

To Embark On Campaign To Enlist Non-Zionists Says Dr. Goldmann

JERUSALEM — Dr. Nahum Goldmann announced at a press conference here last week that the World Zionist Organization, with the full support of the Government of Israel, will embark on a campaign to opt Jewish communities and non-Zionist groups into the world Zionist movement.

The first results of the campaign, he said, would be evident at the 25th World Zionist Congress which will be convened in Jerusalem Dec. 27. He reported that organizations from all continents would have contingents at the Congress as full, associate or fraternal members. Some major organizations in the United States have indicated their readiness to send fraternal delegations, he stated. With a large periphery of organizations on behalf of millions of Jews who are not Zionist, Dr. Goldmann said, the World Zionist Congress will assume the aspect of a general Jewish Congress.

The "Zionist offensive" would be spearheaded at a specially convened Congress of American Zionists in the United States on Nov. 17. Dr. Goldmann reported. To demonstrate Israel's support, a large and important delegation of Cabinet Ministers and other Israeli leaders will attend the Congress, he revealed. He said that all Jewish communities in Latin America had already pledged support and will send delegations to the World Zionist Congress as associate members. They will have the right to participate in committee sessions and discussions but not to vote.

Reform Synagogue Elects First Woman President

NEW YORK — The first woman president ever to be named to serve a Reform Temple in the greater metropolitan area was elected and installed Monday at the annual congregational meeting of Larchmont Temple.

Mrs. Maurice Mermey of 54 Magnolia Avenue in Larchmont was unanimously chosen by the members of the congregation on a single slate ballot.

In a message of congratulations, Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations declared that, "Your election exemplifies and validates the efforts of Reform Judaism to emancipate women in synagogue life. We have repeatedly stressed equality of the sexes in worship, home religious observance, and leadership of the temple. You are the first to be honored in the New York metropolitan area. By honoring you, the congregation honors itself and the liberal, democratic spirit which Reform has infused into Judaism."

Rabbi Eisendrath stated that a number of women previously have been named presidents of their congregations. They also serve on the UAHC's Board of Trustees, Regional Boards and their own Temple Boards.

Rabbi Jacob Freedman Of Temple Beth Sholom Announces Resignation

Rabbi Jacob Freedman, spiritual leader of Temple Beth Sholom, has announced that he will not continue to serve as rabbi of the congregation after Sept. 1, 1960.

Rabbi Freedman said that he had written to the president of the congregation and the chairman of the board of directors, as well as the secretary of Temple Beth Sholom, on last Feb. 9, informing both the board and the congregation officially that he did not intend to continue to serve as spiritual leader of the congregation after Sept. 1, 1960, when his current tenure expires. At the same time Rabbi Freedman requested his name not be presented for consideration for renewal of his services beyond that date.

Although Rabbi Freedman presently is making plans for his future activities, he has made no definite commitments. He said that he will leave for his summer vacation on July 1, but will maintain his residence on Duxbury Road and will be on call and available for emergencies.

Rockwell's Nazis Picket For Eichmann

WASHINGTON — A uniformed squad of George Lincoln Rockwell's neo-Nazi brownshirts, wearing swastika armbands, picketed the White House last week bearing placards urging gassing of Jews.

The placards read: "Eichmann did not kill any innocent Jews"; "Ike help free Eichmann"; "Punish the Jew International Bandits"; "It's No Crime to Kill Jew Communist Traitors; We Killed Rosenbergs"; "If the Jews Can Kidnap Eichmann, They Can Kidnap You."

U.S. Urged To Take 'New Initiative' In Middle East

NEW YORK, June 21 — The U.S. government this week was urged to take "new initiative" in bringing about negotiations for peace between Israel and the Arab governments.

At the same time, Irving M. Engel, honorary president of the American Jewish Committee, called upon the United States to seek means to end the present arms race in the Middle East.

These were highlights of a program for the Middle East presented by Mr. Engel to the Platform Committee of the Democratic Party at hearings held here this week with individuals and voluntary citizens organizations. The Democratic Party called the session to help shape its platform for the November elections. Mr. Engel's statement which gave the American Jewish Committee's viewpoints on foreign policy is also being submitted to the Republican Party's Platform Committee.

The American Jewish Committee is a non-political, non-Zionist organization dedicated to the promotion of human rights throughout the world. Founded in 1906, AJC's national headquarters are in its new Institute of Human Relations, a center for research and action in combating bigotry and advancing intergroup relations.

Human Rights Situation

Mr. Engel in his statement recommended policy planks dealing with the human rights situation in the Middle East, South America, and the United Nations, and in regard to mutual security, foreign aid, and immigration. He based his recommendation on first hand reports by American Jewish Committee delegations, which have visited South America, the Middle East, and Europe during the past few years, and studies made by the Committee staff both in the United States and abroad.

In support of peace in the Middle East, Mr. Engel said our government should work within and outside the framework of the United Nations to prevent any violation of existing frontiers in the area. Similarly, the U.S. should intensify its efforts to end United Arab Republic discrimination against any country in the use of the Suez Canal. He also urged the U. S. government to cease its acquiescence in discriminatory practices by Arab nations against American business and shipping activities. The U.S. should express uncompromising opposition "to all forms of discrimination against American citizens and all government agencies should be directed to shun cooperation with any foreign violations of equal rights and status of American citizens."

Mr. Engel said that in support of U.S. policy in the Middle East, the Democratic Party should include in its platform the Hammarskjold position that the solution to the Palestine-Arab refugee problem lies in full scale Middle

DOUBLE AND QUIT

By Revoke

Many people bid well when left to arrive placidly at their final contract, but are unable to cope with quite easy hands when opposition bidding intervenes. Here is a case in point. In a recent pairs duplicate we were vulnerable and the opponents were not. My partner opened 2D, opponent on my right bid 3C, and my holding was:

♦—9, 8, 7, 4
♥—J, 7, 3
♦—Q, 2
♣—A, K, 6, 4

A bid of 3NT would not have shown the character of my hand and the same criticism applies to a 3D bid. If my opponent had passed, my natural response would have been 3C, and I decided that a double would be the best way of informing my partner that my main values were in the opponents' suit. It is true that this could lead my partner to believe that I had a bad hand but with defensive values in clubs (say Q, 10, x, x), but with such a hand I would prefer to pass. I certainly cannot advise a bid of 3NT on this hand because the man on your left may hold a suit of spades or hearts and put you down whereas 5D or 6D may be unbeatable.

My partner's hand was:

♦—Q
♥—A, K, 9, 8, 2
♦—A, K, J, 9, 8, 7
♣—8

Should she leave the 3C double in? In my view assuredly she should not because her two-bid was made on a special distribution of which her partner is as yet unaware. Of course you can construct hands on which leaving in the double would be profitable, but nothing is more contrary to good bidding principle than to torment yourself with fanciful possibilities of what is in your partner's hand. You must note the information given by your partner, but it is your own hand which you must bid. This hand demands that you should bid 3H over the double. The auction will then proceed to game in hearts. In fact 6H or 6D is unbeatable on any lead, but no expert player would congratulate himself on arriving at either contract in a tournament.

Her are the four hands:

North
♦—Q
♥—A, K, 9, 8, 2
♦—A, K, J, 9, 8, 7
♣—8

West
♦—A, J, 10, x, x
♥—10, 6, 5, 4
♦—10, x
♣—5, 3

East
♦—K, x, x
♥—Q
♦—x, x, x
♣—Q, J, 10, 9, 7, 2

South

♦—9, 8, 7, 4
♥—J, 7, 3
♦—Q, 2
♣—A, K, 6, 4

If fact my partner, a very experienced tournament player, left the double in and we got a bad result, opponents being only two down.

On the world scene, particularly the United Nations, Mr. Engel said, the United States has "diminished its influence" by a policy which did not support ratification of an international covenant on human rights.

Welfare Funds Report Increase In 1960 Spring Campaigns

New York--A total of 73 Jewish federations and welfare funds reported an average national increase of 3.6 per cent from the same contributors as of June 17, in the closing stages of their campaigns, it was announced by Irving Kane of Cleveland, president of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds. The central community campaigns raise the bulk of all American Jewish philanthropic funds for local, national and overseas Jewish needs, with the United Jewish Appeal the largest single beneficiary.

Among the 73 cities reporting are ten which have exceeded or equalled their final 1959 totals. These are: Boston 0.7 per cent; Cleveland 5.2 per cent; Detroit 1.7 per cent; Toronto 8.7 per cent; Dallas 2.9 per cent; Louisville 6.9 per cent; Phoenix 7.9 per cent; Tucson 2 per cent; Canton 9.3 per cent; and San Jose 7.8 per cent. Two more communities, Philadelphia and Newark estimate that their final results will surpass their 1959 tallies.

Total funds raised by the 73 cities reporting are $57,482,169 as compared with $55,476,141 raised last year. (These figures do not include New York City totals.) Most large and intermediate cities are well past the three-quarter mark, while the small cities are not quite so far advanced.

The average increase from comparable givers for 18 large cities (excluding New York) is 3.7 per cent. This virtually parallels the national average. These cities have thus far raised $43,549,357 against a total of $41,979,677 raised in 1959. Only one of these cities, Pittsburgh, reported a loss, 3 per cent, under 1959.

Among the intermediate cities, 30 communities reported an average increase of 4.1 per cent, as of June 10, with $10,711,437 raised this year against $10,291,473 in 1959. Three cities in this group reported campaigning slightly behind their 1959 pace.

Twenty-five small cities, those with a Jewish population of 5,000 or less, report an average increase of 1.2 per cent over last year, also as of June 10, with $3,159,173 raised thus far as compared with $3,121,954 raised in 1959. There was a wider fluctuation of results noted in this group, with eight registering decreases under last year and four showing increases up to eight per cent or better.

Communities cited the following as key elements affecting the drives: initial examples of working as well as giving by top leaders, many marked increases by givers in the $1,000 to $5,000 bracket, intensified campaigning by trade and industry units, stress has been placed on the full range of responsibilities--overseas, local, national--combined in the federation and welfare fund campaigns. For the first time in several years there were no emergency headlines for Israel's needs. Instead, there was a more mature approach to Israel's long range needs and to the enormous backlog of unmet needs. This included shifting some 60,000 immigrants from Ma'abrot to permanent housing and the consolidation of agricultural settlements.

The Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds is the national association of 216 local federations, welfare funds and community councils. These central fund raising and community planning organizations represent more than 800 Jewish communities throughout the United States and Canada.

BIGGER SURPLUS IN '60, SMALLER ONE IN '61

President Eisenhower's budget surplus for the year to end at midnight next Thursday will be a lot bigger than anybody has been guessing so far. "Appreciably larger" than the $200 million surplus he forecast this past January, according to informed Washington authorities.

President Eisenhower's budget surplus for the year to start the next morning, July 1, will be a lot smaller than anybody has been suggesting to date. "Substantially smaller" than the $4.2 billion surplus he predicted in January, according to realistic Washington sources.

The President's record for his eight budget years from mid-1953 to mid-1961 will be exactly half in the black, half in the red--four surpluses, four deficits.

And the most spectacular budget achievement of his Administration will be the fantastic switch from the biggest deficit in peacetime history in 1959 to a modest surplus in 1960--a swing totalling more than $13 billion in only a 12-month period.

Not until the last hours before the books actually close on the 1960 fiscal year will officials publicly go on the line with precise statistics on the extent to which government income is exceeding outgo this year. But it's obvious that, despite a much lower than anticipated tax take from corporations, other factors have emerged to keep the budget in the black.... Such as a heavier tax take from individuals.... Savings on carrying the national debt due to the recent drop in interest rates and thus in the Treasury's borrowing costs.... Lower than expected spending on farm crop supports.... The willingness of the Democratic-controlled Congress to limit spending programs....

When put together, the figures raise receipts in 1960 to well above expenditures--and considering that this is a result few of us believed possible in January, it warrants more than a passing yawn.

But the next budget? Already the $4.2 billion surplus forecast with which the President startled the nation in January seems doomed.

For this projection assumed that Congress would vote a postal rate increase bringing in $554 million. Congress is ignoring the request.

It assumed Congress would not vote a pay hike to government employees. Congress is voting one totaling $697 million a year.

It assumed Congress would not

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

THE MASTER: Alfred Hitchcock just arrived in N.Y., after a round-the-world trip, to launch his latest movie, "Psycho." He's also just sold 78 TV films to NBC, thereby extending his TV series to a 7-year record run. "It's just money for my estate, I suppose," he shrugged. "A dreadful word, 'estate.' It's a thing that will go to some little boys I haven't met and who someday will grow up and marry my granddaughters."

But in the meantime he's enjoying the work, the money and the fame. At their Bel Air home, they dine on delicacies imported regularly from Britain and Scandinavia, and sip wines he personally selected in France. For their joint birthday party they brought friends in a chartered plane to their chateau in Santa Cruz. On his trip he was recognized everywhere, from Rome to Japanese villages where crowds gathered at each station-stop. Jim Hagerty might have done well to have taken Hitchcock along.

Although he's been at the peak for 25 years, Hitchcock is the favorite of the "New Wave" of young movie-makers in France. They gave him a party during this trip, and offered precise analyses of his films: "They read into my movies things I never knew I had."

When he arrived at Sydney, Australia, he couldn't resist sending an undated cable to his friend, Sydney Bernstein of Granada TV: "Just Arrived at You." There he gave a typical Hitchcock party, with black drapes covering the windows of a room bedecked with illies, while organ music played. The guests had to pass an open hearse at the entrance and then stride through a row of eight beauties wearing widows' weeds.

He prefers to create his movie plots. "North by Northwest," which has grossed $14,000,000, was developed from his own plot--which he sold for $100. He'd rather do that than risk adapting a Broadway hit play. He cited Broadway smash-hits which become flop movies, and said it was because the buyers had only N.Y. instead of international perspectives. For prime example he points to "Harvey," whose movie rights went for $1,000,000.

"Harvey" started the practice of having stars participate in film-production deals: With the million-dollar story price, the company did not want to hire a top star at top salary. They persuaded Jimmy Stewart to take the role, on a 50%-of-the-profits deal. Stewart netted nothing from it, but earned a fortune from his next two participation deals.

He's been prophetic in his film-stories: In "Notorious" he showed Nazis finding haven in Argentina--where Adolf Eichmann later was found. In "Foreign Correspondent" a political leader was slain by a gun hidden in a camera--a year before a similar murder actually took place. In 1944, he and Ben Hecht did a movie about an atomic bomb. They inquired about uranium from Dr. Millikan at Caltech, who said: "You want to get arrested?"

Hitchcock's next movie will be about a plane carrying a jammed repeal or reduce present Federal taxes on telephone service, telegrams, travel. "Losses" ranging from a few hundred millions a year and up are becoming probable instead.

It assumed Congress would not boost the military budget above the Administration's figures or approve other new spending projects. As the 1961 year rolls on, all the odds are that spending programs will be expanded, the budget will swell. It certainly won't shrink.

But still a surplus in the next year? Yes--a billion or two under the original estimate, but still a surplus.

Of course, the fundamental behind every prediction of a budget surplus in the 12 months now to begin is that business will remain strong enough to produce the taxes from us and from corporations. The official estimate is that the economy will be producing goods and services at a rate approximating $515-$518 billion as this calendar year ends, against a rate of only moderately over $500 billion now. If, instead of rising, our economy goes into a perceptible slide, that surplus will fade into a deficit FAST.

On the basis that the economy will live up to the official expectations, though, the first two budget years of the 1960's will be comfortably in the black--against only three budget surpluses in the entire decade of the 1950's.

The first GOP Administration in a generation is at least bowing out of office with one of its most cherished goals attained.

H-bomb which has to be dumped somewhere -- the Atlantic, the Antarctic, the Pacific, someplace where prevailing winds won't carry the fall-out. Where? Hitchcock will find a way.

THE REVIEW: Joshua Logan, now filming "Fanny" in Marseilles, said that in show business you forget the boosts and remember all the knocks. He recites, from memory, the notices on his first Broadway show -- particularly Brooks Atkinson's line, "the entire production is feckless." For a whole day he thought it was a rave, until he looked up "feckless" in the dictionary.

THE REWARD: Coronet recently ran an article about Bobby Hill, a 14-year-old Negro boy from Waycross, Ga., who arranged an airlift of $400,000 worth of medical supplies to Dr. Albert Schweitzer. A Kansas City lumberman, Ralph L. Smith read about it and did something about it. This week, Bobby was flown in from Naples, where his father is an Air Force Sgt. At the White House he receives the President's People-to-People citation. And then Mr. Smith will present him with a 4-year college scholarship.

THE EXPERTS: The Chevaliers of the Confederacion de Tastevin -- the famed French order of Wine Experts -- arranged with Henri Soule to hold their annual dinner at his Le Pavillon restaurant. Soule agreed to the menus, wines, prices, etc., for the party of 25.... Soule then decided to make his own test: He removed all the labels and corks from the wines they'd ordered. The Tastevin experts couldn't tell a Bordeaux from a Burgundy, one grape from another.

THE ACTRESS: Wherever Vivien Leigh happened to be, during the actors' dispute at 8 p.m. she always took out her cosmetic kit and started to apply lipstick, eyebrow pencil, etc. "I can't help it," the star explained. "I always make up at 8 o'clock."

Of Geniuses And Mortals

Unless his team goes all the way and wins the American League pennant, Paul Richards of the Baltimore Orioles once again has lost his opportunity to be named Manager of the Year.

It's not that Paul hasn't proved himself worthy; it's not that his team isn't still winning. The trouble is that Casey Stengel came back from the hospital, and the Yankees immediately began to move.

Because of this, the writers are hailing Casey for his greatest achievement in his 12 years with the Yanks; and so, when the voting is conducted at season's end, Richards is almost certain to lose again.

What should hurt Paul — it hurts me, anyway — is that Stengel is getting all the credit for something he did little to accomplish. Oh, it is true enough that the Yanks started to win on the day Casey returned; it's true enough that while he was gone, the team played only .500 ball. But the sad truth — sad insofar as my high regard for Paul Richards is concerned — is that Stengel was lucky, got back just at the right time, and capitalized on some moves made in his absence by interim manager Ralph Houk.

Well, I suppose that's a little bit harsh. Stengel did make one move by himself, even though Houk's tactics inspired it. My beef is that Houk is being played up only as the manager for whom the Yanks played .500, while Casey is the genius who snapped the team's slump. What everyone forgets is that prior to his illness, Casey had a record of only one game over .500 himself.

While Stengel was away, these things happened. First, Houk got the pitching rotation straightened away. I guessed in April that New York should have the best pitching in the League, and at the beginning of this month, that opinion began to have some substance.

Second, Houk took the bit in his teeth shortly before Stengel was due to return. He benched Casey's left fielder, Bob Cerv, and installed Hector Lopez, who had been riding the bench for more than a month, and whose value as trade bait thus had declined badly. Lopez immediately began to hit hard and often, and his defensive work showed marked improvement.

Third, in the late innings, Houk again risked incurring the regular manager's displeasure by sending Tony Kubek to left field as a defensive measure in the late innings and installing Cletis Boyer at shortstop. Kubek, who is rated by the Yanks as the team's best left fielder, had little to do out there. But Boyer made a solid impression with his spectacular fielding and sharp hitting. Stengel had kept the kid on the bench, complaining that he couldn't hit.

And one more thing happened. Mickey Mantle began to hit.

As luck would have it (Stengel's luck, I mean), all these events came together in the last few days of his absence.

Into the dugout came Stengel on his first night back. The Yanks had lost a heartbreaker to the White Sox the night before because Gil McDougald had played the worst game of his career. Gil had not been hitting. Now that he was falling apart in the field, something had to be done.

Aware that Boyer had looked very good in recent games, and noting that Lopez was hitting hard in left field, Casey did the logical thing. He benched McDougald, and installed Cletis at third. He kept Lopez in left.

And just like that the Yanks began to win.

Several days later, the Yankee players were discussing their resurgence, and they agreed enthusiastically and unanimously that the comeback by Mantle had been the catalyst that had made the formula work, the cement that had glued the team into a winning mold. Mickey was the big man on the club, they said. They needed him. With the center fielder hitting hard and fielding sensational, despite his bad knees, the contagion had spread to all the others. They had rallied behind Mantle. None of them mentioned the manager's contributions.

A year ago, most of the better known baseball writers were swinging to Stengel's defense in the face of his team's collapse. It wasn't his fault, they said, although many of the Yanks bitterly hated him, and blamed him. Now the team is winning, and he is getting all the credit. Heads he wins, tails everyone else loses.

Nothing wrong with that, of course, except I feel it is grossly unfair to Richards and Houk. The Yanks at the moment have no injuries to speak of, a superb 11-man pitching staff, with two others ready at Richmond to step into any breach that occurs; and a heavy-hitting, well balanced lineup. Richards is staggering under the load of injuries to such as Triandos, an undermanned (nine-man) and sore-armed pitching staff, and a rather nondescript lineup, when you compare it with the powerhouse of the Yankees.

But Richards annually does so much with so little that he deserves the kind of recognition that Stengel is now getting; especially since almost all the groundwork for the Yankees' recent spurt was conceived and placed in operation during the manager's absence.

It seems only fair that a column that has ridiculed and criticized Mike Higgins so often in the past should take advantage of the opportunities (as yet, rare) to say something good about him. This happens to be an item of significance. The Red Sox players, according to all reports, were unanimously in favor of Higgins' return. Those who were on the squad last June said they regretted to see him get fired in the first place, and they are very glad to have him back.

Such a testimonial from those who are most concerned speaks very well of Higgins. It impresses me, although it doesn't alter any opinions expressed in this space in the past.

As a matter of fact, I sort of hold my breath every time Mike's name is mentioned, for fear of hearing that Sal Maglie will be asked to go on an extended scouting trip (as a personal favor to The Great Sportsman), with you-know-who, Boo, replacing him as pitching coach. Even the players should be disturbed at that possibility.

For the first time since he became a big league manager almost ten years ago, Al Lopez does not sound optimistic when he says of his defending champion White Sox, "We'll be all right." If it were someone else managing the Chicago club, there probably would be a new manager by now. But Lopez is a magic name, and such a highly respected one that even such an explosive character like Bill Veeck hesitates to give him the ax.

The results of this season have been particularly galling to Lopez for a variety of reasons. His pennant-winning Cleveland Indians of 1954 turned out to be a one-year champ. This rankled Al for years. With last year's White Sox, he was certain he had licked that jinx.

Most of the reasons why baseball writers thought so highly of Chicago were that Lopez himself convinced them. "We're 25 percent better than we were in 1959," he told everyone time and time again.

I may have more comments about this soon. But for now, let it be known that the calm and patient Mr. Lopez is beginning to show signs that he has had it. He is losing his patience and his temper, arguing quite frequently with the umpires, making big issues over small incidents, and growing more grumpy with every setback.

This is not to say that Al Lopez will be fired; yet, if the White Sox don't straighten out in a hurry and climb back into the race, you can look for Al to retire, or otherwise depart, for some reason or other — quite possibly, genuine illness, brought about by aggravation caused by the failure of his "25 percent stronger" club to look even remotely as good as last year's champions.

It means, in short, that in his second chance, Lopez again has handled a one-year team. Al may not be able to bear the idea. And that's what grows ulcers and leads to breakdowns.

Laboratory Explosion Kills Youth Who Made Bombs For Anti-Semites

MONTEVIEGO, Uruguay. — A 17-year-old Argentine was killed last week in the explosion of a laboratory which police said was used to make bombs for anti-Semitism campaign.

The explosion occurred about the same time a bomb went off in a synagogue. Bombs were discovered in two other synagogues and removed before they could explode.

The youth, Horacio L. Georgetti, was the son of an Argentine exiled here in the time of Juan D. Peron. Police said he and two Uruguayans, who were seriously injured by the explosion, were making bombs with nitroglycerine in a crude factory on the outskirts of Montevideo.

Police said it was a bomb from this factory which exploded last week in a synagogue in the center of the city, damaging the building and breaking windows in a large area nearby.

Police said, according to statements taken from the Uruguayans injured in the bomb factory explosion, all three belonged to a branch of an international anti-Semitic organization. Georgetti made frequent trips to Buenos Aires and police said he presumably obtained explosives there.

An Interior Ministry official said the anti-Semitic campaign possibly had been intensified because of Adolf Eichmann's arrest in Argentina.

Berlin Judge Convinced Hitler's Deputy Is Dead

BERLIN — A denazification court judge said here he was convinced that Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy, was dead.

The court, the only remaining denazification court in West Germany and Berlin, met to rule on Bormann's Berlin estate.

It confiscated 35,000 marks ($1,400) worth of property — one plot of land in West Berlin. Judge Hans Wuerzburg said:

"Bormann was not one of the Nazi leaders well known to a large public. But after the flight to England (in 1941) of Hitler's deputy Rudolf Hess, Bormann acquired a position of power which he gradually extended."

Convinced of His Death

"He carried out brutal orders of Adolf Hitler and even executed them. He is also partly responsible for the fate of Jews in the German-occupied territories during the Second World War."

The judge said the court took into account that Bormann's seven children had refrained from expressing any Nazi ideology.

Opening the trial the judge said:

"The court is convinced that Martin Bormann is dead."

Saw Bormann's Body

"A death certificate was issued by a court at Berchtesgaden, Bavaria, on Jan. 30, 1954, after the former Hitler Youth leader, Arthur Axmann, had given evidence that on May 2, 1954, he saw Bormann's dead body lying in a Berlin street as the Russian troops were moving in."
