OBITUARIES

Abraham Obrish, 81, founder of Standard Plumbing & Heating

NARRAGANSETT — Abraham Robrish, 81, who maintained a summer residence at 81 Congdon St., the founder of Standard Plumbing & Heating Co. in Providence and its proprietor for 50 years before retiring three years ago, died yesterday at Miriam Hospital. He was the husband of Ruth (Botvin) Robrish.

Born in Providence, he was a son of the late Harry and Fannie Robrish. He lived in Providence and Cranston before establishing his winter home in Pembroke Pines, Fla., 10 years ago.

Mr. Robrish was a member of Temple Beth David in Narragansett and had been a member of the former Temple Beth Israel in Providence. He also was a member of the Orpheus Masonic Lodge and the Rhode Island Plumbers Association.

Besides his wife, he leaves two daughters, Freyda Feldman of Newport and Carole Robrish of Narragansett; a son, Joel Robrish of Coral Gables, Fla.; two sisters, Paula Funk of Yorktown Heights, N.Y., and Celia Torgan of Stratford, Conn.; and nine grandchildren.

The funeral will be Sunday at 11 a.m. at Mount Sinai Memorial Chapel, 825 Hope St., Providence. Burial will be in Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick.

ROBRISH, ABRAHAM
