Longworth and Dykkaar

The Jew, who perhaps came most in contact with the late Speaker Longworth, was Moses Dykkaar, the sculptor. Dykkaar had just completed a bust of Longworth, which is now in exhibit at the New National Museum in Washington.

"People ask me," Dykkaar said to me, "what did you see in Longworth that you were so anxious to make his bust? Let me say that I loved Longworth. He had many very lovable traits. I cannot do a good piece of work unless I love my subject, and the Longworth bust is, it will be conceded, a good piece of work. Once while sitting for him, Longworth was apparently somewhat upset."

"What is the trouble?" asked Dykkaar.

"Oh, I made a very bad speech last night."

"Well," mused Dykkaar, "one thing I can say, I never made a bad speech."

"Well, I never made a bad bust," replied Longworth.

When Alice Posed

Dykkaar also made a bust of Mrs. Longworth, which also is at the New National Museum. He is not proud of that bust, however. Somehow, he does not believe he caught the spirit of Alice Roosevelt in that bust. Dykkaar is a great admirer of Alice. "She is full of thoughts, impulses—a chip of the old Teddy—somehow, I did not get that into my marble, which shows that even genius is infallible."

Admits He Is Genius

Dykkaar readily admits that he is a genius. The truth is, I believe, that painters and sculptors, as a class, generally are very subject to make this admission. I don't know what it is, but every one who can draw a landscape, so that you can see it is not a figure in geometry, immediately assumes a sanctified and superior-to-thou air.

And some of those who have acquired some actual distinction are insufferable. Perhaps the most intolerant egotist that I ever met was the late Joseph Pennell, the etcher.

Of course, in the case of Dykkaar, there is unquestionably real genius. His marble figures seem as though in any moment, like a golem, they will walk off their pedestals and take you by the hand. And Dykkaar, too, besides his genius, has some common sense, which redeems any possibility of his going too egocentric.

Gibbons on Infallibility

Talking about the infallibility of genius, I am reminded of an anecdote that they used to tell about the late Cardinal Gibbons and the infallibility of the Pope.

Gibbons had been in Rome, seeing the Pope, and when he returned, some one asked him if he believed in the infallibility of the Pope.

"Well," smiled Gibbons, "he (the Pope) pronounced my name Jobbons." (With a soft G).

The Slogan of Gompers

One of Dykkaar's best pieces of work is his bust of Gompers. Gompers was a great personality, says Dykkaar. Often as the labor leader sat posing, he would expound his views.

Once Gompers gave this succinct statement of his political aims for labor.

"I want bread and butter for the workingman and an hour to think."

That would be enough, he thought. He laid great stress on that hour to

The King Has Gone But the Jews Remain

By MORRIS GOLDBERG

When King Alfonso XIII abdicated the Spanish throne last week he wrote finis to a long chapter in Spanish history dating back to the Inquisition. The new Republican government has promised complete religious liberty for all and the Jews of Spain are looking forward hopefully to a revival of their ancient glory in the land of the dons. The Jewish Telegraphic Agency and The Jewish Herald have obtained this illuminating article on contemporary Spanish Jewry in which Mr. Goldberg tells of the Jews who live in Spain and points out the long-established friendship of the present rulers for the Jews.—Editor's Note.

Great political excitement now reigns throughout Spain owing to the bloodless revolution which has successfully overthrown the monarchy. And now that a Republican form of government has provisionally replaced the former regime, anxiety for social improvement and privileges, which were formerly denied the people, is the daily topic of conversation. Some provinces, such as Catalonia and Andalusia, have already announced their intention of liberating themselves from Madrid control and of setting up governments of their own. But no drastic changes are expected in the country until after the approaching election. In the meantime all provinces and political parties, even including the monarchists, are lending their support to Don Niceto Alcalá Zamora, provisional head of the Republican government.

What effect will this political change have upon the small Jewish population of Spain? Will the Jews be granted more freedom in their communal and religious activities than were allowed them under the monarchy? Many such questions find an answer in Senor Zamora's recent announcement that all monarchical rules and regulations will be repealed and replaced by laws favorable to the people. This implies that the edict of 1402, which ordered all observant Jews out of the country, is nullified. Another point of interest in Senor Zamora's declaration involves the right of free speech and religious worship. The power of the churches will be greatly diminished and all residents in the country will own allegiance only to the new constitution which will soon be published. Belief in Catholicism or any other creed will not be a requirement for holding government office and only the ability of the individual will be taken into account. This should enable many educated Jews to participate in the political and cultural activities which hitherto seemed a forbidden field.

The officials of the present Republican Cabinet are known for their friendliness toward the Jews. In 1916 a number of these gentlemen lent their names to a letter of protest in behalf of oppressed Spanish-speaking Jews of Morocco, who were under French protection. Among the signatories were Miguel Maura, now Minister of the Interior, and Alejandro Lleras, Minister of Foreign Affairs. Another friend of the Jews, Fernando de los Rios, now Minister of Public Instruction, is a relative of the famous historian of Spanish Jewry, Amador de los Rios. It will now be in place to give a brief account of the Jews in modern Spain.

Although a census has not been taken, it may be safely said that there are in all Spain about 5000 Jews, who live mostly in Barcelona, Madrid and Seville. How Jews were permitted to return to Spain and settle there belongs to a period of historical romance which is worthy of being recorded. In the year 1876 the Spanish parliament decreed that freedom in religious matters be granted to any descendant of Spanish Jews. This law was officially announced after many Spanish humanitarians advocated its acceptance. But what Jew would dare risk returning to a country where his ancestors were brutally murdered and robbed? Recognizing this psychological fact, certain broad-minded Spaniards became missionaries for the new movement and resolved to employ propaganda among Spanish-speaking Jews and persuade them to return to the land of their fathers. Senor J. Lopez Lapuya initiated this great social movement and founded the Centro Espanol de Inmigracion Israelita (Spanish Center for Jewish Immigration). He was aided in this task by Dr. Angel Pulido, brilliant Spanish scholar and physician, Don Juan Rospide, Inspector of State Finances, and Julio Jonas, a banker, and believed to be the first Jew in Spain in the 19th century. Dr. Pulido journeyed through all Europe, making a close study of the Jewish people and in 1905 he published his remarkable book, "Espanoles sin patria," (Spaniards Without a Fatherland). This work caused a literary sensation and was followed up by public lectures on the same subject.

Then along came another sincere friend of Jews, Manuel Ortega, whose writings on the Jews of Morocco are most authoritative. He organized public lectures and with a learned body of scholars he acquainted the Spanish people with the need of bringing Jews into the country. Is there any need to report that the clerical party were Ortega's greatest opponents? But with weapons of logic and learning Ortega and his friends gained ground and created a sympathetic atmosphere for the few Jews who were courageous enough to settle in Spain. It is only fair to say that individual clergymen were found who were profoundly sincere in their friendship for admission of Jews into the country. As an outstanding figure, Father Fidel Fita, eminent Spanish historian and Hebrew scholar, who died during the war, is worthy of mention. Sr. Ortega succeeded in founding the "Revista de la Raza," the only periodical in Spain devoted to general literature, as well as events of Jewish and Arabic interest. In this connection Eduardo Gomez de Baquero, who writes in the leading Spanish paper, El Sol, under the pseudonym of "Adrenio," gives long and favorable reviews of outstanding Jewish books whenever they are published.

The largest Jewish population is that of Barcelona, numbering about 2000, and the majority of them are members of the Comunidad Israelita or observing Jews. There are several Synagogues in this city, which were rebuilt from former dwellings. The community consists of many Jews who came here during the World War. Among the more prominent are the families of Punsack, Minguez and Torres. Seville has the oldest Jewish inhabitants in the country, who are engaged in the exportation of oil, honey, dates and manufacture of candies and nougat. The Jewish merchants frequently go to the fairs of Andalusia and Extremadura to dispose of their wares.

The majority of the Jewish people in Seville are found around the Alameda in the street of La Feria and Lumberras, where the main Synagogue still stands. Among the many well-known Jews of the town are men and women who have distinguished themselves. We may mention Bona Raquel Pilo, who has written excellent poetry and contributed to the general press; Carlos Canal, deputy of the legislative assembly, and Jose Levy, a former guardian of the Town Hall. One may still see the most ancient quarter of the city where Jews lived before the expulsion and its main street is known today as "Calle de la Juderia."

In San Sebastian, a modern subway is being built entirely at the expense of a Jewish philanthropist, Nessim Mair Rozanes. This gentleman is the owner or two of the largest jewelry establishments in San Sebastian and Madrid and devotes a great deal of his time and money to communal service. When Pola Negri visited Spain in 1929 she lived in the beautiful villa in Ayete owned by Senor Rozanes.

America's Cut-Rate Theatre Ticket King

By BERTRAM JONAS

Joe Leblang was a real power in New York's theatrical whirl. Many a show fated to be a complete flop had new life pumped into it through his fatherly efforts. The fascinating career of this man who built a fortune of $20,000,000 on a unique idea that remade the show business and gave him the title of the cut-rate king, is told in this article written for The Jewish Telegraphic Agency and The Jewish Herald—Editor's Note.

The death of Joe Leblang, the cut-rate theatre ticket king, and the man whose enterprise has pumped life into more moribund shows than anyone can enumerate, removes from the theatrical world a real power. Broadway habitués had a saying that shows come and shows go, but Joe Leblang goes on forever, and it was quite true, for without Joe, Broadway will lose something of itself. Not in vain has one of Broadway's wits sung "Tonight You Leblang to Me."

Joe Leblang's rise to fortune is one of the most intriguing stories in the history of the ever dramatic and colorful street, called Broadway. Coming to America from Budapest with his parents 52 years ago, he grew up in the East Side environment and with his own way to make in the new world. The fact that few men on Broadway had more friends than Leblang and the fact that he was one of the few who wrung a real fortune from the theatrical business, attests to how well he made his way.

At 15 the owner of a successful retail store, he sold out after a few years to go into the real estate business with his father. This venture prospered until the elder Leblang got the idea that he ought to become a builder. They built, but their fortunes were not built. When the real estate business failed young Leblang, then 19, became a furrier and later opened a cigar store on Sixth avenue and Thirtieth street. The opening of this store was a turning point in his career.

At this time the idea came to him to buy up the free passes lavishly handed out by theatrical press agents to barber shops, saloons and other establishments in return for the privilege of placing placards advertising shows in the shop window. Leblang saw that thousands of theatre-lovers who could not afford box office prices would become regular patrons of the drama if they could buy cheap tickets. That his idea was sound is evident from the huge business that has grown from that youthful brain-child. For years Leblang rode around New York on a borrowed bicycle, buying up these passes wherever he could find them. Together with his advertising and his ability to get thousands of such tickets, New York's theatregoers soon learned that Leblang's cigar store was the place to buy cheap tickets. And they flocked to his shop by the thousands.

From the immediate success of this enterprise there evolved the complementary idea of buying up blocks of seats for such shows as were not making out well at the box office or in the high-priced ticket agencies. In 1913 he moved uptown to Broadway and Forty-third street and there he has been ever since. The drug store on that corner has been his headquarters. The opening of the cut-price theatre ticket emporium made him a public character.

While the theatrical producers at first opposed his plan, they soon realized the value of his agency and one by one, beginning with Floyd Thompson of the Hippodrome and A. H. Woods, they all began to co-operate with him. From that time on his fame and success were assured. If a show made money, Leblang made money. If a show was losing money Leblang's cut-price ticket agency kept it going and often put the show on its feet. For the first few months of its run, the phenomenally successful Abie's Irish Rose spent most of its time at Leblang's agency.

In the last few years his organization has handled as many as 160,000 tickets a week and to Leblang, more than any one other man is due the recent plethora of plays. When an independent manager with little money planned a show he had Leblang in mind and generally Leblang was the one who furnished the financial sinews through his unique ticket-selling system. Important and unimportant producers, all banked on him. The success of a Shubert, Belasco, Erlanger or Selwyn show was just as much dependent on him as was the fate of an offering by an independent and less well-known theatrical entrepreneur. Nearly two-thirds of all the shows on Broadway in any given season placed a goodly number of tickets with him.

In recent months he had given a good deal of time and money to a new undertaking, the Central Ticket Service, an organization, which in co-operation with the Postal Telegraph Company, worked out a solution to the vexing theatre ticket problem which had stumped the best minds in the theatrical business. His flourishing ticket business also led him into further real estate ventures and he owned a number of the leading theatres in the city.

The Public Service Theatre Office, as his cut-rate agency was called, has become a mecca for New York's theatregoers. Any evening during the season waiting crowds are lined up before the office counters waiting for tickets at half the face value. Leblang's billion dollar idea created an institution where the poor man could buy theatre tickets.

Leblang's theatrical enterprises did not overshadow his interest in his Jewish communal responsibilities. He was long a liberal donor to the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies in New York. The Jewish Education Association engaged his particular interest. A few years ago he went to Palestine. During the war he was active in all the drives and he was a leader in the work of the United Jewish Relief Campaign.

One of New York's best known theatrical commentators wrote of Leblang only last week as follows: "Joe is worth many millions if he's worth a dime. But I'm glad he's got it. He's generous and he's kind. Nobody begrudges him his dough. He's just a sucker for charities and he's just as modest and human as he was when I met him, and that was twenty-five years ago. Quite a fellow, that Leblang."

Leblang's phenomenal success—he was worth $20,000,000—was attained as it can only be attained in America. What he developed was at first a simple idea. It was his creation and it has returned millions in dividends, not only to him but to producers and it has been a boon to American theatregoers. It was only a man with Leblang's pluck and pertinacity that could figure out that vacant seats in a theatre would be filled by cutting the price of admission. It was Leblang who demonstrated that it was one thing to produce a fine show and quite another to fill up the theatre. Up to the time of his death Leblang's enterprise was filling practically every legitimate theatre in New York.

HENRY MORGENTHAU HONORED ON SEVENTY-FIRST BIRTHDAY

New York, May 1—(JTA) — The seventy-first birthday of Henry Morgenthau, former American Ambassador to Turkey, was celebrated with a dinner in his honor at the Bronx House, the settlement he and Mrs. Morgenthau founded nearly twenty-five years ago. The dinner was arranged by the Bronx House Board of Directors.

Messages and telegrams of congratulation were received from President Hoover, Governor Roosevelt, Lieutenant Governor Herbert H. Lehman and Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War.

Besides the Bronx House, Mr. Morgenthau's philanthropic activities have also included the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies and the endowment fund of the Hebrew Union College. He has also taken an active part in the work of the Near East Relief, especially in the assistance of Greek refugees.

Born in Germany, Mr. Morgenthau was educated at the College of the City of New York and Columbia, from which he received a degree of Doctor of Laws in 1877. In 1913 he became Ambassador to Turkey. In 1919 he was appointed to head the American commission to investigate the massacres of Jews in Poland.

B'nai B'rith Sponsors Library in Jerusalem

The B'nai B'rith Library in Jerusalem, made possible through an appropriation of the Executive Committee of B'nai B'rith and directed by the Jerusalem B'nai B'rith Lodge, is a treasure house of Hebrew and Yiddish literature. It houses some 12,500 volumes, most of which are in Hebrew.

The library was about to be abandoned when the Hebrew University opened its own library several miles from the city of Jerusalem. In response to a request from the Jerusalem Lodge, B'nai B'rith appropriated the funds necessary to continue the city library without which many aged Jews would have been deprived of library facilities.

National Jewish Hospital Launches 'NJH Week,' Sunday

Institution Faces Deficit of $150,000; Special Appeal to be Made May 3-9

Denver, Colorado, May 1—(Special Correspondence)—Over 500 communities will observe "National Jewish Hospital Week," beginning Sunday, May 3, according to an announcement made this week by Rabbi W. S. Friedman, founder and President of the National Jewish Hospital at Denver.

"NJH Week" is an annual campaign of education and publicity on the free non-sectarian, nation-wide service which this pioneer institution conducts for men, women and children afflicted with tuberculosis, who cannot afford to pay for treatment.

During "NJH Week" friends of the hospital will be asked to make special contributions for its work.

In the city of Denver, "NJH Week" will be carried on by an army of 400 workers, under the direction of Mr. David E. Harlem, General Chairman, and Mrs. M. D. Barnett, Chairman of the Women's Committee. The quota for Denver is $25,000.

J. L. Wolff, a member of the Hospital's Denver Board of Managers, is National Chairman for "NJH Week." On the National Committee are Rabbi Friedman, B. Fleisher, Chairman of the National Finance Committee, and Mrs. S. Pisko, Executive Secretary of the Hospital. Samuel Schaefer is directing both the national and Denver campaigns.

"NJH Week" will be officially opened with a national broadcast on the work of the hospital from New York City by Paul Felix Warburg, assistant national treasurer of the hospital. Mr. Warburg will speak on the program of the "Jewish Art Hour" over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Sunday morning, May 3.

Special attention is being directed by "NJH Week" leaders throughout the country to the fact that throughout the entire period of depression, the National Jewish Hospital has not curtailed its service in any way, but that during the past 18 months unemployment and decreased earning capacity among the working classes have imposed greater demands upon the institution than it has ever before been called upon to meet. At the present time 325 men, women and children are cared for daily in the hospital and some 200 more are waiting for admission.

"A recent study of our admissions during the past 18 months," said Rabbi Friedman, "indicates a greatly increased number of patients in the far advanced stages of tuberculosis coming to us for treatment. We are hoping that the special contributions made by our friends during 'NJH

JEWES AND ROYALISTS IN HALF-HOUR BATTLE IN PARIS

London, May 1—(JTA)—A furious riot provoked by the anti-Semitic shouts of a crowd of members of the Royalist organization, Camelots du Roi, occurred last week in the Jewish quarter of Paris, according to a report in the London Times. For several weeks now a number of members of the Camelots du Roi have made a habit of walking through the Rue Vieille du Temple, inhabited by many Jews, and shouting anti-Jewish cries.

Last week two groups of young Jews, armed with cudgels and other weapons, were ready for the anti-Semites and when they came through the street giving vent to their usual shouts, the Jews fell upon them. The ensuing fracas lasted nearly half an hour, the Times reports, adding that people in the neighborhood also took part. The fight was broken up by the police.

same plan that has marked our work since the opening of the hospital 31 years ago.

"While we have not curtailed our service in any way, we are facing a deficit of $150,000.00 which, if not liquidated, will necessarily mean a drastic curtailment of our work," concluded Dr. Friedman.

JEWISH STUDENTS IN EUROPEAN UNIVERSITIES

The problem of the Jewish student in a European university has been the problem of Jews everywhere. The relatively better-bred antagonist in the university did not make the suffering less acute. Anti-Semitism, apparently, has no class, either socially or intellectually, and like a disease it infects all those who are not emotionally immune to it. The results of such discrimination in the colleges caused not so great a flow of blood as did the pogroms of the Slavic fellow-barbarians, but the difference in cruelty was not very great. One weapon was blunt; the other was sharp and sure.

The second International Students' Conference, which started at Nyon, near Geneva, on April 13, has taken the question of anti-Semitism in European universities for its subject this year. The American Jewish Congress was allowed to send two observers to report on the results of the proceedings.

We do not know how beneficial this conference will be. We do know that the problem is a serious one, and that it deserves the interest and intellectual analysis of such a meeting. The good-will movements among the churches do good when they compel different sects to think along liberal lines. Similarly, this meeting may do good for all concerned by bringing the light of clear thought on a problem that heretofore has been seen only in the darkness of hatred and prejudice.

The plan of the discussion was to put a search light on the problems of the Jews, not only in the universities, but in their communities as well. Immigration difficulties, Zionism, the relation to the university and to social life; the dilemma of a minority race usurping the professions, all these were considered vital problems.

The attitude of the conference must be commended, even if the full results are not yet public. This meeting planned to help the Jews, and not to discredit them. Whatever the direct results, this conference marks a step forward in the right direction. It is only by direct inquiry and intelligent discussion that the many problems of Judaism will be solved peacefully in this modern world. Such conferences should be encouraged and their results should be studied. By getting the other fellow's attitude, we may begin to recognize what is lacking in our own, or more forcefully what is truly wrong with both of us. Anti-Semitism is no less disastrous than a disease; we must combat it like intelligent physicians. And the first step is thorough understanding. Let us have more such conferences.

Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities

By DAVID SCHWARTZ

think. Gompers felt once that was secured—labor would of itself get the other adornments of life.

"Bread and Butter and an hour to think!" That's worth remembering.

Silent Cal

Gompers was an ideal subject in a way for Dykka's art, for Gompers was ever active. The sculptor, it appears, prefers the subject to do something while he is posing.

Dykka had great difficulty in making President Coolidge do anything. Sometimes Coolidge would tell a joke, in his cold, grim Yankee way, but he was at his best when he giggled his ears. Dykka says that Coolidge is a wow at giggling the ears. Coolidge is so good at that, he could easily earn his living in a side-show by that trick.

But generally Coolidge sat as silent as the Sphinx. Once, Senator Spencer was around as Coolidge was posing. The Senator said: "Isn't it wonderful after these many years that the Jews are getting back their old homeland?"

But Coolidge sat silent—only that and nothing more.

Eugene V. Debs

Dykka is not a Socialist, yet he is perhaps proudest of all of his busts of Eugene Debs.

Once, some one who didn't like Socialism, saw his bust of Debs and became incensed.

"I deny that Debs was so beautiful a soul as you have sculptured."

Dykka felt very pleased. When this bust had made the anti-Socialist rage—that was perhaps the highest compliment he could receive.

The Sad Bell

In my opinion, one of his best busts is that of Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone.

The face of Bell seems a little over-pensive—o'ercast with something of disappointment.

"Why didn't you put a smile on his face?" Bell telephone people said, when they saw the bust.

"Because Dr. Bell was a disappointed man," said Dykka.

"How is that?"

"Well," replied Dykka, "Bell invented the telephone when he was about thirty. Yet though he lived to an advanced age, he never added another to his inventions. Don't you think that must have tugged at his soul?"

"I believe you are right," said the telephone official.

Steffens Tells

In the incipency of my newspaper work, my ideal and idol was Lincoln Steffens. It is pleasant to find after reading his just issued autobiography that one feels that the admiration and perhaps early adoration was not misplaced.

Steffens exposed crime—he was the muckraker par excellence, and yet he always at the same time could enter somewhat into the criminal's psychology as well. He sort of pointed to the social rather than the individual implications.

I have read somewhere that there is a Talmudical tradition that when a Jew was executed in ancient Jewish times, the Rabbi would chant: "Forgive us the murder that we have committed." You felt something of the same spirit in Steffens.

When Steffens Fasted

Always, Steffens made the effort to get the other man's point of view. Thus, he tells how at one time, when he had become interested in Jewish life of the East Side, that he fasted one Yom Kippur, and put a Mezuzah on his door. And Steffens, of course, is not a Jew.

When all non-Jews shall become Steffennized, we shall not need Palestine.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Editor, The Jewish Herald:

I am writing you this letter in the hope that it may reach those among your readers who may be of assistance in the following matter:

I am culling from Hassidic literature in Hebrew, German and other languages the ethical stories, the content and point of which make them appropriate for the special purpose I have in mind, namely, the publication in English of a volume with the general title of "An Anthology of Hassidic Lore" or "Ethical Tales of the Hassidim." Many Hassidic tales, however, are current only in verbal form and may be known to some of your readers by hearsay. It is these stories I am particularly interested in assembling for the volume I am preparing.

I would, therefore, be interested in hearing from anyone reading this letter who has information of interest to offer. Appropriate acknowledgment will be made in the collection for stories sent to me in this way.

There are, moreover, I believe, several students at work in the field of Hassidic lore. I would be pleased to hear from them, so that the project on which I am working may not include identical material in English already available or in preparation.

Communications may be addressed to me at 7 West Eighty-third street, New York, N. Y.

(RABBI) LOUIS I. NEWMAN.

THE KING HAS GONE BUT THE JEWS REMAIN

And now we come to the promising stronghold of the future Jews of Spain, Madrid. The most eminent Jew is Ignacio Bauer-Landauer, who is also president of the Jewish community. Sr. Bauer is a native of Madrid, who was educated at the university here. He is a brilliant historian and has published many standard works concerning the Spanish navy, archeology and law. Sr. Bauer is a leading banker of this city and is noted for his philanthropic work. He also founded in 1929 the largest literary publishing house in Spain, of which he is vice president and presented the Hebrew University with 5000 volumes of the works of the historian Amador de los Rios. Sr. Bauer is also president of the College of Learned Societies. Another of the leading intellectuals of Spanish Jewry was Felipe Hauser who died in Madrid in 1925. He was the foremost Spanish authority on cholera and wrote numerous medical works on pathology. Dr. Hauser lived in Madrid for over 30 years and rendered great service to the progress of medical science in Spain.

It is unfortunate that the chair of Hebrew studies in the Universidad Central in Madrid is no longer occupied by the great scholar, Prof. Yahuda. This gentleman was the first Jew since the expulsion to teach in a Spanish university. During the eight years that he was in Spain he taught many non-Jews and Jews the Hebrew language and literature and in conjunction with Dr. Max Nordau and other scholars, helped to develop Jewish communal life in various parts of the country. We should very much like to see Prof. Yahuda return once again as instructor in this country.

Madrid is also the residence of a number of distinguished Jews, such as Jose J. Farache, first Jew to translate into Spanish and circulate throughout Spain the "Keter Maljut" of Rabbi Yehudah Gabirol; Enrique Hauser Y. Newburger, an authority on explosives and a professor at the School of Mining Engineering; Laura Albeniz, well-known painter and daughter of the famous composer, Isaac Albeniz, who died in 1909; Leon Mobily Guitta, professor of Arabic at the Commercial College; Raquel Meller foremost actress on the Spanish stage; Rafael Consinos-Assens, and many others too numerous to mention.

Thus we see how the Jewish scholars and leaders, aided by many non-Jewish friends, are helping to build up a modern Jewish civilization in Spain. Naturally, a great deal depends on civil and political freedom and the right to give full expression to one's ability. If in the near future a government decree raises the Jewish population to an equal footing with the native Spaniards, Jews will be enabled to produce intellectual and social results which will be beneficial for all who come in contact with them. Before the expulsion, the Jews were the acknowledged leaders in art, science and literature, but the jealousy of a powerful Church brought them to ruin. Now that the Church will have little to say in Spain it will be interesting to watch developments in the harmony and mutual benefit which will arise between the Jews and other residents of Spain.

PRAYER

God, although this life is but a wraith,
Although we know not what we use;
Although we grope with little faith,
God, give me the heart to fight—
and lose.

Ever insurgent let me be,
Make me more daring than devout;
From sleek contentment keep me free
And fill me with a buoyant doubt.

Open my eyes to visions girt
With beauty, and with wonder lit,—
But let me always see the dirt,
And all that spawn and die in it.

Open my ears to music, let Me thrill with spring's first flutes and drums.
But never let me dare forget
The bitter ballads of the slums.

From compromise and things half-done,
Keep me, with stern and stubborn pride.

But when at last the fight is won,
God, keep me still unsatisfied.
—Louis Untermeyer.

SPORTING WORLD

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD BY GEORGE JOEL

BERG LOSES TO CANZONERI

Jackie Berg or Judah Bergman, as he was known to his family, was decisively defeated for the lightweight championship of the world last week at Chicago when Tony Canzoneri knocked Berg out in the third round of the bout. Fighting in his usual whirlwind fashion the London Jew put up a game fight, but was no match for his Italian opponent who never gave Berg a chance to get started. Jackie Berg was looked upon by his many followers to carry off the lightweight crown which Benny Leonard was the first to hold. Al Singer, the next Jew to sit on the lightweight throne, only held the title a few months, when he was deposed by Canzoneri, who in turn handed Berg an artistic beating.

Berg was born in London and has been fighting ever since he was 15. Coming to this country in 1928 he lost two decisions to Billy Petrolle, but soon found himself and hasn't lost a fight until the sudden knockout of last week. He fought Tony Canzoneri in New York on Jan. 16, 1930, and beat him in ten rounds.

JEWISH BALL PLAYER GOES TO THE MINORS

Harry Rosenberg, utility outfielder with the New York Giants, is the first of the Jewish ball players to be sent to the minors this season. Harry, who was bought by the Giants last summer from the Missions of the Coast League for $20,000, has been sent by McGraw to the Newark Club of the International League, where he will join his co-religionist, Andy Cohen, who was also sent there by McGraw. Cohen and Rosenberg will no doubt achieve big things for the Newark Club.

Newark is well represented with Jewish ball players. Albert Cohn now playing for the Brooklyn Dodgers is a local boy. His father, Rabbi Lewis Cohn, holds services every Saturday at the Temple Anshe Rushe in Newark and the entire congregation is pulling for Al to make good. The Jewish boy is already a favorite with the Brooklyn fans. Manager Robinson was ready to send the boy back to the minors last week, but Al's stick work was so impressive that Robbie has decided to allow him to stick around until the end of June, when the big league teams must cut their rosters. He is considered a good prospect, and, although he will have to do some more time in the minors, you can bet that he will be back in big time company.

MACCABEE PRESIDENT WAS ONCE ATHLETE OF PROMINENCE

Dr. Solomon Flink, President of the Maccabee Association of America, was once one of the best all around athletes in Germany. In 1924 he won the Maccabee junior championship in the shot-put, javelin and 110-yard dash. When attending the University of Berlin he was a member of the relay team that won the intercollegiate championship. Besides his collegiate work, Dr. Flink was senior Maccabee champion in the 220 and the javelin. He can still step around the track, but right now he is more interested in making the coming Jewish Olympic games a success.

Nineteen thirty-two is going to be a busy year for Jewish athletes. After they are through participating in the Olympic at Palestine many of them will leave for Los Angeles, where the International Olympics will be held.

Among the famous European athletes who have signified their intentions of taking part in the Jewish Olympics, are Eli Katz, of Finland; David Prenn, former German Davis Cup star; Frankel, Austrian track champion, and Miss Levy of the same country, who is a swimming star. The makeup of the American team has not yet been decided, but with a wealth of material to draw from, a strong aggregation is assured.

CHATTERINGS

It looks as though another myth is to be exploded. Levy, new rookie star infielder of the St. Louis Americans, who has been hailed as the "$1,000,000 Jewish baseball player," is said to attend a Presbyterian Church every Sunday—a most unlikely place to find a Jewish boy. Nevertheless, he is a swell ball player.

The Hebrew Union College basketball team of Cincinnati finished the season of 1930-31 with a record of 11 wins and one defeat. Every man on the team expects to be a Rabbi.

There's one college where a Jewish boy has a chance!

A Jewish boy will pitch for Harvard this season. Solly Smith is the lad. He alone is this year's Harvard Jewish baseball quota. Since Izzy Zarakov played for the Crimson there haven't been any of our kind on the diamond at Soldier Field.

At Boston on May 10th, a meeting will be held for the purpose of organizing a Boston Chapter of the Maccabee Association. All Jewish groups that sponsor athletic programs are invited to attend. Dr. Flink will preside.

I spoke to George Britt, author of "Christians Only," about Harry Greb's Jewishness, and he assures me that Greb was really Berg. George ought to know, he covered sports for the Chicago Daily News.

The list of handicaps for women golfers in the New York district were printed the other day and there was not one Jewish girl who received less than a 15 handicap. Doesn't look so good for our sisters this year.
