George Triedman Dies; Was Justice Dept. Aide

Local Attorney Headed Civil Rights Section

George Triedman

George Triedman, Providence attorney, died this morning in Jane Brown Hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Triedman, husband of Ruth (Tinkos) Triedman, of 44 Alfred Stone Road, had been a member of the Rhode Island Bar since 1925.

Last July he resigned from the position of chief of the Justice Department's civil rights section.

A close friend of Attorney General McGrath for years, he had been appointed a special assistant United States attorney general on Jan. 5, 1950.

At the time, McGrath said Triedman was giving up his Providence law practice at a considerable financial sacrifice to take the $10,000-a-year civil rights job.

Mr. Triedman was state counsel for the Home Owners Loan Corporation in Rhode Island from 1935 to 1939 and was a member of the advisory committee of the Rhode Island Cash Sickness Fund from 1946 to 1948.

He was Rhode Island director of finance for the Democratic National Committee.

Mr. Triedman was born in Haverhill, Mass., Feb. 5, 1903. He graduated from Boston University Law School in 1924 and became a member of the Massachusetts bar in that year.

The funeral will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. at the Temple Beth El on Broad Street. In addition to the widow, survivors include a son, Herbert L. Triedman.
