Temple Emanuel Plans 'Evening Of The Arts'

The showing of his wood sculptures by Nehemiah Mark will be the main feature of the Temple Emanuel "Evening of the Arts" which will be held on Wednesday. Mr. Mark will discuss his work and the religious and historical significance of its subject matter in a lecture at 9:30 P. M.

Temple Emanuel presents its "Evening of the Arts" biennially and through it provides an opportunity for members affiliated with the temple to exhibit products of their talents. The general exhibit will take place in the temple Meeting House from 7:30 to 9:30 P. M. and will include the work of approximately 40 local artists in painting, ceramics, wood carving, mobiles, mosaics and photography.

In addition, the Temple Museum will have its most complete showing of religious art objects, and throughout the Meeting House special floral arrangements by the temple Te-Enah Garden Club will be shown. The public is invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Wattman are co-chairmen in charge of arrangements for the evening, and their committee includes Louis B. Rubinstein, program co-ordinator; Mesdames Louis Horvitz, Barney Kramer, Mervin Bolusky and David Temkin, secretaries; Mrs. Leonard Chaset, treasurer; Gerald Schneider and Mrs. Louis B. Rubinstein, music; Harold Kelman, lighting; Mrs. Andrew Heyman, program artist; Mrs. Howard Schneider and Mrs. Herman Selya, sherry hour; Mrs. Milton Scribner, publicity, and Mrs. Abbott Lieberman, hostesses.

Educated as a Hebrew scholar and teacher in European Yeshivas, Mr. Mark has produced more than a thousand sculptures. He attempts to translate abstractions from Jewish lore into visual three dimensional presentations.

ASKS BAN ON BIAS

The Jewish Community Center of Providence will commemorate the Purim holiday with two days of special activities to be conducted at the South Side Center building, this Saturday and Sunday.

Activities for all age groups in the Center's membership have been included in the two-day calendar, which will commemorate not only the Purim holiday, but the National Jewish Music Festival and the centennial of Sholom Aleichem.

The program will start with a Purim Carnival on Saturday beginning at 7 P. M. A wide variety of game booths, stands and other special activities will be included with prizes for every participant.

and directors of the theater for twenty-five years. Well known as entertainers in this area, the Barenbaums will present special material dedicated to Purim, as well as the commemoration of the period of Sholom Aleichem. Also featured on Sunday's evening program will be a special musical presentation by Dr. Bernard Carp, Center executive director, and an authority in the field of Jewish music. One of the founders of the National Jewish Music Council, Dr. Carp will present his special program in honor of the National Music Festival, which closes this Sunday evening. Holiday refreshments will be served at the end of the entertainment program.

Plans for the Center's Purim Celebration were developed under the co-direction of Mrs. Max Levin, chairman of the Children's Activities Committee; Raymond Cohen, chairman of the Youth Activities Committee; and Mrs. Herman Rosenberg and Mrs. Samuel Tippe, chairmen of the Adult and Special Activities Committee of the Center. Staff advisor to the program is Norman Saranovitz, Center Children's and Youth Activities director.

Mr., Mrs. Silverman To Be Honored At Award Dinner

Citizens of the Greater Providence area and friends from all parts of the country will gather Sunday evening at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel to honor Ida M. Silverman and Archibald Silverman for their 100 years of combined communal service.

The two leading Jewish citizens of Rhode Island will be the guests of honor at the annual Roger Williams Lodge, B'nai B'rith, award dinner, which starts with a reception at 6 P. M.

Avraham Harman, Israeli ambassador to the United States and a personal friend of Mrs. Silverman, will be present to pay tribute to the Silvermans.

Mrs. Silverman still fights for the two causes to which she has devoted her life — Zionism and Israel. She has traveled to all parts of the world and made more than 20 trips to Israel, as well as founding an international fund that has helped to build 44 synagogues in Israel.

Mr. Silverman, who last Friday observed his 80th birthday, has been a leader in the Providence community and local Jewish organizations and has been a staunch supporter of Zionism and Israel. He was the first president of the General Jewish Committee of Providence. A member of the State Board of Education, he has helped to promote better education, welfare and social programs in Rhode Island.

Letters Go Out For Annual Fund

The Third Annual United Moe's Chitim Fund of Greater Providence appeal letters have been mailed this week to some 6,000 Jewish residents in the greater Providence area. Edmund Wexler, campaign chairman, is hopeful that the campaign goal of $6,000 will be realized.

The United Moe's Chitim Fund of Greater Providence is a result of the merger of four organizations which heretofore conducted separate appeals. Besides Mr. Wexler, officers of the Fund include Dr. Nathan A. Bolotow, George Labush, Charles Oelbaum and Mrs. Samuel Sheffres, vice-presidents; Nathan E. Sklar, secretary, and John Newman, treasurer.

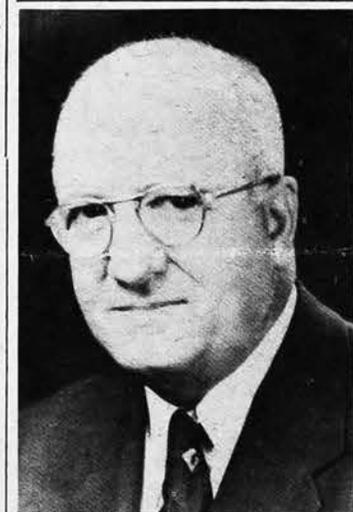

Mr. Wexler said that the only cost to the campaign is printing and mailing, as administrative assistance is offered by the staff of the Jewish Family and Children's Service.

Expect Ben Gurion To Seek Promise Of U. S. Support

JERUSALEM (Israeli Sector)—Premier David Ben-Gurion, during his visit to the United States is expected to seek a promise of support if Israel should be invaded.

He plans to present in broad terms a picture of encroachment by the Soviet Union in the Middle East. He hopes to elicit a pledge, in equally broad terms, that the United States will put its full weight behind the preservation of existing Middle Eastern frontiers.

In meetings with his defense and foreign policy advisers, the Israeli Premier has been laying out his line of approach in Washington on the assumption that he will be given appointments with President Eisenhower and Secretary of State (Continued on Page 3)

This week the column will turn to an outstanding social service group of girls. They are the Councilettes, the junior division of the Council of Jewish Women. The officers are Joan Nathan, president; Joan Leven, first vice-president; Abby Elkins, second vice-president; Joyce Sydney, third vice-president; Gail Lisker, recording secretary; Sandy Shapiro, treasurer, and Enid Mellion, corresponding secretary.

The Councilettes have won numerous awards for their outstanding community service. One of these, a plaque from the Tuberculosis League, was presented for their daily assistance, which amounted to over 400 hours. For service to other charitable organizations such as the John Hope Settlement House, General Jewish Committee, United Fund, Rhode Island Mental Health, and numerous others, the girls received a National Award from the Parents' Magazine.

The Councilettes are also very active socially. They will sponsor their annual dance at Temple Beth El on Orchard Avenue on Saturday, March 12. They are sponsoring a Folk Festival at Temple Emanuel featuring the Bravados from R. I. S. D. This will be April 24. All are welcome.

A Reminder: There will be a meeting of the City Wide Jewish Youth Council on Tuesday, March 15. All delegates are asked to attend this important meeting.

chanting of the Megillah (the Book of Esther) will be done by Cantor Jacob Hohenemser. Services will be conducted by Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen.

$75,000 TO PLANT TREES

TOMS RIVER, N. J. — A retired New England industrialist who died at a Lakewood resort hotel on Jan. 17 left a bequest of $75,000 for the planting of trees in Israel.

The bequest was one of several made by Abraham Serlin, whose will was admitted to probate last week in the Ocean County Surrogate's office here. The trees are to be planted near Jerusalem in a memorial forest.

tary of State Christian A. Herter. Mr. Ben-Gurion's visit will be a private one. He has been invited by Brandeis University to accept an honorary doctorate in a ceremony at the campus in Waltham, Mass.

Details Still Uncertain

Because of this, and because there has been no official statement from the White House while President Eisenhower has been away on his South American tour, political circles in Jerusalem have been reluctant to give details of the Premier's plans for his week-long stay in the United States.

Moreover, the politicians who know him best regard Mr. Ben-Gurion as a man of impulse and headlong energy with an abiding trust in his own counsel. To state his plans, they say, is not to forecast his actions.

But plans have been made, nonetheless. Mr. Ben-Gurion is to state in general terms the role the Soviet Union has assumed in the Middle East, the contempt for Israel that its record seems to show and the money and arms it is providing for the United Arab Republic.

Then, without dwelling on his grievances against the United Arab Republic and without recounting his distaste for the attentions the United States has been paying President Gamel Abdel Nasser of late, Mr. Ben-Gurion hopes to draw from the President a forceful statement of where the United States fits into this picture of Soviet activity.

The Israeli Premier would be happy with an assurance that the United States would supply Israel with enough of the right kind of weapons so that Israel could retain an edge over her Arab neighbors, at least in quality and performance of weapons.

He would be happier with some sort of mutual defense treaty or with an assurance that the United States would be drawn into defending Israel in case of an Arab attack.

Previous Bid Unsuccessful

But the Israeli Premier is too much of a realist to ask for either weapons or a treaty from the United States. The Israelis have tried for one or the other several times in their nation's short history, never with any success.

A third possibility that would be in Israel's interest and one the Israelis are banking on, would be a restatement in any form of the tripartite declaration of 1950. In that declaration the United States, Britain and France promised to take action with or without the United Nations to prevent the violation of any Middle Eastern frontiers.

Not many Arab politicians continue to take the declaration seriously, especially since the French and British invaded Suez in 1956. Last month President Nasser said in a speech at Damascus that the old pledge was "dead and buried."

The Israelis think it would be very much alive if the United States would only say so. Mr. Ben-Gurion will work on this prospect also in London and Paris on his return trip to Israel.

But the most difficult task for the Israeli Premier, as his advisers see it, will be to get the United States to make a new pledge or join Britain and France in a renewal of the old one.

In a recent match two interesting slam contracts were well made by lady players. South was playing in 6D on the following hand, with North-South vulnerable and South the dealer:

The bidding went:

West led the jack of spades. South took it in dummy and played two rounds of trumps, dropping the queen. She then played her ace of spades and learned the bad news about that suit. She led a small club to the king, played the king of spades and a small spade, and on East's winning spade she discarded her queen of hearts. This was now the position with East on play:

Re-arrest Two for Swastika Painting

NORWALK, Conn. — A pair of 22-year-old youths, arrested four weeks ago on charges of painting swastikas on Beth Israel Synagogue, were arrested again on an added charge and were freed on bail last week awaiting a Superior Court trial.

The two are Harold Fahy, University of Virginia graduate, and a friend, William Arnold of Milford, Pa., who is staying with Fahy during a visit here. Arnold is a native of Germany and has an American citizenship application pending. Both claimed the daubing was a prank. The new arrest on bench warrants contained a charge of injury to a public building.

Rep. Samuel Googel, Connecticut House majority leader, said that damage to a public building now carries a maximum $5,000 fine and 20 years in prison under a bill he introduced which was passed at the last Legislative session and signed into law by Gov. Abraham Ribicoff last June 11. The previous penalties had been a maximum fine and six months in jail.

At the other table declarer had to cope with a rather shaky 6H contract on the following hand:

North

- ♠—Q, J
- ♥—A, J, x
- ♦—A, 9, 8, x
- ♣—x, x, x, x

West

- ♠—x, x, x

South

West got off to a diamond lead. South played the ace in dummy and trumped a small diamond into her own hand. She then finessed the jack of hearts and trumped another diamond, which was over-ruffed by West. West played a spade, which South took in dummy, returning a trump which was won in her own hand with the king. South now entered dummy with the queen of spades, discarded a losing club on the ace of trumps, and returned to her hand with a club finesse. She then cashed her spades to make twelve tricks.

The key to this hand is to play for the queen of hearts to be right. Even with four hearts in West's hand, and even if West does not over-ruff the diamond, the contract is unbeatable.

Hammarskjold Issues Invitation To Ben Gurion

NEW YORK—The friendly tone of Secretary General Hammarskjold's invitation to Israeli Prime Minister Ben-Gurion is not escaping comment by UN observers, says Joseph P. Lash in a New York Post article.

Mr. Lash continues: The note of cordiality was particularly striking, sounded as it was a few days after a UN report had been especially critical of Israel for the rise in tension in the demilitarized zone south of Lake Tiberias.

But that rise in tension was preceded by President Nasser's rebuff to Hammarskjold on the subject of allowing Israeli cargoes to pass through the Suez Canal.

A high diplomatic source said yesterday he was still "jumpy" about the situation in the Middle East. He noted particularly the troop movements in the Sinai, and indicated he would not be surprised by the emergency of another Palestine crisis.

Hammarskjold in his invitation to Ben-Gurion asked him "to be his guest" adding he "would be pleased to be available for such discussions at the UN as Mr. Ben-Gurion would find useful and convenient."

Diplomats believe that Hammarskjold's public display of goodwill toward Ben-Gurion will be noted in Cairo as a further sign of UN displeasure—whether or not that was the UN chief's intention.

The Mideast scare headlines have subsided but the danger of an explosion remains.

It is understood that among other arrangements Hammarskjold plans a luncheon for Ben-Gurion.

Hammarskjold's gesture raises the question of what kind of reception the Israeli leader will get in Washington.

At his last news conference Hammarskjold intimated he would appreciate more support, especially from the great powers, of his efforts to calm both Israelis and Arabs.

▲ CHICKEN LIVER KNAIDLACH

2 tablespoons schmaltz or other shortening (or oil)
 1 medium size onion, diced fine
 2 slices Challah or other bread, diced and dried in oven or toasted

1/4 to 1/2 pound chicken livers, broiled and mashed or chopped
 Salt and pepper to taste

2 eggs
 1 tablespoon minced parsley, optional

Heat schmaltz or other shortening in a heavy frying pan and lightly brown the diced onion. Add bread cubes and stir 2 minutes, then add the mashed or chopped chicken liver, stirring lightly over moderate heat. Mas the mixture with a fork then add seasonings and stir in lightly beaten eggs and parsley. Turn off heat. If the mixture is too dry, add a little soup stock or hot water and mix well. Form into 1-inch balls in greased palm or drop from a teaspoon into boiling clear soup or water and let cook over moderate heat 10 minutes. If cooked in water, skim out with perforated spoon and return to frying pan. Drizzle with a little melted shortening and sprinkle lightly with fine crumbs. Slip under broiler flame to brown lightly and serve as a garnish for fried, broiled or boiled chicken that has been browned in a little shortening.

Yields 12 to 18 Knaidlach, depending on size.

Variation 1:

Knaidlach inch size can be browned in a little shortening and served as Forshpeisse. Just spear them on colorful plastic toothpicks and pass round to guests.

Here's a recipe you'll want to put to use frequently during the winter months when baking is a delight:

▲ DATE-NUT FILLED DESSERT PASTRY

2 cups all-purpose flour
 1 teaspoon salt

1/3 cup shortening (margarine)
 1/2 cup grated cheddar type cheese
 1/4 cup ice water

Sift together flour and salt into mixing bowl and cut in shortening with wire pastry blender or two knives till tiny pea size particles are formed. Stir in the grated cheese then add water a little at a time to form a ball of dough. Roll out on a floured board or cloth into a 13x9 inch rectangle and flute the edges if desired, like for pie crust, using fingers or a cutter.

FILLING:

1 cup pitted dates
 1/2 cup seedless raisins (light or dark)

1 cup cooked apple slices
 2 tablespoons lemon or orange juice

1/2 cup apple cider
 4 tablespoons rum or sherry
 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

1/8 teaspoon salt
 2 tablespoons melted shortening
 3 tablespoons sugar

1/2 cup chopped almonds or walnuts
 1/4 cup same nut halves for topping

Combine dates, raisins, apple in a bowl and add the liquids. Let stand 10 minutes before stirring in remaining listed ingredients except the nuts for topping. Place the prepared rolled and scalloped pastry on a cookie sheet or in a shallow baking pan of required size and spread the filling along center lengthwise allowing the pastry around filling to be wide enough for turning up on all four sides toward center. Leave an exposed part of filling to be garnished with the cut prepared nuts. Brush pastry with lemon or orange juice or evaporated milk for a glossy baked finish. Bake 15 to 18 minutes at 425 deg. F., brush again with the liquid used and return to oven for 12 to 15 minutes additional baking till golden brown. This pastry is excellent served freshly baked, cut into slices just before serving time. Or, reheat at 400 deg. F for 10 minutes after slicing and separating portions.

Brandt Says German Youth Is Insurance Against Nazism

WEST BERLIN — Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency last week that its democratic youth is Germany's insurance against a resurgence of Nazism.

The mayor said the recent anti-Semitic outbreaks were not the result of an organized plot but the work of two types—"people still blinded by Nazism, or just plain hooligans, mischief-makers and crackpots." He insisted there was no "political significance whatever" in the outbreaks.

"The fact that the same things happened elsewhere," he said, discussing the epidemic of swastikas, "does not excuse us. What happened here must be regarded more seriously because one thinks immediately of the Hitler period."

Proud of Berlin's Youth

In West Berlin, Mayor Brandt said, the authorities were able to take effective action because "we had the support of the people, of the entire population and, particularly, I am proud to point out, of the youth." He added, however, that prompt punishment of the culprits was not enough.

"What we can expect, and demand," said Mayor Brandt, "is that we must all be aware that Nazism and its attendant anti-Semitism must not arise again. We must be aware and we must take action. We must improve our courts. What we faced does not indicate, even indirectly, a rebirth of Nazism. But it is a warning we must take to heart, and it is a call to preventive action."

Asked whether he favored new legislation to prevent a resurgence of anti-Semitism, Mayor Brandt said:

"I do not oppose such legislation. But I think that, perhaps this is not the most useful way to handle the problem. In fact, such legislation might well place the wrong emphasis on a single element in our population.

'Laws Are on the Books'

We do not need to single out anyone for special protection from illegal acts. The laws are on the books now. They can be enforced. We showed that here in Berlin. What we need is more awareness and constant insistence on action in the direction of true democracy for all peoples."

In stressing his faith in democratic German youth, Mayor Brandt recalled the silent parade to protest anti-Semitism held in West Berlin by 40,000 youths.

Feels Children Must Be Imbued With Sense Of 'Terrible Past'

NEW YORK — Frau Annedore Leber, whose husband was hanged by the Nazis for complicity in the July, 1944, plot against Hitler, is convinced that West Germany's children must be imbued with a sense of "the recent terrible past."

But Frau Leber has found the problem of how to tell them delicate and difficult. Here for a month's lecture tour before business, labor and academic groups, she described in a recent interview how she played the role of gadfly of the West German conscience, according to a New York Times article by Morris Kaplan.

Invited to address a German junior high school group, she was questioned by a 16-year-old boy whose father had died as one of Hitler's Storm Troopers.

"How do I tell him the truth?" she asked. "Do I have the right to destroy absolutely the image of his father for him? It is a difficult problem for him, don't you think so? It gives you a picture of the tragedy of post-war Germany."

She Uses Pictures

In such situations, Frau Leber seeks to solve the problem "indirectly" by displaying photographs of the Hitler era.

"I had a series of slides," she explained, "pictures of men in the resistance movement, of prisoners at the continuous political trials, of their appearances before judges of the so-called People's Courts, showing their attitudes."

"The pictures as a whole," Frau Leber said, "give an impression of terror inherent in the Hitler sys-

Cannot Halt Distribution Of Nazi Literature

WASHINGTON — The District of Columbia commissioners last week received a ruling that they are not empowered to halt distribution of pro-Nazi, anti-Semitic hate literature on downtown streets.

The ruling came from the District of Columbia Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray. It pertained to inflammatory anti-Jewish handbills handed out here by George Lincoln Rockwell's "American Nazi Party." Mr. Gray said that while the Nazi literature is offensive, insulting and abusive, it is not obscene and does not violate District of Columbia libel laws. The Rockwell literature urges "the gas chamber" for American Jews.

The Nazi party serves printed notice that it intends to "establish an International Jewish Control Authority . . . to make a long-term scientific study to determine if the Jewish virus is a matter of environment, and can be eliminated by education and training, or if some other method must be developed to render Jews harmless to society."

Would Establish Tribunal

The Nazis also would "establish an international treason tribunal to investigate, try, and publicly hang, in front of the Capitol, all non-Jews who are convicted of having acted consciously as fronts for Jewish treason or subversion." Under the Nazi program, all debts owed Jews by non-Jews would be "canceled." Adolph Hitler is hailed as "the gift of an inscrutable providence."

After studying such material, the District of Columbia legal authorities concluded it was not obscene.

tem. It shows in the faces of the policemen guarding the prisoners, in their indifference to what was going on, in their blank expressions."

"I try to explain," Frau Leber remarked, "that there are moments when one must follow one's conscience, when you cannot look away. The men who resisted were not heroes, but human beings and the youngsters come to know that we should not look away and evade."

"True, I could not speak with the young man, but I did answer indirectly by showing those pictures."

Frau Leber was asked about the younger generation's participation in recent outbreaks of anti-Semitism and neo-Nazism in West Germany?

"There are various reasons," she said. "A few people are crazy, mad, those who will never learn. It is difficult with young people. They make sensational headlines. Why, one of them said that Hitler was antiquated, that Horst Wessel was his ideal. The whole thing is absolutely senseless."

Horst Wessel, who died in the early days of the Hitler regime, was the central figure of a popular Nazi song.

Frau Leber noted that of the 4,000,000 West German youths in the age bracket 16 to 25, a scant 2,300, it has been estimated, belong to neo-Nazi groups. A Social Democrat since 1927, Frau Leber said:

"But we have a large democratic element and we should show the efforts of these democrats who continue to work in Germany and those people who basically have grappled intellectually or factually with their past"

Unlike many in the Weimar Republic after World War I, few persons today believe the legend that treachery, a "dagger in the back," caused Germany's surrender.

Frau Leber arrived here last month at the invitation of the Metropolitan Club, 122 East Sixty-sixth Street. Last Thursday night she was the guest at a reception of the American Jewish Committee. She is a member of the Society for Christian-Jewish Cooperation.

Her itinerary includes Washington, Philadelphia, Charlottesville, Va., Detroit, Kansas City, Mo., and Syracuse, N. Y. She will address trade, labor, academic and social groups.

A 56-year-old grandmother, Frau Leber has a married daughter and a son who is a medical student at the University of Edinburgh. She is an author, journalist and publisher of books emphasizing the sense of democratic responsibility in Germany.

"I have the title of a book I plan to write twenty years from now," she remarked with a smile. "It is 'A Little Black Dog's View of History.' You know, that little pesky animal, forever upsetting things."

STRESSES EDUCATION NEED

NEW YORK — The American Jewish community, which spends about $60,000,000 annually on formalized Jewish education for its youth "will get more value for each dollar and more dollars to meet rising educational needs when there is a better-informed adult generation intellectually sensitive to these needs," Label A. Katz, president of the B'nai B'rith, asserted this week.

For this reason, he said at a symposium sponsored here by the B'nai B'rith Commission on Adult Jewish Education, intensive programs of adult study were a "critical essential" for speeding up the progress and the quality of Jewish education in the United States.

ley will start to win again.

Turley and all the other Yankee pitchers suffered also under the most severe of handicaps — no runs to work with. The team was shut out so regularly it was monotonous. The hitters failed completely and dismally to back up the hurlers. How then could the pitchers win ball games? Duren, for instance, saved game after game, but wound up with a 1-6 record. Noted for his effectiveness over three or four innings, Ryne often would have to go five and six frames, and still get no runs to work with. Eventually, a single run in a brilliant performance would ruin him.

But Duren also kept the Yanks from finishing much lower than third with his spectacular streak of 40 innings without a run. When the opposition finally scored a run, it came on a mis-played fly ball that fell for a double.

Ditmar was terrific all year, but he won only 12 games because his mates gave away more runs than they scored when he was pitching. Ford had what was for him an off year, his worst in the majors; yet Whitey won only six games less than the league's best pitcher, Early Wynn; and Wynn had a fabulous defense working for him. Ford's record — 16-10. Ralph Terry hurled very well, but got no support.

So as the rest of the team bogged down, they dragged down the pitchers too; and that is the basis for my contention that the pitching was not bad in 59, that it shapes up well now, and that there is no need for a trade for another starter.

All winter long critics laughed at New York's plight, because of the announcements that Jim Coates was being counted on as a regular starter. This was taken to be a sign of the weakness of Yankee pitching. But did you follow Coates last year? On this miserable team, Jim lost only one game. He was good in relief and exceptional as a starter. Having been handicapped for the previous two or three years with a sore arm, this prize of the entire New York farm system came up at a bad time. Yet, when in August he was promoted to the starting line, he came up with four very fine complete games — all of them wins — in a row. Then, having proved himself, he was benched while the manager and coaches concentrated on other pitchers. So why the sneers at the prospect of Coates as a starter?

There is also Duke Maas, who has done very well on the occasions when he has been given regular work. And a highly rated southpaw rookie, Ed Short. Nope — if the Yankees continue to lose in 1960, it will not be in the main the fault of the pitchers.

The improved mental attitude of the entire team, and the competent defense that I expect, inevitably have to help the hurlers; which means that the Yankees should not logically be rated off their 1959 performance.

Before Yankee fans seize on this information to claim (and the non-Yankees to concede) the 1960 pennant, there is the small matter of the real, the genuine, and the ominous liabilities that might plague the club, and cost it dearly, in 1960. Some surprising opinions along those lines next week.

REMAINS AN INFLUENCE
ST. LOUIS — Dr. Max Beer, vice-president of the International League for the Rights of Man said here that the spirit of Hitler was still alive in West Germany and would remain an influence "as long as some of his former subordinates are members of the Bonn Government and as long as his judges and teachers dominate schools and court-rooms."

Speaking at a meeting of the Jewish Federation here, Dr. Beer said Hitler influence would continue also "as long as many Germans do not accuse him of having destroyed their country but accuse the foreign peoples and Jews whom he attacked."

The Yankees -- Are They Coming Or Going?

The problem of analyzing a fallen sports champion is a tantalizing one. Did the lordly one wither because of old age, because of a relentless deterioration, and will the drop from the heights continue to gain momentum? Or was the champ's tumble merely the effect of a special set of circumstances, which in themselves are not truly representative of its potential and actual ability?

This is the intriguing question that faces the entire baseball world, those who like and those who do not like the New York Yankees included. The man probably doesn't live who can forecast accurately and minutely how the team, and all its individual performers, will go this year, especially in the face of the higher level of competition that has come to exist in the American League.

That the Yankees have serious liabilities — or at least, potentially serious liabilities — cannot be denied. In fact, this column is surprised that so many of these weaknesses have not been played up by those who profess to believe the team is through as a winner. We'll get to that later.

However, I also think that many of the Yankees' better publicized weak spots are being magnified. Last week, I pointed out that in the departments of spirit (more correctly, attitude) and defense, New York must figure to be much improved over last year's team. The third point in that analysis — pitching — now comes up for a look.

To those who remember how bad Yankee pitching was last year, or who have read endlessly how bad it was, and how the front office itself still admits it needs another front line pitcher, what follows here may sound incredibly naive, even senseless. It goes against the expressed opinions of several of the top minds in the American League.

The radical statement is simple: First, I firmly feel that there was nothing wrong with the New York staff last year, that the mound corps was badly and mistakenly maligned; second, that this year's Yankee pitchers may easily be the finest unit in the league; third, that the need for another proven starter is really an optical illusion.

Right away, I can hear the disbelievers snorting in concert: All right, wise guy, what about Bob Turley — was his performance an optical illusion?

Glad you asked, chum; for in Turley we tackle the problem head-on.

Last year Turley was the World Series hero; and he toured the country on the banquet circuit, picking up an approximate $25,000 en route. I asked Bob about that when he spoke at the Words Unlimited awards affair, and he said he had been careful about his diet, and anticipated no difficulty. He confidently predicted another big year.

Then the season started, the team floundered, and the wins didn't come. Some said Turley had lost his fast ball. However, you couldn't prove that by the Washington Senators on the day early in May when the right hander had them shut out on two hits in the eighth inning and led 2-0. Then with two men on and one out, the batter hit a double play grounder to short, and Turley started for the dugout. But Tony Kubek bobbled the ball, then threw it away; and the play wound up with two runs in and the batter on third. A fly ball delivered him, and Turley lost the game 3-2.

This game is detailed because it is typical of what happened to the Yankees' pitchers so many times last year, to Turley and the others. The leaky defense, more than the failures of the pitchers themselves, made New York's hurling picture look so bad. Invariably, the club lost extra inning games, either because of sloppy defensive work, and/or because the rest of the team simply could not produce runs. The combination was deadly.

Some pitchers kept going doggedly in the face of this disaster, Ford, Ditmar and Duren among them. But Turley was the World Series hero. He was desperately anxious to look good; and each time he failed to win, whether he had looked good, so-so, or downright bad, he became more anxious, pressed a little more, and started to worry. It is not an uncommon phenomenon; such a fate has often befallen top pitchers.

Turley admitted in mid-season that he was unable to forget the 1959 World Series, that he was extremely conscious of trying to live up to his reputation. Even before the true extent of his disaster had become known, he acknowledged that he was pressing, and could do nothing about it.

My argument now is that with a decent defense behind him, and the pressure completely off, except for the doubts in the minds of some that he can come back. Turley

NO INFLATION AHEAD

By doing just about everything wrong, we might be able to set off another inflationary upsurge in our country this year or next, but it would be awfully hard to do. It would take almost suicidal genius on the part of big business and organized labor.

Instead of inflation, the whole economic-financial-world trade-background today points to a cycle of reasonable price stability. This would mean your cost of living will rise gently during this year of business expansion due primarily to the relentless uptrend in the cost of most home services, medical care, sales and property taxes, etc. It also would mean, though, that steady to lower prices in food and many major hard and soft goods will help to offset the increases and the degree of climb in your cost of living will be kept to a crawl.

Is the prospect for a modest price rise of a percent or two over a calendar year "inflation?"

It is not. If we are going to characterize every selective price rise as "inflation," we had better describe every selective price reduction as "deflation." We've developed a tendency during the postwar period of frontpacing every price boost, backpacing every price cut.

Is a gradually rising price trend in a cycle of strong business activity a key threat to the U. S. dollar's value?

It is not. The fact is that the big price hikes are taking place in the area of services--and we're feeling the impact on our pocketbooks, not only because of the price boosts themselves, but also because we're steadily increasing our use of the services. The fact is that food eaten at home costs 2 per cent less than a year ago, and the entire consumer "marketbasket" costs only 1.3 per cent more than at the start of 1959. The fact is that at the end of February, the general wholesale commodity-price level was at the lowest level since mid-1955--hardly suggesting an imminent breakout of inflation.

Is today's price trend comparable to the inflationary spurts that have plagued us from time to time since the end of World War II?

It is not. The price upsurges of the first postwar period and the Korean war phase were spurred by shortages of goods, buying sprees, the catch-up of wages and prices from the vacuum of the World War II years. None of these forces is dominant now.

Is a rising price level unusual in our history? It is not. Authoritative studies show that over the past 120 years in our land, prices have risen on average at the rate of 1 1/8 per cent a year. "Creeping" price rises are scarcely new.

Considering the built-in factors for price increases, a significant decline in our cost of living seems far too much to expect. And we certainly don't want to achieve this via a depression!

But just weigh these forces now working for reasonable stability: We are into a cycle of plentiful supplies in nearly every area, ample capacity to produce. Inflation feeds on scarcity, not abundance.

We are into a cycle of a balanced budget and quite likely a fat budget surplus. Inflation feeds on budget deficits, not surpluses.

We are into a cycle of the fiercest competition among our own industrialists and from foreign producers in modern times. The flood of foreign imports of competitive price and quality is a great new force operating to keep a lid on prices of goods manufactured here. Inflation feeds on lack of competition, not a mounting struggle among makers and sellers of goods for a share of our spending dollar.

We are into a cycle of rising efficiency of production by machines and manpower. Inflation feeds on inefficiency, not greater efficiency.

"We are a remarkable people," said McGraw-Hill's chief economist, Dexter M. Keezer, the other day, and even in these circumstances, we may be able "to float a lot of inflation. But I doubt it." I doubt it, too.

that his membership application be held up, because, if he joined the Negro Alliance, he feared he might be the stumbling block to the desegregation of the (white) Ministerial Association.

Well, when the Ministerial Association desegregated, the Negroes went over in a body to the white association--leaving Cahill, the Unitarian, out on a limb, all alone, the first white man in history to be segregated by both white and Negroes.

With such experiences in his background, you would think that the Reverend Mr. Cahill would be a sad man. On the contrary, he's as happy as a mouse in a cookie jar.

"For 2c Plain"

By HARRY GOLDEN

The Reverend Mr. Cahill

• THE REVEREND MR. CAHILL

Let me tell you about the life and times of my friend, the Reverend Edward A. Cahill, former minister of the Charlotte Unitarian Church, now of Atlanta.

Thinking about the Reverend Mr. Cahill, it occurs to me that maybe there should be an N.A.A.U.P.—National Association for the Advancement of Unitarian People.

In 1955, Cahill ran for a seat on the local school board. Cahill is a man who does not believe in lengthy political platforms. His had two planks:

1. Eliminate racial segregation.
2. Eliminate teaching of religion in the public schools.

That's all. Cahill, running in Charlotte, North Carolina, on that platform, was like the Senegalese prize fighter, Battling Siki, who once fought Mike McTigue in Dublin, Ireland, on Saint Patrick's Day. The result here was similar to that achieved by Mr. Siki.

In the campaign, one group circulated a petition which declared among other things that the signers were "opposed to any man or woman for public office who denies the deity of Jesus Christ." A letter accompanying the petition said: "We must pray for the Reverend Edward A. Cahill, the Unitarian minister, that he may repent of his unbelief, be converted, and come to the saving knowledge...."

In addition, a chain-telephone campaign was conducted against him. Cahill received 843 votes out of some 9,391 cast. We expected at least 2,500 votes, but, in general, the white voters frowned on his racial platform and the Negroes turned him down on his number 2 plank.

In other words, Cahill was in wonderful shape. He wound up with the Unitarians and The Carolina Israelite.

That's not the only interesting thing that happened to Cahill while he served here.

Several years ago, his Charlotte church desegregated its fellowship and gave public notice to the effect that Negroes would be welcomed to membership. Not a single Negro applied.

But what is even more to the point is the fact that very few Negroes have become converts to Roman Catholicism, despite the fact that the Catholic Church has assumed a sort of religious leadership in the fight to implement the United States Supreme Court decision, and has desegregated most of its own institutions in the South.

In the main, the Negroes of the South (with the exception of lower Louisiana), belong to the several Protestant fellowships—Baptist, Methodist, Episcopalian and Presbyterian. There are, of course, independent sects as well as adherents to various fringe cults, notably the one led by Daddy Grace. The autonomy of the individual church organizations, aside from the spiritual benefits derived, is of great importance to the vast Negro memberships. The church is the outstanding social institution. It provides the Negro with the only opportunity for self-esteem and self-expression. The Negro is a truck driver, his wife is a domestic, but over the weekend they are deacons, stewards, elders, communal leaders, readers, Sunday School teachers and choir directors.

The open forum discussions of the Unitarian Church and the Mass of the Catholic Church cannot, for a long time to come, offer an equal opportunity for individual and family status.

However, my good friend Cahill had an exploratory luncheon with a Negro right before he was called to Atlanta.

But, historically, the final incident here that I associate with Cahill is by far the most significant.

The Mecklenburg County Ministerial Association (Charlotte) voted to desegregate its organization. They invited the Negro clergymen to join the organization on an equal basis. The Ministerial Association desegregated "racially" but did not desegregate "theologically," and the rabbi, the Roman Catholic priest and the Unitarian minister (what a parlay) are still not eligible for membership.

All this time the Negro clergymen had their own association, the Negro Ministerial Alliance, and they had ONE white applicant. You guessed it. The Reverend Mr. Cahill, the Unitarian. But Cahill asked

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Anniversary Of A Book

BY BERYL SEGAL

A little over a year ago, Yale University published the Midrash on Psalms by Dr. William G. Braude, Rabbi at Temple Beth El. At the time we read the articles by Rabbi Eli Bohnen in the Herald, and by Israel Kapstein in the Providence Journal about the two volumes. There was also a review in the Providence Visitor of the books.

Now, a year later, we have a file of all the articles and reviews that appeared in English. The file is imposing. There are 23 larger and smaller reviews in all. There may be more in the length and breadth of the English speaking world.

Let us see what some of them have to say about the Midrash on Psalms.

Dr. Solomon B. Freehof writes in "American Judaism:"

"If a modern reader will read the illuminating Introduction and then bring to the text a slow and meditating reading or sampling, he will be able to absorb both the style and the spirit of the ancient Jewish Sermonic literature.

"Rabbi Braude has...succeeded in capturing the mood as well as the spirit of the original.

"We sometimes despair of making our classic literature available to modern readers. The cultural and linguistic difficulties are too great. But now that the spirit of one of our classic works has been so well carried over into English, we feel more hopeful that others will also be adequately translated. Thus 'Thou hast comforted us, William Braude, thou hast comforted us.'"

A most wonderful review from America's dean of liberal Rabbis. And Rabbi Israel H. Levinthal writes:

"The work shows great scholarly skill, and represents profound research into the rabbinic text.

"Rabbi Braude displays a real gift in revealing in correct language this deeper meaning which the Rabbis in the original text had in mind.

"Rabbi Braude has rendered a great service for us in translating in beautiful English the entire Midrash on Psalms.

"The work shows great scholarly skill."

Paul Vishney, after surveying the whole literature which has come down to us in the form of Midrashim, concludes:

"Rabbi Braude has done a superb job of presenting the original text in the contemporary idiom, while preserving its essential meaning.

"Scholar and layman alike will appreciate the effective manner in which Rabbi Braude has succeeded in handling a most trying task."

Rabbi Robert Gordis writing in "Midstream" says:

Dr. Braude has thoroughly achieved his goal of a readable text which remains faithful to the letter and the spirit of the original.

"His felicitous style makes his work a significant contribution to classic Jewish literature in English, worthy of the highest praise."

The same sentiments are echoed by Mordecai Kramer in "Heritage" when he writes that the translation of Rabbi Braude: "...is one of the most delightful pieces of Jewish scholarship to be added to English Judaica in a long while."

The Journal of Conservative Judaism says of the work that:

"There is never the feeling of labored language. An obviously fine hand at English, Dr. Braude rearranges subject and predicate clauses with the result; he ends up with a good English sentence without distorting the original Hebrew and Aramaic."

And to end the quotations, we will bring two sentences from the review of Eisig Silbershlag who writes in the Journal of Jewish Education:

"Rabbi Braude set out to achieve a readable and faithful translation of a Semitic text in non-Semitic idiom. But he accomplished a feat which approximates a masterpiece."

And that masterpiece sold entirely in the first edition, and another edition is now being prepared.

Congratulations, Rabbi Braude.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

THE DECORATIONS: William Wyler, who directed "Ben-Hur," is in N.Y. now to start his year's rest after the arduous movie job. The other day he was in the Oak Room, where a friend noticed his Legion of Honor ribbon. Wyler told how he won the French decoration:

A few years ago, he dined in Paris with Rene Clair, the French director, who noticed the rosette in Wyler's lapel. No, Wyler told him, it was not the Legion of Honor; it was one of the several decorations he'd won for his war-time services in the Air Force. "You mean," asked Clair, "you don't have the Legion of Honor?" Clair made a note in his memo book. Months later the French Consul in L. A. phoned Wyler, to notify him of the honor.

Wyler gave the customary champagne party for the ceremonies. The Consul presented him with the Legion of Honor, kissed his cheeks and beamed with pride. "By the way," Wyler asked him, "what's it for?" The Consul shrugged: "I don't know."

Wyler also has a decoration from the Italian government. It started when he was offered the job of directing "Roman Holiday" for Paramount. He said he'd do it, only on condition that he could make the movie in Rome. Y. Frank Freeman, head of Paramount, said it would have to be filmed in Hollywood, and promised that the sets would be faithful reproductions. "You can't reproduce the Colosseum," Wyler insisted. "In Rome—or I don't take the job."

Freeman couldn't find another suitable director, and reluctantly agreed to have "Roman Holiday" filmed in Rome. The movie was a boon to Italian tourism. And then the Paramount Studios, and gave Wyler a decoration: Italy's Star of Solidarity, Second Class. Then he gave Y. Frank Freeman, Italy's Star of Solidarity—First Class.

THE COMEBACK: In 1922, Ben Hecht wrote a play, "The Egotist," and sold it to Leo Dietrichstein, the Middle European actor who presented it in California. Hecht mentioned the play to Rose Caylor, a newspaperwoman and aspiring actress. On his advice, she went to California to try for a role in the show. Then Hecht re-read his script, and realized most of the scenes called for passionate kissing. The star was a wolf, and Hecht was in love with Rose Caylor. He wired her to come back. Thus ended her acting career.

Rose Caylor married Ben Hecht. They have a 16-year-old actress daughter, Jenny. A few weeks ago, Jenny was offered the role of Laurel in Enid Bagnold's "The Chalk Garden," with Diane Collins playing the role of Miss Madrigal. In the Broadway version these roles were created by Betsy Von Furstenburg and Slobhan McKenna. This, however, was off-Broadway—way off-Broadway, at the Gould Theater, downtown on Allen St.

The show opened recently, before an illustrious group of first-nighters, headed by Dorothy Gish,

Paula Lawrence and Al Lewis, the veteran Broadway showman. And in the role of the grandmother—created on Broadway by Gladys Cooper and in London by Dame Edith Evans—was Rose Caylor, performing remarkable well. After 38 years, she'd returned to the stage. "What else could I do?" she explained. "I couldn't let Jenny go downtown to rehearsals all alone at night."

THE REPRISAL: Thurgood Marshall, chief counsel for the NAACP, said "I am one of the happiest to join the South African boycott. From now on I am not going to buy any more diamonds."

MEMOS: The Sinatra-Dean Martin - Peter Lawford - Joey Bishop show in Las Vegas may work the Capitol Theater in N.Y.... The Montreal Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Wilfred Pelletier, includes eight brothers—the Marsellas...Tammy Grimes will get the title role in Dore Schary's musical: "The Unsinkable Mrs. Brown."

THE TEA PARTY: Mary K. Frank, producer of "One More River," once was the wife of an Army officer. The wife of another Army officer, Mamie Eisenhower, saw the matinee of the show in Washington the other day. She then sent for Mrs. Frank, and took her to the White House for tea.

THE SPECIFICATIONS: George Farkas, head of Alexander's Stores, told his staff to recruit, in one week, five members of European nobility to model his Paris imports for the stores' fashion show. Somehow the mission was accomplished, and Farkas was given the list: Two princesses, a baroness, a countess and a marquise. Farkas noticed that the baroness was a size 5. "That's small for our samples," he ordered. "Get me a size 12 baroness."
