SATLOFF, MORRIS

PROVIDENCE

SATLOFF, MORRIS,
a public accountant and longtime resident of Providence, passed away Sunday evening at the Philip Hulitar Hospice Center.
He was 89.

Born on March 25, 1921, to Celia (Zipe) and Charles (Chaskel) Zatloff in the village of Shenderivka in what is now Ukraine, Mr. Satloff immigrated to America in 1923 with his parents, brother Irving (Reevan) and younger sister, Leah, who passed away in infancy. He completed primary and secondary schools in Providence, including the old Hope High School, and graduated from the University of Rhode Island in 1943. During World War II, Mr. Satloff served in North Africa and Italy as a clerk and rabbi's assistant in the U.S. Army Air Force. With the help of the GI Bill, he received his master's degree in business administration from New York University, after which he returned to Providence and began a successful career as public accountant and real estate investor, retiring only in 2008.

Mr. Satloff was, throughout his life, a member of Temple Emanu-El in Providence, a life member of the Touro Fraternal Association and a fifty-plus year member of
