IRVING M. LEVEN, 84, of 355 Blackstone Blvd., proprietor for 35 years of Central Tool Co., Cranston, before selling the business 13 years ago, died Saturday at Miriam Hospital in Providence. He was the husband of Pauline (Levine) Leven.

Born in Logan, Utah, he was a son of the late Samuel and Fan (Levenson) Leven. He was a resident of the Providence and Seekonk areas since 1952, previously living in Hartford, Conn., and Syracuse, N.Y. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1934.

Mr. Leven was a past president of the Rhode Island Audubon Society, and a member of the Brown University Committee on Bio-Medical Ethics. He was also a member of the Review Club of Providence.

Besides his wife, he leaves two daughters, Rhoda Flaxman of Seekonk, and Joan Mandle of Oakland, Calif.; a sister, Ruth Greenberg of Providence; a brother, Stanley Leven of West Hartford, Conn.; five grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

The funeral service will be held at 12 p.m. tomorrow at Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel, 825 Hope St., Providence. Burial will be in Sharon Memorial Park, Sharon, Mass.
