a half-mile from his home. The driver — Roseanne V. Camacho, 64, of Providence — was traveling easterly and struck him near 174 Hartford Pike about 11:15 p.m. She pulled over immediately and notified authorities, Coyne said.

Foster police have not filed any charges, but the accident is under investigation. The police said speed and alcohol were not factors. The Foster police are asking for the public's help in finding Horovitz's black Jeep Wrangler, with Rhode Island registration SH-25. Please call (401) 397-3317 with any information.
