Rabbinical Council Starts Beth Din For Family Guidance

NEW YORK — The Rabbinical Council of America has placed into operation a Beth Din (court of religious law) for giving guidance in the field of marriage and family status to all Jews who require it.

Details of the project, involving the participation of prominent Orthodox rabbis, were outlined at a press conference last week by Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, president of the council.

The council, largest Orthodox rabbinic group in the country, has a membership of 750 rabbis.

The establishment of the Beth Din, with headquarters at 84 Fifth Avenue, was made possible by a grant from Gustav Stern, a Jewish Orthodox lay leader, and Mrs. Stern. Mr. Stern is chairman of the executive committee of the World Academy in Jerusalem, prominent institution devoted to all phases of religious learning.

Rabbi Rackman said that the Beth Din would be under the direction of the Council's Halacha (religious law) Commission, headed by Rabbi Joseph B. Soloveitchik, a prominent Talmudic scholar and Dr. Samuel Belkin, president of Yeshiva University. Rabbi Joseph Weiss will serve as secretary of the court.

The Beth Din, he said, "will serve the primary purpose of meeting the domestic relations needs of Jewish families according to the tenets of the Jewish faith." He added that marriage, divorce, and counseling will constitute the "core of the court's jurisdiction."

He explained that referrals to the court will be made by local community rabbis, adding that "the court will resolve those problems which may be beyond the power and resources of the local rabbi."

One of the principal features of the court, he said, will be the establishment of a central registry of vital statistics where a complete roster of all marriages and divorces will be recorded available to the rabbinate in every part of the world.

Rabbi Backman said the court would be in constant communication with similarly recognized institutions in Israel, Great Britain and other European countries for an exchange of opinions "to make religious rulings fairly uniform and standardized."

To Visit Providence — Mrs. Michael S. Comay, wife of Israel's Ambassador to the United Nations, will come from Israel to attend with her husband the Diplomat Ball which will take place at the Sheraton-Biltmore on Saturday, May 21.

Three Branches Of Judaism Endorse Day School Campaign

Three branches of Judaism — the Orthodox, Conservative and Reform — have endorsed the campaign of the Providence Hebrew Day School to raise an additional $200,000 in order to start the construction of the new school building.

Archie Smith, campaign chairman, presided at the meeting held last Wednesday which formally started the second phase of the fund-raising campaign. He reviewed plans for the construction of a new modern two-story school plant on a 37,000 square foot site on Elmgrove Avenue.

Jerome Feinstein, building chairman, told those present that now all obstacles to the construction of the new school have been cleared away, plans are being made to hold the ground-breaking soon.

Lewis Korn, general chairman, and Judge Frank Licht, honorary chairman, spoke briefly and urged an all-out effort.

Archie Chaset, Ephraim Feingold, David Freedman, Irving Gertsacov, Lewis Goldstein, Merrill L. Hassenfeld, Melvin Hoffman, Henry Husserl, Milton Leand, Henry wartz, Morton Smith, Leonard Mason, Nathan Roy, Joseph Schuttun and Sidney Weinstein.

Directors for two years include Mesdames Benjamin Brier, Nathan Chaset, E. Harold Dick, Robert N. Greene, Henry Hill, Paul Levinger, Howard R. Lewis, James Lipet, John J. Lury, Ely Portman, Herbert L. Rosen, Albert Shore, Miles Sydney, Harry Triedman and Edwin Wells.

Directors for one year are Mesdames Joslin Berry, Benjamin Bloom, Milton Brier, Raymond L. Cohen, Hyman Cotton, Norman Fain, Harry Goldberg, Leo Goldberg, Manuel Horwitz, Marshall Leeds, Arthur Kaplan, Alexander Rumlper, Nathan Samors, Bencel L. Schiff, Edward Seltzer, Stanley Simon, Eske Windsberg.

The new nominating committee will include Mesdames Hyman Cotton, chairman; Nathan Chaset, Henry Levaour, Daniel Miller and Jacob Stone.

Mrs. Alfred H. Joslin

is, mailing secretary; Jacob Katz and J. Sidney Shepard, assistants; Carol Silver, financial secretary; Stanley Gilbert and David Pollock, assistants; Owen Kwasha and Hyman Stone, auditors.

Serving on the board of directors for three years are Mesdames

Israel Asks For Help To Expand Ports

JERUSALEM, (Israeli Sector)—Eugene R. Black, president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, indicated last week that Israel might have to set up an independent port authority before she can qualify for a loan for her port expansion program.

Israel has asked the bank's help in her five-year program to expand the ports of Haifa and Elath and to build a new deepwater port on the Mediterranean at Ashdod. The program is expected to cost $64,000,000. Israel also has asked the bank's help in a $42,000,000 project to build dikes into the Dead Sea to increase production of potash there. This project is thought to stand a poorer chance of gaining World Bank assistance.

Mr. Black arrived in Israel last week and has since visited the ports and the site at Ashdod. He has talked in Beersheba with officials of the Dead Sea works. It was his first visit to Israel. If the loan is approved, it will be Israel's first from the bank.

In an interview at his hotel, Mr. Black said he had been much impressed by the development he had seen throughout the country. But he was not altogether enthusiastic about the management and development of the Israeli ports.

"We have found that the best way to run ports is to have an autonomous port authority," he said. "We have found that when they are run by ministries they have not been very successful."

There has been a great deal of conflict among municipalities and state ministries in Israel over who should assume responsibilities as they arise in planning and developing the nation's ports. Haifa has been upset over the prospect of losing trade and new industry when the port at Ashdod is built. The existing port at Tel Aviv and Jaffa, in an open roadstead and too rough for use in winter months, is eventually to be abandoned, and this prospect has caused some concern.

"We have not made a decision yet," Mr. Black said, "but unless we are satisfied that the ports are properly set up and properly run, a loan will not be forthcoming."

Calls Illinois Civil Rights Legislation Dismal

CHICAGO — The American Jewish Congress believes that the Illinois record on substantial civil rights legislation for the 1949 to 1959 decade is a dismal one.

In a booklet analyzing in detail civil rights legislation in Illinois in this period, the Chicago Council of the congress asserted last week that Illinois was the only non-Southern industrial state that had failed to enact basic legislation prohibiting discrimination in private employment.

Illinois also lags far behind other Northern and Western industrial states in combating discrimination in housing, public and private education, public accommodations, and in providing administrative agencies to enforce civil rights laws, the report said.

The congress said that in the 1949 Illinois legislative session and in all sessions since then fair employment practice bills had passed the lower house but had been defeated in the Senate.

The report noted that Chicago has had a fair employment practice ordinance since 1945 but this was limited to city employes and employes of contractors with the city.

The report noted that Illinois had no law forbidding discrimination in the sale or rental of housing units built under state housing legislation and no overall law prohibiting discrimination by colleges or universities.

White House Conference On Children and Youth

By Marlene S. Finn

At the close of the program, on the first day, delegates streamed out of the Cole Student Activities Building at the University of Maryland, a little tired but very pleased. Looking around us, we marveled at the assembled multitude consisting of 900 youth, 500 people from foreign lands, and the remaining 5600, adults.

For the next five days we would share our ideas, experiences, and knowledge, hoping to provide a better understanding of the changing world today's children and youth face. This was only the beginning of our efforts to ease the pressure of a tireless scientific age — to create some form of stability for those we love most — our children and youth.

Monday morning at 9 A. M., the White House Conference efficiently launched a three-day campaign — its platform — earnest work. At this hour, five concurrent theme assemblies, each comprised of almost fifteen-hundred people, commenced. Delegates were talked to and talked at by such prominent men as Dr. Roswell P. Barnes, Executive Secretary, World Council of Churches; Dr. A. L. Sachar, President, Brandeis University; Lester B. Granger, Executive Director, National Urban League; Roy E. Larsen, President, Time. Our over-all theme, "Children and Youth 1960" was subdivided into three areas: Monday, "Appraising Ideals and Values in Their Changing World;" Tuesday, "Assessing the Impact on Them of Economic, Social, and Cultural Factors;" Wednesday, "Adapting to Change and Innovation — The Effects on Them of Science, Technology, Population Pressure, and World Events."

At first, the complexity of our world situation seemed almost incomprehensible to human intellect. Sitting and listening to the speakers, we experienced a mixture of reactions. We were frightened by the feeling of security we could promote. If only education could be so widespread that we would wake up to the fact that any day its democratic structure may crumble beneath its feet; then, perhaps, we could correct our past mistakes and strive to prevent additional ones in the future.

According to recent conclusions, a person today must run twice as fast to stay in the same place. While this statement appears substantially complete, we cannot overlook its implied question — where are we running? Unless this question can be answered satisfactorily, by each individual, we must slow down to a lesser pace and search, as a united nation of youth and adults, for some common purpose.

Today our youth is referred to as the "generation without a cause." We do, however, have a cause — dedication to constant learning and sharing that which we learn. Our cause is to spread education. We must practice the doctrine of equality we've so often heard preached; we must fully develop the wealth of human resource we've so often let waste; we must achieve world peace for the citizens of our nation we've so often promised mere words. Today's youth has an active cause that can be fulfilled through broadened education. We are a "generation of action" not just words.

From these thought-provoking sessions, we gained a general sense of awareness so necessary in formulating specific recommendations.

At 10:45 A. M., our forum groups, mine, "Constructive and Non-Constructive Use of Free Time," began. Over 400 delegates were present in each of the 18 forums. Again we listened to experts who outlined the basic needs and described the amount of progress made in this particular field since 1950.

After a short recess for lunch, we proceeded to our workgroups, from which stemmed a total of sixteen-hundred sound recommendations. As there were but 30 participants per group in 210 workgroups, we now utilized the opportunity to lay the foundation on which could be built additional stories of crystallized plans.

The White House Conference in three days, youth and adults alike, had established goals that would take months, perhaps years, to achieve. But this was our first step into the future — into creating a form of stability for our children and youth so imperative in our changing world.

Town & Country Made Distributor

Town & Country Cleansers Inc. of Warwick has been appointed New England Distributor for the Bomar Laboratories Ltd. of Chicago, Gerald S. Goldstein, president of the Warwick firm, announced this week.

The Bomar process is a new method of dry cleaning that manufactures soap with the cleaning machine itself, eliminating the addition of soaps into the system. It features a mechanical device which eliminates static and gives the fabrics being processed a soft, wrinkle-free quality.

Plant owners from the New England states attended a recent clinic involving the new process held at the Town & Country plant, located on Warwick Avenue at Hoxsie Four Corners.

Plan Second Meeting Of Young Adult Division

The second meeting of the leadership group of the Young Adult Division of the General Jewish Committee will be held Sunday, at the Jewish Home for the Aged.

Following a brunch, Max Alexander, executive director of the Jewish Home, and Max Winograd, president of the Jewish Home, will conduct the group on a tour of the home facilities to provide the future community leaders an opportunity to learn about the program of care for the aged.

This is part of the training program being conducted by the General Jewish Committee to provide the Young Adults with an opportunity to acquire a first hand knowledge of the various local agencies and their operations.

The second phase of this session will be a presentation by Dr. Harry Elkin, executive director of the Bureau of Jewish Education. Dr. Elkin will discuss the community-wide program for Jewish education and a discussion and question period will follow his talk.

Nevele To Operate Trotting Stable

To Be Head Counselor — The reappointment of Seymour Glantz, teacher in the Barrington public school system, as head counselor at Camp Mar-Lin in Windsor, Conn., was announced this week.

Mr. Glantz is a supervisor of student teachers in the public school system and is an instructor in the Rhode Island School of Design Junior school program. Camp Mar-Lin is a co-ed camp with a total enrollment of 150 children between the ages of six and 15, plus camper-waiter and counselor-in-training groups.

TO HEAR MRS. SILVERMAN

Mrs. Archibald Silverman was the guest speaker at the Annual Donors' Dinner of the Sisterhood of Congregation Sons of Abraham which was held on Monday, May 9, at 6:30 P. M. in the Dana Auditorium of the synagogue.

The committee in charge of the dinner included Mesdames Sidney Pepper, chairman; Mary S. Posner, president; Benjamin Hayman and Samuel Grossman, co-chairmen; David Baratz, Milton Covitz, Samuel Charles, Eva Davis, J. Samuel Goldman, Walter Indell, Max Levin, Barney Maldavir, Thomas Mintz, A. J. Paull, Stanley Peirce, Benjamin Matusow, Frank Shone, Maurice Sternbach, Louis Strumar, Meyer Sugarman and Israel Winkler.

Dromedary Offers Festive Dessert

When the occasion calls for something particularly festive, you might try Filled Dromedary Date-Nut Roll (recipe below).

Prepared under the supervision of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, it is strictly kosher and features the famous "U" symbol on the label as a guide to shoppers.

FILLED DROMEDARY DATE-NUT ROLL

- 1 tin Dromedary Date-Nut Roll
- 1/4 package cream cheese
- 1 tsp. butter
- 2 tblsp. crushed pineapple (drained)

Cut a thin slice off each end of the Dromedary Date-Nut Roll. Using a sharp knife, carefully hollow out the center of the roll. Cream the butter and cream cheese, add half the crumbs from the center of the roll and mix well with the pineapple. Press the filling into the center of the roll, replace the end pieces and fasten with toothpicks. Wrap in wax paper, chill at least an hour before slicing and serving.

Henry J. Hassenfeld

Honor Hassenfeld At GJC Meeting

Henry J. Hassenfeld, retiring president of the General Jewish Committee of Providence, will be honored for his meritorious and devoted service to this central communal organization, at the organization's 15th annual meeting next Monday night at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel.

Mr. Hassenfeld, whose five-year term has been marked by many advances in the General Jewish Committee, will be elevated to the position of honorary president. He will join the company of Archibald Silverman and Alvin A. Soppin for a life tenure.

Mr. Hassenfeld has indicated that he will continue to play an active role in the General Jewish Committee and its various programs and undertakings.

Joseph W. Ress, one of the founders of the General Jewish Committee and an active member since its inception 15 years ago, will succeed Mr. Hassenfeld as president. Mr. Ress heads the slate of officers and members of the board of directors who will be installed at the meeting.

Mr. Ress will appoint a 1960 campaign chairman and appoint four additional members of the board of directors for a one year term.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Benjamin B. Rosenberg, executive director of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies and the Combined Jewish Appeal of Greater Boston. He will speak on the current trends

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

Search For Quality

If you had a chance to represent all of America's women before the homebuilders and to tell them what women want in a new house today, I'll wager that a dominant theme running through about everything you would say would be: QUALITY.

I'll wager that you'd astound the homebuilders with your understanding of what quality in a house means, with your awareness of the fact that real quality often is hidden in such fundamentals as insulation and plumbing. I'll wager that you'd humble them with your knowledge that perimeter heating gives even heat, a circuit breaker reduces the hazard of fire, copper pipes assure rust-free plumbing, etc.

If you had an opportunity to speak for all of America's women before the nation's food distributors, textile makers, cosmetic manufacturers, auto executives, and to tell these industrialists what you want from their products, here too I'll bet a major theme of your desires and demands would be: QUALITY.

I'll bet you'd amaze these groups with your increasing grasp of the vital difference between style and quality, your growing ability to discriminate, evaluate the usefulness of products. I'll bet you'd make it unmistakably clear that newness alone no longer is enough to attract your dollars; you want reliable assurance a product will live up to the claims made for it.

As an individual, the likelihood that you'll be a representative of all women to these businessmen is picayune, but a carefully selected group will be doing just that for you a week from today when 100 women from every part of the United States will meet in Washington for the third National Congress on Better Living, sponsored by McCall's magazine. This will not be just another women's meeting, for the 100 have been chosen out of thousands to speak for the millions of us, already have participated in regional meetings in 150 cities this past fall.

These women also won't be just talking into the wind, the two previous McCall's congresses have demonstrated the simple but profound fact that the way to find out what women want is to listen to them. The delegates to the 1957 and 1958 congresses called the turn on the revival of traditional taste in houses, the tremendous demand for more bedrooms and bathrooms. At next week's three-day conference, top executives of the housing, auto, food, cosmetics industries will be listening intently to every criticism and suggestion the women make.

Of course, I don't know what the 100 delegates will say next week, but as a homemaker myself, I can make some informed guesses.

They'll tell American businessmen, I think, that we are weary to the explosion point of shoddy workmanship in every sphere, are increasingly willing to pay up in price if we can be confident of quality. Most women aren't buying only to have now. They're buying to have and to hold.

They'll warn U.S. industrialists, I suspect, that we're becoming progressively disenchanted with fads. We approve the trend toward more glass in houses, for instance, but we get no pleasure out of a picture window which overlooks a neighbor's garbage can. We are delighted with the concept of a recreation room in the basement, but we see no sense in having this retreat replace the living room on which we lavish such care, and we're distinctly nervous about having young children disappear into places where anything can happen before we can reach them.

They'll explain, I trust, that we've been fooled so many times by promotions of inferior goods as quality products that we're beginning to yearn for some old-fashioned merchandising. Perhaps they'll mention that while more and more super-markets are stressing pre-cut and pre-packaged meats, more and more of us are swinging back to custom-cuts where we can see what we're buying.

In short, I think they'll pound home the message that we women know that there are no excuses now for lack of quality. I surely hope this is the message—and I pray that all American businessmen will heed it well.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

On Life And Death And Statistics

BY BERYL SEGAL

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company distributes a Statistical Bulletin full of facts and figures about ourselves. It is a small publication, only about 12 pages, small in size and half of the pages are given to tables and graphs.

Yet it is important because it deals with matters of life and death, health and sickness, accidents and disabilities.

I find, for instance, what being overweight will do to me. If I am an average male, chances are that I weigh at least 20 percent more than I should. That in turn gives me at least four years of life less than if I were the correct weight.

The diseases of which I am apt to die of if I am overweight are, in order of their frequency, heart diseases and diabetes.

Women, on the other hand, can withstand the effects of overweight better than men. But they too are better off thinner than with an extra load of fat.

Both men and women, it appears, can afford to lose weight, now more than ever. The toil at home is not too great. Labor-saving devices have taken over a great part of the women's work. The same is true of the tasks performed by men at the shop or factory or office. Our leisure time is spent primarily at home. Either we listen to the radio or view television. Not much energy is expended there. The problem of overweight is the problem of a proper balance between food intake and expenditure of energy.

We are told that the greatest number of parents in the United States now are under twenty years of age. The number of married men in the teen-age group has increased by two-thirds since 1940.

The babies born during the past years reflect to a remarkable degree the economic conditions of the country. Thus Finland has had the lowest birth rate in Europe. Japan is the only country in the world to have reduced its birth rate by one-half between 1947 and 1958. There is no other record in the annals of vital statistics to show such a marked decrease in so short a time.

On the other hand, the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand have experienced a great baby boom. The number of births each year, has broken the record of the previous year. There is no indication that the baby boom will end within the foreseeable future.

The population has therefore increased immensely in the United States. Between 1950, when the last census was taken and 1960 during which the census is being taken again, it is estimated that the United States will have gained more than 27.5 million people. In fact, the birth rate has been 24 per 1,000 during the past years.

The death rate in the United States, for 1959, has decreased. Only about 9 in every 1,000 population died during that year.

Every region in the United States has gained in population, except Mississippi. Florida has seen the greatest increase in population during the past year and Oklahoma and Vermont the least. California is a close competitor to New York in size of population. New York state has about two million people more than California.

The life expectancy at birth has increased during 1959. A white male is now expected to live about 67 years, and a white female may live 73 years. This is, apparently, an all time high record. Not much changes in life expectancy is forecast. Even for the year 2000, forty years later, the life expectancy cannot be more than one year over that of 1959.

For non-white people, the records are somewhat different. A colored female can expect to live to the age of 65, while the colored male will live about five years less.

All these statistics are well and good. It is good to know that more babies are being born, and that they live longer. It is comforting to learn that diseases have been eradicated, especially diseases of the very young and the very old. But all this is of little comfort to the men and women who are on their dying bed. To them, no matter how old they are, the injustice of death is grievous. If they are seventy, they wish they had lived to the age of eighty. If they are eighty, there is so much more to live for. At least till ninety. At least until the youngest granddaughter gets married, and the youngest grandson graduates from college. If your life has been good, you would like to have more of it. If it has been full of suffering, you wish to have at least a few years of peace and comfort.

I remember a man dying. The last words he said to me were: "I wish I could have lived to see Israel at peace with her neighbors."

All his life he waited for that great day. At the last moment, he realized that he would never see that day. He was genuinely sorry.

For that man all the facts and figures of advances and improvements were of no avail. His time had come—and it is never on time.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

THE NAMES: The longest working partnership in all show business is the team of Smith & Dale. They've been performing, with giant comic talents, for 62 years. Joe Smith and Charlie Dale have worked in cellar joints, Broadway revues, radio, films, night clubs and TV. They were vaudeville headliners at the Palace. And they're still working.

Smith & Dale recently appeared on a TV spectacular directed by Abe Burrows, and they told him the story of their names. Smith's name was Seltzer, and Dale's was Marks. Their first engagement was at a place called The Palace Gardens. Seltzer's brother made all the arrangements. When the two boys arrived at the place, they saw showcards reading "Smith & Dale." Joe Seltzer grabbed his brother and asked: "What about us? Who's 'Smith & Dale'?"

"That's you," said the brother. He'd gone to the printer to order some showcards, and the printer had suggested: "Why spend the money on new cards? I have here a whole bunch of cards that say 'Smith & Dale.' I'll give them to you for 25¢ each. You'll save a lot of money." "So," said the brother, "you'll call yourself 'Smith &

Dale.' What's the difference?" The printer, incidentally, had these left-over Smith & Dale showcards because the two who originally called themselves Smith & Dale had decided to call themselves Moran & Mack.

THE ROLES: Leonard Bernstein told Helen Hayes about a movie role offered him a few years ago, by Paramount. Bernstein was screen-tested for the movie based on the life of Tchaikovsky. He was told that the producers hoped to get Greta Garbo for the feminine lead. Miss Hayes listened patiently and with fascination, then told him: "That's the same script for which they wanted Gary Cooper and me."

THE EMERGENCY: Wiley Buchanan, Protocol Officer of the State Dept., accompanied a foreign envoy back to his capital beyond the Pacific. They were flying in President Eisenhower's plane, "The Columbine." The envoy seemed a bit unnerved by plane travel. He declined the suggestion that he retire to the plane's bedroom, and sleep beneath the Great Seal. "Not sleepy," he grumbled. Mrs. Buchanan offered him a tranquilizer. He waved it away.

The envoy's distress seemed unrelieved, and he finally accepted a sleeping pill, headed for the bedroom and asked to be called when the plane would be one hour out of Honolulu. In due time the plane's steward was sent to wake the envoy, in vain. Neither prodding nor pulling could stir him. Buchanan remembered that obstetricians slap the seats of new-born infants to awaken them to life.

The Chief Protocol Officer reached for the envoy, who'd shed his clothes, turned him over and whacked him one. The envoy opened his eyes, arose and smiled: "Very good sleep."

MEMOS: Maurice Evans will do a film version of "Macbeth"...Jane Fonda may have a major role in Arthur Laurents' play, "Invitation to a March"...Maureen O'Hara's name in "Christine" is her real one, FitzSimons...The Oak Room Bar, long a stag hangout, will install stools and invite women customers...Vogue will have an Australian edition...Shirley Booth will make a summer theater tour in "The Late Christopher Bean"...

THE MEETING: Jessica Tandy, star of "Five Finger Exercise," was introduced at the Forum to Vivien Leigh, star of "Duel of Angels." Each had starred in "Streetcar Named Desire." Miss Tandy on Broadway and Miss Leigh in the film version. Morton Gottlieb, the company manager who brought them together, said: "Blanche DuBois, meet Blanche DuBois."

SYD COHEN
Of Continentals And Provincials

A couple of months ago, at a sports panel breakfast program at Temple Emanu-El, one of the members of the Men's Club asked for an opinion about the future of the Continental League. Invited to take first crack at this question, I predicted that not only will the CL come into being, and actually prosper, but also that some time in the not too distant future, there will be four major leagues.

Hope High's famous coach, Ed Mullen, hopped on me for that opinion, pointing out that as a major league scout, he finds very few good players in Rhode Island, and where do I think the big league ball players will come from to staff the third league when the two existing majors are having such trouble getting high caliber personnel now.

My answer was that the demand would determine the supply; if there were good jobs available at the major league level, there would be boys fighting to get them. Besides, it is my contention that there are many players around today who need just the chance to make themselves great. Too often a potential star does not impress his bosses and is shunted off to the minors. Very often, an injury to a regular gives such a fringe player just the chance he needs, and a new star is born.

The new baseball season bears me out on this last opinion. Here is Jim Gentile of Baltimore, who was tossed away by the World Champion Los Angeles Dodgers. Not only didn't the Champs want him, but they offered Paul Richards all the time he wanted to look Jim over.

The first look was unimpressive. Then, for some reason, possibly an injury to a regular, Gentile got a chance to play. At once, three-run home runs began to rain off his bat. Until his club was rained out on Sunday, Gentile was the American League's runs-batted-in leader.

Our old friend Billy Consolo, hailed for his potential when he joined Boston so many years ago, never got a decent chance to show what he could do. He played a few games every year, was lost on the bench the rest of the time. Now, with Washington, he has emerged as the fine player he was supposed to be years ago.

Myron Ginsburg, the veteran Baltimore catcher, was on the way to the minor leagues at the beginning of the season. Along came an injury to Gus Triandos, and Ginsburg was recalled. Fortunately, Joe, as he is called, brought a hot bat with him. Twice his hits helped substantially to defeat the Yankees. Once again, if only by luck, he is a major leaguer.

The game is filled this year (and many other years) with fringe-players-made-good. It has even more fringe players who get dumped back into mediocrity and oblivion.

The third league, and the fourth one coming up behind it (in my vision, at least) will take care of these players and make real honest-to-goodness major league stars out of them, while also building up its own player nucleus. Not only that, but many players who are active in the majors today are ready to say goodbye and haul up stakes to join the Continentals as soon as the invitation is given. Gene Woodling says he is one. I would select Gene Stephens as a likely candidate, for another. Gene's future as a Red Sox and American League star is all behind him, thanks to the stupidity and bungling of the Red Sox administration, and its insistence on holding on to all its young talent because of their potential, until they were no longer young, and wondered themselves whether they had any talent.

If enough low-priced big leaguers desert to the Continental, it might well be the present two major leagues that will be crying for help, and many fringe players will find good homes among the clubs that never gave them much of a tumble before.

Yes, there will be plenty of outstanding ball players available the minute the Continental League hangs out the "Help Wanted" sign.

The Sox Are Flapping
Meanwhile, back at the ranch, there is evidence that the Boston Provincials (Red Sox, if you prefer) do not read the obituary section of the sports pages; and for this, hooray!

The gullible among us will recall the dire predictions of a cellar berth for the hapless Hose. There are no players, we were told; the manager is a dope, and the players hate him. His strategy is ridiculous. The spirit is minus, and all the experts agree that this looks like the very worst team in the major leagues.

Well, one tenth of a season does not add up to a World Series cut, but it can't escape notice — and certainly, it shouldn't escape notice — that as of last weekend, the patient was doing very well, thank you. The Yankees had won four of their last five games, while the Red Sox had looked and played badly, and had been plastered liberally with calumny.

But in the important matter of games won and lost, only a single game and a half separated Boston and New York.

The AL champion White Sox had won ten of their last twelve games, and were in first place—but only two and a half games ahead of the Red Sox.

This lofty state of affairs may not continue; maybe, even as this is read, the club has suffered a relapse and is sliding farther from the lead. Whether yes or no, let's all remember, then, that at the three week mark — on Mother's Day, to be exact — while Tom Yawkey was being given the bad news, and Booby Harris was frantically trying to arrange a suitable trade, and Billy Jurges was apologizing for not having better ball players to present to the public — while all this was going on, the poor Red Sox, ignorant of their shortcomings, were flirting with the leaders.

I was scared, a month ago, when I estimated that the Sox would not be as bad as they were painted. Scared, that is, when I read all the comments to the contrary. But I'm stubborn. Despite their acknowledged inadequacies, their injuries, their poison pen writers, their old men, their in-again-mostly-out-again pitching — and certainly, despite their so-called general manager and their All-American Boy Owner — I feel somehow that the Provincials will provide some pleasant surprises before the pennant is finally lost. And they will NOT finish last!

What A Relief!

Tommy Brewer, for years the disappointing ace of the Red Sox staff, may finally have found himself under the canny eye of Sal Maglie. Who would have thunk, all this time, that Brewer's real greatness lay in his ability as a relief pitcher!

Tommy is not the first major league pitcher who, with a world of stuff, never could live up to his promise as a starter. The name of Joe Page comes immediately to mind. Page had all the stuff any pitcher needed, but he drove the Yankees crazy with his ineptitude as a starting hurler. Until the day in 1947 when he was brought in from the bull pen for a final look before being sent to the minors that same night. With the bases loaded, and a count of three balls on Rudy York. I think, Page was just one pitch away from final and complete failure.

Joe didn't fail. He settled down, pitched a masterpiece, and became a sensationally successful relief pitcher.

From the events of the past three weeks, there is evidence that Maglie's conversion of Brewer into a relief pitcher may be the greatest thing, career-wise, that ever happened to the talented but unsuccessful right hander.

It could also be one of the finest contributions ever made to the Red Sox. Ah, that pitching coach!

BAN NEO-NAZIS

HAMBURG — Hamburg police announced the dissolution of the Nationalist Student League after the city Senate found that the group was neo-nazi and anti-Semitic and, as such, treasonous to the constitution. The group was banned last January at the Free University in West Berlin and on April 1, at Marburg University.

URGES SPRING ENROLLMENT

The School Council of the Bureau of Jewish Education has urged its affiliated schools to conduct spring enrollment from the middle of May to the middle of June.

Parents whose children have reached or are reaching their eighth birthday may enroll them in mid-week Hebrew School since most of the schools do not offer one-day-a-week Jewish education for children who have passed their eighth birthday.

Schools affiliated with the Bureau, accepting enrollment for the new term are Beth Am, Beth David, Beth El, Beth Israel, Beth Shalom, Cranston Jewish Center, Eastward Jewish Center, Emanuel, Ohawe Shalom, Providence Hebrew Day School, Shaare Zedek, Sinai, Sons of Abraham, Sons of Jacob, Community High School of Jewish Studies of the Bureau and the Workmen's Circle School.

Additional information may be obtained by calling the Bureau of Jewish Education.

TEMPLE SINAI

"100th Anniversary of Theodor Herzl and the 12th Anniversary of the State of Israel" will be the subject of the sermon which Rabbi Donald Heskins will deliver at services to be held tonight at Temple Sinai starting at 8:30 o'clock.

A special Oneg Shabbat will follow the services in honor of Drs. Jack and Gloria Goldstein who are moving to the southwest.

TO HONOR PRESIDENT

The Ladies Association of the Jewish Home for the Aged of Rhode Island will honor its outgoing president, Mrs. Saul Seigle, at a luncheon to be held on Thursday at the Ledgemont Country Club.

A brief business meeting will follow the luncheon as this is the final board meeting of the season of the Ladies Association. Mrs. Seigle will present the chairman of the 1960 Linen and Equipment Event, Mrs. Max Leach.

Mrs. Ben Poulten is in charge of reservations and arrangements for the afternoon.

 ♣—Q, 8, x

One defender led the king of clubs, and when his partner played the eight he played a small club, won by the queen. East switched to a heart and declarer was faced with the following problem: if he plays for the trump break he needs a second heart trick for his tenth trick; if trumps do not break he must get rid of his heart losers on the diamonds to avoid losing a heart trick as well as a spade trick. It is most difficult to judge which is the right course, but a good player should come to the conclusion that the right play is to put up the ace of hearts and hope that if there are four spades in one hand the player with the four spades also holds at least three diamonds. Therefore all South players went up with the ace of hearts, played off ace and king of diamonds, played two rounds of trumps towards the king of spades, and so achieved their contract.

In one case the hand was made more complicated by the fact that East made an opening psychic bid of 1D. Although its nature was exposed during the bidding, South could not assess how many diamonds there were in the East hand. At all events he decided to play the opening bidder for five diamonds and the king of hearts. Against a club attack and continuation he ruffed the third club in dummy and played three rounds of spades. Informed of the bad trump distribution, he then played off ace and king of diamonds and threw East in with a spade in the hope that he had the king of hearts. If that had been the case, South would have made his contract. He could not be blamed for coming to the wrong conclusion. This was one of the rare occasions when a psychic bid paid off.
