A Bear Story

It is a variation of an old Yiddish story, but I've just heard it again—and at this time it seems to me, particularly apropos.

"You know," remarked Chayim to Beryl, "I really ought to 'bench Gome!' (make a blessing for rescue from peril) now."

"And why?" gestured Beryl.

"Well," replied Chayim, "it's a long story, but I'll tell it quickly. It was getting dark. All about me, I could see night falling. Yes, falling like a heavy snow. And here I was going through the woods. And let me tell you this was the real woods. The kind of woods they have out in the West, where men are men and woods are woods. A real jungle. Tigers, lions, wolves, pranced and danced all through it.

"I soon saw that in the darkness of night, I would not be able to make my way, that if I did, some hyena might mistake me for a meal. So I screamed for some place, where I could abide the night.

"Terrified, I walked softly—and lo, imagine my pleasure, as I stumbled amid the howling of the wild animals of prey on a small hut, left over probably by some hunter. I could have fallen on my knees and uttered a prayer of thanksgiving, but I had my new suit on and didn't want to dirty it. I went in. It was deliverance, indeed. Nevertheless, it was very lonesome. My nearest neighbor was a giant alligator, whose form I could perceive from the window of my hut. It was so lonely I could have gladly gone up and made friends even with this alligator, but after all, I had no introduction, so I thought I had better not. I am not a very forward person.

"Yes, it was lonesome. My radio and the only broadcasting was that of the wild beasts' calls. How I missed the afternoon paper. I decided there and then that in the future I would be much more respectful to my paper. I wouldn't wrap herring it. I would realize that it constituted an integral portion of my daily enjoyment. As I sat thinking thus, I felt my bones ache. I concluded that I must be weary. There was one of those Murphy-in-the-wall beds in the hut. I pulled it out and undressed myself and sat down on the bed. How I wished then that I could listen in to some bed-time story—you know the soothing kind about the bear who bit off the nose of the little blue-eyed boy, the kind that puts you in the peaceful mood for sleep. I lit a cigarette for a final smoke before I said my night prayers. My mood was a very peaceful one.

"When all of a sudden, what stands before me? Well, in order not to excite you, for psychologists have proven that excitement engenders a poisonous secretion in the blood, which is very harmful, let me tell you quickly, it was a bear. Yes, a real, live bear. I had undressed to go to sleep, so I was bare—and here was another bear. It wasn't so much that I was embarrassed at being caught so ultra-deshabille, you understand. I was actually frightened. You can never tell what's in a bear's mind. Women and elephants, they say, never forget. But bears forget everything, except their appetite. And with me weighing 150 pounds, and being in such good condition, for I exercise every day at the Y. M. C. A., you can understand that I must have looked a juicy steak indeed to the bear. You see, I am trying to get the bear's point of view. The truth of the matter is that most people's misunderstandings arise, because they fail to realize the other person's point of view. Nevertheless, I realized that this was no time for detailed analysis and discussion of delicate points. The first law of success is action. So I at once made up my mind that I would suspend the processes of protracted cerebration and become as it were a

RADIO DISCUSSION ON ANTI-SEMITISM HELD IN BERLIN

Berlin, May 27—(JTA)—A radio discussion on anti-Semitism was conducted in Germany for the first time this week over the Berlin Central Radio Station.

Leading the debate was Ludwig Hollaender, prominently identified with the Central Union of German Citizens of the Jewish Faith and Wilhelm Stapel, notorious anti-Semitic theoretician, editor of the Deutsche Volk Stum.

The broadcast for the first time permitted a host of listeners to hear the Jewish view on anti-Semitism as expounded by a recognized Jewish leader.

The radio station is controlled by the government, which permitted the broadcast in order to make amends for the broadcast of an anti-Semitic address last month.

At that time, the Central Union entered formal protest with the authorities.

Are Jews Half-Nordics?

By MICHAEL WURMBRAND

During the past few decades the so-called "Aryan" research has attempted to show that Jesus Christ, whose descent from King David it also admits, was an Aryan, a descendant of a blonde Aryan race, which lived entirely surrounded by a sea of dark Semitic peoples. It has also tried to show that the stories of the Bible are partly of Aryan origin, and were only later absorbed into the Semitic tradition. Consequently, the professors of "Aryanism" argued, it was necessary to "cleanse" the Bible of its Semitic spirit and allow it to shine in its pure Aryan splendor.

While on these tortuous paths, some "Aryan" professors would here and there discover some kernel of real truth. Now there has appeared a German Jew who is going along the same path and who has revealed similar historic connections, but whose research has led him to entirely different conclusions. He is attempting to prove no more and no less than that the Jewish nation, even when it had settled in Palestine, the land in which it first achieved the status of nationhood, had a strong infusion of Nordic blood.

This investigator, a government architect named Sigmund Stiefel, has gone quite far back indeed in his researches. He starts with the Neanderthal man. The latest research estimates the time of human development that has elapsed between Neanderthal man and the present day at about 16,000 years. The settlement of the northern countries by man is supposed to have occurred somewhat later. Celtic and Nordic (Germanic) culture are together classified as Indo-Germanic. From the point of view of science, there is no Aryan race, but only Aryan linguistic groups. These groups wandered through many lands. In later epochs their aim was directed toward the warm southern lands rather than to the western countries. Nordic groups invaded Greece through the Danube country and Thrace. By this means there was created in Greece and in the Aegean countries the Mycenaean culture, a forerunner of the later Greek culture. In Palestine, too, this Mycenaean cultural group established itself under the name of Philistines. Judaism was the result of the amalgamation of Philistine culture with that of the Egyptians and Babylonians, as well as that of the Hittites, the resultant amalgam basing itself on the state, or national idea. This new Jewish nationality was very mixed in its racial composition. The "Semites," coming from Arabia or from east of the Jordan, formed only one element in the racial composition of the Jewish nation. The latter did not compose the whole, perhaps not even one-half of the racial strain of the ancient Hebrews. The Bible, the Hebrew language and archeology show a very complicated culture, which is natural for such a mixed nation.

Sigmund Stiefel then discusses the Nordic elements in the Jewish nation.

NEW ENGLAND HADASSAH TO MEET JUNE 5 IN BOSTON

Boston, May 27—(JTA)—Announcement is made by Mrs. A. E. Wagman, President, that the annual New England Hadassah Regional Conference will take place all day Sunday, June 6th, at Salem, with headquarters at the Hotel Hawthorne.

Dr. Chaim Yassky, director of the Hadassah Medical Organization in Palestine, will be the guest speaker. The delegates are expected from every chapter throughout the states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Maine.

DETROIT PHYSICIANS GET MEDICAL ASSN. MEDAL

Detroit, May 27—(JTA)—One of the two medals awarded by the American Medical Association at its recent convention in New Orleans for scientific exhibits, went to two Detroiters, Dr. Max Ballin and Dr. Plinn F. Morse, Pathologist of Harper Hospital.

The medal went to the Detroiters for the best exhibit of clinical studies.

tion. How seriously his arguments are taken in German-Jewish circles can be seen from the fact that his book has been issued by the Jewish Students' Syndicate, which the Central-Verein of German Jews has organized.

The Philistines, who, according to him were undoubtedly an Indo-Germanic race, related to the Greeks, came over Crete to Palestine, and stamped their European physiognomy upon the inhabitants of that country. A pure Philistine type is the giant Goliath, resembling the heroes of the Iliad—tall of stature, wearing a shield, helmet and spurs, challenging his enemies to personal combat in boastful speeches. His sword is a Nordic one, his shield resembles that of Ajax and Achilles.

The influence of this invasion can be seen very early in the Bible. The prestige of the ancient Hebrew judges resembles that of the dukes among the Nordics and Celts. The Hebrew heroine, singer and prophetess Deborah finds her new parallel in the Celtic-German Velleda. There is also an unmistakable Nordic element in the Samson saga, which deals entirely with the Philistines. Giant strength, long hair, and most of all, Nordic humor, are proofs of this. As nowhere else in the Bible, these Nordic traits appear here in every detail.

A later epoch, where signs of undoubted Nordic culture also appear, is that of Saul. The government of the Hebrew nation then evolved from that of "duchies," or districts ruled by judges, to a unified kingdom, just as happened among the wandering tribes in the northern countries. Here too the king was chosen by popular vote. As among the Nordic Greeks, musicians belonged to the nobility. Of especial importance here is the episode of the sorceress of Endor, undoubtedly taken from the Nordic belief in an underworld. Dying on the battlefield by his own hand, Saul's death resembles closely that of Ajax, and in both cases the heroes fell together with their brave sons.

Stiefel then takes up the history of King David. He agrees with Houston Stewart Chamberlain, the famous anti-Semitic professor and son-in-law of Richard Wagner, who claimed that much Nordic blood flowed in King David's veins. But Chamberlain overlooked the effects of race mixture upon leadership traits. Genius is a result of race crossing, of surpassing one's inherited race traits. David's genius is the result of the mingling of Philistines and Jews. Krethi and Plethi, David's guards, really mean Cretans and Philistines. Under Solomon it appears that the process of amalgamation between Jews and Philistines was to a large extent completed. After that the Philistines vanished from the Bible and from history.

The Temple with its rectangular foyer, as well as the rectangular sanctuary and main hall, resembles closely ancient Nordic form of homes and palaces, which have been excavated by archeologists. Thus the Nordic and Mediterranean architectural traditions were amalgamated.

Then, too, the Hittites, which, like the Semites, were a racial element in the Hebrew nation, were very strongly Indo-Germanized. Thus the Jews inherited two strains of Indo-Germanic culture, first through the Hittites, then through the Philistines. Other races, which went into the formation of the Jewish nation, were the ancient inhabitants of Canaan, and races from the East.

In later centuries other Nordic blood was added to the Hebrew nation. In a message sent by the Spartans to the Maccabees it is said: "We are related to the Jews, as a matter of fact we are descendants of Abraham!"

The Thirty Years' War in Germany added a Nordic strain to the Jewish nation.

Are the Jews then a semi-Nordic race? In Jewish circles his conclusions are being taken very seriously. Hitler, of course, will not be very enthusiastic about these ideas. Will the Nordic fanatics of America, who would wish to limit the immigration to this country only to the "Nordic" element, stop and ponder over his conclusions?

TEMPLE BETH-EL

BICENTENNIAL SERVICE HELD

The Washington Bicentennial service of the congregation which took place last Friday, was the most unique and successful ever held by the congregation. Every available seat was taken and the audience was most favorably impressed by the program. The appearance of large delegations from the seven chartered commands in Rhode Island and of one from Boston, dressed in Colonial uniforms and bearing the standards of their units, produced a most striking and picturesque scene. Their appearance lent an historical significance to the service. The 20 large flags banked on both sides of the pulpit added color to the spectacle.

Preceding the entrance of the Governor into the Temple was a procession which included a distinguished group of military officers and men prominent in the civic and industrial life of Providence.

The regular musical program was supplemented by a violin solo rendered by Mr. Pavel Bytovetzki.

MEMORIAL DAY

Out of the dim past of many childhoods has always come the wonderment of numerous generations at those mysterious dead whose souls were to be comforted by the firing of salutes and by flowers cast on quiet streams and strewn on old graves. Growing up changes the wonderment to acceptance: the undeserved adult misfortune of understanding everything and appreciating nothing, as compared with the vivid eyes of childhood with its lack of comprehension. But there have always been days of memorial for the departed military men of all our wars, and all these wars and these memorials have taken on the color of things inevitable. It is just this acceptance of what seems inevitable that must be overcome in the minds of the modern generation.

The commemoration of our past war heroes should not be unaccompanied by the story of their sufferings. War should not be represented as a figment of the glorious life, a sparkling adventure untainted by horror and cruelty. To the child of the present it might seem impossible for the average intelligent parent to be kind by presenting him with toy guns and pseudo-military uniforms. The very act is to encourage the idea of war's inevitability. In similar strain, it might be wise to think more carefully in remembering the buried heroes to them as well as to their seniors. At such times, when the thought of war is uppermost in the public mind, it would be wisdom to talk against the idea of war, rather than merely to scatter lovely tributes to men who went through torment for the futile persistence of a barbarous inevitability.

Einstein and the rest of the pacifists are not too severe in their absolute attitudes. By determination and not by equivocation will the end of peace be attained. The wars of the future cannot be imagined. Indeed, there are too few people who actually know the vileness and the brutality of the last one. A too vigilant supervision has kept from us the horrible spectacles that have survived it. Modern science, modern destruction have arrived at a point where mere flesh and blood are powerless to survive.

For this Memorial Day, let us not forget what outworn traditions must be wiped from the face of the earth. Let us honor those who have given their lives selflessly and bravely: but let us honor them by striving in word and deed to destroy the false and meaningless customs that destroyed them and robbed them of youth and love and normal life. Memorial Day should be significant as a day to devise preventives for Memorial Days of a far future. Let those dear memories be a fitting inspiration for so great a task.

man of action. Let people call me a Babbitt. What care I?

"Fortunately, being a married man, I had learned to think fast. So what did I do. I realized that all would be lost, if I lost my wits. So I said to myself—think hard or forever more be silent. If I could only get some plan. The Russians have a five-year plan, I knew. But the bear probably wouldn't wait that long. All of a sudden, I smelled some wood burning. I knew then that my brain must have begun to think. And presto—I had a plan. I jumped on the bed. I knew the bear would follow me. In fact, I even invited it to follow me. The bear jumped on the bed. Then I quickly jumped off the bed, and pushed the Murphy bed back into the wall.

"The bear growled. 'Good-bye, bear,' I said, 'I bear you no ill will, but it was you or me, and if I let you get me, who'll borrow money from my best friends?'

"With that I was off, or rather I thought I was off, for the howling of the bear had attracted one of the biggest bear mobs that I had ever seen. I was disgusted. I thought the best thing for me to do was to run. So I ran as fast as I could. Imagine it—a whole flock of bears pursuing. What chance would I have? I ran and ran. Suddenly, I came to water, and plunged into it. The bears, thought I, will stop now. But did they? They did not. They dived into the water after me—and to boot it all, in front of me, a giant crocodile opened its ghastly mouth, ready to devour me. It was terrible I tell you, terrible."

"Well," said Beryl, "how did you escape?"

"Well, to tell the truth, the only thing that saved me," said Chayim, "was, it afterwards developed, that the whole thing never transpired."

It's Living Counterpart

It's a long story, to illustrate a simple point. The point is the case of Mr. Curtis, who hoaxed Mr. Lindbergh and the world—who concocted a most fantastic string of tales—but it transpires, that it was all a figment of the imagination.

Which goes to prove that many ridiculous stories have their counterparts in reality.

A Selling Title

And talking about Humorist Frank Sullivan's suggestion to his publisher that his book, "Broccoli and Other Things," be renamed "The Good Earth" so that its sales may increase, there is the somewhat similar story of the young women who came to the big city in pursuance of literary aspirations.

"I can't think of a good nom de plume," said the literary deb.

"Why not take the name of Fannie Hurst? You can sell anything under that name."

"Shehecheyonu," the Song That Never Ends

By BERNARD M. GOLDOWSKY

Another American Palestine Appeal will be launched on Sunday, June 5th, at the Narragansett Hotel with Dr. Nahum Sokolow as guest speaker.

EXCELLENT ADVICE:

If your intentions are good, but the monster "Depression" struck your bank roll a solar plexus blow, don't try to find fault with the cause or with its management as an excuse for not giving. You will do an injustice to yourself and an injury to the cause.

Don't decide that it is better to give nothing than give little. The combined dictates of reason and experience teaches us that an accumulation of snowflakes make an avalanche. But aside from that even a small contribution will keep you in the ranks of Zion. The Tziyon that is and has been close to your heart all your life.

Do not take an example of the man who has most and gives least. He would have had less to lose if he had given more as an investment to perpetuate his memory.

Don't pity the Arabs and condemn the Zionists. Nothing has been taken from the Arabs by force of arms. Every inch of ground in Palestine was bought and paid for. The fact that Israel was robbed of that same land centuries before Mohammed gave the Koran to the Ismailites notwithstanding.

Don't grow impatient because Eretz Israel is still like a bright window in a distant view. Remember that "Right" is an awfully slow-moving traveller; particularly so when its movements are retarded with the weight of Talis and Tfilim. But with a united Jewry and with the support of fair-minded non-Jews, "Right" is bound to oust the barbarian "Might" in due time.

For only with a united Jewry will we be able to sweep away the dark hours of opposition, oppression and persecution and replace them with the old happy hours of freedom, honor and dignity that have long folded their wings.

Give as much as you can.
Give as little as you will. But—
GIVE.
Make your reservation at once for the dinner given in honor of the world-famed Jew, Dr. Nahum Sokolow, on Sunday, June 5th, at the Narragansett Hotel.

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD BY GEORGE JOEL

JACKIE BERG TALKS ABOUT KNOCKOUTS

Jackie Berg, the Jewish-English fighter, who has returned to this country in the hope of recouping his waning fortunes, had his say the other day about knockouts. He advanced some strange theories about the boys who find themselves sitting down on a canvas floor when they should be standing up throwing or dodging leather. Jackie says:

"Fighters seldom are actually knocked out. In most cases where a ringster is lying stretched out on the floor and the count of ten passes through his consciousness, he is chuckling."

Berg, who made his statement before a crowd of ring followers in his training quarters, where he is getting himself in shape for his next bout, ought to know. Called the "Modern Battling Nelson," he pays no more attention to fisted boxing gloves than the father of eight does to a crying baby. He certainly has stopped enough punches to slow up a five-ton truck, yet only two fighters, Petrolle and Canzoneri, have ever been able to stop the Jewish boy.

Sammy Goldman, manager of Canzoneri, who was on the scene, had his say in discussing the recent knockout of Ruby Goldstein by Billy Sisk in Chicago:

"Ruby got up a couple of times. That was something," remarked Goldman. "He was on his pins when the bout was stopped. All he needs is confidence."

"Quite right," cut in Berg, who has put much of his former dash and fire in his training at Stillman's Gymnasium. "Goldstein has been on the floor so often that he believes it is part of the act."

"Check up and you will find that good fighters rarely are belted out. There have been exceptions, of course; poor Tiger Flowers, for example. He had a crockery chin and was flattened several times before acquiring his championship."

"But most of them are only resigning, as we say in England; particularly those who roll around on the deck."

"I really have been knocked out only once—when Canzoneri tagged me in the third round in Chicago. Petrolle dropped me a dozen times in our second fight, yet I might have finished had not Sol Gold heaved in a towel in the fifth round."

"I didn't see either of the Dempsey-Tunney fights, but from what I gathered, long count or not, Gene getting off the canvas in the seventh round in Chicago was an excellent illustration of what a gamester can do when he tries."

"The weight, being in love and forgetting that I had a left hand," he smiled. "When I was going good I jabbed a couple of times and then rallied. Later I developed a habit of fighting head-on and directly facing the other fellow. This gave me little or no chance to catch my breath. I commenced to tire for the first time."

"Goldie called this to my attention while I was preparing for my first fight with Fuller. I jabbed Samuel occasionally, edged in sideways to rally and, presto, a lot of the old stuff came back."

"And don't forget what I have told you about fighters who make faces on the floor. They are the kind who formerly got away with claims of foul. They are like wrestlers who feign, being unable to return after tumbling from the ring. Try sticking a pin in one of those stricken limb twisters and see how quickly they scramble back through the ropes."

WHICH REMINDS ME

Which reminds me that in the May 21st issue of the Saturday Evening Post there appeared an article by Paul Gallico, sports editor of the New York Daily News. The theme was to the effect that although eight or ten fighters make big money in the prize rings there are countless thousands who get nothing more out of fighting but battered bodies and weakened minds. The article should be given to every young man who is considering a career as a prize fighter. It is the most bunkless and sane thing to appear on sport in many years.

The sport pages of our newspapers reek with false sentimentality and exaggerations. Paul Gallico's piece comes as a welcome relief.

CHATTERINGS

Exaggeration, to continue the subject of sport writing, is certainly a common disease, and our own Jewish sport pages are not free from it. Just the other day I picked up a piece about Baroness Levi, the Jewish tennis player, which said that she would probably be one of "first ten women players this year." Baroness Levi has as much chance of getting that honor as I have of making the Davis Cup team. A Jewish fighter wins a few bouts and he is touted around as a certain champion or a Jewish ball player gets in the lineup of a couple of games and he is immediately compared to Cobb and Ruth. I've been guilty myself, but I promise to use a little more restraint.

Mrs. Federman, the Jewish golfer—that sounds like a female specie, continues to win tournaments, but I notice that our old friend, Beatrice Gottlieb, has not been making much of a stir.

The 92nd Street Branch of the Y. M. H. A. held its annual track meet in New York City a few weeks ago and a huge field turned out for the events. The "Y" has been developing some very able trackmen, but has yet to put a top-notch runner on the cinder paths.

Ida Singer, the indoor sprint champion of 1931, has been tearing up and down the lanes. The Brooklyn boy hopes to make a showing in the Olympic trials.

That group of Jewish wrestlers from Palestine about whom I told you some weeks ago, are having visa troubles and have postponed their trip for the time being.

Another depression item—It would be a Jewish country club—the boys and girls of the Fairview Country Club, up in Westchester, are licking the depression. Things got tough so the real estate experts simply cut off a piece of the club's land and sold it to the County of Westchester for enough money to keep the non-kosher wolf away from the door.
