OBITUARY

Dr. H. Triedman Dies at 59

Dr. Harry Triedman, 59, a physician and surgeon in Pawtucket for 35 years, died suddenly this morning at his home, 224 Raleigh Ave., in that city.

The Pawtucket Fire Department Rescue Squad was called to the Triedman home at 8:15 this morning to administer oxygen, but the doctor was dead when they arrived.

Born in Haverhill, Mass. July 8, 1898, a son of the late Louis and Esther (Ornstein) Triedman, he had been a resident of Pawtucket since 1923 when he came to the city as an intern at Memorial Hospital. Dr. Triedman was on the surgical staffs at Memorial, Miriam and Roger Williams Hospitals.

Dr. Triedman helped set up the program of the Rhode Island Disability Compensation Commission, and served on the commission until his retirement last March. He was past president of the Miriam Hospital staff association, a fellow of the International College of Surgeons and the American Medical Association. He was a member of the Rhode Island, Providence and Pawtucket medical societies. He was a member of Temple Beth-El, Jenks Lodge, F. & A.M. of Pawtucket and the Palestine Temple of the Shrine.

He graduated from Tufts Medical School in 1922.

Besides his wife, Charlotte (Freedman) Triedman, he is survived by two sons, Dr. Leonard J. Triedman of Providence, resident physician at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston, and Dr. M. Howard Triedman, resident physician at the Neurological Institute, New York City and two grandchildren.

The funeral will be held Thursday at 1 p.m. at the Max Sugarman Funeral Home, 458 Hope St. at Doyle Avenue, Providence. Burial will be in Congregation of the Sons of Israel and David Cemetery, Reservoir Avenue, Providence.
