Dr. S. Jerome Port

Providence native was physician, associate professor at UCLA

LOS ANGELES — Dr. S. Jerome Port, 54, a native of Providence, died June 4 at his home. He was the husband of Susan (Watson) Port.

Dr. Port was in private practice in Beverly Hills for 24 years, specializing in internal medicine and cardiovascular diseasess. He was on the staffs of Cedar-Sinai Medical Center, Midway Hospital, Wesgate Hospital and Century City Hospital. He also was an associate clinical professor of medicine at UCLA.

Born in Providence, he was the son of Mary (Foster) Port of Worcester, Mass., and the late Samuel Port. He had lived in Calfornia 30 years.

Dr. Port was a Brown University graduate, and received his medical degree from Tufts University in 1957. He went to the Pacific Coast for his internship.

Besides his wife and mother he leaves two sons, Steven and Marc Port, and two daughters, Adrienne and Shelley Port, all in California; a sister, Shirlee Edinburg of Worcester, Mass.; and a grandchild.

PJB 6-26-86

PORT, Jerome