WEISS, NATHAN

Nathan Weiss; board chairman of National Office Products, dies

PROVIDENCE — Nathan Weiss, 85, of 293 Doyle Ave., chairman of the board of National Office Products, died yesterday at Miriam Hospital. He was the husband of the late Anne (Kritz) Weiss.

Born in Bayonne, N.J., a son of the late Hyman and Rachel (Lazarus) Weiss, he lived in Providence for more than 70 years.

Mr. Weiss and his brother, Samuel Weiss, founded the stationery and supply business in 1919, and later acquired the A. Arnold Co., the Bene Co., the Pulner Paper Co. and the State Office Supply Co., all in Rhode Island, and Duplicating Products and O'Brien Office Products, both in Massachusetts.

He was a member of Temple Beth-El and its Mens Club, a former member of Temple Emanu-El and its Mens Club, the Touro Fraternal Association, the United Commercial Travelers, B'nai B'rith and the Jewish Home for the Aged.

Mr. Weiss was a member of the Providence Free Loan Association and the Miriam Hospital, a past director of the National Office Furniture Association, a past director of the Criterion, the National Office Products Association and the National Machine Dealers Association, a former member of the Seekonk Club and the Pawtucket Chamber of Commerce.

He leaves a son, Howard S. Weiss; a daughter, Barbara Kaplan, both of Providence, and three grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held tomorrow at 11 a.m. at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel, 458 Hope St. Burial will be in Lincoln Park Cemetery, Warwick.

Out of Respect for the Memory
of
Our Founder and Friend
Nathan Weiss
National Office Products, Inc.
will be closed all day tomorrow.