PROVIDENCE

OSTER, STEPHEN ALAN
February 9th, 1943 to June 7th, 2013. Born in Providence, Rhode Island resided in Greenwich, CT

Stephen A. Oster, beloved husband, father and grandfather, died yesterday at New York Presbyterian/Weill Cornell Hospital surrounded by his loving family. A resident of Greenwich, Connecticut, he was just 70.

Oster, a graduate of the University of Rhode Island, was an accomplished businessman, humanitarian, esteemed professor, world-record holding pilot, active philanthropist, and passionate fisherman.

His career began at A.J. Oster company in Rhode Island where he worked and cooperatively developed virtually every facet of the company's growth; taking it from a small family metals distribution company into America's largest brass mill products manufacturing and distribution service center, as well as the world's largest manufacturer of pewter metal.

After selling the company to Cookson Group, he charted a new course for himself in the merchant banking world by establishing Oster Industries and The Greenwich Consulting Group, a private consulting and investment company specializing in real estate and venture capital.

Although his travels and career took him all over the world, his re-
