DR. MICHAEL I. LEEMAN, 57, of Newton, Mass., formerly of Providence, founder of the Longevity Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., died Friday at Wingate of Needham, in Needham, Mass.

Born in Newburgh, N.Y., a son of Rabbi Saul Leeman and Dr. Elsie Leeman, both of Providence, he had lived in Providence and California before moving to Newton last year.

A graduate of Classical High School, in Providence, he received a bachelor's degree from Brandeis University, a master's in computer science from the University of Massachusetts, and his medical degree from the University of California.

Dr. Leeman was the founder and former operator of the Longevity Clinic, in La Jolla, Calif. He previously had been an obstetric anesthesiologist at Scripps Hospital, in San Diego, Calif.

Besides his parents, he leaves a sister, Deborah S. Robbins, and two brothers, Joel R. and David E. Leeman, all of Newton; four nieces; and three nephews.

The funeral will be held today at 11 a.m. in the Levine Chapel, 470 Harvard St., Brookline, Mass. Burial will be in Baker Street Cemetery, in the West Roxbury section of Boston.
