MILLER
INABETH
(RABINOWITZ)

PJB 1-20-03

INABETH (RABINOWITZ) MILLER, 67, of Cambridge, Mass., formerly of Providence, an award-winning educator and author, died Saturday at Brigham & Womens Hospital, Boston.

She was the wife of William Miller. Born in Providence, a daughter of the late Sidney and Minna (Black) Rabinowitz, she had lived in Providence as a youth. She received a bachelor's degree from Brown University, a master's degree from Simmons College, and a doctorate from Boston University.

She was a leader in the use of technology to foster learning in children and adults. She was on President Clinton's education transition team in 1992, and was awarded the 1994 Computerworld/Smithsonian Information Technology Leadership Award for Education.

She was the author of several books and many articles.

She was chairwoman emeritus of the United States Distance Learning Association, and was a university lecturer, teacher and librarian.

She was president of the Jason Foundation for Education, vice president of academic affairs for Massachusetts Communications College, director of educational outreach for Boston Museum of Science, and director of Gutman Library, Harvard Graduate School of Education.

Besides her husband, she leaves two sons, Scott Miller of Paris, France, and Jeffrey Miller of Needham, Mass.; two daughters, Cathy Schlosberg of Merion, Pa., and Marcy Schaffir of New Albany, Ohio; a brother, Howard Rabinowitz of Warwick; and nine grandchildren.

The funeral service will be held Wednesday at 11 a.m. in Levine Chapel, 470 Harvard St., Brookline, Mass. Burial will be in Sharon (Mass.) Memorial Park.