Author Tells Jews To Study Teachings Of Jesus Of Nazareth

NEW YORK—"Christianity and Judaism share one of the great reluctances of history. Both are reluctant to live openly and fully with the fact that Jesus was a Jew."

Those are the opening words of an article written by a distinguished Christian author for a leading Jewish magazine.

The author is Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review. His article on "The Jewishness of Jesus" appears in the current issue of American Judaism, monthly publication of the Reform Jewish movement.

Reverse Prejudice

Mr. Cousins has some strong words to say about "the absurdity of anti-Semitism" among Christians who claim a Jew as their lord and savior. But most of his article is addressed to a reverse form of prejudice which exists—quite understandably, in his opinion—among Jews.

"If Jesus' name is invoked in a company of Jews," he says, "the effect on many of them is one of profound uneasiness . . . their reaction makes it seem as though a social contract were being violated."

Mr. Cousins says history has given Jews abundant reason for this "conditioned reflex."

Committee Assails Growth Of Nazism

DALLAS, Tex. — The American Jewish Committee assailed what it termed a "growing international network of nazism." The network functions aggressively in Europe, South America and the Middle East, according to a report issued here.

The report is based on material from the committee's officers in Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeira and Paris and from correspondents in other countries. It expresses "serious concern over the activities of neo-Nazis operating on an international basis from Germany and Malmo, Sweden."

These Nazi activities, the report declares, "are rooted in anti-democratic, anti-Semitic and totalitarian philosophies."

Movements Are Linked

The report, made public by Herbert B. Ehrmann, president of the committee, at a meeting of its executive board, links old world and new world neo-Nazi move-

Report Religious Affiliation Indicates Number Of Children

PRINCETON, N. J., — Religious affiliation is the most accurate social indicator of how many children a couple will have, according to a study by the Office of Population Research at Princeton University.

A preliminary report of the findings was released last week. The six-year study, called "Family Growth in Metropolitan America," was conducted by Dr. Charles F. Westoff, Dr. Robert G. Potter Jr., Dr. Philip C. Sagi and Dr. Elliot G. Mishler.

Although data are still being analyzed, Dr. Westoff said it was already clear that "religion is the social attribute of greatest single importance" in determining the number of children desired, the spacing of children and the choice and effectiveness of contraceptives.

The matter of whether a couple is Roman Catholic, Jewish, Protestant or of mixed religions is more decisive than the husband's job category, the family's economic level or any of approximately seventy other "socio-economic attiudes and personality variables," Dr. Westoff said.

Jews Said to Plan Early

"For example, Jews interviewed begin contraception earliest after marriage, use the most effective methods, have the longest birth intervals and report fewest unplanned pregnancies," he said. "Roman Catholics are at the opposite extreme of this pattern, and Protestants are in the middle."

Approximately the same number of couples, 30 per cent, said they preferred two, three and four children. Ten per cent said they wanted more than four. In general, Dr. Westoff said, Catholics wanted the largest families and Jews the smallest.

In mixed Protestant-Roman Catholic marriages, the number of children desired by couples married by a priest fell, on the average, between the numbers desired by Protestant and Roman Catholic couples. Those not married by a priest expressed preferences identical with those of Protestant couples.

Among Roman Catholic couples, however, the study revealed sharp differences between number of children desired and those they actually had. This difference was related to whether the couple's education was predominantly in religious or in secular institutions.

Goals Are Similar

Family goals of Roman Catholic couples educated in secular schools are more like those of Protestants than like those of their fellow Catholics; couples educated in se-

Report Ben-Gurion Threatens To Resign Over Lavon Probe

J E R U S A L E M — Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion has reportedly threatened to resign from his leadership of the Government, if Parliament's committee on foreign affairs and security continues to insist on probing the affair involving Pinhas Lavon, secretary-general of the Israel Federation of Labor, who resigned from the Cabinet as Minister of Defense in 1955.

Mr. Ben-Gurion conferred with President Izhak Ben-Zvi, after a meeting of the Cabinet at which the Lavon affair was discussed. Circles close to Mr. Ben-Gurion said that the Premier's visit was intended to underscore his insistence that the Parliament committee halt its probe into the Lavon matter, on threat that, otherwise, he would quit.

At the meeting of the Cabinet, Mr. Ben-Gurion requested that a judicial commission be appointed, with powers of subpoena, to ascertain the facts about who gave the orders in 1955 that resulted in the Lavon affair. Minister of Justice Pinhas Rosen is expected to formulate before next week's Cabinet meeting the terms of reference for such a commission.

The Prime Minister disclosed to the Cabinet that two Israeli Army officers, one of whom is now in the Army, and the other on reserve duty, participated in 'inciting" a witness to give false testimony during the 1955 probe that preceded Lavon's resignation from the Defense Ministry. The Premier said that the Chief of Staff of Israel's Defense Forces must now consider whether the regular army officer who participated in suborning perjury should be disciplined.

None of the specific details surrounding the Lavon affair has ever been disclosed, since these details are said to involve state security matters.

Why Have The Orthodox Rabbis Left?

By Celia Zuckerberg

We asked the question in our October 21 issue - Why Have the Orthodox Rabbis Left? The main reason given by those interviewed was a lack of money caused by a loss in strength of most of the orthodox congregations. The question then actually came down to - why are the orthodox members leaving the congregations?

Reasons given were the difficulty of being orthodox in the present day world; the move to the suburbs of the younger members of the synagogues; and the fact that the small orthodox congregations each wished to keep its own identity rather than merging with the other small congregations.

Abraham Linder, president of Congregation Mishkan Tefilah, agrees that this refusal to merge is one of the greatest troubles of the smaller congregations.

Mishkan Tefilah, one of the oldest congregations in Rhode Island, has a different problem on its hands right now. Located in a section of the city (Howell Street in the Lippitt Hill section) its membership had been falling considerably for a long time because of the decline of the neighborhood and the movement of the members out to other sections of the city and to the suburbs.

They have now lost their synagogue which has been rased since it is in a section which is now in the process of redevelopment — so they have been paid $100,000 by the State and they have no place to go.

According to Mr. Linder, $100,000 may build a synagogue — and with the present high prices he is even a little doubtful about that — but with a dwindling membership, he wonders what will happen in the future when there is upkeep with which to be concerned.

Mr. Linder feels that the younger generation wants very little to do with orthodoxy . . . "They want to sit with their wives . . . it's more of a social gathering," he says. He feels that most of them attend synagogue for only three days of the year anyway.

There just is "no support . . . the members' money cannot maintain a good orthodox rabbi in Providence," he continues.

He feels that if two or three of the congregations merge, "If they were not selfish . . . but did it for the cause of orthodoxy instead of worry about themselves, it would be the only salvation (of the orthodox Jews) in Providence."

Mixed seating was again brought out as one of the major reasons for the loss not only of orthodox members but of entire orthodox congregations — and according to Dr. Morris Keller, a prominent local optometrist — this is happening throughout the country.

Many orthodox congregations have become conservative congregations for that one reason alone. Most constitutions of synagogues are written so that it is up to the majority to decide whether the congregation stays orthodox or turns conservative (and although everything else remains the same, if the men and women sit together, the synagogue is no longer considered orthodox). For this reason, Temple Beth Sholom in Providence which was orthodox originally, became conservative through the vote of one member — and the split occurred because of the question of mixed seating.

Now Dr. Keller says, the synagogues are writing their constitutions so that if one member still does not want mixed seating, the ruling cannot be changed.

A truly orthodox Jew, Dr. Keller agrees with other orthodox members that it is "most difficult to be orthodox." He works late every weekday night because he does not work on Saturdays or on Jewish holidays such as, of course the High Holidays, and Succos, Simchas Torah, etc.

Pointing out the difficulties of being orthodox (which, in his case, also involves a two mile walk to and a two mile walk back from

General Jewish Committee To Hold D-Day On Sunday

Leonard Y. Goldman, General Jewish Committee D-Day chairman has announced that plans for the intensive house-to-house canvass of Jewish families in the Greater Providence area have been completed at a series of meetings of team captains during the past week.

Headquarters for the one-day fund raising drive again will be set up at Johnsons Hummocks. Following breakfast a final briefing will be given the workers by Mr. Goldman and GJC leaders and each worker will be assigned cards of prospective contributors to cover.

As soon as the volunteer workers cover their cards they will report back to headquarters with the results.

Nazis In Argentina Still Toast Hitler - But Secretly

BUENOS AIRES — A dozen Germans in a crowded restaurant suddenly rose to their feet, lifted glasses of champagne and cried: Hitler! The Fatherland!" It is a scene from Germany of 20 years ago. But it happened only last month in the smart Cabana restaurant here according to a London Daily Express article reprinted in the New York World Telegram & Sun.

These Germans, dedicated Nazis, believed in the Germany-above-all policy of Adolf Hitler—and still do.

They are Germans in the Nazis' last bunker—a hideout in the Argentine.

Nobody can say for sure how many Nazis are in the Argentine —but there are 75,000 Germans in the country, great numbers of them with Nazi sympathies and ideals.

Juan Peron and his beautiful, opportunist wife Eva were openly for the Germans while they ruled the Argentine.

The Nazis, fleeing from their beaten Germany, poured into the country — including Adolf Eichmann, the monster Hitler trusted to kill 6 million Jews.

Eichmann, purued relentlessly by Jews who survived his horror, was at long last kidnapped by an Israeli commando team in Buenos Aires and now awaits his fate in Tel Aviv.

One of Eichmann's staff, Dr. Joseph Mengele, also reached the Argentine safely. So did Johann von Leers, a high-powered Hitler propaganda man.

Hitler's personal pilot, Hans Rudel, also turned up—and so did scores of others.

Despite the false arrest last week of a little one-armed storekeeper Walter Flegel, because someone thought he was Hitler's deputy, Martin Bormann, the rumor still persists that Bormann did not die after he left Hitler's burning bunker in Berlin, but that he somehow reached the Argentine.

There are people who swear that Bormann once regularly drank beer in the A.B.C. German restaurant in Lavailestreet, in the heart of Buenos Aires.

The man many swore was Bormann never removed a black glove from his right hand. This, says the story, was to disguise a false hand.

True or false, the point remains: Peron took no action against the wanted Nazis.

He even employed Nazis who were not on wanted lists.

Now Peron has gone, the Nazis in their South American bunker are finding life more difficult.

The present government has not such strong sympathies for the Nazis. It was angry with the Israelis for personally kidnapping Eichmann, but it might even have arrested him if pressure had been brought.

Though Eichmann has been captured, the Israelis are not finished yet—not by a long way.

Somewhere in Buenos Aires there are always Israelis on the look-out.

As the gas chambers of Germany silently sent millions of Jews to their deaths, Jewish vengeance was sworn.

Israel's agents tracking down the Nazis swear to honor that oath of vengeance.

But the Nazis in the Argentine still have hope—hope that Germany will once again be master of Europe.

So that their children will be prepared for it, the Nazis here are making sure that they are properly "educated."

Former members of Hitler's Third Reich have organized a series of discussions for the younger members of the German rowing club here. The subject: the Fourth Reich.

The Orthodox Debutantes

By Mira Stern

When Sarah Schnierer organized the first Bias Yaakov--the first girl's yeshivah--in Cracow, Poland, she could hardly have foreseen the prominent and controversial position that girls' yeshivos hold today. Yet the beginning of Bais Yaakov was, in itself, controversial. To many European Jews the thought of their daughters learning Chumash, Tanach, and even (God forbid) Gemorrah, was ridiculous if not heretical. Their sons had to learn, but their daughters? Never! To send a girl "to learn just like the boys" was a meshugas.

But these people had not counted on the perseverance of Sarah Schnierer. She was convinced that the changing times called for a radical departure from the "old way." Girls, too, had to be given a sound and basic knowledge of their religion, of their people's heritage --else they would soon become influenced by the outrageously secular education nearly all of them were receiving in government-subsidized schools.

And so Sarah Schnierer gathered just a handful of girls--whose parents finally conceded because she wore away their resistance with incessant argument--and she founded Bais Yaakov.

Bais Yaakov has come a long way since its start in the home of its seamstress-founder. Bais Yaakov--known today also as Beth Jacob--has become the central force in the lives of Jewish Orthodox girls. There is now a "Bais Yaakov girl," just as there is a Wellesley girl or a Vassar girl.

Bais Yaakov, in its own small society, has become as necessary for a girl as the beth hamedrash for a boy wishing to get smicha. In the girl's case, it's not ordination that she is after--although she'll usually marry a rabbi--but she knows that by going to Bais Yaakov she achieves a unique social status, and what is more important, she achieves yichus atzmi. No longer need the girl of marriageable age despair if she does not have yichus--if there is not at least one scholar or even obscure, but venerable rabbi about whom she can say, "He was my great-uncle on the father's side." Today, a Bais Yaakov girl doesn't need a distinguished genealogy. It's much better to have yichus, but being a Bais Yaakov girl, she has her own yichus; the match will come off anyhow.

In the circle of Jewish Orthodoxy, the Bais Yaakov girl is rated among the elite. A Bais Yaakov girl knows. She knows Chumash and dinim (laws), she knows how to kosher meat (this is quickly becoming a forgotten art because most kosher butchers offer to perform this service), she knows how to bake delicious hamantashen, she knows how to rid her home of all chametz before Passover. She is also a good housekeeper, she is charitable, she's fine, she's aidel, she's a beryeh. Is it any wonder that she is of the select? "She's a Bais Yaakov girl, you know"--you can almost hear the expression of profound respect and admiration.

The unique social status that the Bais Yaakov girl enjoys is a limited one, however, for as soon as she steps out of her small circle of Orthodox friends and family, she becomes either an object of mild scorn, or a strange specimen to be studied closely. "Outside," the Bais Yaakov girl finds that her long-sleeved dresses and high-necked collars are an object of ridicule. In her own group, however, they are looked upon as an admirable manifestation of modesty--tznius.

There are times, however, when even in her own circle the Bais Yaakov girl encounters some mockery.

Great was the dismay of two such Bais Yaakov girls who were at a hasidic wedding, and were approached by two lively and enterprising yeshiva boys. The boys had introduced themselves and each had already extended his hand for a friendly, get-acquainted handshake, when one of them jokingly queried, "You're not Bais Yaakov girls, are you?"

The girls, seeing no reason why they should answer otherwise, said that they were.

"Oh," cackled one of the boys, "then I guess we're not allowed to shake hands with you." And off they went, leaving the two girls standing with outstretched hands and open mouths.

Being a Bais Yaakov girl involves certain obligations. Aside from striving to possess the indispensable midos (character traits) for which she is noted, the Bais Yaakov girl must be a living example of her teaching. When a class of Bais Yaakov girls go on a trip together by train, there is always one who goes about from seat to seat, admonishing her classmates for their loudness.

"Do you want to cause a chilul hashem (desecration of god's name)?" she warns.

But the greatest obligation of the many that the Bais Yaakov girl assumes is devotion and strict adherence to codes of modesty. The girls are taught how to dress, how to speak, what to say, where to be seen (movie houses, theaters, cafes are definitely out-of-bounds for the Bais Yaakov girl--such places are not fitting for the tzniusdika maidel).

The teaching of tznius to Bais Yaakov girls is based on the reputed modesty of Sarah Schnierer, the school's founder. It is not surprising to hear one of the instructors at Bais Yaakov--it would be a rebbitzen in this case--telling the students that Sarah Schnierer was so modest that, when dressing, she would draw on her stockings under the covers.

From Sarah Schnierer came the main ideas of tznius, and every teacher usually adds a few of her or his own. And by the time that the Bais Yaakov girl has completed her studies, she finds that she is restricted to wearing three-quarter or long-sleeve dresses, high necklines, soft colors and loose sweaters. She may not wear slacks or shorts, and all her clothing must be of moderate length--preferably long. She has even learned how to dress and undress with a minimum of body exposure.

The grandmother's landlady from the other side of Brooklyn will somehow hear about the meilas (fine qualities) of the Bais Yaakov girl, and will think about how delightful a match she would be for the son of her second cousin. Since the delicate art of matchmaking is inherent in every Jew, it is not difficult to see that these family or friend relationships are excellent breeders of shidduchim.

One amusing incident occurred when a Bais Yaakov girl--let us call her Rachel--accepted a "blind date." It was a double date, and the other girl was also a Bais Yaakov girl. The two girls met the boys in the home of one of the girls, under the seemingly nonchalant attention of the girl's mother. It was a good try, but it didn't materialize into anything; the glass would not be broken yet.

Months later, on a shabbos, when Rachel was in shul, one of her mother's friends asked to be introduced to Rachel. And before Rachel could close her siddur, she was whisked off to meet a

Israel Trains Youth To Man Growing Fishing Fleets

MEVOOT YAM, Israel — To man her growing shipping fishing fleets, Israel is training young men here in aspects of sea lore that range from tying bowline knots to shooting the sun in advanced navigation classes.

It is also trying to instill in them a love for the sea that would be less characteristic of the ancient Hebrews than of their old neighbors, the Phoenicians.

If Israel is to have ships, somebody is going to have to man them. The nautical school here has therefore added to its curriculum something called "infusion of seamindedness and love for the maritime way of life." The Government is also considering making the school coeducational.

According to Raphael Ruppin, the school's director, this is the only way Israel will ever succeed in beginning a maritime tradition. He declared that women are keeping this tradition from getting a start.

In maritime nations such as the Netherlands, where Mr. Ruppin learned fishing, those who go to sea are not engaged simply in a vocation. They are part of a way of life. The women belong to it and understand it, because their fathers and brothers belonged to it. Not so with Israel women, Mr. Ruppin said.

"We want to create that spirit in Israel," he said. "The boys certainly get it in school. The girls will get it if the Government opens the school to them. And we need trained women on our passenger ships — hostesses, chambermaids, many others.

The enthusiasm of the boys is obvious at Mevoot Yam, which is Hebrew for "the Gates to the Sea." The town is a cluster of tidy dormitories and shops, where the Alexander River empties into the Mediteranean, midway between Haifa and Tel Aviv.

The boys are eligible after finishing elementary school, at the ages of 14 or 15. Whether they study to become merchant sailors or fishermen, the course takes three years.

Those taking fishery courses spend much of their time in the school's seventy-foot trawler and in smaller boats. The others spend their entire third year at sea, aboard an Israeli merchant vessel.

ments. It charges that Hungarian, Ukrainain and Croatian fascist groups are cooperating with native Latin American organizations.

In Argentina, the report says, the National Union Movement "is the major neo-Nazi organization, with about 15,000 members," its "propaganda is both anti-American and anti-Semitic.

Mexico is cited as having an "active anti-Semitic neo-Nazi movement whose propaganda is often used as a weapon against the United States." The report identifies as a "key organization" in Mexico the "Editors Librera."

The report asserts that anti-Semitic movements in Latin America "receive a steady stream of Ku Klux Klan-type publications which are imported from the United States and distributed from Santiago, Chile."

In discussing West Germany the report cites the German Reich party, with one seat in the State Parliament of the Rhineland-Palatinate, as "the outstanding neo-Nazi group."

Veteran Groups Cited

It lists eleven other parties as neo-Nazi, these including some veterans' groups, such as the Mutual Aid Society of former Waffen-SS members, that carry on campaigns "to justify Hitlerism and play down Nazi war crimes."

The report declares that international neo-Nazi groups have branches in West Germany. These groups, it adds, are comprised of former "Fascist military leaders, heads and ministers of wartime puppet governments who fled to Germany from Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and the Ukraine after World War II and today conduct wide-scale pro-Nazi propaganda which is also violently anti-Semitic."

The report describes as a "danger signal" the membership of 20,000 to 30,000 in German "ultra-nationalistic youth organizations." This membership the report points to as "a sign of the inadequacies of the German system of civic education."

In the Middle East, the report says, the United Arab Republic "has provided refuge to a considerable number of former Nazis who escaped from Germany and who are serving as advisers to that country in its campaign of progapanda against Israel."

Activities Here Arraigned

It is also charged that "Hungarian facist groups are now operating in the United States." These elements, the report comments, "must be clearly distinguished from the decent and loyal Hungarian majority in this country."

The report identifies a New York weekly, "Free Hungary," as a "periodical which publishes unbridled anti-democratic and anti-Semitic propaganda."

In an address, Mr. Ehrmann declared that "tardy" progress in race relations in the United States had cost the nation "thousands of Negro engineers, doctors and technicians who would be in a position to give assistance to the emerging nations of Africa."

He added that had "our Negro fellow citizens been afforded equal opportunities" their help in the African states could have made "that great continent the firm ally and friend of the United States."

At a banquet Jacob Blaustein of Baltimore, honorary president of the committee, received its American Liberties Medallion for "exceptional advancement of the principles of liberty and equality."

Hiring Practices Exclude Jews

DALLAS — Discriminatory hiring practices in American coropations have excluded numerous Jews from top executive positions, says the head of the American Jewish Committee.

"Jews constitute less than one-half of one per cent of the total executive personnel in leading American industrial companies," Dr. John Slawson told the committee during its second day of meetings here.

Slawson said about eight per cent of the college-trained population in the U.S. is Jewish and that managerial staffs are chosen largely from among college graduates.

Distorted Image

Centuries of persecution by people who called themselves Christians have given Jews "an image of Jesus" that is associated with harshness and cruelty.

But this image is the very antithesis of what Jesus actually was like, Mr. Cousins says.

He appeals to Jews to look beyond the distorted image which they have derived from "the un-Christian words and acts of those who have spoken in his name," and to discover the real Jesus of Nazareth whose life and teachings are recorded in the New Testament.

Projection of Judaism

"There is every reason for Judaism to lose its reluctance toward Jesus," Mr. Cousins says. "His towering spiritual presence is a projection of Judaism, not a repudiation of it.

"Jesus was proud to be a Jew. He asserted the Jewish heritage and sought to preserve and exalt its values. But he did it within a universal context.

"No other figure — spiritual, philosophical, political or intellectual — has had a greater impact on human history. Jews can take pride in the fact of his being and his ideas and his claim on history.

"And the rediscovery of Jesus can help Jews in the most vital respect of all; he can help them to forgive their tormentors—including those who have done evil to them in Jesus' name."

Survey

cular schools are more like those of Protestants than like those of their fellow Catholics.

The survey also showed, Dr. Westoff reported, that "cautiousness, with heavy emphasis upon education, appears to be the main factor relevant to the fertility of Jewish couples."

"It is only among the Jewish groups that couples consistently refrain from desiring additional children in the family because they want to be able to send those they have to college," he said.

The Orthodox Rabbis

Sabbath services weekly) he says it is also difficult in a social sense.

Whereas the conservative and reform temples have a large and varied assortment of social affairs involving everyone from the children to the older members, the synagogues because of their lack of money cannot present such a program to their members. Many families join other conservative congregations just because of the social life attached to them.

According to Dr. Keller (and here he agreed with David Hassenfeld of Shaare Zedek) usually as soon as an orthodox member has made a little money, he leaves the synagogue and joins a conservative or reform temple.

Because of this reason, according to Dr. Keller, the orthodox synagogues cannot hire a first rate rabbi, and if they do hire one, they cannot afford to keep him. The rabbi cannot afford to stay, both because in these days he cannot support a family with the pay he receives and also because he can receive no support for his activities at the synagogue if he tries to do anything for the children or teenagers (a matter which some orthodox feel has been neglected at the synagogues).

However — and it is a feeling many orthodox Jews have — Dr. Keller feels as does Rabbi Chill and Mr. Hassenfeld, that there "will be a resurgence of orthodoxy within the next 25 years."

He says that at present there are three generations of Jews. There are those who came to the United States from Europe in the early 1900's (almost all of them were orthodox) and spent most of their time and thought on making a living and bringing up their children. Because of the lack of time and money, according to Dr. Keller, they spent almost no thought on the Jewish and Hebrew education of their children. And so, this generation of Jews knew nothing of their heritage — and went to orthodox synagogues only because their parents went.

However, the younger generation, says Dr. Keller, is now going to school were they learn Hebrew and Jewish history — and Dr. Keller points to the recent increase of Hebrew Day Schools — and this generation, since it understands and believes in orthodoxy will bring about the resurgence of orthodoxy.

Henry Brill, president and one of the founders of Temple Beth David, which is a conservative temple, feels that lack of money is the major cause for the lack of rabbis. In his temple he has the same problem in that there is not enough money to hire a good rabbi. The problem of mixed seating he feels also is what causes the loss of orthodox members. Of course, since his is a conservative temple he believes that mixed seating should be allowed.

Although the orthodox Jews feel that within the next ten to 25 years there will be a resurgence of orthodoxy in the United States, at the present moment their problem is lack of money which stems from a lack of members. The lack of members the majority feel stems from the difficulty of being orthodox, from the fact that many of the younger generation want to sit together when they come to services. Because of the lack of money, they are unable to hire a first rate rabbi, and if they can hire one, they are unable to keep him, since they cannot raise his salary and cannot support him when he attempts to build up the temple's activities. If they do not have a proper rabbi, there is a lack of leadership and executive ability which the synagogues feel now that they have no rabbis. What the solution to the problem is, no one seems to be able to suggest except that if some of the smaller congregations merged they would be able to support a rabbi more easily. Otherwise, they feel they must wait until the younger generation grows up.

prospective bridegroom. But someone had crossed signals, or was trying to use a dead wire, for Rachel found herself facing the "date" with whom she had sat for three hours, listlessly, months before, in the home of her friend. The shidach did not come off any better the second time.

The sooner the Bais Yaakov girl marries, the better. Her goal in life is to be a married woman--married to a talmid chacham, of course. Her greatest joy is to beget children, to give continuity to her race. Why should she put these things off? Indeed, she seeks to achieve her goal as quickly as possible. And the shadchanim--numerous as mosquitos in summer, and sometimes as irritating --are more than willing to aid in the noble search.

Engagements come about quickly, and lead into marriages in an astonishingly short time. One Bais Yaakov girl became engaged and was married within three months. This is rather rushed, for the type of wedding that the Bais Yaakov girl usually has is very large and requires a great deal of preparation. A typical wedding might be held at any one of these familiar New York establishments: Riverside Plaza and Broadway Central, both hotels, or Gold Manor in Williamsburgh, Brooklyn. There are other places in which the wedding might be held, but a kosher caterer would have to be brought to the hotel. There was a time when even the Waldorf-Astoria ballroom was rented for a "Bais Yaakov wedding."

When a Bais Yaakov girl gets married, she invites all her close friends to her wedding. Friends who are not so close, but who must be acknowledged are sent invitations, but without response cards. They are invited only to the chupah (the ceremony). What to others would seem an insult, is considered a correct practice to those who receive "half an invitation."

All the girls, those who are "staying" and those "who are leaving after the chupah," are required to do one thing for the bride. They must dance before her--to make her happy on her wedding night. Consequently, the Bais Yaakov girls have developed certain dance steps as intricate as those of the yeshiva boys who dance before the groom. The Bais Yaakov girls dance the broigez tantz, a comical pantomime depicting an imaginary quarrel between husband and wife, and the mitzvah tantz, an amusing rendition of the custom of men and women dancing but holding a handkerchief between them in their hands so as not to come in physical contact with each other. These dances are executed with droll perfection. The Bais Yaakov girls also know many Israeli dances, which call for much skipping and hopping.

Actually, however, the dancing of the Bais Yaakov girls before the bride serves a double purpose. For when the Bais Yaakov girl dances she is "on display." This is her coming-out party, her debut. She is one of many tzniusdika debutantes dancing, jumping and hopping before one of them (now an ex-debutante) who has "made it." And as she goes through the difficult steps and pants from exhaustion, the shadchanim at the tables are busily conferring.

The next day, the telephone will ring at the homes of a few lucky debutantes of the previous evening. And the mothers will sigh in delight and say, "Nu, it was worth it, the new dress for forty dollars, wasn't it?"

Dismiss Charges Against Youths

NEW YORK — A conspiracy charge has been dismissed against two Queens youths accused of attempting to organize a Nazi-type unit here.

The youths, John Wallace Jr., 21, of 43-24 165th St., Flushing, and Hugh Barlow, 20, of 158-17 Sanford Ave., Flushing, were freed in Queens Special Sessions last week.

Wallace, Barlow and a third youth, Richard E. Phelps, 17, who also lives in the Sanford Ave. building, were arrested last Jan. 14 after swastika armbands and other material were found in Wallace's home. Phelps was convicted of conspiracy Aug. 17 and sentenced to three years probation.

Lubin - Gerstenblatt

Miss Ellen Gerstenblatt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Gerstenblatt of 70 Radcliffe Avenue, was married to David Alan Lubin, son of Mrs. Estelle Lubin of 79 West Street, Worcester, Mass., at a candlelight ceremony held on Sunday, Sept. 25 at Temple Beth David. Rabbi William G. Braude, assisted by Cantor Victor Gerstenblatt, officiated at the ceremony which was followed by a reception in the temple vestry.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in silk organza over taffeta fashioned with a scoop neckline, short sleeves and a full skirt. Her three-tiered veil of silk illusion fell from a crown of orange blossoms. She carried a lace-covered Bible with two purple orchids and a shower of stephanotis.

Mrs. Carlton Palley, matron of honor, wore a short gown of blue silk organza styled with a draped sabrina neckline, midriffed waist, bouffant sleeves and a harem skirt. Miss Marsha Abrams, Miss Marcia Aptel and Miss Joan Bailey were bridesmaids. They were dressed in short orchid nylon dresses with scoop necklines, lace midriffs and full skirts. They carried cascade bouquets of yellow roses and pom poms. The flower girls, Miss Joy Gerstenblatt and Miss Susan Levin, wore orchid dresses and carried colonial bouquets of mixed flowers.

Marshall Gerstenblatt, brother of the bride, was best man. Ushers were Carleton Palley, Walter Derosier and Milton Jacobson. Edward Gerstenblatt, brother of the bride, was junior usher.

The mother of the bride wore a purple peau de soie split tunic dress with a boat neckline, the tunic being etched with matching lace appliques and rhinestones. The mother of the bridegroom was dressed in a shaded green chiffon dress. Both mothers wore white orchid corsages.

After a wedding trip to the Nevele Country Club and to Canada, the couple will reside at 4 Wood Ford Street, Worcester.

People for Pell Committee, Paul Goulding, Secretary

An Open Letter To The People of Rhode Island

I am presenting my biography in order that you may know my background and experience. I hope that you will consider me qualified to occupy the Senate seat which has been so ably held by Senator Theodore Francis Green. C. Claiborne Pell Claiborne deBorda Pell received 83,184 votes, the largest vote ever cast for a single candidate in any Rhode Island primary contest, in the Democratic Primary of September 28, 1960. He is the 41-year-old Treasurer of the Democratic City Committee of Newport, having long been active in the Democratic Party locally and on the national scene. He was Chairman of Rhode Island's Democratic $5 Fund Drive in 1952, a Delegate to the 1955 Rhode Island Constitutional Convention and Democratic National Registration Chairman in 1956. His considerable experience in Democratic politics includes service as a Consultant to the Democratic National Committee since 1953, and as a member of its Political Advisory Committee. He was Chief Delegation Tally Clerk at the 1956 and 1960 Democratic National Conventions and Administrative Assistant to the Rhode Island Democratic State Chairman in 1952 and 1954.

He is Vice President of the International Rescue Committee and served on the Hungarian border during the Revolution there. For setting up the I.R.C. Hungarian Refugee Relief Program there, Franz Cardinal Koenig of Austria awarded him the Caritas Elizabeth Medal and the Knights of Malta awarded him their Cross of Merit with Crown. He is on the National Council of the U.S. Committee for Refugees and is Treasurer of the American Immigration Conference, which seeks larger immigration quotas.

Youth in Rhode Island and Education

The Newport home in which Claiborne Pell was brought up has since been established as St. Catherine Academy—a gift from Mr. Pell's father to the Catholic Diocese of Providence. He also spent considerable time at Eastover, a farm off Wapping Road in Portsmouth. He graduated from St. George's School in Middletown.

Mr. Pell's scholastic and athletic preparation in Rhode Island stood him well at Princeton, where he earned his letter on the cross-country team and was a member of its Rugby team which held the Intercollegiate Championship for three years. He later received his Master's Degree from Columbia University in International Administration and did graduate work at American University.

Following graduation with honors from Princeton and from its School of Public and International Affairs, he worked as a roustabout in the Oklahoma oil wells. He then went to Europe and served as Private Secretary at the American Legation in Portugal. He also drove across war-torn Europe in an effort to break the blockade of supplies for allied prisoners of war in Germany, a feat for which he was later commended by the War Office of Great Britain and decorated by Portugal with its Red Cross of Merit.

War Service

He returned to Portsmouth in the spring of 1941 when he first registered to vote. He then volunteered in the Coast Guard four months before Pearl Harbor, his first duty being that of ship's cook. He saw service in the DUANE, ARGO and CAMPBELL on North Atlantic Convoy Duty, and was hospitalized from the Mediterranean Theatre home to the Newport Naval Hospital. There he met his wife, also a Newporter. Ending the war as a lieutenant, he moved back to Newport, where he registered to vote in 1946.

Except for seven years in the United States Foreign Service and in the State Department, he has maintained a home there ever since. In 1951, he built his present home on Ledge Road in Newport's Fourth Ward. He is presently a Commander in the United States Coast Guard Reserve, and a graduate of the Reserve Officers' Courses at the National and Newport Naval War Colleges.

Mr. Pell was made a Knight of the Crown of Italy for his work in rehabilitating the Sicilian fishing industry. He has also been awarded the Legion of Honor by France.

Active in Foreign Affairs

Mr. Pell has many years of experience in foreign affairs and has traveled abroad extensively. He was arrested three times by the Fascists prior to World War II and three times by the Communists while assigned behind the Iron Curtain.

Diplomatic service to his country started in 1945 when he was a Special Assistant at the San Francsico United Nations Conference. He served as Third Secretary at Prague, established the American Consulate General at Bratislava, served as Vice Consul at Genoa and spent two years in the State Department as Baltic Desk Officer.

He again served in a diplomatic capacity as Delegate to the 1959 initial meeting of the Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization in London.

Meanwhile, he has gained experience in business as a Vice President and Director of the North American Newspaper Alliance, a Director of International Investors, Inc., and a special partner in the investment banking firm of Auchincloss, Parker and Redpath. He was a Director of WRJM (now WADK) in Newport.

Rhode Island World Affairs Council

A Director of the Rhode Island World Affairs Council and Finance Chairman of the U.S. Committee for the United Nations, Mr. Pell is a Director of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Foundation. He was an original supporter of the Society of Friends of Touro Synagogue, is a member of the Rhode Island Society of Cincinnati and attends Trinity Episcopal Church in Newport. He is also a Governor of the Newport Casino.

Mr. Pell, a forward-thinking Democrat, worked closely with the national AFL-CIO Committee on Political Education in the 1956 Campaign, and his candidacy was favored for endorsement by the Newport County Central Labor Council.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Hollywood, Calif.-When motion picture producer William Goetz assigned Harry Sukman to adapt the background score for "Song Without End," he unknowingly picked the one man in Hollywood best qualified for the task.

Harry Sukman had been a dedicated student of the music of Franz Liszt whose life story is told in "Song Without End."

Chicago-born Harry Sukman participated since the tender age of 12 in piano recitals and concerts. When he was only 15, Harry became accompanist for Joseph Rosenblatt, considered the greatest cantor of all times.

"I'll never forget him," recalls Harry. "He was an extremely pious man who was pardonably proud of his great flowing beard.

"Cantor Rosenblatt was a great artist who rejected an offer to sing at the Met. He felt it sacrilegious to accept because of its commercial aspect.

"He was a kindly man," reminisces Sukman. "He encouraged my music and I wish I could have accepted his invitation to visit Israel with him."

Harry Sukman's family made music an integral part of their life. His father, a businessman in Chicago, played flute. His sister Rose was considered an excellent violinist.

His brother Charles was noted for his fluency with woodwinds, particularly the clarinet. Often, the family spent long happy hours together playing the music they loved.

The children achieved a local Chicago reputation for their performances at neighborhood social gatherings. As they grew older, they separated.

Rose was married. Charles gained a master's degree in music at the University of Indiana. Harry made his concert debut at the age of 12 in Kimball Hall. Even while he was in high school, Harry was piano accompanist for some of the world's greatest artists, including Mischa Mischakoff, violinist, and Luis Persinger, instructor of the celebrated Yehudi Menuhin.

In 1946, Sukman retired from his network radio show and joined the music staff of Paramount Studios in Hollywood where he renewed an old friendship with Victor Young.

Harry appeared as a soloist in many concerts in the Hollywood Bowl, once with David Rose conducting, and another time under the baton of his close friend, Victor Young. One season, he was soloist for the Bowl's annual Gershwin Memorial Concert.

It was Victor Young who urged Harry to abandon his solo appearances and to work on his musical compositions. Sukman soon enjoyed a heavy demand by motion picture and television producers. He composed the unforgetable background scores for a long list of productions before he was selected by William Goetz to score the film "Song Without End."

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PEOPLE OF RHODE ISLAND

As I look back over the campaign trail -- one that has been besmirched by invectives, lies and trickery -- I find solace in believing that Rhode Islanders can distinguish the truth from lies, leadership from vacillation, responsibility from irresponsibility and sincerity from glibness.

Rhode Island needs a stable government that has common sense, foresight, imagination and a heart.

As the Democratic candidate for governor, I am indeed proud that over the years our party's humane concern in the areas of education, social welfare, labor, business and industry is today bearing fruit.

Believing that Rhode Island needs new leadership, I want to assume the obligation of devoting all my efforts to making our state a better place for all of us.

The times call for decision, action and imagination.

Respectfully yours

American Jewish Congress Urges U. S. Support New African Nation

NEW YORK — The American Jewish Congress recently called on the Administration to support one of the new African states rather than the United Arab Republic for a non-permanent seat on the United Nations Security Council.

In a resolution, the national Governing Council of the Jewish Congress charged the U.A.R. with "intransigent and persistent defiance of the very United Nations Security Council to whose membership it now aspires." These actions, the American Jewish Congress statement declared, "preclude the election of the United Arab Republic to any post at which it will be charged with the preservation and promotion of world peace."

In urging that the U.S. throw its support for the non-permanent Security Council seat to one of the new African states in the United Nations, the AJCongress said such a move would "enhance the prestige of these new states and strengthen our own relationship with them." The resolution said this step would also "serve notice that member states cannot with impunity pursue a course of piracy and war-mongering" and would "uphold the principle that leadership in the United Nations must be entrusted only to those states whose actions clearly demonstrate a respect for international morality and the law of nations."

More than 100 American Jewish Congress leaders from various sections of the country attended the Governing Council meeting in Stephen Wise Congress House.

Expert Goes To Vienna On Nazi Victims' Claims

NEW YORK — Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, of New York, director of the World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs, has left for Vienna for meetings with the Austrian Government in an effort to conclude negotiations for the indemnification of Austrian Jewish victims of Nazism. About 80,000 persons all over the world are involved.

Earlier this month Dr. Robinson, who is the leading world authority on indemnification and restitution matters, accompanied Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the Committee for Jewish Claims on Austria, in meetings with Austrian Government leaders in New York.

For many years Dr. Goldmann and his colleagues in the Committee on Austria and the Executive of the World Jewish Congress have been pressing the Austrian Government for legislation to indemnify Austrian Jewish victims of Nazism in the same way as the German Federal Republic.

Last spring Dr. Goldmann met with the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor and other Austrian Ministers and received assurances that during the summer the necessary leigslation would be enacted. This undertaking was not kept and the matter was recently reopened when Dr. Goldmann headed a delegation that met with the Austrian Foreign and Finance Ministers in New York.

A memorandum with detailed demands was submitted to the Ministers who promised to do all in their power to ensure passage of the necessary legislation within the next few months. The detailed demands presented will be the basis of Dr. Robinson's negotiations with the Austrian Government.

Joseph Jacobson

Jacobson Honored Bz National Committee

Industrial National Bank's Joseph Jacobson, vice president, who has contributed much to the growth and expansion of Consumer Credit on a national basis as well as locally, was one of two Rhode Island bankers honored this month by the National Committee for the 50th anniversary of Consumer Credit in Commercial Banks.

Mr. Jacobson's banking career began in 1922 and he has been active in Consumer Credit for more than thirty years. He is responsible for Industrial National's many "firsts" in Consumer Credit Banking.

In 1949, he started an Indirect Automobile Financing Plan which has since become the largest of its kind in Rhode Island.

He was a member of the Installment Credit Commission, A.B.A. from 1951-54. While he was a member, this Commission inaugerated the Advisory Board of which he has been a member since 1954. He has also been an active member of Robert Morris Associates for twenty years and on the Board of Governors 1959-60. In 1955, he was appointed a Discussion Leader to the National Installment Credit Conference and has served in that capacity every year since. He was President of the Rhode Island Association of Credit Men from 1953 to 1956 and on their Board of Directors for more than ten years.

Mr. Jacobson has served as a thesis examiner and consultant on Consumer Credit at the Stonier Graduate School of Banking, Rutgers University since 1955. He was graduated from this school in 1945. He also has been a member of the Installment Credit Panel, School of Banking, Williams College for the past three years.

NEED TRANSLATORS

JERUSALEM — Despite the strong impression made by the mass German Jewish immigration of prewar years on Israel's cultural, economic and social life, a mass shortage of German - Hebrew translators was revealed last week.

Most of those who have applied for positions as translators at the forthcoming trial of Nazi mass murder specialist Adolf Eichmann were found either wanting in knowledge of German, or too old to stand the strain of rapid-fire simultaneous translations.

Police have initiated a special course in which 16 younger Israelis are receiving training as German-Hebrew interpreters.

Foods To Remember

Here's an idea for an uncooked FRUIT CAKE we think you will like to make right now or tuck away in your recipe file for use at some special occasion. It looks and tastes like MORE! And so easy to mix up and store in your refrigerator, at least ten days before serving time.

UNCOOKED
FRUIT CAKE SUPREME

1 pound seeded raisins, cut fine
1 pound pitted dates, unsugared, cut or diced fine
1 pound black mission figs, diced fine
1 pound walnuts, chopped fine after shelling
12 maraschino cherries, halved or quartered
Grated rind of 1/2 orange
Grated rind of 1 lemon
1/3 cup dark brown sugar, firmly packed
A dash of salt
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 cup thick orange juice, unstrained (or frozen kind)
3 tablespoons rum or brandy
1/4 cup fine dry cake crumbs, optional

Combine the prepared dried fruits, nuts, maraschino cherries and grated fruit rinds in a mixing bowl. Mix sugar, salt, spices and toss together with the first mixture until well coated. Add the orange juice and rum or brandy, mixing with two forks. Press this firmly into a loaf pan, 8 x 4 x 2 1/2 inch size, that has been greased with salad oil and lined with wax paper or aluminum foil. Press down and smooth over the top. Sprinkle with dry cake crumbs, press down again. Cover with aluminum foil and store in the refrigerator about 10 days before unmolding. May be garnished with pecan halves, cut maraschino cherries or just dusted with confectioners' sugar a few minutes before serving. Remove the top covering, place a flat serving plate over, and holding plate and filled pan firmly together, turn deftly. The cake will come out easily. Remove the wax paper or foil lining and decorate or dust with sugar. Slice down into 1/4 inch slices, then lengthwise 2 or 3 times.

LONG TERM UNEMPLOYMENT STAYS HIGH

Nearly one-fourth of the 3,400,000 jobless in the U. S. today have been without jobs for 15 weeks or longer and thus qualify for the spine-chilling classification of "long-term unemployed."

Even though unemployment fell in September and by following the usual seasonal pattern, helped relieve fears that we already might be in a major business downturn, the number of long-term jobless held at above 800,000 for the fourth consecutive month. This total is 100,000 higher than at this time a year ago, it is double the level of September 1957 -- when the economy was just sinking into the 1957-58 recession. And dominating the long-term unemployed are men 45 years and over, non-whites, the unskilled.

It doesn't take much imagination to translate these statistics into terms of a family. There may be dozens of reasons a worker is jobless for a couple of weeks or so and most can manage this without becoming impoverished. But when a breadwinner has been out of work three months, four months, a half-year or more, the reasons aren't superficial and the anguish of his family is very real.

These 800,000 are long-term unemployed because the areas in which they work are in an economic decline -- losing industries and factories, not gaining sufficient replacements. They are long-term jobless because of fundamental changes in our economic structure and technological advances- -and their jobs have been wiped out, probably forever in the places where they live. They are long-term unemployed because they are unskilled in an economy which is placing a rising premium on skills.

Booms do not empty these pools of jobless, and in recessions the plight of the areas and workers gets much worse.

"We must be realistic about this problem," emphasized Dr. Seymour Wolfbein, the Labor Dept.'s Manpower Chief, in a private talk about the unemployment picture. "What is needed is a dignified and meaningful pathway for these people to make moves to new jobs and locations. What is needed is a dignified and meaningful pathway for distressed communities to regain economic strength."

"Dignified and meaningful" are the key words in Wolfbein's urgent plea for recognition that Federal Government aid for retraining and relocating workers is imperative if we are to begin solving the problem of our chronically unemployed. "Let's be realistic on this too," he declared several times. "You can't go into a community and tell a family to 'get out!' or order the community's leaders to revive themselves. They need help and it must come in part from Federal assistance."

For a whole decade, our Congress has been considering proposals for distressed area legislation. The basic principles are endorsed by both parties and now by both Presidential candidates. The results to date of all the proposals have been zero.

At the last session of Congress, President Eisenhower originally submitted an area assistance bill calling for $53 million of Federal aid. The Democratic-controlled Congress rejected it, passed a bill calling for $251 million of assistance in loans and grants. Eisenhower vetoed that bill, submitted another calling for $180 million of aid. Congress buried that one, and now the Presidential campaign is on.

We are going to grow in ways demanding more skilled workers, wiping out many more factory jobs, creating new pools of jobless.

We must help the "victims" of our way of growth retrain, relocate. We must give the distressed areas the spur that will put them back on their financial feet. We dare not shrug off hundreds of thousands of people and vast regions as on the scrap heap and unworthy of help!

How much longer can we fail to recognize that here are problems that go to the heart of our economic society and human needs?

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra

BY BERYL SEGAL

Mrs. Gertrude M. Hochberg, Chairman of Public Relations for the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra in Providence, writes in her letter to me:

"This particular 'Israel export' does engage me. Some countries have nothing but a Khrushchev to export."

This was written under the impression of the shoe-pounding antics which the Soviet leader displayed in the United Nations assembly. It was fresh in her mind and she made the comparison. But her letter made me discard all the lines I thought of writing on the Israel Philharmonic concert in Providence, and think of the significance of her words.

The cultural export of Israel. Here is a country the size of our New Jersey, a principal city the size of our own Providence, and in a part of the world where you have to watch your step lest you cross the border into enemy territory. Here is a country, in a word, that has the right to be primitive, to concentrate on saving lives of its citizens, to think of nothing but bread and butter, and shelter, and defence. But to have an orchestra and to export it, that is a miracle.

But then it would not be Israel.

Egypt, the biggest of the countries in the mid-east, has no Philharmonic. Saudi Arabia, the richest of them all, has none. Lebanon, the most enlightened of them all, has none to speak of, even less to export. There is nothing like it in Jordan and in Yemen.

No wonder the Israel export engages people.

It has engaged Mr. Louis Biancholli, music critic of the New York World Telegram and Sun, after listening to the concert of the Israel Philharmonic, to write:

"What was once described by an American diplomat as 'Israel's best ambassador abroad,' conveyed a heart-warming message of good will and culture at the Metropolitan Opera House last night.

"The ambassador in question was the celebrated Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, now observing its 25th anniversary with a seven week tour of 26 American, Canadian and Mexican cities. It was a welcome and stirring envoy to last night's crowd.

"It was obvious from the start last night that the Israel Philharmonic is one of the world's elect. It has the power, range and depth of greatness.

"It wasn't only a matter of technic. This group has more than enough of that. The strength and cohesion were those of an orchestra twice its age, as were its polish and mellow delicacy.

"But this orchestra has a vibrant expressiveness, too, a community sense of poetry, and a heart. You could feel it beating in Weber's 'Freischutz Overture,' Stravinsky's 'Firebird' and in Brahms First Symphony.

"How could one imagine a better orchestra for the two movements from a 'Psalm' suite by the young Israeli composer Naum Sheriff. Here was exotic music evoking a Biblical mood of awe and mystery. The performance was like a picture."

And Harriet Johnson, of the New York Post has used in her report of the concert, these words:

"The Israel Philharmonic may be the baby of the world's great orchestras, but in its cradle, the ensemble has acquired exemplary discipline. The orchestra has been a pivot of high artistry and good will, a constant affirmation in a storm center.

"The concert, conducted by the orchestra's Italian music director, Carlo Maria Giulini, was not only a gala musical event, but it made, so far as could be determined, box-office history. A benefit for the American Israel Cultural Foundation, which together with J. M. Kaplan Fund, is sponsoring the tour, it grossed $106,000. an all time high for any Carnegie or Met musical event."

The Journal-American's Miles Kastendieck expresses the same wonder and admiration in his critical remarks on the concert in New York:

"Music-making of Ambassadorial rank ushered in the return of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra at the Metropolitan Opera House last night.

"That the youthful country of Israel has produced such a solid body of musicians was the important discovery nine years ago when the orchestra first played here. It proved itself a well-balanced, well-disciplined orchestra again last night."

Better words no one has ever read from the pens of music critics. Between the lines of these notes, one reads the constant astonishment;

"What is Israel doing with an orchestra like this? Countries bigger and more prosperous than Israel could not afford such a Philharmonic Orchestra."

But we know Israel. The country that does the impossible.

And we will also fill the Veterans Auditorium to its history-making capacity, as did the New Yorkers at the Metropolitan Opera House, and as do the Tel Aviv people in the Mann auditorium whenever the orchestra gives its concerts there.

Thursday, November 10, must be Israel Philharmonic night for all of us.

Sponsored by The General Jewish Committee of Providence, this concert, this Israel export, will be a delight to all of Providence.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

SHIELD: Rocky Marciano was at the Brasserie recently listening to friends discuss Sen. Kefauver's investigation of the fight racket. Marciano said that fortunately he could contribute nothing to the investigation -- because his manager, Al Weill, carefully had shielded him from all contacts with promoters, managers or matchmakers.

Marciano didn't know whether Weill was prompted by jealousy -- to make sure that nobody would interfere with his prized asset -- or because he wanted Marciano to remain untainted. Once Marciano reported to Weill that he had seen Jim Norris, the sports promoter, who had called him over to introduce him to--. Before Rocky could finish, Weill was on the phone to Norris, demanding to know why he'd talked to Marciano and the name of the other man.

Weill hung up, then turned to his charge and sought confirmation: "Did Norris call you over to meet Bernard Baruch?"..."Yes," said the Champ. "To meet Bernard Baruch."

COMEDY: Danny Thomas says that he learned much about comedy from his uncle, Anthony Simon, with whom he lived until his teenage years. "My uncle was so funny," said Thomas, "that he was barred from funerals."

RETIREMENT: Bob Hope spoke at the Burning Tree Country Club dinner for President Eisenhower. In referring to Eisenhower's imminent retirement to become a gentleman farmer Hope said: "A gentleman farmer; that's someone who buys the Sears-Roebuck catalog to read."

The Women In The Israel Philharmonic — Shown left to right, are Tel Aviv born violinist Edna Mitchell, 20-year-old cellist Hadassah Etzion, born in Petah Tikvah, Budapest-born harpist Klari Szarvas-Weissgerber, Warsaw Conservatorie gold-medallist Jehudith Urbach, and Jehudith Borochoff who plays viola and was born in Jaffa and whose husband sits in the first violins.

100-Man Orchestra Includes Five Women

NEW YORK — The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, which is now in the midst of a seven-week, coast-to-coast American tour under the auspices of the America-Israel Cultural Foundation, is decribed as a 100-man orchestra, but five of the "men" are women.

Two of them play the violin, one the viola, one the cello, and the fifth is the orchestra's harpist.

Hadassah Etzion, cello, is the youngest member of the orchestra, 20. Klari Szarvas, the orchestra's harpist, is a grandmother. All are deeply proud of their association with the Israel Philharmonic, which ranks as one of the great orchestras in the world.

They are excited about the orchestra's American tour, delighted with the "warm reception" they have received, and also a little homesick — all except Jehudith Borochoff, viola, who is traveling with her husband, one of the first violinists in the orchestra.

Three of the women were with the orchestra during its previous American tour in 1951, but for the two youngsters, Hadassah Etzion and Edna Mitchell, this is the first trip to the New World. Hadassah found it "a shock to see New York from so high," when she viewed the city from the Empire State Building. She was impressed by the luxury she found everywhere, "especially for the women." For Edna the visit to America is "a dream come true."

Hadassah Etzion has been with the orchestra for a year and a half.

LETTER OF APOLOGY

TO THE CITIZENS OF THE NINTH WARD OF PROVIDENCE

As many of you know, I am aspiring for a seat in the City Council of the city of Providence.

For the past two months, I have been busy ringing door bells in the 9th Ward, to acquaint myself with a great number of people, and to ask for support in being elected.

However, because of the time element, it is virtually impossible, physically, to cover the area that consists of approximately 12,000 people who are eligible to vote in this Ward.

To those of you whom I have not seen, may I express my sincere regrets, but I hope, nevertheless, that on Election Day you will give me your utmost consideration, and cast a vote for me.

To the very many kind people who have encouraged me to seek this office, I thank you for your confidence in me.

I trust that some day, very soon, I may have an opportunity to meet many more individuals personally in the official capacity as your Councilman from the 9th Ward in Providence.

Sincerely yours,
SAMUEL TIPPE

She is a sixth generation Israeli and comes from a non-musical family, but both her brother and she are professional musicans. He plays with the orchestra of the radio station in Jerusalem. Her first trip out of Israel was with the orchestra, when it played in Greece and Cyprus last year and her response to her current travels with the orchestra is wide-eyed and enthusiastic. She was delighted when the orchestra spent four days in Paris, giving two concerts before coming on to the United States, and found Paris rich in atmosphere. When in New York, she took advantage of every opportunity to gawk at the sights like any tourist. She also took a busman's holiday attending a rehearsal of the New York Philharmonic.

Edna Mitchell, 21, is a violinist, born in Tel Aviv. She, too, has been with the orchestra for a year and a half, but last year while it was playing in Greece and Cyprus she was playing a solo concert tour in Greece. Her father, too, plays the violin but not professionally. She began to play the violin at the age of eight, and a few years later, when Yehudi Menuhin was in Israel, he heard her play and was much impressed with her promise. When she was fifteen, he and Professor Max Rostal provided her with a scholarship under Rostal's tutelage in London. A prize-winning student at the Guildhall Academy of Music, she played a series of concerts on the Continent and later debuted in London.

Jehudith Urbach, violin, was a gold medalist at the Warsaw Conservatoire. She played with the Vilna, Warsaw, and Katowicz orchestras before Hitler's conquest of Poland. She came to Israel in 1947; joined the orchestra that same year. She is married and her husband works in Israel's Defense Ministry. Mrs. Urbach is convinced that the Israel Philharmonic is "a very great orchestra," and she has been delighted with its policy of retaining the world's great maestros as guest conductors. Playing under the baton of such leaders as Sir John Barbirolli, Leonard Bernstein, the late Serge Koussevitsky, Dimitri Mitropoulos, Charles Munch and Eugene Ormandy, is a broadening experience, she says. "You have to learn to be adaptable." She is deeply gratified by "the very warm feeling" that the orchestra has aroused on its American tour so far, but misses her husband back in Israel.

Mrs. Jehudith Borochoff, viola, is the only woman member of the orchestra without any pangs of homesickness, since her husband is also a member of the orchestra. A native born Israeli, she and he have both played with the orchestra for eighteen years. He comes from Russia; they met when they both were studying in Paris years ago, and their joint interest in music and comon experience in playing for the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra gives them a unique kind of life.

Klari Szarvas, who was born in Budapest, has been the Israel Philharmonic's harpist for the twenty-two years that she has been in Israel. Her visit to America will give her an opportunity to see her married daughter who lives in California. She described her visit to New York as a "homecoming," too, since it provided a reunion with old friends.

The Israel Philharmonic will play in 26 cities of the United States, Canada and Mexico during its current visit, and then go on to Japan and India before returning to Israel. It will play in Providence this Thursday at the Veterans Memorial auditorium.

Tomorrow promises an abundance of goods to fill the needs of an expanding and employed population. Today, all Americans pray for world peace to achieve these goals.

The future is here—the opportunity is now.

Our country, the world, demands a man who can provide imaginative and aggressive leadership. Woodrow Wilson was one such man. Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman were such men.

We, the undersigned, urge you to restore America to this great tradition!

A Cheap Game

With South the dealer at game all the bidding went:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	Pass	Dble
Redble	Pass	Pass	Pass

West's final pass shows values sufficient to entertain hopes of defeating the contract. This is a logical interpretation for otherwise South would always be able to escape a penalty with a bluff redouble.

West led the jack of spades, on which East played the queen, and declarer won with the ace. He followed this with ace and another diamond. East won with the queen of diamonds and continued with the king of spades and a third spade, to which declarer followed. This was the moment for West to take stock of the situation. The spade and diamond suits were known to divide 4-3-3-3, and declarer was obviously trying to develop the long diamond. If East held the queen of hearts and declarer the king, then a heart lead might present the declarer with a trick. There was no combination, however, whereby a club lead could give a trick, and since declarer's shape was almost certainly 3-3-4-3 a club lead could well devolop a trick for the defense. A club switch, therefore, was clearly indicated if West had troubled to work things out. Unfortunately he was too idle to do that; instead, declining to "open a new suit for declarer" he continued with a third diamond. East won with the king and led the jack of clubs. South covered with the queen and West played the four. And that was another mistake. The four, it is true, was a come-on of sorts, for West did hold the three. But there is an old maxim which says that when encouraging a lead one should use the biggest card one can afford. It would have been applied to good purpose here.

After winning the queen of clubs South cashed the thirtenth diamond, West and East both discarding small hearts. Declarer continued with a small heart, the ten losing to East's queen. Up to this point East had done very well, unblocking in spades by covering his partner's lead and in clubs by leading an honor. He ought, however, to have realized that his partner now had only one heart left and must have a long club, and that in any event if South had the ace, ten of clubs, he would be able to force a club lead. Unfortunately the one fact that had registered was that his partner had played a small club on the first lead. East therefore returned a second heart, on which declarer played the king. West was obliged to win and dummy's heart entry enabled declarer to make the long spade for the seventh trick.

"How could I tell?" was West's lament, and the answer—as so often—would have been provided by a little thought. If West switches to a club at the first opportunity, declarer has to guess the heart correctly to go one and not two down. As it was, a muddled defense allowed him to escape with a cheap game.

FIND SEAL

JERUSALEM — A seal impression depicting a man fighting a lion, which may have been the seal of Bar Kochba, was found by the archeological expedition which last winter discovered in a Dead Sea cave the archives of the Jewish freedom fighter, who led the rebellion against the Romans in the Second Century C.E., it was reported by Prof. Yigael Yadin, who was in charge of the expedition. Prof. Yadin made the disclosure in an address at the closing session of the annual conference of the Israel Exploration Society.

Professor Yadin, who was formerly Chief of Staff of the Israel armed forces, told the conference that the impression was found on a clay fragment.
