Funeral today in Providence for Dr. Eugene M. Nelson

NORTH KINGSTOWN — A funeral service was to be held today at noon for Dr. Eugene M. Nelson, 66, a long-time Providence orthodontist who was killed at his summer home in Saunderstown Wednesday in a lawn tractor accident that left him pinned in a foot of water.

Police said that as Dr. Nelson was trying to free his tractor from the edge of an embankment where it became stuck about 4:50 p.m., he and the tractor tumbled into a pond. After being alerted to the accident by Dr. Nelson’s 9-year-old grandson, fire rescue workers extricated him from the pond and took him to South County Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

The state medical examiner’s office is investigating the accident.

Dr. Nelson, of 311 Freeman Parkway, Providence, and Gilbert Stuart Road, Saunderstown, was the husband of Jane (Sapinsley) Nelson. Born in Providence, he was a son of the late Boris and Minnie (Rachevsky) Nelson.

Dr. Nelson was a well-respected figure in the state whose interests extended well beyond his work in orthodontics. He was a past president of the Rhode Island Dental Association, and was a leader in forming the first clinic team at Rhode Island Hospital for the treatment of patients with cleft palates.

He was, for many years, chairman of the board of governors of Gordon School, and headed the building committee that planned and directed the school moving from Providence to East Providence in 1963. In June, he was master of ceremonies for the school’s celebration of the 25th anniversary of the move.

A tennis enthusiast, he was credited with pioneering indoor tennis in Rhode Island, building an indoor court complex in East Providence.

Dr. Nelson took a strong interest in such issues as peace and conservation and was a member of the Narrow River Preservation Society, Save the Bay and the Audubon Society.

Dorothy Hall, headmistress at Gordon School, yesterday described Dr. Nelson as an honest, committed man who “always gave us good advice.”

“Gene was the kind of person we felt was immortal,” she said. “I believe his death has brought shock waves not only for us here at the school, but all around the state.”

Former state Senate Minority Leader Lila M. Sapinsley, a sister-in-law, said Dr. Nelson was always seen as a “warm person,” adored by the children and patients with whom he worked, and by his colleagues.

Dr. Nelson, graduated from the former Rhode Island State College, now the University of Rhode Island, in 1943, and received his dental degrees from the University of Maryland and Tufts University Dental School.

He was a former chairman of the religious school board of Temple Beth-El, Providence, a past board member of the Jewish Community Center, and a past president of the University of Maryland Alumni Association.

Dr. Nelson served on the staffs of Rhode Island and Miriam Hospitals, on the faculty of Tufts School of Dental Medicine, the Boston University School of Medicine, the URI School of Dental Hygiene and the Harvard University School of Medicine.

During World War II he was a captain in the Army Dental Corps.

Besides his wife he leaves a daughter, Pamela Erskine of Providence; two sons, Barry Nelson of Philadelphia and Jonathan Nelson of Providence; a brother, Howard Nelson of Cranston, and four grandchildren.

The service was to be held at Temple Beth-El, Orchard Avenue.

Mrs. Gussie Nelson Dies; Honored for Bond Sales

Mrs. Gussie (Zura) Nelson, the gray-haired little woman who sold more than half a million dollars worth of war savings bonds during World War II, died today.

She was the first Rhode Islander to receive the Treasury Department's medal for such services. Typically, Mrs. Nelson received the medal and the personal thanks of then Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder in the kitchen of her modest home.

Mrs. Nelson had a short explanation for her devotion to America. "Roger Williams ran away from Massachusetts to Rhode Island to get his freedom," she said. "I came from Russia to Rhode Island to find freedom."

Mrs. Nelson, 63, had resided at 99 Hillside Ave. recently. At the time of her war activity she lived at 200 Orms St.

The widow of Abraham Nelson died at Miriam Hospital after a short illness. She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Mary Goodman of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Mrs. Harry Penn of Providence.

Mrs. Nelson was born in Russia on April 1, 1893, a daughter of the late Morris and Shima Zura. She had been a resident of Providence for the past half century.

She was sent out of Petrograd by her parents when a 10-year-old child because of the troublesome times. After a stay with friends in Denmark, she came to this country.

Mrs. Nelson always recalled sadly how she saw her mother slump to the railroad platform in a faint as her train pulled out of the station. She never was to see her mother again.

"I have enjoyed the opportunity to be free and to think freely in this country," Mrs. Nelson said when asked about her charitable and patriotic work. "I cherish my freedom with all my heart. I'm only paying this country back for what it has offered me."

Her husband had interrupted rabbinical studies to flee Russia. He was working as a polisher in a Providence jewelry factory when Mrs. Nelson met him. They set up a shop at 29 North Davis St. and began selling clothing and upholstery materials. Later they operated a similar business on Orms Street.

Mrs. Nelson developed into an outstanding salesman for worthy causes over the years.

Pearl Nathan, longtime volunteer at RISD Museum, dies at 103

The mother of cookbook author Joan Nathan was a R.I. celebrity, known for her zest for life.

By Donita Naylor
Journal Staff Writer

PROVIDENCE — Pearl Nathan, 103, who volunteered for 70 years at the Rhode Island School of Design Museum and for whom the museum’s Café Pearl is named, died early Monday, her family said.

She had taken a walk Sunday with her daughter, cookbook author and food writer Joan Nathan, 74, who is visiting from Washington, D.C., and they stopped in at Café Pearl for lunch.

“Every guard greeted her,” the author wrote to friends in an email saying her mother had died in her sleep about 3:30 a.m. at her home in Tockwotton on the Waterfront in East Providence.

The former Pearl Gluck was born in 1913 in New York City to parents who operated Kops, a dress and hat store on Madison Avenue at 55th Street. She graduated from Barnard College in 1934 and married chemical engineer Ernest Nathan in 1937.

Alan Nathan, 76, of Barrington, the oldest of their three children, said Monday from Jackson Hole, Wyoming, where he is skiing with his children and grandchildren, that his parents met in New York’s Catskill Mountains, where hotels would arrange “the 1930s version of online dating.”

Joan Nathan wrote in a New York Times piece in 2003 that when her mother was about 50, her father’s business took a downturn and Mrs. Nathan began teaching English at Barrington High School, where she became head of the English Department.

In 2008, she received the Knowledge is Power Award for her work with Volunteers in Providence Schools.

RISD Museum Director John Smith said Monday that he ran into Mrs. Nathan and her daughter in the cafe on Sunday. “Pearl was her usual lively and lovely self,” he said.

“It’s astonishing when you encounter someone with her zest for life,” he said.

When he was born in 1959, Smith said Monday afternoon, Mrs. Nathan was a museum docent, “leading hundreds of schoolchildren through the gallery and getting them excited about art.”

“It was truly an honor to have known her,” said cookbook author Ellen Brown, the founding food editor of USA Today and the Providence Journal’s Smart Cooking columnist.

Brown said that although cooking was not Mrs. Nathan’s strong suit, she enjoyed great food and a cocktail. “She had five generations of friends,” Brown said. “Even at 103, she was really a force.”

Mrs. Nathan and Dorothy Licht, the widow of former Gov. Frank Licht, appeared together in a Jewish cooking series on PBS, but in 2001, she told then-Journal Food Editor Donna Lee, “I’m not known as a cook. The only time anyone talks about my cooking is because I’m Joan Nathan’s mother.”

Richard Nathan, 69, of Bristol, R.I., and Italy, is Mrs. Nathan’s younger son, and her funeral at Temple Beth-El in Providence will be delayed until 11 a.m. Friday to allow Richard time to return from Italy, Joan Nathan said. She said her mother had asked Rabbi Emeritus Leslie Gutterman to officiate at her funeral.

Sugarman Sinai Memorial Chapel is handling arrangements.

She also leaves six grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Dr. Samuel Nathans, Anesthetist, Is Dead

Dr. Samuel H. Nathans, of the Watch Hill Road, one of Rhode Island's best known anesthetists, died last night at the Westerly Hospital following an illness of several weeks. He was 65 and the husband of Mrs. Jean (Shain) Nathans.

Dr. Nathans, whose medical career spanned 38 years, was a former chief of anesthesia at the Westerly Hospital and he and Mrs. Nathans were the former owners and managers of the Watch Hill Road Nursing Home, now Watch Hill Manor.

His funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the Sharah Zedek Synagogue on Union St. Burial will be private in a Boston cemetery.

Dr. Nathans was born in Boston Aug. 4, 1906, the son of the late Isaac and Mary (Blonder) Nathans.

He graduated from Boston Latin High School and from Harvard University and received his medical degree in 1933 from Tufts University. He interred at Fall River, Mass., General Hospital, and in 1934 opened a general practice in Providence, during which he was an anesthetist visitor in the medical outpatient departments of the Miriam and the Rhode Island hospitals in that city.

Dr. Nathans served two tours of active duty in the U.S. Army. He was a medical officer from 1935 to 1937 at the Civilian Conservation Corps camp in Escoheag, and was recalled to the service a year later because of the threat of a world war. His second assignment ended when he suffered a coronary attack.

Between the two rounds of duty, Dr. Nathans had opened an office in Hope Valley. Following his second release, he returned to that community for a limited practice.

Dr. Nathans had specialized in anesthesiology since 1945, after completing study under some of the leading authorities in that field of medicine. They included Dr. Robert Hingson at Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, where he concentrated on the caudal method; Dr. Emily Rovenstine at Bellevue Hospital in New York City and Dr. Harold Griffiths in Montreal, Canada. He also had a 15-month residency in anesthesia at Harvard Hospital under Dr. Curtis Hickox.

Dr. Nathans succeeded the late Dr. Harold Kenyon as the head of anesthesia at the Westerly Hospital. He participated in all affairs of the medical staff and was particularly active on the building committees which developed the extensive modernization and expansion programs at the hospital in recent years. He was also a member of the staff of the South County Hospital in Wakefield.

He was affiliated with local, state and national medical associations and with various anesthesia organizations, being a charter member and past secretary of the Rhode Island Society of Anesthesiologists, and from 1956 to 1962 was the Rhode Island-Connecticut director for the American Society of Anesthesiologists.

Dr. Nathans held membership in the Congregation Sharah Zedek and was a past president of the Westerly Lodge of B'Nai B'rith. One of his main interests was photography and when his health permitted he was an ardent sailor.

Dr. and Mrs. Nathans acquired the former Tristam Babcock estate, located between two coves of the Pawcatuck River, a number of years ago. They converted the carriage barn into one of the residential showplaces of Southern Rhode Island, and made extensive improvements and alterations to other buildings on the property.

Dr. and Mrs. Nathans, as certified Rhode Island nursing home administrators, managed the 60-bed nursing home for five years. They disposed of the facility to Edacare Inc. of Boston, which operates a chain of nursing homes, in February of 1971.

Besides his wife, Dr. Nathans is survived by a sister, Mrs. Freda Shafrock and two nieces in California.

Services For Noted Educator

Funeral services were held yesterday morning (Wednesday) at Temple Israel, Riverway, for Samuel A. Nemzoff, well-known for more than half a century in local and national religious and secular education circles, who died Monday at age 78 after a long illness.

Samuel Nemzoff

A master at Boston Latin School for 31 years, Mr. Nemzoff was principal of the Temple Israel Religious School for 32 years from which he retired eight years ago. He also served 18 years with the Bureau of Jewish Education in Boston and with the adult education program of Hebrew College in Brookline.

He was honored by his religious school colleagues with the presidency of the National Association of Temple Educators and also of Camp Yavneh, affiliated with Hebrew College.

Samuel Alexander Nemzoff was born January 1, 1905, in Kiev, Russia, the son of Samuel and Zelda (Leavitt) Nemzoff. He prepared at Boston Latin School and received his A.B. in 1925 and his Ed. M. in 1927, both from Harvard. In 1928 he married Sophie Marcovitz, who died in 1969. He married Frieda Baxt in 1970. He had two daughters: Judith Ann Joseph of Providence, R.I., and Ruth Esther Berman of Nashua, N.H.

Mr. Nemzoff, who was noted for his original presentations for Confirmation classes, also had works published by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations (Reform). Among them were "Teaching the Prophets" and "Confirmation Sampler."

In addition to his wife and daughters, Mr. Nemzoff leaves five grandchildren; two sisters, Ruth Arnold of Ogunquit, Me., and Edith Kaden of Florida.

In the Fiftieth Anniversary Report of his class at Harvard College, Mr. Nemzoff wrote: "Education, religious and secular, has many frustrations, especially in these troubled times. The human race is not easy to bring up. But there is great joy in watching young people grow up. There are those moments in the classroom when you have the class in complete rapport with you — this constitutes the true joy of teaching. There are memories of children entering the kindergarten, watching them grow up, greeting them when, as adults, they enroll their children in the school. There is the pleasure about reading about former students and their achievements and the hope that you have been of some positive influence, however small, in their lives."

Commenting on this commentary, Rabbi Gittelsohn in his eulogy observed that the hope of educator Samuel Nemzoff had indeed been fulfilled.

Jacob Neusner, influential scholar of rabbinic Judaism, dies

JTA – Jacob Neusner, one of the most influential voices in American Jewish intellectual life in the past half-century, has died.

Neusner, one of the most published authors in history, wrote or edited more than 950 books, died Oct. 8 at his home in New York. He was 84.

His funeral was Oct. 10 on the campus of Bard College in upstate New York, where he has taught theology since 1994. He also taught at Brown University and at Columbia University, the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, Brandeis University, Dartmouth College and the University of South Florida.

Earlier this summer, the NYU Press released an extensive biography of Neusner titled “Jacob Neusner: An American Jewish Iconoclast” by Aaron W. Hughes. “[In the ’50s, there took place an explosion of Jewish studies on campus, and Neusner had a very significant role in training a new generation of scholars to occupy these new positions,” wrote Jack Riemer, a rabbi and author, in a review of Hughes’ biography of Neusner titled “Jacob Neusner: An American Jewish Iconoclast” by Aaron W. Hughes.

Prior to entering Harvard University as an undergraduate, Neusner, who was raised by American Jewish parents in West Hartford, Connecticut, had no formal Jewish education.

Neusner graduated from Harvard and spent a year at Oxford University before enrolling in the Jewish Theological Seminary’s rabbinical school.

His area of expertise was rabbinic Judaism and rabbinical Jewish writings. Two of his best-known textbooks for general audiences are “The Way of Torah: An Introduction to Judaism” and “Judaism: An Introduction.”

The entire Babylonian Talmud, the entire Palestinian Talmud, most of the Midrash, and many other indispensable books were made available to the general reader by Neusner.”

Neusner’s influence also extended to the study of other religions in books he wrote and conferences he held exploring how Judaism influenced and was influenced by Islam and Christianity.

A fierce defender of his own work, Neusner often tussled publicly with rivals and critics. But even those who disagreed with him acknowledged the depth and breadth of his scholarship.

Prior to entering Harvard University as an undergraduate, Neusner, who was raised by American Jewish parents in West Hartford, Connecticut, had no formal Jewish education.

Rabbi Louis Newman, National Jewish Leader, Rhode Island Native, Dies

A funeral service was held Friday in New York City for Rabbi Louis I. Newman, 78, a national Jewish leader and a former Providence resident, who died there Thursday.

He served as Rabbi of Congregation Rodfei Shalom, 7 West 83rd St., for 41 years.

Rabbi Newman lived at 271 Central Park West. He had been ill for about a year.

He was born in Providence on Dec. 20, 1893, graduated from Brown University in 1913, studied at the University of California and received a Ph.D. degree from Columbia University in 1924 and an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree from Brown in 1942.

Rabbi Newman, an early advocate of establishing the State of Israel, won prominence for his leadership of the Jewish cause, his creative work in Jewish education and his innovative concept of the role and services of the Reform synagogue. As long ago as 1922, his book, "A Jewish University in America?" provided an ideological foundation for what was to become Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., a generation later.

He became a founder of the Jewish Institute of Religion for training rabbis in New York City, where he taught homiletics for a number of years. The institute later merged with Hebrew Union College.

Surviving are his widow, Lucile, three sons, Jeremy, Jonathan and Daniel; a sister, Mrs. Charles I. Cooper of Los Angeles, and 19 grandchildren.
Rabbi Louis I. Newman, a national Jewish leader who served for 41 years as rabbi of Congregation Rodeph Sholom, 7 West 83rd Street, died here yesterday after a year's illness. He was 73 years old and lived at 271 Central Park West.

Rabbi Newman, an early advocate of establishing the State of Israel, won prominence for his leadership of the Jewish cause, his creative work in Jewish education and his innovative concept of the role and services of the Reform synagogue. As long ago as 1922, his book, "A Jewish University in America?" provided an ideological foundation for what was to become Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., a generation later.

That same year, under the leadership of his mentor, the late Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Rabbi Newman became a founder of the Jewish Institute of Religion for training rabbis in New York City, where he taught homiletics for a number of years. The institute was later merged with Hebrew Union College.

A leading Zionist among Reform rabbis since 1913, Rabbi Newman in 1930 became a follower of Vladimir Jabotinsky and the new Zionist Organization and vigorously worked to restore a Jewish state in Palestine. In 1939-40 he became a founder and leader of the American Friends of a Jewish Palestine, which sponsored the "Aliyah Beit," the extra-quota immigration into Palestine, and the program of the Irgun Zvai Leumi later the Herut (Freedom) party in Israel, which helped fight the British blockade of Palestine, landing thousands of refugees on its shores.

Observer at U.N.

In March, 1946, Rabbi Newman represented the Central Conference of American Rabbis as an observer at the Security Council of the United Nations. When he was called in 1930 to Rodeph Sholom, which this year is celebrating its 130th anniversary, his innovative ideas included establishing a Sunday morning service featuring forum discussions with such figures as Jan Masaryk, Leon Feuchtwanger and Franz Werfel.

Rabbi Newman recognized the needs of various age groups within the synagogue and was a pioneer in the concept of Temple House with its many educational and social activities under the temple roof. He enhanced synagogue worship through the dramatic interpretation of the arts.

The author of many cantatas, confirmation services, hymns and biblical pageants and plays, Rabbi Newman also wrote the play, "The Woman at the Wall," which was later rewritten as a libretto for the opera, "Tamar and Judah," for which the Israeli composer, the late Marc Lavry, composed the music. The opera had its world premiere at Rodeph Sholom in 1969.

Among Rabbi Newman's works were "Jewish Influence on Christian Reform Movements," "Talmudic Anthology," "Hasidic Anthology" and "The Little Zadik," a play. His sermons have been compiled in various anthologies. A typical was his Yom Kippur sermon two years ago when he called on the Jewish people to "let optimism guide us to better days."

"Despair," he said, "comes easily as we look upon the anarchy, violence and warfare of this decade. But we must not be overcome by hopelessness. On the contrary, we must appreciate that every era is marked by severe problems, and that the only way out of them is through them."

Established Nursery

His love for children and Jewish education climaxed his ministry with the establishment of the Rodeph Sholom Nursery School and, two years ago, with his colleague, Rabbi Gunter Hirschberg, in the founding of the Rodeph Sholom Day School. Dr. Newman was born in Providence, R.I., on Dec. 20, 1893, graduated from Brown University in 1913, studied at the University of California and received a Ph.D. degree from Columbia in 1924 and a Doctor of Divinity degree from Brown in 1942. In 1918 he received his ordination from Rabbi Wise, Martin, A. Meyer and Sidney E. Goldstein.

Before coming to Rodeph Sholom, he served as rabbi of Temple Emanu-El in San Francisco.

Surviving are his widow, Lucile, 3 sons, Jeremy, Jonathan and Daniel; a sister, Mrs. Charles L. Cooper of Los Angeles, and 10 grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held today at 1 P.M. at Rodeph Sholom. A memorial service will be held Friday, March 24, at 8 P.M.
