Jewish Personalities

The Nordic Benjamin

There is an old saw to the effect that anybody can be a fool, but it takes a genius to be a blank fool. Of course, blank is something of a polite euphemism. I am reminded of that old proverb just now after dipping through a book on Jefferson Davis, the President of the Confederate States.

The author of the book is a historian by the name of Eckenrode, a man, who is competent in his field. Yet he sees the old battle between the North and the South as merely a struggle between the Nordic and non-Nordic elements for survival. To him, the stand of the South was one of the last stands of the Nordic.

Ridiculous as this is, the author makes himself more ridiculous by criticizing virtually all of the members of Jefferson Davis' cabinet, all save a few, one of whom is the Jew, Judah P. Benjamin.

In other words, according to this author, Benjamin became one of the mainsprings in behalf of Nordic civilization!

Wagner's Fantastic Theory

Education, which explodes myths, seems to be able to breed quite as many as it explodes. Nothing is so absurd, but a good rationalizer can turn it into a plausible philosophy.

As Eckenrode turns the Southern fight into a Nordic fight, so Wagner developed a fantastic idea of the incapability of the Jew in music. Yet, almost all of the orchestra leaders that produced his works were Jews.

Isn't Logic Wonderful?

Yes, logic is a powerful thing. My favorite illustration of its powers of distortion is that offered by Montaigne. The great Frenchman showed that you can prove that pickles are thirst quenching.

Pickles, he argued, make you drink. Drink is thirst quenching. Therefore, pickles are thirst quenching.

Purple Blooded Jews

With the King of Roumania apparently persisting, according to the papers, in his intention of making Mme. Lupescu, his wife, and with the Abyssinian King marrying a Jewess, we Jews will soon be swimming in royal blood.

The truth is, that in the royal veins, generally, there is quite a bit of the Jewish red. The Austrian royal house, according to some, is the offspring of a Sephardic Jew.

And the Spanish royalty has quite a Jewish mixture. Old Ferdinand, the spouse of Isabella, was the son or grandson—I don't recall which—of a Jewish mother.

Not All Esthers

I suppose the average Jew takes delight in thinking of these Jewish queens. He immediately begins to think of Queen Esther, who saved her people by marrying the Persian monarch.

I personally lack this consolation and assurance. I cannot but help think of Ferdinand, Jewish grandson, who stood by and even approved of the terrible Spanish Inquisition.

Chaplin and Nationalism

The Jew has been accused of being an internationalist. Many of us have tried to deny it, because internationalism seems to conflict with patriotism.

David Belasco, the Genius of the American Stage

By MEYER LEVIN

In the death of David Belasco, the American theatre loses the man known as the wizard of the stage. For more than half a century he was the genius of the American theatre and his fascinating career is part and parcel of the stage to which he contributed so much. This scintillating story of his dramatic life was written for The Jewish Herald and The Jewish Telegraphic Agency—Editor's Note.

They said that the magician, David Belasco, was a child born of the marriage of a gypsy to a harlequin. For three-quarters of a century his name was magic in America. And out of his name there grew scores of other magic names. David Belasco was the author of a hundred plays, the producer of perhaps 400 productions, the maker of the names of Mary Pickford, Ernest Truex, Lillian Gish, Mrs. Leslie Carter, Helen McKellar, Ruth St. Denis, Jane Cowl, Lowell Sherman, David Warfield, Blanche Bates, Jeanne Eagles, and more, and more. He was the father-in-law of Morris Gest, maker of "The Miracle."

And in his last years he was a lonely, aged Jew, thumbing his "book of violets" for memories of his Jewish "gypsy" mother, and of his wife, and of the tender moments in the lives of his three daughters; a revered, beloved, awed, but lonely aged Jew, who refused the dinner invitations of the mighty in order to slip away by himself and eat his favorite dish—cold cuts of corned beef and sausage, from a delicatessen store!

Even during his life time, strange collections of myths had gathered about this magician—David Belasco. The date of his birth became confused. Some said he was born in 1854 and some said in 1859. That was because for several years, he celebrated his birthday by taking his one annual drink—a glass of champagne, and saying, "Today I am twenty-one." For he always felt twenty-one.

As a matter of fact, he was born on July 25, 1854, in San Francisco. He was born in a cellar room on a cot that had been placed on two boxes.

His mother was Reina Martin, of a family of wealthy Portuguese Jews, "gypsies," who migrated to London because of persecutions in Portugal. There, Reina Martin saw a young actor named Humphrey Andrews Belasco, playing the part of a harlequin. She fell in love with the harlequin. During the days of the London plague, she came to him, they were married. The match was against the wishes of her parents. The couple went to seek their fortune in America. The gold rush was on and they came to San Francisco. It was impossible to obtain a room under ten dollars a night. The couple was penniless. They were befriended. A basement room was found for them. There, David Belasco was born.

Later, his father moved to Victoria, B. C. Humphrey Andrews Belasco became a trapper. But within a few years he was Mayor of Victoria, B. C. At that time, when he was seven years old, the boy came under the influence of Father McGuire. During his later life, David Belasco spoke often of the priest whose philosophy had influenced his way of life.

Already, the boy gave indication of the unusual intensity of his nature, the need for creative expression. At eight, this found expression in the usual way. He ran away from home and joined a circus. A clown, named Walter Kingsley, loved the boy, and took care of him, and taught him how to be a clown in a circus. When Walter Kingsley died, the boy felt the first great tragedy of his life had happened.

Humphrey Andrews Belasco, once a harlequin, found his circus-boy and took him home. The family moved to San Francisco.

Again, the boy's "gypsy-nature" asserted itself. He became a stowaway on a ship. He was discovered and set to work washing dishes. The ship came to Victoria, B. C. From there, David was returned home.

At four years he wrote a play, called "Jim Black" or "The Regulator's Revenge." Soon, he had a job as a stall boy in a theatre. From then on, he worked around theatres, finding time some how to go to school, for he was graduated from Lincoln College, California.

In 1875 he went "barnstorming" with a company headed by Millicent Rogers. All the thrillers of the day, including "Camille" and "East Lynne," were in the repertory of the company. But unfortunately they had no money. They ended up as waiters, cooks and chamber boys in a town along the Big Bear river—the jobs being an alternative for jail.

David Belasco's mother Reina played a mystically influential part in his life. Because of her beliefs in her gypsy blood, and in her other worldly powers, she influenced her son with the surety of fate. Many of her superstitions, David Belasco carried with him through life. He was a believer in signs and portents and charms and the "evil eye," a belief as characteristically Jewish as Gypsy. He always had a pocket full of bits of iron, nails, buttons, or other "charms." His mystic sentimental love of "violets" was another sign in the fate-way of his life, for every great emotional experience, first through his mother-love, and then with his wife, was in some way commemorated by a violet. All these pressed violets, noted with dates, he kept in a book in the private drawer of the famous ancient Italian-carved desk in his New York studio. Each day, at four o'clock, in his later years, he would take out his "violet-book," and lose himself in memory.

When he was but a boy, a strange incident occurred, which was said to prove the mysterious powers of his mother. David had witnessed a brawl between two theatre people in San Francisco. A man was beating his wife. David rushed in, and being a large, strong boy, pulled off and beat the man. The woman, angered, shot David. The bullet grazed his temple.

When David was brought home, the story goes, his mother, infuriated, went into her room. Hours later she came out. "I have uttered the black curse of the Gypsies," she said, "on anyone who shall injure my son David during his life-time." Two days later the man who had fought with David, fell under a railway train and was killed.

David Belasco's marriage was also the result of a strange romance. In San Francisco lived a girl named Cecilia Loverich, daughter of a wealthy family, sought after by the city's best young bloods.

One day, in the street, the girl talked to a woman with whom she was not acquainted. The woman said, "Soon, you will meet a young man who is the one intended to be your husband. You will know him, for he will offer you violets. Do not refuse them." The woman was Reina Belasco.

And—this story David Belasco himself told in later years. Not long after this encounter, which he knew nothing, he was reciting "Hamlet" at a social function. In the first row, he saw a beautiful girl. Their eyes met. During the rest of the performance, he spoke his lines only to her.

"Afterward," he would say, in telling the story of his courtship, "I learned that she was Cecilia Loverich, and so believed that I had no chance to win her." Nevertheless he went out the next day into the woods. He saw beautiful violets. He picked a bunch, and sent them to the girl.

When they met, he stole one violet from that bunch. It was the first violet in his "violet book."

Two years later they were married. His wife accompanied him on his trips to Chicago, to New York, in his efforts to get started in the theatrical world.

His first efforts were heroic, but disheartening. Three times he went to New York, and three times he returned penniless to San Francisco. Always, he would say in later years, his mother encouraged him, made him try again.

Perhaps the beginning of his phenomenal career may be said to have been when he met Charles Frohman, in 1882, in San Francisco. They produced Belasco's play, "American Born." It was a success. But there came slips again.

In 1886, after the sensational divorce case of Mrs. Leslie Carter, David Belasco determined that her vivacious personality was destined for the stage. He wrote "The Heart of Maryland" for her. But it took four years and in that time the play was re-made six times, before he could arrange a production. When the curtain was raised, he owned nothing in the world but the clothes on his back. A friend had pawned a $30,000 painting for $1500 to help him. But the production was a success.

Fables, myths unending gathered about this magical personality.

In his later days, he was something of a "character." One of his habits curiously, is like a habit of John D. Rockefeller. He would give coins to all people, tips to cab-boys or to high-priced stars, as his appreciation. Once in a rehearsal he took out a dime and placed it on the table, saying to an actor, "If you say the line right you get it." The actor repeated the line again. The dime went back into Belasco's pocket.

Every evening as he left the theatre he drew a ten-dollar bill from the treasurer, saying, "Thank you." He would take a cab to his hotel. From the change, he would take three one-dollar bills. One he would pin on the door of his wife's room, and one on the door of each of his two daughter's rooms.

When his beautiful daughters were bored, and came to him restless, asking for something to do, the quiet little man would dip his hand into his pocket, take out money, and say, "Buy a hat."

Continuously, from the days when he produced David Warfield as Shylock in the "Merchant of Venice," from the days of "Madame Butterfly" and "The Music Master," from the days of "May Blossom," through to the days of "The Gold Diggers," and of Lenore Ulric, he kept his place as "the magician."

Chesed Shel Emes (to Dedicate New Chapel, May 31st)

Preparations are proceeding with the dedication and ceremony to take place at the Lincoln Park Cemetery, May 31st, under the auspices of the Chesed Shel Emes.

For a long time the necessity for a house of worship has been felt. It is only due to the energetic enterprise of several persons that it is now possible to announce the completion of a new chapel as well as other necessary improvements around the cemetery.

There are not many people in Providence who do not know the function of Chesed Shel Emes and still fewer who are interested in its work.

But the function of it is a very important one and it is due to the work of Chesed Shel Emes that the Jewish cemetery is now in such a fine condition. New roads at the cemetery have been built, new grass planted at many points and the general surroundings have been improved.

Many people remarked how much different the cemetery looks today than it did ten years ago, but very few know that Chesed Shel Emes was responsible for it.

The new chapel was built at a cost of $15,000, $5000 of which was contributed by Mrs. Samuel Priest in memory of her departed husband. The ceremonies, May 31st, should attract a large number of the Jewish community who ought to be interested in this latest improvement at the cemetery.

The committee assures that there will be plenty of parking space, free of charge.

KODIMOH CLUB TREAT

On Saturday, May 16, the Kodimoh Club of the Jewish Community Center gave an ice cream, cake and candy treat to the children of the Jewish Orphanage. Miss Esther Levine, the genial and capable leader of the club, arranged to have cakes baked at home by various club members and a most intimate and personal touch was thus added to the already friendly relations of the Kodimoh Club and the Jewish Community Center with the Jewish Orphanage.

It goes without saying that the children enjoyed the excellent candy and ice cream as well as the cake and everybody had his or her filling of goodies.

INTERNATIONAL ENCYCLOPEDIA MEMORIAL TO DANIEL DONIG

After being properly inscribed it will be placed in the library to afford material for the preparation of lessons, essays and other use by the children.

Mrs. Isaac Rose and Mr. Benjamin Trinkel, friends of the family of Mr. Donig, started the fund for the encyclopedia and the result of the fine spirit which Mr. Donig had in his life is again apparent.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS FOR MR. DANIEL DONIG

A committee of the Board of Directors of the Jewish Orphanage, of which Mr. C. Joseph Fox is chairman, is drawing up appropriate resolutions on the passing of Mr. Donig, which will be presented at the next meeting of the Board of Directors, to be held on June 19.

Double Pleasure

A FRIENDLY telephone call is one thing you can share with a good friend without paying an extra charge for the two-fold pleasure.

Unlike a dinner in town when you must pay two checks, or a movie or entertainment where you must buy two seats, your call gives double pleasure for a single cost. In fact, your telephone chat is in a class by itself. In order for you to enjoy it, some friend must share the pleasure. It's a real round-trip journey of enjoyment for the price of a single fare.

Consider this the next time you have a chance to say a neighborly word by telephone. And if your friends in a distant city want to make it a "Dutch treat," tell them to call you next week to even up the score.

Use your telephone for social calls when time and distance hinder personal visits. The cost is small, as shown by the following rates for a three-minute call by number:

	Day 4:30 A.M. to 7 P.M.	Evening 7 P.M. to 8:30 P.M.	Night 8:30 P.M. to 4:30 A.M.

GIVE TO THE AMERICAN PALESTINE CAMPAIGN

Beginning on Monday, May 25, the Jews of Rhode Island will be formally asked to make their contributions to the American Palestine Fund. No less a figure than Rabbi Stephen S. Wise will be present at the Narragansett Hotel on that evening to speak on the needs of the men and women who are building the Jewish home of the future, and of our duty to them and to Judaism.

Rhode Island Jewry does not need to be told more than once that the campaign is on foot. Our citizens have responded in the past, and they may be expected to respond now and at future times to the appeals of their brethren throughout the world. We are confident in the belief that our Jews are generous and full of life-giving wisdom. This drive, as well as those that must inevitably follow it, will prove that.

Palestine is young, Palestine is ardent. Its building and its development are the most fascinating projects in the world of modern Jewry. We can think of no other activity in contemporary Jewish life that so expresses the hope, the courage and the resourcefulness of our race. If we would maintain our position in the world of politics, we must maintain Palestine. It is more representative of the Jewish people than any other section of the globe today. It is the heart and soul of Judaism made tangible for everyone.

There are those who may object to some of the policies or activities that are prevalent in Palestine at the present time. All this is temporary. The main issue is to recognize the fact that Palestine is the cultural and spiritual home of Judaism; and in order to keep Judaism healthy and alive, we must keep Palestine thriving and progressive. To succeed in this, we must help Palestine with money, for the building of their home, the development of land and the establishment of industry. A time will come when Palestine will repay all this a hundred times over.

It is clearly the duty of world Jewry to support and encourage the work that is being done in Palestine. It is the duty of American Jewry to do most of it, because they are the wealthiest group of Jews in the world. It is no less clearly the duty of Rhode Island Jewry to do their large share, because they are representative of the rest of American Jewry. Let us give generously for our Palestine, since we are giving blood and sustenance to the soul and heart of Judaism.

Rhode Island's quota is $30,000 of the $2,500,000, which will be raised throughout the United States.

By the Way

Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities
By DAVID SCHWARTZ

Mr. Chaplin in London has just created something of a sensation by attacking patriotism as "insanity," and contending that it will soon lead us into another war.

There is no question that the common, garden variety of patriotism is narrowing, selfish and something that we'll have to outgrow.

There is, however, a form of patriotism—the natural love of a person for those nearest to him, which is quite natural and which will probably always endure.

Interplanetarists

But what I am thinking about now is another thing. Here, we have been accused of being internationalists. I look at Michelson, who has just died—I think of Einstein—and I am afraid, that soon the charge will be that we've gone even beyond the international—and become cosmic.

Calvin Coolidge at one time made the statement, that if Michelson had put his mind to applied science, he could have become as distinguished in that field as Edison.

But Michelson, with the exception of some things in optics, confined himself to measuring things millions of miles away from the earth. And Einstein, too, thinks of the Milky Way, and all of those other things in the neighboring, suns, stars and planets.

I wonder if some day, we Jews won't be accused—not of being internationalists—but of being interplanetarists, or cosmicists.

Michelson and Grant

They told Michelson at Annapolis, when he was studying at the Naval Academy, that if he attended to his "gunnery" instead of his other scientific thingamajigs in which he was interested, that he might in time be of some service to this country.

Michelson got his appointment to Annapolis through the special favor of President Grant, and it is an odd fact that Grant himself was looked upon rather askew while he was a student at the Military Academy.

And Grant liked the Military Academy as little as the Military Academy relished him. While Grant was a student there, some member of Congress introduced a bill for the abolition of the Military Academy, and Grant watched the papers anxiously, hoping that the bill would pass, so that he would have an excuse for abandoning his military studies.

Two Kinds of Notes

A German banker by the name of Felix Mendelsohn has just been elected President of the International Chamber of Commerce, which has just been meeting in Washington.

He is a scion of the famous Mendelsohn family of Germany—and some wise-cracker has remarked that the Mendelsohn family is still clinging to notes. A reference, of course, to the fact that the first Felix Mendelsohn was a great composer—and the bankers, too, deal in notes, though of another kind.

Those Old "Jokes"

I came across this story in some old American periodical. A Jewish merchant was wearing a big jewel in his scarf pin.

"How did you get that, Jake?" his friend asked him.
"Well, I'll tell you," responded Jake, "when my uncle died he left $500 for a stone, so I bought this stone."

This "joke" is typical of the kind of story that used to frequently appear in the American press of earlier days.

Today, we seldom see or hear them. In part, this cessation, I believe, is due to the campaign waged for many years by the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith and other similar organizations, and in part, it is due, to a general refinement of the taste of American periodicals.

But one thing, these old periodicals reveal, which is illuminating, and that is, that the stories against the Jews told in the day before the Civil War, when the Jewish settlers were largely German, were quite as bitter and of the same type as subsequently were related of the Russian Jews.

Some of us, who had the idea, that anti-Jewish feeling was the special creation of the Russian Jewish invasion, labor under a delusion.

Letters to the Editor

Our Hebrew Schools

We have recently heard the outcry of Jewish educational institutions in New York and elsewhere that in view of the economic depression now prevailing in this country many of them will be obliged to close their doors to Jewish children seeking Jewish learning and environment. It is painful, indeed, to observe the change that has taken place among Jewry in this country. Jewish learning has flourished throughout the ages in spite of economic depressions and religious persecutions in every country of the globe.

In the course of two thousand years many of our ancestors have given their lives for it, beginning with the great Rabbi Akibah and his disciples. We need not look far back in our history to find proof of the devotion and the appreciation of Jewish learning which Jews cherished. Many of us must still remember how our fathers and grandfathers denied themselves the very necessities of their lives in order to pay "Schar Limud" for their children and even today our brethren throughout Eastern Europe, who would consider themselves the most fortunate people on earth if afforded an opportunity to live at least under such conditions as we are now living, even they do not neglect their children's education and Jewish learning is flourishing in the East European countries in spite of the fact that the Jews over there are being gradually deprived of all economic positions.

We American Jews, living under the most favorable conditions Jews have ever known, must realize that our children spend most of their time in strange environments where spiritual training does not exist. It is therefore our duty to maintain our Hebrew schools and to withstand the challenge and the test that the business depression has put upon our shoulders. We must understand that the Hebrew teacher has to use skill and strategy in order to fully utilize the short period at his disposal. The teachers, on the other hand, must be aware that his is the privilege and duty of having a share in shaping and moulding the child's character in waking the child's Jewish consciousness. In other words, the Hebrew teacher is engaged in preparing the modern member of the Jewish society of tomorrow. This task, of course, is colossal, and school committees should once and for all come to the conclusion that they must engage the best available teachers and make clear to themselves the fact that the Hebrew teacher was practically the only man in the years gone by who did not enjoy a prosperous wage and there is therefore no reason for encroaching now upon his source of existence.

By mutual understanding and by co-operation between teachers, parents and school committees, we hope that our educational difficulties will be overcome, even though the path of Hebrew education in this country is not sown with roses.

M. S.

Shabuoth — The Feast of Pentecost

Sundown on Thursday, May 21, marked for Jews in every land the inception of the Festival of Shabuoth, the Feast of Weeks.

Taken over at a very early period in Israel's history as an agricultural festival at which time the first fruits, "bikurim," were brought to the Temple in Jerusalem, it soon came to mean much more than this in the religious calendar. With the waning of agricultural life among the Jews the religious leaders identified Shabuoth with the giving of the Torah, the divine law, to Israel at Mt. Sinai.

It is in connection with the giving of the Ten Commandments and Israel's acceptance of the role of law-giver and teacher that Reform Judaism has added the beautiful ceremony of Confirmation to the observance of this day. Even as Israel of old accepted the Torah at Sinai so each generation takes its place in the unbroken chain of tradition and pledges allegiance to its faith.

The agricultural background of the festival is retained through the custom of decorating the house of worship with green branches and flowers, and the reading of the Book of Ruth, while in the home dairy foods are served symbolizing Israel's joy in the Torah which is compared to "milk and honey."

With the return of the Jew to the soil in many places and the recurring symbol of Israel's acceptance of the Ten Commandments at Sinai in the Confirmation ceremony, the Shabuoth festival continues to have deep spiritual meaning today.

Survival or Extinction?

"Are we a people? At least eight million Jews will say, 'Yes, we are a people.' That is decisive. I grant that the Jewish consciousness is very weak in some Jews; that, except for traces, it has almost disappeared in other Jews, and that in a few others it is transformed into a passionate and ignoble hatred of everything Jewish."—Max Nordau.

Mr. Max Charren, the President, who has worked so loyally and devotedly for the school, opened the ceremony with a brief but concise address. He then called upon Mr. Samuel H. Levinson, the chairman of the board of education, to act as master of ceremonies. Mr. Levinson explained in detail the problems of the school and what can be expected of the future generation as a result of the work done in the field of education.

Rabbi Bachrach spoke of the future of the Jew. And after the examinations, Rabbi O. W. Werner made the closing speech, at which time he spoke very highly of Mr. Samuel S. Cohen and his parents, whom he knew well in their home in Jerusalem.

SPORTING WORLD

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD BY GEORGE JOEL

JACOBS BEATS DAVIS CUP CHOICE

Eddie Jacobs, captain of the University of Pittsburgh tennis team, was not considered promising enough to receive a try-out for the United States Davis Cup team. The team, consisting of Shields, Wood, Sutter and Mangin, was recently named. A few weeks ago, when Eddie was on a tour with his team and played Georgetown, he met Mangin in the first singles events and won. It was not Jacob's first win over the Georgetown boy. Incidentally Eddie beat Doeg, the national singles champion, twice in a season. It does seem as though a Jewish boy must perform at least a minor miracle to receive a bid from the Davis Cup committee.

The tennis situation at Pittsburgh, incidentally, is interesting. Jacobs plays number one on the Varsity team; Goodman, number two; Cohen, number three, and Adler number four. On the Freshman team, Willie Jacobs, Eddie's brother, is the number one man; Nate Ganger, former Ohio State champion, is number two, and Goldstein is fourth singles. What the rest of the school thinks about the Jewishness of its tennis teams is something else, but there you are! Neither the Varsity nor the Freshman teams have lost a match so far this season.

Getting back to Eddie—last year the Baltimore boy suffered from a series of injuries that kept him from playing his best, but from Pitt comes the news that Jacobs is in fine shape and should have a big season. At this writing he looks like a serious contender for the intercollegiate tennis crown. With Seligson already an alumnus, Jacobs is about the only Jewish boy left in the country that has a chance.

OTHER COLLEGE TENNIS NEWS

Julian Wishik, once quite a boy tennis player, is singling for the Columbia University team. The Flushing, N. Y., boy is playing fifth singles. This is his Sophomore year.

A young fellow named Goldsmith is playing for George Washington University this season and was good enough to defeat Cohen of Pitt when the two schools met.

Weaver High School at Hartford, Conn., is not a college, true enough, but it has the distinction of being the only prep school outside of New York City that can boast of an All-Jewish tennis team. Manuel Burness, Albert Goldenthal, Louis Stein and Bennett Greenberg are the four members.

Julie Tavalin of St. John's College is the mainstay of that Catholic college's tennis team this season. "Babe" is playing first and second singles with varying success. He is undoubtedly one of the best looking college players in the Metropolitan district.

BERG'S COMEBACK SUCCESSFUL

Just two weeks after being knocked out by Tony Canzoneri for the lightweight title, Jack Kid Berg, English lightweight, came into the ring with Tony Herrera, champion of Mexico, and at the end of ten rounds, proved to the complete satisfaction of the judges and referee that he was the better man.

Berg demonstrated conclusively that he had not lost his form as the result of his recent defeat. He is still a master at boring in and smothering a rival's hooks and jabs. The Jewish boy didn't give his Mexican opponent a moment's rest.

Another Jewish fighter, who made his appearance at Madison Square that same night, was Murray Brandt, a Brooklyn lightweight, who went through a four-round bout, to earn a draw after knocking his opponent down for a count in the first round.

MUTTERINGS

Something seems to have happened to Maxie Rosenbloom, the current light heavyweight champion. In the past he was always ready to fight but lately the slapping Jewish boy has been shying away from bouts. Joe Banovic has been attempting to get Maxie into the ring for the past few months but hasn't been able to get a rise out of Maxie.

The Schiff Center in New York City is sponsoring a series of amateur wrestling and boxing shows. The idea is to bring to the fore some of the shrinking violets who have been too timid to perform. Now that professional wrestling has come into its own you can expect to find some of our boys taking up the sport in a big way.

Imagine a boxing team chosen among the amateurs in New York City being without a Jewish member? Believe it or not, it's true. Not only are there no Jews on the New York team, but the U. S. team, now fighting in the international matches, is Jewishless. An unprecedented occurrence.

Yale has taken Latin and Greek off the required list of subjects. This move is interpreted as an admission that Yale is interested in attracting boys from the public high schools. The more exclusive prep schools have always had the inside track for their students and it did seem as though "Old Eli" was getting the not so robust boys. However, the change in requirements will not make it any easier for Jewish "prep school" athletes to get in or make teams.

Herb Fleishhacker, who quarterbacked for Stanford University of California a few years back, has arrived in New York City and is now working for J. P. Morgan & Co. He won't call the signals for that outfit, however.

Add this to the strange happenings of sport. Lou Petrone of Worcester, a junior welterweight, was fighting a young man and handing him a thorough trouncing. In the sixth round the Worcester boy swallowed his mouth-piece, became nauseated and sank to the floor without being hit. His opponent was awarded the bout on a technical knockout.

Elwood Levy is number five man on the 150-pound crew of the University of Pennsylvania and a gentleman named Abrams is rowing in the Syracuse varsity boat. Sounds very suspicious to me!

OBSERVE MOTHERS' DAY

The Providence Fraternal Association observed a Mothers' Day program at their lodge rooms last Tuesday evening. A crowd, consisting of over 400 members and friends, taxed the hall to its capacity.

Previous to the following program President Charles Silverman conducted a short business meeting:

Opening selections, by the orchestra; "Mother of Mine," sung by Cantor Joseph Schlossberg; "A Floral Tribute to Mother," by the officers of the lodge, Charles Silverman, Louis Hayman, Barney Kessler, Samuel Lazarus, Louis Rosenbaum, Joseph Keller; "Mothers' Day," reading, by Jeanne Ruth Max; Memorial Services, conducted by Cantor Schlossberg; "Mother," by the guest speaker of the evening, Rabbi Max Lasker; recitation, "Deacon Jones," by Jeanne Ruth Max; vocal solos, by Cantor Schlossberg.

Refreshments were served by the committee followed by an evening of dancing.

The committee in charge were: Teddy Max (chairman), Louis Siegel, Louis Hayman, Mrs. Louis Hayman, Mrs. Harry Jagolinzer and Charles Silverman, ex-officio.

Fifteen new members were taken into the lodge and initiated to the first degree, and will take the second degree at the May 26th meeting. All members are urged to attend as we expect to have a lively degree team in action at this meeting. All members wishing to join our new degree team, get in touch with Robert Berstein before the next meeting.

The new members that were initiated at this meeting were Samuel Mitchell, Samuel Fleisig, Maurice B. Fleisig, Samuel Sherman, Simon Fine, Abner Rosenberg, Paul Seltzer, Charles Rouslin, David M. Woolf, Louis Korn, Perry Bernstein, Joseph Morrison, Max Levin and Rose Levin. It is necessary that these members attend our next meeting Tuesday, May 26th, to receive their second degree.

Barney Kessler is rapidly filling up the cast for his great stage presentation, but needs several more male and female characters who can speak plain Yiddish, as Barney speaks it.

The contest was conducted in all of the states, and the twelve prize-winning Rhode Island essays will be entered in a national contest. ## JEWISH LAWYER REFUSES PAY FOR SERVICES TO CHICAGO

Chicago, May 22—(JTA)—Samuel E. Weinschenker has flabbergasted city officials here from Mayor Cermak down by offering to work for the taxpayers for nothing. Weinschenker has been acting for the city before the State Legislature for several weeks in the place of Leon Hornstein, first assistant corporation counsel, who is ill.

Failing to receive a bill from Weinschenker, Corporation Counsel Busch requested him to submit a statement. Instead of a statement Weinschenker wrote that he wanted no compensation for helping Chicago recover from its present crisis. He is also paying his railroad fare and hotel bills.

Dr. D. Litchman,
State Toxicologist,
Lauds Lie Detector

Dr. David Litchman, toxicologist of the State Public Health Commission and Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Northwestern University Alumni Association for Crime and Research, has returned after attending the first course given by the Scientific Crime Detection Bureau of Northwestern University at Chicago.

While studying the laboratory courses, Dr. Litchman was privileged to engage in actual case work with the Chicago police. His observations convinced him, he said, of the remarkable potentialities of applying the latest scientific discoveries to crime detection, particularly the lie detector, truth-serum and the process known as "moulage," perfected by a Swedish scientist for the purpose of preserving perishable evidence in a fashion submittable in court.

According to Dr. Lester A. Round, State Director of Public Health, opportunity was created for Dr. Litchman to attend the Chicago laboratory courses because of the increasing demands being made on the commission by Rhode Island medical examiners, police and other prosecuting authorities for scientific aid in investigations. It is desired, Dr. Round said, to make the facilities of the state commission as serviceable to the community as possible in this respect.

Young Judaeans
Leaders' Club to Present Play

The Young Judaeans Leaders' Club will present Zangwill's "Melting Pot" on Wednesday, June 10, in the Vestry of Temple Emanu-EL.

A fine cast of players has been selected to take part in this presentation.

Hyman Stein will play David, the Russian immigrant youth who sees in America the "crucible of God." He is torn between allegiance to America and his new hope. Laura Winograd plays opposite him as Vera, the Russian girl, who brings his musical genius to the forefront. Others in the cast are as follows:

Leonora Finberg, Rose Strauss, Celia Flaxman, Jeanette Wexler, Frank Licht, Gustaf Sweet and Nathan Lisker. Miss Ida Pollock has been procured as coach and rehearsals are now being held at Temple Beth-Israel.

The Young Judaeans are attempting this ambitious and worth-while project with the hope that the Jewish community of Providence will seek to encourage these efforts and aid Jewish youth in its attempt to better itself.
