Faking The World Series

The departing year was one of faking, and I don't mean the kind that quarterbacks indulge in. Fixed quiz shows, canned laughter, pre-recorded bits on TV, and singers who go through the motions while records behind the scenes do the work—these were in the limelight.

Makes me wonder whether any or all of this made any impression on Lou Fonseca. Lou, one-time star first baseman of the Chicago White Sox, has for many years put together the official World Series film. Fonseca has come up with several scoops and innovations. His cameras have shown clearly what actually happened on famous close and disputed calls, and all-in-all, his coverage of the Series has been admirable.

Yet, every year, Lou has sought to add something to his movies that wasn't there the year before, and it has gotten so that when you discuss the art of faking, you almost have to sit at Professor Fonseca's feet and learn how it is done.

The 1959 World Series film is not out yet (not to organizations: it is due late in January, and you could start asking the Journal's Web Youlden now about reservations for showing the film), but one of my sports hopes for the new year is that Fonseca will be more careful and candid with his editing, and show more discrimination with his fakery.

Our little investigation will center on the two most recent World Series films — the classics of 1957 and 1958, both involving the Milwaukee Braves and the New York Yankees.

First (and this has been a common thing with Fonseca for many years), there is the matter of the cameras pretending to get a close-up shot of the batter as he connects for an important base hit, or a closeup of the pitcher as he winds up to pitch the ball that gets hit.

This is out and out fakery. All the closeups are taken in practice before the game, sometimes at the specific request of the cameraman. No one is allowed on the field during the game, and it would be an impossibility for any cameraman to crouch below the hitter and record his facial expression and his swing from a distance of just a few feet in actual championship play.

Second is the dubbing in of the crowd reaction after a home run. This seems relatively simple. Any camera can point into the crowd with a zoomar lens and catch the crowd going wild. There should be no suspicion on that score.

Nor would there be, except that Lou Fonseca extended himself in 1957. It will be recalled that in the games at Milwaukee's County Stadium, the crowd was rabidly partisan, cheering only the Braves, and groaning or keeping deathly still at any achievements of the Yankees.

So up came Tony Kubek in the third game of the Series, the first ever played in Milwaukee, and slugged a pair of homers into the right field crowd. This home town boy received not a single hand clap. The place was quiet as the morgue, on both occasions.

Then the movies came out, and observers who note such things looked on in wonderment. Kubek is shown hitting his homers, and each time the Milwaukee crowd is shown going wild with joy as Tony crosses the plate.

Maybe on the planet Mars the fans reacted that way, but in Milwaukee it just wasn't so. Fonseca had not stuck to the facts, and had given himself away. Actually, it would seem that the silence and glumness of the fans would have made a better shot than the dubbed in hurrahing. In that respect, Lou missed the boat.

When the 1958 films were shown, Moose Skowron came away shaking his head. It will be recalled that Bill had hit two homers—one in the opening game against Spahn, the other clinching the Series in the seventh game, off Burdette. It happened that the first game blow was a routine shot, but that the second was a real blast, sailing far up in the left-center field bleachers.

Skowron openly accused Fonseca's cameras of missing the second homer entirely. He pointed out the different places in which the balls had landed, as well as the fact that he had swung entirely differently against Spahn than he had against Burdette.

But the film of both homers was clearly the same with the ball going exactly to the same place. Whether or not the cameras missed it, they surely did not show the actual action.

In that most recent film, Fonseca added his latest frill, one that annoyed this fan no end. Instead of following the ball when a home run was hit, the cameras went into the crowd in each instance, and got what was supposed to be the reaction of the crowd at this particular instant. After several seconds of this, the switch is made to the ball, which is seen disappearing into the crowd.

The results of this ridiculous distracting maneuver were in most cases laughable. In many instances, the man supposed to be watching the ball take off for the bleachers would be eating a hot dog and pointing in the opposite direction, or doing something that told the viewer quite plainly that the whole thing was a fake.

There is enough action, enough excitement in a World Series, it seems to me, for the film to be loaded with genuine flavor and visual thrills without these fancy shenanigans.

So, while TV's linen was being washed in public last fall, I hope Fonseca took the hint, and that he sticks closely to the script when he shows the World Champion Los Angeles Dodgers and the American League Champion Chicago White Sox in the 1959 film edition.

Cinerama Football

While it is generally agreed that TV was made for football, and vice versa, this column wishes there were some gadget that would permit the viewer to watch the ends and halfbacks as they deploy in their pass patterns.

In baseball the cameras can show the runner leading off first base all the while the pitcher is going into his delivery motion. Maybe some day football will split the screen on an obvious pass play so that while the passer is fading back on one camera, another is showing the maneuverings of the various potential receivers.

Maybe some day Lowell Thomas will devote one of his Cinerama spectacles to a championship football game. Then the viewer will really feel he is sitting in the stadium, with the entire field within his range of vision. And then the sports fans will really enjoy pro football.

'SLIM-GYM' CLASSES

"Slim-Gym" classes for adult women will begin at the South Side Jewish Community Center early in January, it was announced today by Abraham Logel, chairman of the South Side's Health and Physical Education Committee.

Open to women who are Center members only, the weekly sessions will be conducted on Monday from 8 to 9 P. M., under the direction of Anthony Neri, Center physical education director, in the South Side JCC gym.

Special calisthenics, deck shuffleboard, paddle tennis, badminton, and other activities will be included in the program.

Members interested in the program must register in advance, since the size of the group will be limited.

CENTER VARSITY WINS

The Center's varsity basketballers won their second game of the year as against two losses, defeating the Chelsea YMHA 62-54 at Nathan Bishop last Saturday. Chelsea scored the opening basket, but Providence quickly tied the score and were never behind from that point on.

A closely fought contest, Providence was never ahead by more than four points until the last five minutes when several quick field goals put Providence well in the lead. High scorers for Providence were Fred Haas with 28 and Dave Katz with 15. The next game is in Brockton on Jan 2.

Signs will be posted at the rink indicating when skating conditions permit use of the rink.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

OLD AGE TAX HIKE

Friday, Jan. 1, 1960, will be the first major payday of the new year in corporations across the land. It also will be a day that you'll begin to get an automatic cut in your take-home pay.

For on that day the social security tax that 74,000,000 of us are paying is slated to go up a full 1/2 per cent.

If you're an employee, you'll be paying a 3 per cent instead of a 2-1/2 per cent tax on your earnings up to a maximum of $4,800. Your employer will be matching what you pay dollar for dollar.

If you're self-employed, you'll be paying a 4-1/2 per cent instead of a 3-3/4 per cent tax on your earnings up to $4,800.

If you're earning $4,800 or more from a job, the social security tax on your pay will be $144 in 1960 against $120 in 1959. If you're earning this total or more as a self-employed individual, your social security tax will be $216 in 1960 against $180 in 1959.

This higher tax will be the equivalent of a slash in your weekly take-home pay.

What's more, until this minute, you've probably been utterly unprepared for this tax hike because it was ordered under a law passed back in mid-1958.

Let's not kid ourselves--the social security tax is becoming a pocketbook "Bite." Consider the record just of the past ten years.

In 1949 the tax was a minor 1 per cent on a maximum of $3,000 your pay--meaning it amounted to $30 a year at most.

In 1950 the tax went up to 1-1/2 per cent on a maximum of $3,000 meaning it amounted to $45 a year at most.

In 1954 the tax went to 2 per cent on a maximum of $3,600 of annual earnings--a top of $72 a year.

In 1958 it was at 2-1/4 per cent on a maximum of $4,200--a top of $94.50 a year.

This year it has been at 2-1/2 per cent on a maximum of $4,800--a top of $120.

Now it goes to 3 per cent on a $4,800 maximum--a top of $144.

What are we getting for this? The answer is "Plenty!" For as the taxes on our pay have climbed, so have the benefits they provide climbed.

In 1949 the peak benefits an individual worker could get were only $45.60 a month, and the peak social security benefits a family could receive were only $85 a month.

Under the latest law, the peak an individual can get this year is $119 a month, while the peak a family can get is $254.00 a month.

What do these tax and benefit changes mean to us?

They certainly mean that the millions of us who have been working for years and paying social security taxes and who will continue working and paying the taxes for many more years are now contributing major amounts of our pay to the support of our older citizens. Our taxes are providing the benefits to those already retired, maintaining the basic social security pension at a decent level. And incidentally, a record 13,500,000 are now drawing social security benefits....

They also mean that these taxes are helping to protect our own jobs--for one of the great props under our economy today is the spending of social security checks by our senior citizens. The spending of these benefits has become a crucial job-making and anti-recession weapon.

And most important, they mean that we are building a system which some day will give us in turn a decent, basic retirement pension.

Glance again at the jump in the benefits in one decade. Let yours self enjoy the feeling of confidence inspired by the knowledge that there will be a pension for you too. Then you'll truly be prepared for the new social security tax hike because you'll understand what it is bringing to our older folks and our nation now, and what it will bring to you.

Ice Capades To Open At Auditorium On Jan. 11

When Ice Capades of 1960 opens at Rhode Island Auditorium on Monday evening January 11th, it will mark the twentieth straight season that the Greatest Show on Ice has played to audiences in Providence, and once again, just as it has been for all of those twenty years, Ice Capades will have an array of top stars, comedy music, color, and the top productions in the show business world.

The twentieth edition includes ten productions, a full week of entertainment, and a cast of stars that reads like a "who's who" of the ice skating world. Costumes are colorful and lavish.

"The Blue Danube" production brings to the ice the music of Johann Strauss, and the skating artistry of Romaine and Steel, and the lovely Diane Grogan. Then comes the adaptation of "Babes in Toyland" from Victor Herbert, and the highlight of the evening's classical program, Operama II, featuring Aida, Tosca, Martha, and Ronnie Roberson as the young duke in "R. letto."

For the precision skaters there is the "Salute to the Mounties" with the entire cast of skaters clothed in the brilliant uniform of the famous Northwest Mounted Police.

One of the high spots of the evening will be the "Moiseyev on Ice" a tribute to the fiery famous Russian Ballet.

Ice Capades will remain at R. I. Auditorium from January 11th thru Jan. 20th. There will be matinees on Saturday and Sunday only.

Desecration

From both official and unofficial reaction it was clear that none of the anti-Semitic incidents in West Germany during the last few years had shocked the nation so deeply. The fact that it happened on Christmas seemed to sharpen the pain.

One Jew here reported receiving a telephone call from a man who sounded as if he was crying. The man asked that the whole nation not be judged by the acts of a few criminals.

'Ominous' Resemblance

A statement issued by the directorate of the Central Council of Jews in Germany said: "It is ominous in 1959 to be able to evoke pictures that bring to mind the November days of 1938."

This was a reference to the two-day program initiated by the Nazis in revenge for the murder of a German diplomat in Paris by a young Jew. The hours of fury became known as "Crystal Night" because of the glass of synagogues and Jewish-owned homes and shops that littered the streets after the burning and pillaging.

From Hanover, Wilhelm Meinberg, federal chairman of the German Reichs party, announced that Schoenen and Struenk had been expelled for violating the party's principles and that the Cologne district branch had been dissolved because of anti-semitic tendencies.

Link to Nazis Denied

There were some suggestions that a better solution would be for the Government to dissolve the whole party.

It has had one notable political success but several failures in recent years. It achieved the minimum 5 per cent of the vote in the Rhineland Palatinate election last April and got one seat in the state Parliament as a result.

However, the party lost all six seats in the Lower Saxony Parliament, and failed to elect anyone to the Bremen Parliament and holds no seats in the Federal Parliament.

Its program is much the same for all elections. It wants all foreign troops out of Germany, the country reunified and neutral between the United States and the Soviet Union, the end of discrimination against former members of the Elite Guard and the release of Germans still imprisoned for war crimes.

Party leaders deny that they are the ideological successors of the Nazis. But talking with this reporter after the Rhineland Palatinate success, Adolf von Tadden, the party's propaganda chief, said he could well understand the "unfriendly feelings" toward the comparatively few Jews now living in Germany.

"Many Germans think Jews have got a preferred place" because of restitutions made to them, he said.

HARRY GOLDEN

TUCSON, Ariz — American Judaism should build its social action and defense organizations to twice their present strength and then turn them loose to "fight for goyim," newspaperman-author Harry Golden told the Arizona Post.

"They should fight for migratory workers, Negroes, Puerto Ricans and against any threat to civil liberties," said the editor of the Carolina Israelite.

"When you fight for someone else, it is a wonderful thing. And when our organizations are fighting for goyim, they can keep a weather eye on anti-semitism."

To Speak at Beth-El — Dr. Jakob J. Petuchowski, one of the outstanding Jewish educators in the United States, and associate Professor of Rabbinics at the Hebrew Union College—Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati, Ohio, will occupy the pulpit of Temple Beth-El on Friday evening, Jan. 1, and will also deliver a special lecture at the Temple on Saturday, Jan. 2, at 8:15 P.M.

Dr. Petuchowski's lecture on Saturday evening is sponsored by the Temple's Adult Education Committee and the Temple Brotherhood, and will be open to the public. The subject of his address will be "New Prayers and Old Theologies." A reception and kid-dush in the Meeting Hall will follow the address.

ARMY DEFERS STAR HOLLYWOOD—Elena Eden, the Israeli beauty toiling in the Hollywood mills, received the happiest tidings from her draft board back home in Tel Aviv. The Army of Israel deferred her for a year.

Becomes Bar Mitzvah
Harvey Jerome Shapiro, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Shapiro of 741 East Avenue, Pawtucket, became Bar Mitzvah on Dec. 19 at the Congregation Ohawe Sholom Synagogue in Pawtucket. A Kiddush was held in the vestry of the synagogue following the service.

A reception in his honor was held the following evening at his home. Guests were present from Providence, Pawtucket and Massachusetts.

Wyners Have Daughter
Mr. and Mrs. John D. Wyner of Miami, Fla., announce the birth of a daughter, Fran Tracey, on Dec. 8. Mrs. Wyner is the former Gertrude Ross of Providence.

Walter - Polofsky
Miss Wilma Polofsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Polofsky of 34 Pennsylvania Avenue, was married to Norman Walter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Walter of 287 Hinsdale Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., on Dec. 27 at a 5 P. M. ceremony at Congregation Shaare Zedek. Rabbi Abraham Chill officiated at the ceremony which was followed by a reception in the synagogue social hall.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in ivory silk taffeta styled with a basque waist, short pleated sleeves and a portrait neckline, outlined with appliques of alencon lace. The full skirt with a front panel of nylon tulle in a redingote effect extended into a cotillion train. Her fingertip length French illusion veil fell from a princess crown of sequins and pearls. She carried a Bible marked with a white orchid and stephanotis streamers.

Miss Irma Polofsky, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Miss Dorothy Polofsky, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. They wore ballerina length gowns fashioned in mauve peau-de-soie with lavalier necklines, short French sleeves and unpressed bell skirts. They wore matching bow-hats with veils and carried cascade bouquets of red roses.

William Rosenzweig was best man and Joseph Green was the usher.

The bride's mother wore a rose beige lace cocktail dress, and the bridegroom's mother was dressed in gold silk peau-de-soie.

After a wedding trip to the Nevele Country Club in Ellenville, N. Y., the couple will reside at 197 Sixth Street.

COMMENT ON REACTION

PITTSBURGH — The Jewish Community Relations Council, in a statement on the "very sharp" public reaction to a federal court ruling against reading of the Bible in the public schools, noted that many people had expressed unwillingness to abide by the decision and that "those of us who are concerned about the good health of the Jewish community, must look with grave concern upon the vehemence of the reaction of the Christian community to this legal decision."

Bridge

By REVOKE

On a hand played at the rehearsal for a recent bridge broadcast North-South got into a 6S contract and the directed lead was the king of clubs. Here is the full deal:

North		East
♠—J, x, x	♥—Q, 9, 8, x	♠—Q, 9, 8, 7	♥—10, x, x
♦—A, K, Q, x, x	♣—A	♦—x, x	♣—x, x, x, x
West		South
♠—x	♥—K, J, x	♠—A, K, 10, x, x	♥—A, x, x
♦—x, x, x, x	♣—K, Q, J, 10, x	♦—J, x	♣—x, x, x

The first trick is, of course, taken in dummy with the singleton ace of clubs. Trumps must be immediately tackled on this hand. The jack of spades is led and is covered by East's queen. At this point South, reassured by the successful finesse and unaware as yet of the bad trump break, may well take the queen and attempt to make his contract by trumping clubs. If he does so he will find that he is unable to establish all five of the diamond tricks which he needs for his slam contract.

The correct play and the safe play is at trick No. 2 to allow East's queen to hold the trick. Now, whatever East plays, declarer can trump one of his losing clubs in dummy, return to his hand to take out the remaining trumps, and then make his diamond tricks. He thus makes four spade tricks, one ruff in dummy, five diamond tricks, the ace of hearts, and the ace of clubs for his slam contract.

This is not a trick hand, but one which in some form or another often crops up. If you have a shortage in dummy and a side suit you must preserve dummy's power to ruff until trumps are drawable and the side suit available.

In this hand, played in 6S, a heart is led:

♠—x, x, x
♥—x
♦—K, Q, J, 10, 9, 8
♣—x, x, x

♠—A, K, Q, x, x
♥—A, x, x, x
♦—A, x
♣—A, K

Declarer may be tempted to draw trumps, and on a fortunate division he makes the thirteenth trick twice over. If, however, the trumps break 4-1 the contract is doomed. The correct play is to lead ace and a small trump. Now if the trump division is no worse than 4-1 the contract is unbreakable. By giving up a trump trick at once — perhaps unnecessarily — declarer gives himself a maximum chance of making his contract.

Rabbinical Council Opposes Holding Non-Kosher Affairs

NEW YORK — Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, announced last week that the organization is engaged in an intensive campaign to influence national Jewish organizations to hold their public functions under dietary auspices. The Rabbinical Council of America is vehemently opposed to the long-established practice of several prominent national bodies to sponsor non-kosher affairs.

The statement further said that it is contemptible and disgraceful for powerful Jewish agencies which hold themselves out as spokesmen for the Jewish community to violate a fundamental and traditional rule of Jewish observance and law. This non-kosher policy is detrimental to the progress, vigor and enrichment of Jewish life. It is peculiar and nonsensical for such organizations to speak out on matters of Jewish education, religion and philanthropy when they violate some of the holiest credos of the Jewish faith.

The Council in recent weeks has made contact with several leaders of these groupings through Rabbi Israel Klavan, executive vice-president, and Rabbi Cecil Walkenfeld, chairman of Religious Observance. The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith is looking into the matter very seriously as a result of a communication between Rabbi Klavan and Benjamin Epstein, National Director of the League. Mr. Epstein had previously written that "the matter is now receiving very serious attention by the Joint Defense Appeal Board of Governors and I am therefore forwarding the communication to them."

New York Hospital Tries To Develop "Mother Bank"

NEW YORK — Mt. Sinai Hospital here is trying to develop a "mother bank" of volunteers who would act as stand-in mothers for emotionally disturbed infants, according to an article by John A. Osmunden in the New York Times.

The stand-in mothers would spend several hours daily with the infants, holding, caressing and playing with them until their true mothers were physically or psychologically able to give the babies the necessary attention and affection.

The need for such a plan was pointed up by the results of a case study by three physicians at Mt. Sinai. It was reported in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The doctors wrote of an 8-month-old boy who was admitted to the hospital last year. He suffered from malnutrition, the inability to keep food down and a two-and-a-quarter-pound loss of weight in two months prior to admission.

Psychiatrist Called In

Attempts to discover some physiological cause for the infant's condition failed, the doctors wrote.

To Continue Work On Controversial Jordan River Project

TEL AVIV — Work on the controversial Jordan River water project is proceeding according to schedule and should be completed in four years, Y. D. Duvdevani, director of the Mekorot Water Co., said last week.

The project, designed to pipe water from the Jordan from a point in northern Israel, to irrigate arid stretches of the southern desert, has come under heavy attack from the Arab states. Israel began the project after the Arab states had rejected the Johnston Plan which would have provided for allocation of the Jordan water among Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Israel and for extensive development of the river's flow.

Work on the 108-inch pipeline was recently suspended because of the winter, Duvdevani said, but will be resumed as early in the spring as possible. Meanwhile, he said work was continuing on essential sub-projects, such as the Taghba hydroelectric plant and the open conduit in the upper Galilee.

The work on the difficult Menashe Tunnel is continuing at a steady pace, he noted. The tunnel must be driven through the base of a mountain for the pipeline.

Youth Forum Discussion Emphasizes Family Role

NEW YORK — The importance of the family as the starting place for learning moral and spiritual values was emphasized on the New York Times' Youth Forum broadcast last Sunday.

The radio program, broadcast by WQXR, consisted of two parts. The first was recorded in Jerusalem with the cooperation of the Israeli Broadcasting System and had four students taking part in the discussion. The second part was recorded here with three American students participating. The topic was "Youth in Jerusalem and America Consider Spiritual Values."

The guest participant was Dr. Bernard Cherrick, executive vice president of the board of governors of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Dorothy Gordon was the moderator.

In the New York portion of the program, Robert Serio, a Roman Catholic student of Mount Saint Michael Academy, the Bronx, observed that the child imitated his parents. If the parents live by the best moral standards, he said, the child will be apt to do so also.

Pauline Richter, a Protestant student at Evander Childs High School, said that moral values were best learned in the first seven years of life and principally from the parents.

Steve Pieczenik, a Jewish student of the Franklin School, also held that family life rendered the greatest influence on the individual.

In the Jerusalem portion of the program, Jonathan Hyman, an Israeli student, said there were no great differences in the values preached by Judaism, Islam and Christianity.

David Jessel, a Canadian studying there, pointed out that Israel recently issued a stamp with the words "Love thy neighbor as thyself." He wondered whether persons of diverse racial or religious backgrounds applied that saying to their day-to-day social contacts.

Olga Soka, a Christian Arab born in Jerusalem, said she had been educated in a Catholic school and had never felt a need to divide people into religious categories. She said she considered herself lucky to have been born in the Holy Land where "every stone, every road is significant."

Aviva Gottlieb, an Israeli student, said that most Israelis were not conscious of living in the land of the Bible, but were inclined to take the fact for granted.

Dr. Cherrick, who took part in the Jerusalem and New York discussions, said that the young people in both places seemed to have a great deal in common.

Denounces Synagogue Desecration

COLOGNE, Germany — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer led West Germany last week in denouncing the Christmas morning desecration of a synagogue he helped inaugurate here three months ago and of a near-by anti-Nazi memorial.

From his Rhoendorf home, where he was reported recovering from a feverish cold, the Chancellor sent a message to Rabbi Zwi Asaria saying that "all decent Germans join me in condemning this atrocious deed."

Meanwhile, a formal warrant was issued by the State of North Rhine-Westphalia against two 25-year-old members of the German Reichs party, a Right-wing nationalist group that polled 1.02 per cent of the vote in the last national election, in 1957.

Confession Is Reported

Josef Herman N. Dufhues, the state Interior Minister, said Arnold Struenk, a baker's assistant had confessed to smearing the synagogue walls with swastikas and with slogans proclaiming: "Germans demand that Jews get out."

Josef Schoenen, an office employe, was held with Struenk. The slogans and swastikas were washed off the synagogue. The police also cleaned the base of the memorial, where black paint had been smeared over the lines, "This memorial recalls Germany's most shameful period."

The memorial, which is about a mile from the synagogue, consists of a statue of a mother and child. Beside it is a stone plague reading: "Here Rest Seven Victims of the Gestapo." These lines were untouched.

The baby continued to lose weight, and it was decided to obtain a psychiatric diagnosis of his trouble. A tentative study showed that the baby suffered from infantile anxiety neurosis and depression and reacted to this by voluntarily regurgitating food, the physicians wrote.

Psychiatric examination of the mother revealed the cause of the infant's depression. She had become depressed over her third and unwanted, pregnancy to the point where she was psychologically unable to show the affection that the infant needed, the physician found.

Instead of holding her baby close and caressing him, she would simply prop him up in bed, preoccupied with her own depression.

8-Hour Nurse Needed

The Mount Sinai physicians tried to help the infant by having pediatric nurses give him more attention. A woman volunteer was enlisted to spend a few hours daily with the infant. Still, the child declined.

It was not until a full-time special nurse was engaged to spend eight hours daily with the infant that he began to respond, the physicians reported.

During his recovery, his mother was given psychiatric care, and she gradually learned how to assume her properly affectionate role with the infant. This was found to improve her condition as well, according to the report.

Dr. Robert Shaw, who is in charge of the child psychiatric ward of the psychiatric service at Mount Sinai, is working to establish the "mother bank." He said that both the infant and his mother were now doing nicely, an example of what such a program could achieve.

Long Hours Necessary

He said the idea for the "mother bank" at Mt. Sinai was that of Dr. Abram Blau, who is in charge of the child psychiatry division of the department of psychiatry there.

Dr. Shaw said they needed acceptable volunteers who could spend more than just an hour or two a few days a week, "and these are hard to find." He explained that this sort of volunteer would be necessary particularly in such cases as were reported in the journal.

Foods To Remember

While Yom Tov fare includes at least one meal of Roast Goose during Hanukkah, in this country Turkey with all the trimmings has become the popular dish. There are several reasons. We have become calorie conscious and try to avoid fat in our holiday diet. Goose Fat, Schmaltz and crackling good Grebenes, were associated with Channukah by our Grandmothers who weren't so calorie conscious as this generation has become. Who doesn't want a slim and graceful figure? So, the short, plump, meaty Turkey of comparatively recent development, thanks to American ingenuity in poultry breeding, has become a welcome replacement. Its tender meat can be served hot or cold, sliced or in portions with or without stuffing of all varieties, with or without the blessing of colorful and tasty cranberry sauce.

Speaking about dressing for poultry, we think you'll enjoy the following suggestions:

No. 1: Add a cupful of grated tart apple to bread dressing and stir in 3 to 4 tablespoons apple cider.

No. 2: Soak 1/2 pound of large prunes overnight. Cut in halves and remove pits. Crack pits. Add the kernels to dressing along with the prunes.

No. 3: Form your favorite dressing into balls. Place them around the roasted turkey 45 minutes before it is done and continue baking until brown on top.

Remember to allow 25 minutes per pound of Turkey for proper roasting. Roast Turkey in an open pan, breast down until browned, then turn to brown breast skin. And, if you brush the skin and legs of Turkey with marmalade after turning for final roasting, you'll get a lovely glaze.

Of course, you'll be entertaining the out-of-towners and it is good to have an easy-to-prepare Lekach on hand to serve with wine, etc.

▲ LEKACH (HONEY CAKE)

- 1 cup vegetable shortening
- 1 cup honey
- 1 cup dark brown sugar (tightly packed)
- 3 eggs
- 1 cup very strong black coffee, hot
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 3 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, sifted again with
- 1/4 teaspoon each ground ginger and salt
- 3/4 cup chopped nuts of any kind

Cream shortening, honey and sugar, then add 1 egg at a time while beating mixture until smooth. Combine hot coffee, baking powder and baking soda in a pitcher to prevent bubbling over when mixed. Add this gradually and alternately with the dry mixture to the creamed shortening and honey and sugar, stirring well until free from lumps. Dust the chopped nuts with a little flour and fold in last. Turn this batter into 2 greased and wax paper lined loaf pans, 9 x 4 x 3 1/2 inch size, filling each 2/3 full. Or use aluminum foil for lining pans. Bake 1 hour at 325 deg. F. Test with a toothpick in centers, and if it comes out dry, the cakes are done. Remove from oven and let cool on a wire rack. Remove from pans and slice when cold. Wrap in aluminum foil for storing in a dry place. Or leave unsliced until serving time.

▲ HOLIDAY FRUIT PUNCH (Serving 30 or more)

- 1 cup pineapple juice
- 1 cup grapefruit juice
- 3 cups orange juice (fresh or reconstituted frozen kind)
- 4 cups cranberry juice
- 3 cups lime juice (frozen, reconstituted)
- 2 large bottles praline dry ginger ale
- 2 1/2 cups sugar syrup (or 1 cup each sugar and honey)
- Ice cubes
- Orange slices with red and green maraschino cherries topping

Combine the juices in the order listed above then stir in ginger ale and sugar syrup when ready to serve. Have the ice cubes in punch bowl when adding the mixture. Float fruit on top, spearing cherries on orange slices with colored plastic toothpicks.

We have had a large number of requests for an easy-to-prepare recipe for an old European favorite, associated with the midwinter holiday season. Our files turned up a recipe we had sent some time ago to one of our devoted readers, Mrs. Joseph Scharff of New Orleans, La. at her request by mail. She wrote she remembered Lebkuchen which her mother used to make—not a bit difficult to mix and bake, she wrote. We think you'll want to try them according to the following recipe supplied us by a friend whose family hailed from Germany two generations ago. Here it is:

- 1 pound dark brown sugar
- 3 eggs
- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda dissolved in
- 1/3 cup slightly warm orange juice
- 1 pound pitted dates, cut fine
- 1 cup finely chopped nuts (any kind*)
- 1/4 cup diced candied citron or other fruit peel
- 1 tablespoon whiskey, rum or sherry
- 3 tablespoons flour sifted with 1 teaspoon ground cloves, allspice or cinnamon
- Wafer paper, if desired, cut into small squares or oblongs
- Frosting of confectioners sugar topping
- Bits of candied fruit for decorating

*Use commercial almond paste if available instead of nuts. Combine in the order listed and work to a smooth mixture. May be spread on the wafer paper or cuts of aluminum foil and placed on a cookie sheet and allowed to stand one or two hours before baking at 350 deg. F. for 20 minutes. While still warm, spread tops with a thin coating of frosting—1 stiffly beaten egg white mixed with 1 1/2 cups confectioners' sugar and the addition of juice of half a lemon, stirred smooth. Add bits of candied fruit peel, pressed into frosting lightly. Let cool before storing in covered containers. Yields about 28 cookies.

INVITES PARTICIPATION

JERUSALEM — The Government of Iran has invited Israel to participate in the observance in 1961 of the 2,500th anniversary of the reign of King Cyrus who, upon his conquest of Babylon in 539, restored to the Jews the vessels of the temple and permitted them to return to Palestine.

The invitation was extended by Hadg Eddin Haifa, Cultural Counsellor to the Court of the Shah of Iran, in talks with Israel's Foreign Minister Golda Meir when they met recently in Europe. The Iranian official was reported to have voiced confidence that Jews throughout the world would cooperate in the observance of the event.

Alien Address Reports Due by January 31

District Director, James A. Hamilton, Jr., of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Boston District Office, advised today that the annual alien address report program is again under way and will end on Jan. 31, 1960.

According to Director Hamilton, 158,146 aliens reported their addresses last year in the tri-state area of New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

The Immigration official pointed out that the address reports are required by law annually during January and willful failure to comply with these requirements may lead to serious consequences.

Forms with which to make the reports are available at all Post Offices and Immigration Offices during office hours for the period from Jan. 4 through 29, 1960.

Director Hamilton added that trained personnel will be on hand at all the Immigration Offices listed below to answer inquiries on immigration and naturalization matters: Room 406 Diab Bldg., 150 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass., Tel: CAPITOL 3-2362; Room 33 Varick Bldg., 315 Elm Street, Manchester, New Hampshire, Tel: NATIONAL 2-5942; and Room 215 Post Office Bldg., Providence, Rhode Island, Tel: GASpee 1-7274.

"For 2c Plain"

By HARRY GOLDEN

Why I Am A Monarchist

Lord Altrincham misses the point when he criticizes Queen Elizabeth's little speeches as "a pain in the neck." As I see it, this young lord is the real "pain in the neck."

It is precisely these little speeches--"We are moved..." or, "Now let us all clap hands..."--which attest to the strength, the wisdom and the greatness of the British Constitutional Monarchy. There is no better way to dramatize the wonderful principle, "The Queen reigns, but does not rule," than with these little speeches which the wise men of Windsor Castle write for the Queen (God love her).

My monarchist leanings, of course, probably go back to the days on the Lower East Side of New York when each of the coffeehouses frequented by Jews from Austria (Galitzianer) had a big portrait on the wall of Kaiser Franz Josef. The Romanian coffeehouses had portraits of the beautiful Queen Carmen Sylva, while the Russian Jews had to settle for Count Leo Tolstoy.

But I have often thought what a wonderful thing it would be if we had a queen of the United States, within the framework of our Constitution, of course. I think we would even permit her to marry whatever young man might become her Captain Townsend. This change would not cast any discredit upon the memory of those noble men of 1776 who founded this republic. It would merely be an acknowledgment, based on more mature judgment, that people must have a symbol. In the absence of a unifying symbol, they go wandering after all sorts of demagogic odds and ends such as Father Coughlin, Huey Long and Joe McCarthy. Heaven only knows who will be the next one.

There is another advantage. We could build a planned nobility from segments of American life. The Queen would probably create four original Dukes of the Realm--John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of Standard Oil, Paul Hoffman of Studebaker, Walter Reuther of the United Automobile Workers and David Dubinsky of the International Ladies' Garment workers. Later on, she would probably add Carmine De Sapio of Tammany Hall and Jacob Arvey of the Cook County political machine.

Lord Bryce once said that a Tammany Hall district leader had more power than the King of England, and it is interesting to note that Tammany followed the same symbolism that is used by the Crown. This was known as the Fourth of July speech. Usually the Hollywood script writers show the Fourth of July speech in a rural setting, a watermelon-cutting of the Elm Street Baptist Church. This is completely erroneous. The Fourth of July speech was invented by Tammany Hall in New York City. I doubt whether those Irishmen received engraved invitations, "decorations are to be worn," but the sachems would gather around their speaker with the symbol of their office, a huge medallion suspended from a heavy gold chain and resting on a red, white and blue silk sash across their chests.

Then the speaker: "And the great American Eagle spreads its wings, from the rock-ribbed coast of Maine to the Golden Gate..."

The sad part of this story is that President Eisenhower, who is, indeed the political leader of our nation, often makes the same "And now let us all clap hands" speeches and, with all due respect to a great soldier and a fine man, if I am to have merely a symbol, I'll take Princess Margaret and that gold coach.

• A SWITCH

For many years, the stereotype went something like this: "The Jews are traders and businessmen, but they are poor fighters."

Now, with the eleven-year survival of an Israel surrounded by enemies, and the conquest of the Sinai Peninsula in three days--but with a sidelong glance at Israel's unbalanced budget--all of this may be changed: "Them Jews are great fighters, but they are certainly poor businessmen."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Rabbi Jacob Freedman

BY BERYL SEGAL

Rabbi Jacob Freedman came to Providence about two years ago and his name came before him.

He came with many accomplishments to his credit, mostly literary.

In a gay and happy mood, he wrote the words and music of a song called "Hail, Happy Purim." It was published by the United Synagogues of America, Philadelphia branch.

For the Songs of Religion Company he wrote an English version of the Hatikvah, the Song of Hope, which is sung on every occasion. Included in the Jewish National Hymn is the new refrain as sung in Israel:

Od lo ovdo tikvosenu
Hatikvah shnos alpayim,
Li-yos am chafshi b'artzenu
Eyetz Zion v' Yerusholayim.

Thirteen years ago the United Nations was formed. Rabbi Freedman is co-working with Louis Kazze to write a hymn "O, God of Peace," and to dedicate it to the United Nations. It was first performed by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra.

Rabbi Jacob Freedman is also interested in the theater. He wrote a full length play of college life which he knew so well. He has been a student at both Harvard and Columbia University, and was advisor to Jewish students at Columbia and Barnard College. Out of this experience, he wrote the play. He also translated the play "Eve" by Zalmen Schneur, the great Hebrew and Yiddish writer who died recently. This is a Biblical play, a one act play on the story of Adam and Eve.

But the crown of his achievements is the translation from the Hebrew of the book The Great Madness, by Avigdor Hameiri.

This is a book about the First World War. It can just as well be about the Second World War and of all wars. It is a remarkable book and in its time, it created quite a sensation. Published in 1930, it was reprinted three times, the last edition in 1951.

Like all war books, it is autobiographical. Avigdor Hameiri (Feurstein), a Hungarian Jew, enlists in the army for the service of the Fatherland. The Jews are extremely patriotic, for in Franz Joseph the First, they saw their protector. The Austrian army is a hotch-potch of nationalities: Hungarians, Ruthenians, Poles, Tyroleans, Czechs and what not. They hardly understand one another and genuinely dislike one another. But altogether they dislike the Jew.

So, it is the story of the Jew in the army.

And it is the story of the war itself, the Great Madness. The profanity. The cruelty. The nightmare.

The two themes are intertwined, and one does not know where one ends and the other begins.

There is the story of the sergeant who preaches to the rookies the virtues of dying for the Fatherland, and at the word "Death" he is silenced forever by a Russian bullet which bursts in the midst of the camp.

There is the story of the soldiers idling away during the winter months. Soldiers away from home, and women. The boredom is great, and they decide to make sport with the Russians. They sit in the trenches opposite the Russians and when they see them going about their business of repairing their dugouts, they "hunt" them.

Zip - one.
Zip - two.
Zip - three.

"That every 'zip' meant a family man, a living, suffering person, who had his ambitions and wanted to live just as much as we did, did not enter our minds."

So tells the author, and he put a stop to the hunting game.

Or the story of the death of the young Tyrolean, a simple peasant boy, unspoiled by the city ways. He died and they put his lanky body in the ground, and stood in great grief over his grave. Uncle Oestreicher among them.

"Uncle Oestreicher kept walking in circles as if hesitating about something. Then he whispered to Margolis for a moment, and finally stood up and recited Kaddish, the prayer for the dead.

"The simple Christian Tyrolean was privileged to have what thousands of Jewish soldiers were fated to miss."

And so they pass by, little stories of soldiers, of officers, of civilians, and of Jews, in the army of Kaiser Franz Joseph the First.

And this story, Rabbi Freedman translated in a simple style, and when the reader becomes engrossed in the episodes, he forgets that this is a translation. It preserves the style and the fluidity of the original.

Now Rabbi Freedman is Rabbi in Temple Beth Shalom. He is distributing the book, "The Great Madness" among his friends, and plans to establish a scholarship in memory of his father, Rabbi Joseph Freedman, with the income. May his hands be strengthened.

lucky to start a New Year without a pay check," she explains...In discussing the rarity of her bookings, she said: "I show a lot, but not too often."

BOOK DEPT.: Errol Flynn's posthumous autobiography, "My Wicked, Wicked Life," does not, of course, include the final, bizarre chapter of his life--his traipsing around the world with a teenager. One of Flynn's Hollywood friends, recalling the scandals that ended the career of Fatty Arbuckle, said: "Errol was a Skinny Arbuckle."

MILITARY NOTE: At a NATO session in Paris some of the officers were discussing the matter of keeping military secrets. One neutral observer said that the French never could keep a secret and that the Germans always could: "In France even the fish talk. In Germany even the parrots are silent."

THEATER NOTE: When Lauren Bacall left Paris to start rehearsals in "Goodbye Charlie," she had a farewell session with Ingrid Bergman. When Miss Bacall turned to leave, Miss Bergman booted her in her seat, then explained: "In the Swedish theater, that means 'Good Luck.'"

CRITICAL NOTE: Joe Mankiewicz directed the film version of Tennessee Williams' "Suddenly, Last Summer." This is the controversial and absorbing film about love, deviates and cannibalism. When Gilbert Miller said of it: "I was fascinated, but frankly I wouldn't recommend it to my servants," Mankiewicz said: "Especially not to your chef."

BROADWAY GAZETTE...

MOVIES: Jack Warner heads the newly-organized group of Richard Nixon's supporters in California. Warner also heads the film company that will distribute the movie version of Dore Schary's play about President Roosevelt, "Sunrise At Campobello." Warner discussed this with producer Milton Sperling, and wondered about any possible embarrassment in this conflict between his role as Nixon's champion and as distributor of a Roosevelt film.

"Not at all," Sperling replied. "I'm sure we can get Dore Schary to write an added scene which would resolve it all happily for you." The play ends with F.D.R. walking, on crutches, up to the platform at the Democratic National Convention in 1928, to nominate Alfred E. Smith. "Dore could write a scene showing a little boy saying to Roosevelt 'Gee, you're a wonderful man, Mr. Roosevelt, even though I don't like your politics--but I do admire you.'"

"Thank you," Roosevelt answers. "What's your name, little boy? And the boy tells him, 'Richard Nixon.'"

DRAMA DEPT.: Arthur Rubinstein canceled all appointments last Saturday evening and took to his bed, for rest. "This has been too trying an experience for me," he said. He'd spent the afternoon seeing his 13-year-old son, Johnny, play the title role in a school performance of "Macbeth"... "He played it perfectly. Not a mistake," said Rubinstein. "When I play a concert I know I'm going to make five mistakes. But I was not prepared for perfection in a 13-year-old boy."

GIFT DEPT.: Oscar Levant heard several of his friends mention the mink coats they'd bought for their respective wives and mistresses as Christmas gifts. Levant told them: "Let's fact it. A mink coat usually is a woman's reward for indifference."

BUSINESS NOTE: Gypsy Rose Lee will spend New Year's Eve working in St. Petersburg, Fla. She'll drive there in her Rolls-Royce car and with her 15-year-old stage manager-son, Eric. Miss Lee decided to take the booking although she collects high royalties from "Gypsy," and has a town house and trust funds. "It's un-
