Tidbits and News of Jewish Personalities
By DAVID SCHWARTZ

An Old Tiger Fighter

Apropos of the fights both within and without the Democratic party in New York, to curb the Tammany Tiger, it is interesting to recall that in 1892 there was a similar effort to down Tammany.

And the candidate who was named as anti-Tammany was Lewis Einstein. He was the only Jew who was ever named by one of the major parties for the job of Mayor of New York. Einstein was defeated, however. It was a bad year in general for the Republicans, and, as you may recall from your history, Cleveland was re-elected.

A son of this same Einstein was until recently Minister to Czechoslovakia.

Lehman and Medalie

There is this year no dearth of Jewish candidates. Lehman for Governor of New York on the Democratic ticket. Medalie for United States Senator on the Republican ticket.

It is an interesting fact, too, that the Jewish candidates are distinctly Jewish Jews. Lehman's interest in Jewish affairs is well known. Medalie has not a little in him of the old "Yeshiva Bachur." He has that subtlety of mind, which one associates with that type. His father was editor of a well-known Hebrew paper in Russia and Medalie himself knows his Hebrew.

Medalie is running against Senator Wagner. And while Wagner is not a Jew, his secretary and right-hand man is, and this secretary can throw a powerful assortment of the old Hebrew. In fact, Wagner's secretary was at one time, a teacher in a Hebrew school.

A Protestant Runs, Too

Arthur Brisbane in his column quotes from a telegram received from some man in Texas to this effect: "The Democrats in New York have nominated a Jew for Governor, and the Republicans have nominated a Catholic for Governor. What is the matter with the Protestants?"

Mr. Brisbane answered the telegram rather well in his column, but I should answer it in this way: "There is a Protestant candidate for President of the United States on both the major parties. And it seems to me the Presidency is not such a bad little job."

The Case of Insull

When the name of Samuel Insull was magic, one never heard that there was Jewish blood in him, but now that his whole edifice of power financing has collapsed like a house of cards, it is rumored about that one of his parents was Jewish.

Yet we are told that Insull was one of the most anti-Semitic of employers in Chicago, that only one Jew, who happened also to have been one of the former employees of Thomas Edison, as Insull originally was—ever rose to any prominence in the Insull enterprise. There was a virtual black-listing of Jews in the organization.

Mr. Insull, it appears, would have qualified for membership in that organization, which I am told exists in Hungary of Jewish anti-Semites.

Prejudice

While in a sense it is gratifying to see the various parties, as in New York, Illinois and other states, presenting Jewish candidates for office, gratifying in the sense that it perhaps reveals a more tolerant sense in the political scene, it would be much

PAUL J. ROBIN IS DEMOCRATIC CHOICE FOR STATE SENATOR

Providence Man Elected After Forty-five Ballots From First Senatorial District

Paul J. Robin, well-known Providence business man and an active participant in the affairs of many fraternal and military organizations here, was nominated on last Friday by the Democratic party as its candidate for State Senator from the First Senatorial District.

Mr. Robin was elected after a bitter 4-hour deadlock and it was necessary to take 45 ballots before he was chosen by the delegates. Mr. Robin was aided immeasurably in his fight for the nomination by the able assistance of Judge Maurice Robinson, Alfred Finkelstein and Reuben Blumenthal, who led the forces for his election.

Mr. Robin has for years been an active worker for the forces of Democracy and one of the leading younger members of the party in this state and is expected to make a determined and successful campaign for the office. After Mr. Robin's nomination, Dr. Edward F. Carroll, Chairman of the Democratic City Committee of Providence, said: "Mr. Robin is one of the outstanding Democrats in the city," and predicted victory for him in the First District.

Paul J. Robin was born in the East Side of New York City on April 16, 1898, and is a descendant of the famous Matay Levi. He attended the Rabbinical School there and graduated from the College of the City of New York in January, 1918, at the age of 19 years, 9 months, afterwards taking a post-graduate course in accounting. Mr. Robin entered the military service during the World War, enlisting in the Artillery branch of the Army, at the age of 20. After the Armistice he returned to New York and became a cashier in a Wall street banking house. In 1923, Mr. Robin came to Providence to assume the duties of general manager of the Consolidated Gas Iron Co. of this city and Springfield and in 1931 became associated with the Interstate Furniture Company, also of Providence.

He is a member of Civic Lodge, 853, F. and A. M., member of the Board of Governors of the Providence Square Club, member of Knights of Pythias, Sheepskin Club, Past President of the Providence Fraternal Association, member of the Board of Directors of the Hebrew Free Loan Association for two years, active in the various campaigns of the Jewish Philanthropic organizations. He is also a member of the Jewish Community Center. Mr. Robin is a charter member of Rhode Island Post, No. 23, Jewish War Veterans, Past Commander of Providence Post, Past National Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief, Jewish War Veterans, and now is National Chief of Staff.

Mr. Robin married Miss Sylvia Lichtenstein of New York in May, 1920, and they have two daughters.

Mrs. Robin has always interested herself in Jewish communal affairs, being active in the Council of Jewish Women and is a Past President of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Jewish War Veterans.

Col. Herbert H. Lehman Well-Known Conciliator And Humanitarian

By BERNARD G. RICHARDS

It is customary for political leaders and aspirants to political office to base their appeal to the voters on a claim to the qualities of humanitarianism on the one hand and a practical business sense on the other. These are believed to be the high and exacting standards by which the public measures the trustworthiness and sincerity of those who seek its franchise. It is not often, however, that a distinguished humanitarian and successful business man attains to lofty political station. Such is the idiosyncrasy of political processes in a democracy.

This paradox explains in part the unique case of Colonel Herbert H. Lehman. The modest, retiring man, who withdrew from the financial world in 1923 to become the running mate of Governor Roosevelt, started out on his political career with a well established reputation as a practical humanitarian and a sound business man. He made no pretense to political wisdom, or experience. He frankly stated he was not a politician. And today, after completing four years of activity as a forceful and effective Lieutenant Governor, four years during which he had to match his wits and political acumen with the astutest brains in the State Senate, today when he stands before the people as the widely acclaimed and admired nominee for the Governorship on the Democratic ticket, it is doubtful whether any citizen in the state, no matter what his political leanings may be, thinks of Herbert H. Lehman as a politician. In the public mind, Colonel Lehman is still the level headed business man, the fine gentleman, the exemplary citizen, and above all, the ardent and never failing humanitarian. This attitude of the people, of the voters, is the clue to the man, Lehman. If he has made a success of politics it is primarily because of his broad and irresistible humanity, which has colored and pervaded his actions as a public official just as it has characterized all his deeds as a philanthropist and social leader.

It is, I believe, only proper to bring in the subject of Lehman's Jewishness into the discussion of his personality. Nor is it exaggerated to connect his virtues as a man with his qualities as a Jew. His whole life, his temperament and his actions thoroughly justify such an analogy. If we Jews, as a result of our peculiar position and experiences among the nations of the world, may be prone to take an inordinate pride in any member of our race who has attained to some distinction as a statesman, scientist or writer, we certainly have every reason to take a double pride in the rise of a man like Colonel Lehman. For he is not merely a Jew who refers to his origin before election time and then forgets his people, he is one of the most loyal and sincere and forthright Jews in America. He takes his Jewishness as a matter of fact. He neither seeks to conceal his origin nor does he shout it from the housetops. He accepts it with dignity and humility, as a circumstance which is no more strange and astonishing than it is for an Englishman to belong to the English race. He regards it simply as a natural phenomenon, which implies duties and responsibilities not to be evaded but to be fulfilled quietly and thoroughly, in the same manner as the duties and responsibilities of American citizenship are to be fulfilled.

But it is truly remarkable to observe how Colonel Lehman's dignified and unostentatious attitude in Jewish life, as manifested by him over a period of many years' activity in Jewish philanthropy and relief work, has been maintained by him with unswerving consistency in the political sphere. The same reserve, the same fine and simple manner, the same earnestness and sense of responsibility to the public. His phenomenal rise to political success has not turned his head. He does not strut and pose, he does not declaim empty phrases, he makes no false promises, as is frequently the wont of other men prominent in the political field.

Lehman comes of an old and aristocratic Jewish family, and he was given the best and most careful education which the son of wealthy parents can have. At college he mingled with the typical collegiate set. Yet, when still a very young man he began to participate in Jewish activities. At the age of thirty he was one of the founders of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, into whose work he threw himself with fervor and devotion. Born in America and brought up in the most exclusive social circles, where little interest in Jewish matters was evinced, young Lehman gave himself to the work of relief for the Jews of Eastern Europe, with whom he had hardly had any contact before, so wholeheartedly, that it evoked surprise and admiration among all who were associated with him in that historical task. It became evident very soon that Herbert Lehman had facets of sympathy and understanding in his nature which waited only for an opportune moment and needed no physical contact for expression.

Colonel Lehman's deep human sympathies know no boundaries or social lines. That is why he could perceive and feel so keenly the distress of his fellow Jews in the lands of Eastern Europe, though he had known little about them prior to the war. That is why he could so thoroughly grasp the problems and needs of the workers when he served successfully on numerous occasions as conciliator in labor disputes, though he himself was a financier, who had had no contact with the actual life of the working people. That, too, is the reason why as Lieutenant Governor of New York State he has understood the problems of the average people, the every day citizens, the business men and the laborers who constitute the great masses of the population, though he had been bred in a sheltered and aristocratic atmosphere.

This faculty of insight into problems and situations affecting the plain people is almost an intuition with him. It has made him the great conciliator that he is. And here lies the secret of his success as a man of public affairs and his great popularity among all elements of the population. Not a theoretician, but primarily a man of action, who is guided by his sense of justice and fair play, he looks straight into the heart of things. He understands the people, and in return the people understand him.

It is noteworthy that the opposition which Colonel Lehman's candidacy for the Governorship encountered came exclusively from a small political faction in Tammany Hall. But that group, with all its strategy and stubbornness, could not muster enough forces to stop the great and popular movement for Lehman. All creeds and races and political groupings gathered around the Lehman-for-Governor banner raised by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith. Such popularity of an aspirant to political office who is not a politician and who stood aside with characteristic modesty, doing nothing to promote his own candidacy, has never been equalled in the political annals of the State of New York.

And it was most appropriate that the struggle to assure the nomination of Herbert H. Lehman, the distinguished conciliator, has served as the occasion for the coming together again of two of the outstanding Americans of today, the leaders of present day American democracy, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith, it may safely be assumed that this incident was more than merely fortuitous. When the story behind the scenes will be told it will reveal Lehman's role, as the man who brought his two great friends together. It will also reveal anew the real force and magnetism of the personality which is concealed behind the unassuming exterior of Herbert H. Lehman.

You Give Three Months' Pay to the Government!

Call it Socialism, Communism, or what you like. The fact remains that the United States is rushing headlong toward a condition where every person may have to work exclusively for the government in order to gain a livelihood. From the smallest ward in the average city, and the rural village, to the national government itself, we find deadly and rapidly growing cancers of extravagance and waste. Private business cannot continue to meet this huge cost. Already the United States has been forced to invest more money in business than any other country except Russia.

There can be no permanent prosperity, there cannot even be any private business enterprises, unless this extravagance and waste is checked. Real economy must be practiced in every unit of government from the smallest to the largest if our present form of government is to endure and we are not forced to follow the example of Russia. People who depend upon private business, upon private enterprises, for their income, cannot continue to turn over to the government greater and greater portions of their incomes.

Back in 1903 all government, including city, state and national, cost but a billion and a half dollars annually. By 1913 this cost was doubled, and by 1931 had been multiplied over four times, reaching the grand total of 13½ billion dollars.

A billion dollars is difficult to visualize. When we speak of 13½ of them, the figure becomes incomprehensible. However, in 1903 all governments in this country were spending for each man woman and child, what looks now like the reasonable sum of $19. This amount per capita increased to $30 in 1913 and soared to $103 in 1931.

When a man earned a dollar in 1903 he could keep 94 cents of it to spend on himself and his family. Only six cents out of every dollar of income went to support the government. By 1913 he could keep but 89 cents, for government had to have 11 cents. In 1931 only 78 cents were left, the government cost demanding 22 cents out of every dollar of income.

This year, 1932, with incomes greatly reduced, and governmental costs remaining high, the average person will be fortunate indeed, if he does not have to work at least three months for the government without pay.

One way and one way only is open to avoid such a disaster. That is for every voter, regardless of party, to realize to the full that government is a great business enterprise in which he is a stockholder, and for which he provides the capital and meets the losses. Every man and woman must come to realize that no one can continue to escape the paying of taxes. Though one may not be taxed directly, he still pays when he spends money. In the case of indirect taxes, it is usually the case that he not only pays the taxes but also the cost of collecting them.

It is necessary that all voters insist that the government be conducted in a business-like and efficient manner, that each person on the government payroll earn all that he or she is paid.

that no unnecessary expenditures be made, that real economy be practiced. Every voter will have to learn the importance of frowning upon every officeholder and politician who uses the taxpayers' money for granting favors, providing sinecures, and granting money allowances in the effort to secure or retain more votes.

The National Economy League has been organized for the purpose of stimulating interest in governmental economy, to hasten the return of real prosperity by reducing the tax burden. It is non-partisan. It is not directing its efforts against any one group. It is striving to eliminate extravagance and waste in government wherever it can be found.

There are no membership dues. All that is necessary is to sign and return the membership coupon, showing that you are really interested in reducing governmental costs toward the end that we may have a more prosperous and safer country in which to live. Doing this will indicate that you are aware of the grave dangers toward which we are no longer drifting but are rushing at break-neck speed. Extravagance and inefficiency in government must be checked and checked quickly through the united efforts of the voters, or all private business must be turned over to the government to be operated in the same inefficient manner the government is now operated.

PROVIDENCE

Straightforwardness

(By BERNARD M. GOLDOWSKY)

"Why should a man of your age be burdened with the affairs of a ball?"

That question was recently put to me and my answer follows: "I make such a task incumbent upon myself because I fully agree with him who said that we grow strong bearing burdens, not escaping them."

I am not looking for sympathy nor am I expecting applause, and I am unspoiled by praise or blame.

I believe that every person has some mission in this world outside of eating chopped liver or playing pinochle. I never lost sight of the fact that although it requires the prestige of men of affairs to raise funds for a building, it is quite essential to put to work an unpretentious little fellow like Goldowsky to assist in providing means for maintenance.

Having neither the ability nor the inclination to become a much photographed celebrity, those little things that some men are apt to regard as beneath their dignity, a ball, for instance, appeal strongly to my limited mental capacity.

Consequently, when that hard-working youngster, Sam Magid, requested me to take the Chairmanship of the Jewish Home for the Aged Ball, to be presented in the ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel, Christmas, I acquiesced, said, "Gam Zeh L'Tovah," and started the ball rolling.

Lacking the necessary will-power to keep a secret from my friends, I immediately began broadcasting to Rhode Island's Children of Israel the valuable advice to PUT AWAY A NICKEL A DAY for a couple of tickets.

And will paying close attention to that advice bring a suitable reward to each patrons of the ball?

Listen!

This being the First Annual Ball of the new Home, the name of each and every one attending it—man, woman or child—will be inscribed on a special "Honor Roll," which will be framed and hung in a suitable place in the Home.

"Loving kindness is greater than laws, and the charities of life are more than all ceremonies."

1932 Brings New Racing Champions

Tells of A. A. A. Victories and Records, All on Firestone Tires

The five A. A. A. Championship Races of 1932 and the Annual Pike's Peak Climb—the big events of the automotive racing world—have brought new records and a new crop of young dare-devil drivers, according to Harry R. Rosen of the Franklin Auto Supply Company, Firestone dealer in this city.

"The Indianapolis 500-Mile Championship, May 30, brought to the front ranks Fred Frame, who came from Los Angeles to set up the amazing record at 104.114 miles per hour—three miles faster than the record that had stood since 1925. 'Howdy' Wilcox, an Indianapolis boy, was second.

"The 100-Mile Championship at Roby, Ind., June 20, was won by H. W. Stubblefield, who also has forged into the limelight as one of the most formidable racing drivers.

"The 100-Mile Championship at Syracuse, July 2, witnessed another victory for the intrepid Bob Carey, and 'Stubby' Stubblefield roared into the second prize money.

"The 100-Mile Championship at Detroit, Sept. 10, the fifth of the series included in the 1932 A. A. A. computations for championship rating of racing drivers, was won by Sam Rose, adding another new name among the major victors.

"The most spectacular and coveted victory outside of these did not go to a newcomer, but the veteran Glen Schultz set up a new record for the hazardous, jagged 12 1/2 mile grind in the Annual Pike's Peak Race. The amazing time was 16 minutes, 47.2 seconds compared with the old mark of 17 minutes, 10.3 seconds.

"All of these daring drivers chose Firestone tires, which have won for 13 consecutive years at Indianapolis and six at Pike's Peak.

"The motorist may need the extra safety and protection afforded by the 'Tires of Champions' for only one instant, but that instant may mean disaster. Tires at present prices are the best investment in safety the motorist can make."

PROFESSION OR CALLING

The recent news item regarding Preacher Thomas H. Rose of Vershire, Vermont, who won the 1932 "Distinguished Service Award for New England Pastors," given by the New England Fellowship, for purely spiritual services, to pastors earning less than $2000 a year, compels one to realize that he is a religious leader with a calling rather than a profession. With indefatigable enthusiasm this preacher succeeded in attracting to himself almost all the material for spiritual guidance within a distance of twenty-eight miles. He takes care of three parishes, making his rounds in an old automobile, and he is often forced to use a shovel to dig his way out of the snow during the winter. What is most interesting is the fact that he calls on his seven hundred parishioners with unfailing regularity.

There are no doubt many such men as Preacher Rose in the business of religious guidance. But there are just as many and more who look upon the ministry and the rabbinate as fields of opportunity for themselves, either for the acquisition of wealth or social position or for both. Personal ambition in itself is always a virtue in other fields of endeavor. In the rabbinate, however, much as the successful and wealthy leader is courted and sought after, at the same time, there are those who would prefer less of the glitter in their rabbi and more of the warm, deep personal self.

This preference has much for justification. In the average temple in the average city, the congregation is large and the rabbi is generally busy. The number of people, however, who succeed in getting to be more than casually acquainted with the rabbi is few. The members of means will have him in to dinner, the women will have him in to afternoon club meetings, and the men will invite him to their own societies. All this kind of social intercourse is probably attended with the utmost superficiality. For himself, the rabbi will exert his personality to its highest endeavor at the regular services.

There are many members of the congregation who need spiritual guidance. There are many sick who need deep sympathy from an impersonal friend. There are many young people who are battling with absurd inconsistencies and have no courage for talking themselves out of them with their parents. None of these people will dare to call on the rabbi and seek his help, unless they have in some wonderful way discovered in him already a willing and generous helper. His task is to call on them.

With many hundreds in his congregation, the average rabbi will scorn the idea of a house-to-house canvass as old-fashioned and awkward; and he will insist that an invitation is a primary requisite. How wrong he is, he may never know. His poorer congregants are timid of requesting the glittering presence to partake of their humble environment. They are almost always the ones who could enjoy the delightful happiness of his attention. In the final analysis, whatever the rabbi puts into his work stamps his job. The man who fulfills his formal duties, seldom lighting a spark, has a good profession; but the rare individual whose restless desire for doing good brings him to the threshold of a thousand souls, where he may enter to spread joy and light, that man has a calling.

SUKKOTH—THE FEAST OF TABERNACLES

On Saturday, October 15th, the Jews will celebrate the Feast of Tabernacles (Sukkoth). The holiday is one of the most important ones in the Jewish calendar, and extends from the 15th to the 23rd of October.

The Sukkoth Festival is based upon two fundamental ideas. It is, first of all, the harvest festival, a period celebrated with great joy by the Jews of long ago in Palestine, a festival of rejoicing and thanksgiving to God for His bounteous crops. The festival has, likewise, an historical significance. It commemorates the successful forty-year journey of the Israelites through the wilderness after the exodus from Egypt, and is reminiscent of the fact that the Israelites dwelt in booths (Sukkoth) during this entire period.

For this reason the Jews are commanded in the Bible to dwell in booths during the festival, a custom which is quite popularly observed even today. Where climatic conditions permit, the Jews erect wooden booths roofed over with leaves and palm branches and spend part of their time therein. Where climatic conditions do not permit, the Sukkah is erected in the synagogue or on the synagogue grounds. The Feast of Tabernacles is one of the most joyful of all the Jewish festivals and is always observed with great rejoicing and gladness.

The harvest character of the festival is clearly shown in the symbols which each worshiper brings to the synagogue or which are shown from the pulpit. These symbols are "the fruit of a goodly tree" (Esrog or citron), "the branches of palm trees" (Lulav), "the boughs of thick-leaved trees" (Myrtle), and "the willows of the brook."

more gratifying if we could sense the removal of the cobwebs of prejudice in other fields.

Jewish Girls Get Religion

Yes, I am talking again of employment.

The writer chanced the other day to be in the company of two Jewish girls.

"What are you when you work," we asked one, "and what is the name of your pastor?"

"I am Lutheran. You see my name Kesner goes well for that, and the pastor is the Rev. so and so."

"And you?" I asked, turning to the other.

"I am a Baptist. I come from the South, and my drawl helps for that," replied the other, "and the name of my pastor is the Rev. so and so."

"Are you a hard-shell Baptist or a soft-shell?" I continued.

"Well, if you mean, do I believe whether infant baptism, is sufficient, I say no," she replied jocularly.

We Would Swap

All of this may sound jocular, but there is a pathetic kernel to it. Thousands of Jewish girls in New York today know the names of the pastors of their neighborhood churches better than they do that of the Rabbis. They have found that it is not enough to lie about their religion in their application for work. The employment agencies ask for the names of the pastors and some of them go further and cross examine the girls on the tenets of their so-called faith, so that Jewish girls are getting to be very well posted on the religious issues of the various sects of Christianity. I have no objection to their developing their religious knowledge. I think it is very nice, very broad, and very fine to know who is the pastor of the Baptist church, even if you are not a Baptist yourself, but I think the condition which leads to the acquisition of this knowledge is frightful.

I would be willing to swap a few Jewish political candidates for the removal of this condition.

I don't know what we are going to do about it.

Always Complaining

Perhaps you have heard about it, but it was new to me the other day, when I first heard it. That one about the patron of a Second Avenue cafeteria who called the waiter in the midst of his soup absorption.

"Waiter, come here—come here." The waiter came. "What's the matter?"

"Look, look—there's a fly in the soup."

"Well, what is it?" returned the waiter. "Suppose there is one fly in the soup. How much can one fly eat?"

Winchell Wins

As this column predicted recently, the publication by the editor of a New York tabloid newspaper of a book, in which he depicts Walter Winchell as the villain and the author of the book himself as a fine type, seems to be redounding to the advantage of Winchell.

In fact, gossip goes that now there is a rift between the editor and the publisher, and the publisher now has made peace with Winchell. And, moreover, the editor, who at one time ran his own column in the paper in question has been forced to leave off columnizing.

Victory thus belongs to Winchell.

Garner Tells Why

John M. Garner, Vice Presidential candidate of the Democratic party, was asked in New York by his Jewish publicity man, if he could give any reason to be used among Jewish voters why Jews should prefer the Democratic party to the Republican, answered that the Democratic party is the exponent of the submerged down-trodden people, and since the Jews were a submerged people, it followed they should vote for Roosevelt and Garner.

A Better Publicity Means

We don't think so much of the argument. The Republican party may claim that it represents the submerged even more, seeing that it freed the black slaves. Moreover, it is open to question whether a minority like the Jews would not be more secure under a regime dominated by the Hamiltonian Republican influence, than it would be trusted to the whims of the Demos. I know a good case—or rather as sound a case as can be put up for the other side. But after all, it seems to me, that if I were in charge of the Democratic publicity for Mr. Garner, among Jewish voters, I would do something better than that. I would get a picture of Mr. Garner fishing with his Jewish friend from Uvalde—I think his name also happens to be my own—Schwartz.

Yes, sir, a picture of Garner and Schwartz fishing, that ought to get Jewish votes for Jack Garner better than any appeals to the realms of cerebral functioning.

'Madison Square Garden' at the Paramount Theatre

A cross-section of life, a tapestry into which are interwoven all the threads of fundamental human drama—that is "Madison Square Garden," the new film which opened yesterday at the Paramount Theatre. The same technique that created "Grand Hotel" has gone into the making of this film, inasmuch as in both, a kaleidoscopic story flashes against the background of a vast public meeting place. And in "Madison Square Garden" that story is a peculiarly exciting one.

No matter what the characters do, however, "The Garden" remains the principal attraction. It plays the title role. Life goes on there. Champions may rise and fall. Park avenue and Second avenue may mingle in the audience. The social aristocracy may assemble there for balls or horse shows. Prize fights, hockey matches, six-day bicycle races may occur on the floor; comedy and tragedy, murder, graft, romance may take place behind the scenes. But the life of "The Garden" goes on.

To tell its story, the film has assembled a cast of extraordinary calibre. There are Jack Oakie as a youngster from the West who wants to be a fighter; Thomas Meighan as Carley, the director of "The Garden," who is at much at home with the sports crowd as with society; Marion Nixon as a hotel telegraph operator, who falls in love with Oakie; Warren Hymer as Oakie's pal; William Collier, Sr., as a veteran fight manager, who leads the fight against the racketeers; ZaSu Pitts as a telegraph operator; Lew Cody as the head of the grafters, and William Boyd and Robert Elliot as his principal henchmen.

How Is Your Bath-Tub Singing ?

One of the best selections for bath-tub vocalists is "Home, Sweet Home" . . . and as you lie back in the warm water and sound off your high "Cs", it's probably cheering to reflect that, even to Caesar himself, "home was never like this."

And, indeed, it wasn't. All his wealth and power couldn't command the luxuries and conveniences that belong to the owner of even a very modest home today . . . glass windows, quick and easy heating, automatic cooking and hot water, electric lights, telephones, insulation against heat and cold, and a hundred more.

If you'd like to have a home of your own some day, start now to save systematically for it . . . let your savings earn good dividends here . . . and when you're ready to build, probably Old Colony can help you with the financing, besides.

NEWS OF INTEREST TO MEN

Brown Meets Yale at New Haven Saturday

Brown dug deeper into her serious preparation for the Yale game as "Tuss" McLaughry sent his men through a long assignment scrimmage, perfected his aerial plays and the aerial defence, and polished off some new plays that have been given for this game. The work carried a more definite seriousness than any session since the men returned to Providence on Sept. 12th, a month ago Wednesday.

There is a quiet confidence and optimism in this Brown camp, for the coaches and men figure that this is to be Brown's year, a feast again after a famine of five long years, for not since 1926 has a Bruin eleven emerged victor over Yale. While a doubt still hinges on Jim Patton, veteran guard, indications point to a Brown squad that will be at its top strength for there isn't a man except Patton who won't be ready for play and there is a possibility that he'll be available.

Attention still centered on the guards, today, for while they had come miles and miles for their poor showing against Rhode Island, they still have some distance to travel before they'll be ready for major-game competition. George "Dutch" Lear, Glenside, Pa., Sophomore, and Roger Offen, Wallingford, Conn., second year man, loom as the starting prospects, if Patton isn't ready for a starting role. Frank Meadow, burly New Haven lad, who wasn't good enough to make the Princeton trip a year ago, but who rates with the finest of the wingmen of the Brown post-war era in football, is slated to get the call on left end, with Maury Caito, Providence veteran, as the leading contender on the other flank. The Brown brothers of Lancaster, Mass., Roland and Larry, are slated for the tackles and Tom Gilbane will be at center. Capt. Bill Gilbane will be at fullback, either Bob Chase or Joe Buonanno will be at quarterback, and Eddie Gilmartin and Penn Hargrove or Chase will be on the halfbacks.

NEWS WRITTEN FOR THE JEWISH HERALD BY GEORGE JOEL

TRIO OF JEWISH WOMEN PLAY FOR GOLF TITLE

For the first time in the history of this glorious though depressed nation, three Jewish ladies, who are proficient with a set of golf clubs, qualified for the National Women's Golf Championship. The ladies, and their names should be printed in gold, were: Mrs. Leo Federman, Miss Bea Gottlieb and Mrs. N. S. Goldberger, all of New York or its immediate vicinity.

Now for the bad news—although these ladies earned the right to compete for the title, only Mrs. Federman survived the first round and that golf swinger went out in the second. Nevertheless the trio performed a rare feat as only a mere thirty women out of 150 qualified. More interesting still is the fact that they were the only Jewish women who even entered the tourney.

KIRSCH LOSES TO CANZONERI

Tony Canzoneri, present holder of the lightweight crown, is becoming a nemesis to the Jewish fighters. He won the title from Al Singer a few years ago and continues to hold his throne at the expense of the Jewish boys. Lew Kirsch, East Side New York boy, who is considered one of the best of the lightweight crop, climbed into the ring with Tony in New York last week, and at the end of three rounds was carried from the ring by his handlers. If you are quick witted you will realize that Kirsch was knocked out by his Italian opponent.

Kirsch felt the defeat keenly, in more ways than one. It is a setback for the Jewish fighter and means that he will have to indulge in another campaign of club fights for reduced purses.

FOOTBALL

The first Jew to flash into the football spotlight of 1932 is Harry Newman, quarterback for Michigan. This is Harry's third year as a signal caller and he demonstrated his ability to do just that and also throw passes and kick. He led the team to a victory over Michigan State, 25-0. One of the high scorers for last year—Ellowitz—played halfback for state.

Another Jewish quarterback, a veteran of college football, opened auspiciously when Goldenberg of Wisconsin led his team to a tight 7-2 victory over Marquette.

Alfred Finkelstein Is

Alfred Finkelstein, who was recently elected to the office of Grand Master of Exchequer of the Rhode Island Order of Knights of Pythias, was presented with a traveling bag by What Cheer Lodge, No. 24, K. of P. at a meeting Monday evening, Oct. 10. The presentation was made by Paul Levin, P. C.

ALFRED FINKELSTEIN

A visitation was made that evening by the Grand Lodge Officers of the Massachusetts Order. Dinner was served and entertainment was furnished by talent from the local theatres.

The committee in charge comprised Joseph Engle, Charles Greenstein and Leo Miller.

Then there was Fishel of Syracuse, playing his last year at fullback, who ran wild against St. Lawrence. You can expect much of the Jewish boy this season.

Down at South Carolina they have a boy named Wolfe playing quarterback and when his team met the Catholic gentlemen from Villanova, he found a Jew named Rosen playing tackle in the Catholic line.

CHATTERINGS

Here are some random guesses on coming football games: Dartmouth to beat Yale; Army to do the same; Colgate to beat New York University.

Don't miss Hemingway's book, "Death In the Afternoon," even though it is concerned with bull fighting. A grand book. He mentions Sidney Franklin's ability as a bull fighter and says that the Jewish boy is good, very good. Hemingway doesn't say so, but there are many Jewish bull fighters in Spain, but not any of them will admit that they are of the race.
