Rose Winston, 88; textile designer

PROVIDENCE — Rose Winston, 88, of the Regency Apartments, Broadway, a textile designer whose work is among historical exhibits at Williamsburg, Va., died early yesterday at home. She was the widow of Army Lt. Col. Frank Langham Winston.

Born in Woonsocket, she was a daughter of the late Abraham and Ida Colitz.

Mrs. Winston spent some early years in Providence, and was a charter member of the Rhode Island Motor Corps of the American Red Cross in World War I. She was a former visiting lecturer at the Rhode Island School of Design. Later, while in New York City, she was a volunteer teacher of Braille. She lived in Pennsylvania before returning to Providence in 1976.

An independent designer, she spent a period in Williamsburg when the colonial restoration was under way, and was commissioned to create bedspreads and draperies, her specialties, for exhibit there.

Mrs. Winston was a member of Temple Beth-El and its Sisterhood.

She leaves a sister, Martha Colitz of Providence.

A funeral service will be held Tuesday at Temple Beth-El, Orchard Avenue. Burial will be in the family mausoleum at Congregation Sons of Israel & David Cemetery, Providence.
