

Lag In Restitution Payments Seen For Austrian Victims

VIENNA — Restitution payments to victims of Nazism in Austria, as provided by the laws adopted by the Austrian Parliament last year, may have to be postponed for another year, it was indicated here today by authoritative sources. The possibility of such postponement was attributed to the fact that, under an agreement concluded last June between the Austrian and the West German Government, West Germany is to contribute 321,000,000 German marks — approximately $80,000,000 — to the Austrian fund for compensation payments. The agreement must still be approved by the West German Parliament. Because of the recent elections, a new Parliament must be organized, and this is not expected to be accomplished before November.

Israel Bible Champion Takes World Title

JERUSALEM — Rabbi Yihye Alshekh, Israel's Bible champion, won the world Bible championship at the second International Bible Contest which ended last week.

Rabbi Alshekh and Mrs. Yolanda DeSilva of Brazil were tied with perfect scores and were each given an additional question to decide a single winner. Rabbi Alshekh took the title with a total score of 65 out of a perfect score of 65. Mrs. DeSilva took second place with 63 points and Tuvia Goldman, the United States Bible champion was third place winner.

Trade Increases Between U.S.-Israel

NEW YORK — A sizeable trade increase in the first half of 1961 between Israel and the United States was disclosed in a report by the American Israel Chamber of Commerce and Industry which said that the two-way trade during the six months totalled $84,524,400, or an increase of 16 percent over the corresponding period in 1960.

The figure for the first six months of 1960 was $79,773,600, then a record high.

Algerian Rebels Burn Jewish Shops

PARIS — The Jewish quarter of Oran, Algeria, was invaded last week by Algerian rebels who burned down four Jewish shops.

The incident, it is feared, may foreshadow renewal of the violence which broke out on Rosh Hashonah and continued to Yom Kippur.

French security forces have been guarding the area, but the rebels broke in undetected under cover of the night.

Young Russian Poet Savagely Attacked In Soviet Newspapers

LONDON — One of Russia's most popular young poets came under savage attack by Soviet literary critics for a poem denouncing anti-semitism and hinting it still prevailed in the Soviet Union.

The poem, "Babi Yar," by Yevgeny Yevtushenko, was published in the Literaturnaya Gazeta, official organ of the Soviet Writers Union, on Yom Kippur eve. It was considered one of the strongest indictments of anti-semitism by a non-Jew ever published in the Soviet press.

The poet was promptly denounced in two articles which accused him of slandering the Russian people and ignoring Communist party efforts to fight anti-semitism. One article called him a "pigmy cosmopolitan," an epithet widely used against Jewish intellectuals in the fearful anti-semitic campaign of early 1949.

The title of the poem was taken from the name of the ravine near Kiev, where the Nazis in 1941 machine-gunned to death 40,000 men, women and children on Yom Kippur of that year.

Noting that Russian authorities had refused all requests to set up some kind of a memorial at the scene of the mass slaughter, the young poet said in his poem he felt as old as the Jewish people and that he felt himself to be a Jew, tramping through ancient Egypt, one who is crucified on the cross.

Only Brief References To Israel Contained In Aramco Handbook

NEW YORK — The West's attitude towards the Palestine Arab refugee question and "a real sense of insecurity with respect to possible further expansion of Israel" are the major reasons why the Arab States have turned to the Soviet Union for arms and economic assistance, according to the "Aramco Handbook," published by the Arabian American Oil Company for the guidance of its employees.

The lavish volume, profusely illustrated and printed in The Netherlands, has been distributed by the oil company to public libraries throughout the country. The 343-page volume contains only two references to the fact that "the Arab States dispute Israel's claims to rights in the Gulf of Akaba," and a longer reference to the Arab-Israeli dispute as a source

Warns That Syrian Independence May Cause Egypt To Launch Attack

NEW YORK — Washington is sharply divided in its estimates of the outcome of the Syrian breakaway from the United Arab Republic, with one school holding that President Nasser may embark on a diversionary move such as "a great uproar against Israel" with the possibility of "some provocative skirmishes along truce lines policed by the United Nations."

Stab To Nasser's Prestige

The Wall Street Journal, in a roundup of Washington opinion on the Syrian development, said that one group of authorities sees the development as a serious stab at Nasser's prestige "which can only impede his capacity for Middle East mischief-making and tarnish particularly his campaign for a unified Arab country under his leadership." According to these authorities, "the immediate upshot thus should be an easing of one long-standing threat to political stability in a part of the world that has already shown signs of uncharacteristic tranquility in recent years."

The Wall Street Journal correspondent, Philip Geyelin, pointed out, however, that "because UAR President Nasser is a vain and vengeful man and by no means the only source of trouble in the Arab world, U.S. authorities fear the long-range effect of Syrian independence may be the reverse — more turmoil and new headaches, for the Kennedy Administration which has so far been spared Middle East explosions while coping with crises almost everywhere in the world."

Possibility Of Flare-Up

While indicating that Washington does not exclude the possibility of an Egyptian-Israeli flare-up, the correspondent discounted this possibility, explaining that "although picking a fight with the Israelis would have a great unifying influence among the Arabs, it would also risk a war that Egypt's Soviet-equipped army might very well lose, judging from the previous clash between the two countries when Israel invaded the Sinai Desert in 1956. Thus Mr. Nasser is thought likely to move gingerly on this front."

Meanwhile Israel's Chief of Staff, Rav-Aluf Zvi Tsur, gave a detailed report in Jerusalem last week to the Foreign Affairs and Security Committee of Israel's Parliament on the Syrian defection from the United Arab Republic, and the Israel-Syrian border situation.

While this report was presented, the new Syrian government declared in a policy statement over (Continued on Page 4)

Extremist Parties Demand Probe Of Arab Deaths

JERUSALEM — Demands for a parliamentary investigation into the circumstances of the death of five young Arabs attempting to cross the frontier into the Egyptian-held Gaza Strip were made in the aftermath of two days of rioting in Nazareth and incidents in Haifa, Acre and other centers.

Both the Mapam and Communist parties called on the Knesset presidium to put demands for a parliamentary probe of the whole affair on the Knesset agenda. The Herut Party asked that a special session of the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Security Committee be convened. An Arab deputy, Yussef Khamis, a member of Mapam, filed a parliamentary question to be answered by the Government when the Knesset reconvenes on October 4.

Hear Detailed Report

The Cabinet, at its weekly meeting, heard a detailed report by Minister of Police Behor Shitreet and was to hear from the Chief of Staff on action taken by the Army in the situation.

The northern areas where the rioting occurred last week, were quiet over the weekend, although tension remained high. Strong police patrols in the outskirts of Haifa and in the nearby Arab communities, which headed off potential demonstrators, prevented a recurrence of the rioting which started in Nazareth and continued for two days. The mayors of Haifa and Acre made strong efforts to pacify the population and to enlist Arab nota- (Continued on Page 4)

Gallup Poll Shows Increase In Number Of Americans Willing To Vote For Jew As President

PRINCETON, N. J.—Since 1948 there has been a substantial increase in the number of citizens who would vote for a Jewish candidate for the Presidency of the United States, it was disclosed here with release of the most recent poll conducted by Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Relations.

Concomitant with this three-year trend there was a decline in opposition to Catholic and Negro candidates for the highest office in the nation. In 1958 the poll showed that 62% said they would vote for a Jew if he were "a generally well qualified man" for the job. 28% said no and 10% replied they did not know. In 1961, the yes answers showed a percentage of 68. Only 23% said no and 9% did not know. This was the general picture among adults.

An interesting aspect of the survey is disclosure that an interim report in early 1960, during the swastika and synagogue defacing epidemic, showed that 27% said they would vote for a Jew as President 22% opposed and 6% offering no opinion.

Younger persons, said Dr. Gallup, show less prejudice than older people and people with a college background are more tolerant than those on a lower educational level. Of the respondents in the college category, 83% said they would vote for a Jew. Only 11% said no and 6% did not know.

In the high school category 73% replied yes, 20% no and 7% had no opinion. Of the respondents with a grade school education 55% said yes, 33% said no and 12% had no opinion. A further indication of declining prejudice on the age level was disclosure that 76% of the respondents within the 21-29 year bracket said yes as against 62% among the respondents who were fifty years old or over. The intermediate age group, 30-49, was 71% for, 21% no and 8% undetermined.

 Funeral services for Mrs. Julia Schneider, 80, of 69 Eleventh St., who died Oct. 7, were held the following day at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery. She was the widow of Morris Schneider. Born in Europe May 10, 1881, a daughter of the late Jacob and Anna (Sheffers) Schneider, she had lived in Providence most of her life. She was a member of Temple Emanuel, Temple Beth-El Sisterhood, Jewish Home for the Aged, Montefiore Ladies' Society, Miriam Hospital Association, and the Providence Fraternal Association. Survivors are two sons, Howard E. and Clarence S. Schneider, both of Providence; a sister, Mrs. Marnie Gunther of Miami, and one grandchild.

FRANK GOLEMBA
 Funeral services for Frank W. Golemba, a Cranston Republican leader and a former city solicitor of that city, who died Oct. 8, were held Oct. 10 at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery. He was 57.

Mr. Golemba was a Providence attorney, who lived at 59 Garden St., Cranston. He died in Miriam Hospital after an illness of six months.

He was also a member of the Ionic-Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Greene; What Cheer Lodge, Knights of Pythias; the Lions Club and the Aquila Club.

Born July 29, 1904, in Providence, he was a son of the late Morris and Fanny (Gorden) Golemba. He had lived in Cranston for 22 years.

Mr. Golemba was a graduate of the former Technical High School in Providence, of New York University and of the university law school. He passed the Rhode Island bar in 1929.

Mr. Golemba was the husband of Mrs. Alyce (Hertz) Golemba. He also is survived by a son, Michael Golemba of Cranston; and by two sisters, Mrs. Nathan Hodosh of Providence and Mrs. Betty Berns of Tonawanda, N. Y.

As city solicitor in 1959 Mr. Golemba became a key figure in the controversy over the proposed home rule charter movement. He charged that many of the signatures on the petition for an election were irregular. The board of canvassers invalidated the petitions, but the Rhode Island Supreme Court reversed the action of the Citizens League for Home Rule.

Then Mr. Golemba supervised the drawing up of a legislative charter and succeeded in winning approval of both houses of the General Assembly. Former Gov. Christopher Del Sesto vetoed the proposal in 1960, however, and a few months later city voters elected a committee to draw up a home rule charter.

Psychoanalyst Says Emotionally Disturbed Cling To Prejudices

NEW YORK — A prominent psychoanalyst at Columbia University's Medical school has found that emotionally disturbed people frequently cling to rigid prejudices to fight off mental breakdowns. "But, often, prejudice aggravates the emotional affliction it is meant to relieve," he said.

Dr. Nathan Ackerman, clinical professor of Psychiatry at Columbia University and a research specialist in the psychology of family relationships, stresses that the quality of family life determines susceptibility both to prejudice and mental illness which he sees as deeply related. Dr. Ackerman expands on these themes in a monograph entitled Prejudice, Mental Health and Family Life, published here this week by the American Jewish Committee.

Noting that the harm inflicted on the victim of prejudice is obvious, Dr. Ackerman points out, on the basis of clinical evidence, that "no less malignant" is the effect suffered by the bearer. "Clinical observation suggests that harboring prejudice degrades self respect, induces rigidity, lessens the capacity to tolerate anxiety, weakens the sense of reality and reduces the ability to find new and constructive solutions to pressing problems in human relations."

Not all prejudices, however, are symptoms of mental disorder, Dr. Ackerman says. Emotionally healthy people may have a wide range of likes and dislikes, but they have no need to fortify themselves by tenaciously clinging to prejudice which tear down other persons or groups. Emotionally ill persons, on the other hand, to save themselves from cracking up, try to destroy someone else. He adds:

"But prejudice is a feeble barricade. Since the effort to hold oneself together by degrading another person is irrational, it ultimately collapses like a house of cards."

Dr. Ackerman deprecates the "destructive force" prejudice exerts in society. He views it as fortifying "a master-slave pattern of human relationships, as if the victim existed only to aggrandize the attacker — a pattern in which power is exalted for its own sake."

The family can play a particularly significant role as a home ground for the breeding of prejudice which in later life spreads to the public domain — as Dr. Ackerman puts it, "The familiar forms of prejudice become ultimately translated into the racial, religious and ethnic prejudices of the community."

In fact, Dr. Ackerman states that "families with intense, violent inner antagonisms may breed the fanatic fringe of bigots who incite organized violence against minority groups."

Describing the present day family, Dr. Ackerman said that instead of providing a "haven of protection and security," it often has trouble "holding itself together" and frequently splits into warring factions. Families are deficient in their resources for solving problems and conflicts, making decisions, fostering growth and creative development. They are often inadequate to the task of protecting the stability and health of their members, whether children, adolescents or adults and at the same time provide a fertile matrix for the formation of the destructive types of prejudice."

Court Refuses Bail For Israeli

LONDON — Magistrate Bertam Reece Sunday again refused an application to set bail for Shalom Scharks, who is being held in jail here on the application of the Israel Government for his extradition.

The religious school teacher is accused by Israel of hiding, "somewhere in England," 11-year-old Yossele Schumacher. That boy had been abducted from his parents in Israel, who feared he would not receive an Orthodox Hebrew education.

The court remanded Scharks for another hearing. His counsel insists that he does not know where the child is. Leonard Caplin, an attorney for the Israel Government in the extradition request, told the court that the Scharks defense is "drawing a procession of red herrings" across the missing boys' trial.

Warns Of Possible Attack By Egypt

the Damascus Radio that one of the aims of the new regime is "the restoration of the rights of Palestine Arabs." At the same time, it applied for re-admission into the Arab League.

The Israeli-Syrian border crossing, over the Bnot Yaacov bridge, in the north, was open for traffic for the first time since last week's Syrian revolt against the United Arab Republic. A United Nations military observer crossed the bridge from Israel into Syria without incident.

While official quarters here refrained from comment, the prevailing opinion appears to be that the revolt brought little change with respect to Israel's concern for the maintenance of border quiet. It is pointed out that the Syrians were not known for their observance of the armistice agreements even before the country's unification with Egypt in 1958, and there was little reason to assume that the situation will be any different after the dissolution of the UAR.

It is feared in Jerusalem that the new Syrian regime, comprising elements similar to those in the pre-unification government, may now use Israel as a means of proving her "true Arab nationalism," and also for diverting public attention from internal difficulties.

At the same time, however, it was emphasized that the revolt dealt a heavy blow to Nasser and forced upon him a more cautious line. From the wider strategic considerations, the dissolution of the United Arab Republic also broke up the unified military command which faced Israel from the north and the south, and strengthened the anti-Nasser camp within the Arab world.

The Syria revolt came as no surprise to Israel, as it was known here that dissatisfaction in Syria had been growing. While the new Syrian government comprises leftist elements, and appears to be leaning toward the West, observers here cautioned against drawing any premature conclusions regarding its ultimate line.

Aramco Handbook

tine Arab refugee situation was created.

In dealing with present tensions in the Middle East, the "Aramco Handbook" notes that "another cause has been the tragic impasse in the Arab-Israeli conflict. Current problems in the Middle East cannot be understood without a comprehension of how strongly the Arabs feel on this issue. The West's apparent indifference to Arab viewpoint and to the plight of the million or so Arab refugees displaced from their homes in Palestine has been both disillusioning and frustrating to the Arabs."

The editors added that "these feelings, coupled with a real sense of insecurity with respect to possible further expansion of Israel, largely explain why Egypt and later Syria turned to the Soviet Union for arms and economic assistance after failing to get what they wanted from the West."

An introduction to the handbook noted that it had been prepared by Aramco employees who are not professional writers and that the central purpose was "to help Aramco employees see the Aramco venture in proper perspective — to see what is happening today against the background of the past and in the light of current world affairs."

Opinions expressed, it said "do not necessarily represent official views of Company management."

No reference is made to Aramco's discriminating employment practices with respect to Jews.

Bridge

by Revoke

'Bridgerama'

A new and repulsive word describes an invention of first-class importance to tournament bridge spectators: "Bridgerama" has now been introduced in its latest and most efficient form. It consists of an electrically lit board on which the hands are set out in full. When a card is played the light on that card goes out. There is also a continuous commentary on the play from the announcer watching the players in the open room. At the side of the board the bidding is prominently displayed. This is certainly the most agreeable way of watching tournament bridge.

I recently took part in its try-out before an enthusiastic audience. For the first time spectators were able to follow with complete clarity the bidding and play of the hand from the comfort of their armchairs. For example, they could appreciate South's handling of this interesting deal, in 6D:

North

The ten of spades was led. Declarer won it with the ace and played one round of trumps to his own hand. He then led the jack of hearts, and when it held the trick he played the king of trumps. Clearly, if the trumps break 2-2 declarer's difficulties are over. When they failed to do so he rightly did not draw another round of trumps but led a heart in the hope that the long hearts would be with the three trumps. He was thus able to discard his two losing spades on the winning hearts. He then trumped a spade, entered dummy with a high trump, ruffed another spade and conceded one club trick. If he had drawn the trumps earlier on he would have lost his contract, because he would not have been able to get back to dummy to make his long spade.

Deaths

bles in this task as Communist agitators and other disaffected elements sought to incite the Arabs to further demonstrations.

Charges that the five young Arabs, killed in two different border incidents when they attempted to cross the frontier illegally from Israel to the Egyptian-held Gaza Strip, had been mutilated, were used by the agitators to whip up Arab ire. Police widely distributed the report of the official post mortem on the five bodies which established that the five had been shot from long-range and there were no signs of mutilation.

LABOR SHORTAGE

JERUSALEM — Despite a substantial increase in immigration during the first six months of this year, Israel is enjoying virtually full employment and even a slight labor shortage the Government reported today.

"Wonder why our electric bill's gone up?"

Happens every fall for most families. The family moves back inside after spending the summer outdoors. With the increased family activity, the extra and heavier use of appliances, and use of more lights, the bill goes up.

Then, too, everybody seems to use more and more electricity as time goes by. New appliances (perhaps you have a second TV in your home). New children (the more children, the more you need electric service). Teen-agers (they need good lights for their school work).

But even though your bill is higher, electric service is still one of the best bargains in your entire budget. Did you know, for example, that the average price per kilowatt-hour is actually less than it was 25 years ago?

Newark Temple Moves to Suburbs With Members

NEWARK — Temple B'nai Jehshurn, said to be New Jersey's oldest Reform Jewish congregation, will move to suburban Essex County, following most of its members.

The 114-year-old Newark congregation plans a $3,500,000 temple on a twenty-one-acre site in Short Hills. The tract, on South Orange Avenue, between Old Short Hills Road and East Hobart Gap Road, was purchased a year ago.

The congregation is one of the largest in the state. Out of its 1,100 member families, it is estimated, 850 have moved in recent years from Newark to the suburbs. The congregation now maintains a center in South Orange.

The plans call for main buildings — a sanctuary seating 2,488, a three-level school with twenty-eight classrooms, a chapel seating 180 and a two-level assembly hall.

The buildings will be connected at the main level by interior courts in the tradition of the Temple of Solomon.

The two courts, which will separate the sanctuary from the school on one side and the chapel from the assembly building on the other, will be used as outdoor play areas, for outdoor services and social functions.

Provisions also have been made for a social hall to accommodate 800 persons.

The main areas of the sanctuary, which will dominate the complex of buildings, will be formed by folded plate arches that will meet in a ceiling area containing twelve skylights, symbolic of the twelve tribes of Israel.

Editor's Mailbox

Dear Sir:

Mr. Antelman is to be complimented for his letter in your column of Sept. 29th. As a result, the Young Adults Division of the G.J.C. had a kosher dinner, and the affair was a success too. This goes to prove that what we need is a militant Jewry ready to speak the truth.

Recently I was at the home of a friend where there were a group of young people, including a Brown University student, discussing various matters. One of the problems discussed was the fact that there are approximately 400 Jewish undergraduates at Brown University.

Many of these students, the first two years at college, inquire about religious services and kosher meals, but then lose all hope when they discover that neither the Hillel Foundation nor the community has made such provisions. It's deplorable when a student inquires of a rabbi if he can obtain kosher meals and the rabbi answers, "If you want kosher meals, why did you come to Brown?"

At M.I.T. there is a rabbi who sees to it that all who desire, are given kosher meals, also, although he is a reform rabbi, he conducts religious services using the traditional prayer books, thereby satisfying all. Apparently he is more sincere than others.

Fortunately the Jewish community of Providence is not a poor one. Money is raised for various purposes. Can't a kosher dining room and a chapel be included? After all, we look to these college boys to be future leaders.

I would like to inquire through this column (maybe some of the readers can answer the question). What is the purpose of a Hillel Rabbi at a college — to give religious guidance or act as a social director?

Sincerely,
Harris Miller

Industrial Bank Reports Increases

The Industrial National Bank of Rhode Island reported nine months earnings of $3,198,958., an increase of $62,924 or 2% over the same period last year. This was equal to $2.67 a share on the 1,200,000 shares outstanding and compares with $2.61 for the first nine months of 1960.

Gross earnings totaled $19,043,518, up 3%. Operating expenses of $13,929,430. were up almost 7%, largely the result of higher interest costs on time deposits. While net earnings before taxes totaled $5,114,088, down 6% a substantial increase in interest from tax-exempt securities reduced the Bank's provision for income taxes, thus enabling net earnings after taxes to show an increase.

Israel Music Festival Idea Is Realized

TEL AVIV — The origins of the Israel Music Festival idea go back to the first Prades Festival in 1951 when Pablo Casals expressed a desire to play in Israel.

Casals was in the minds of a committee organized in Jerusalem in 1952 with the aim of making the Holy City a festival center. Plans were made for the First Jerusalem Festival to take place in 1953. The program was to include the performance of biblical operas and dramas, the premiere of Milhaud's opera "David" and the first stage performance of a choro-graphic version of the same composer's "Moses."

Unfortunately, the Jerusalem Festival never progressed beyond the blueprint stage. There were ideological objections: orthodox religious circles represented on the committee would not permit the appearance of biblical figures on the stage. And there were financial difficulties: the Binyanei Ha-Umah, the National Convention Center Building, scheduled to house the festival, could not be completed in time.

In 1954, a First Israel Music Festival actually took place. Haifa and Jerusalem were host to the twenty-eight Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music. Milhaud's "David" finally had its world premiere on this occasion and many international figures — composers and performers — came to Israel.

Last year, the Israel Government Tourist Corporation asked Alexander Schneider to organize a chamber music festival. Mr. Schneider obtained the consent of Casals to play and an agreement to hold the International Cello Competition in Jerusalem as well. So the Israel Government ended up by announcing a "First Israel Music Festival" for the second time. The Tourist Corporation was to be the host and the America-Israel Foundation a co-sponsor.

Participating Artists

The festival has assembled in Israel a group of fine musicians. The Budapest Quartet played sixteen Beethoven string quartets; Maureen Forrester sang Scarlatti, Bach and Hayden; Casals played Beethoven and Bach; a trio made up of Isaac Stern, Leonard Rose and Eugene Istomin performed classical and romantic chamber music; Rudolf Serkin played Mozart with the Israel Philharmonic; Alexander Schneider conducted a chamber orchestra; Israel's own excellent "Rinat" chorus sang under Gary Bertini; the Tel Aviv choir performed under Eytan Lustig, and the Israel Philharmonic itself helped to bring the finest traditional music in excellent performances to Israeli listeners and visitors.

It was widely regretted that little notice was taken by the festival organizers of the character, history and spiritual associations of Israel. Many picturesque towns and historical sites might have lent themselves to festive performances of ancient dramas, pagents, biblical operas and oratorios. Instead, intimate chamber music was played in huge auditoriums in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Haifa. Only picturesque Ein Gev on the shores of Lake Tiberias and Caesarea, Roman capital of Palestine and an old crusaders' town, were used for musical events, and these were not even particularly appropriate to the sites.

Syrian Revolt Becomes Gift To Ben Gurion

TEL AVIV — Prime Minister David Ben Gurion cut short his 75th birthday vacation at Sde Boker and hastened to Tel Aviv in connection with the Syrian revolt against Nasser.

The Prime Minister who is also Minister of Defense was maintaining contact with Chief of Staff Zvi Tsur over the Syrian developments in which rebellious Syrian troops succeeded in a revolt throughout the country against UAR President Nasser's regime.

Ben Gurion's desert retreat at Sde Boker had a large number of visitors bringing good wishes to the Premier on his 75th birthday.

An elaborate program to celebrate the occasion had been prepared but it was shelved when the Prime Minister said he wanted any festivities restricted to his family and a few close friends. Sde Boker members scheduled a small party in the communal dining hall.

Cables from notables throughout the world were received by the Prime Minister. The senders included Sir Winston Churchill, Burmese Premier U. Nu, the International Socialist Bureau, Prime Minister Tancrede Neves of Brazil, and many Jewish organizations and leaders.

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, on behalf of the World Zionist executive, cabled congratulations to the Prime Minister, in which Ben Gurion's "great contributions" to "the realization of the Zionist vision" were lauded.

A large number of persons made personal visits to Sde Boker to convey their congratulations. In Brazil, Gov. Carlos Lacerda announced that a street in Rio de Janeiro would be named in Ben Gurion's honor.

While the Wednesday birthday observance is based on the Hebrew calendar, in 1886, the Premier's year of birth, the Gregorian calendar date was Oct 16. It is expected that during October scores of dinners and other events throughout the Jewish world will be dedicated to the birthday anniversary.

Detroit Community Center Delays Decision

DETROIT — Intervention by a negotiating committee appointed by Max M. Fisher, president of the Jewish Welfare Federation, has resulted in a decision by the board of the Jewish Community Center to defer until Nov. 4 introduction of Saturday afternoon programs.

The Center's intention to introduce such programs created a furor in the Detroit Jewish Community and resulted in court action by Orthodox elements to halt it. Mr. Fisher in his personal capacity, named a negotiating committee which met with both sides to work out a compromise.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

THE NEW CONSUMER

Not ever in history has the U. S. consumer been analyzed so anxiously and relentlessly for clues to the economic trend as at this point in the 1961 business upturn. Although there is an understandable tendency to dramatize changes in spending by government and industry, you and I -- as consumers -- account for more than two-thirds of all the spending in our nation, are unquestionably the most crucial force in our economic structure.

Who are "we"? What are "we" likely to do? Why? For some revealing points, read the answers in the following interview with A. W. Zelomek, president of the International Statistical Bureau, visiting professor at the University of Virginia Graduate School of Business Administration, and expert on the U. S. consumer at work and play.

Q. PORTER: Who is the so-called new American consumer?

A. ZELOMEK: One thing is clear -- he has little semblance to the U. S. consumer of the past. In 1960, 58 per cent of American families received annual incomes of $5,000 or over as compared with 19.3 per cent in 1947. Despite rising taxes and higher living costs, his total retained income also is the highest on record.

Despite the fact that today's consumer has a greater debt, his total net equity (his financial assets minus liabilities) is at an all-time peak too. And the stress about the consumer being overly in debt is quite exaggerated, I think, for there has been a marked increase in the growth of savings per $1 of increase in debt in the past 10 years. In 1950, this amounted to 49 cents, but in 1960 it reached $1.10.

Q. PORTER: What are the most dramatic changes in the consumer spending pattern in recent years?

A. ZELOMEK: The most dramatic is the extent to which we are spending more and more for services.

In 1950, of every dollar he had to spend, the consumer put 33.3 per cent into services, 66.7 per cent into goods. In 1960, he put 40.2 per cent into services, 59.8 per cent into goods.

These rising expenditures for services mainly reflect our higher standard of living. Who can deny that few youngsters today are sent to a clinic to have their teeth cleaned, but instead are sent to dentists? Who can deny that youngsters, who have to have their tonsils out today are sent to hospitals for as long as needed?

Aside from spending more on the better things in life, I believe today's consumer is not as price conscious as would be suggested by the current stress on some of the new type retail outlets, which are featuring reduced services and promotional goods. Today's consumer wants a bargain still, but he wants quality to go with it. The demand for status has gained and will continue to gain and therefore the desire for nicer things, even at higher prices, will continue to increase.

Q. PORTER: How will consumers react to rising living costs?

A. ZELOMEK: The new U. S. consumer, in his desire for more and more services, is responsible in large part for the rising cost of living. Since the base years of 1947-49 on the government's consumer price index, prices of services have risen 53 per cent as compared with 18 per cent for prices of commodities. Prices of services which have jumped far more than 53 per cent are auto insurance, transit fares, obstetrical care, hospital rates, men's haircuts. Short of staying at home and doctoring themselves, there is little consumers can do to cut demand and so to put a check on prices of these services. In addition, since these are the very services which lend themselves least to automation, rising labor costs cannot be offset by increased productivity.

Q. PORTER: Do you expect consumers to add power to this upturn?

A. Zelomek: The U. S. consumer has not been frightened at any time since the end of World War II by changes in the economy, and this vital fact has moderated our postwar business declines. While consumer buying does reflect a favorable turn in the economy and there is no reason to expect 1961 and 1962 to be exceptions.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

A POEM THAT STIRRED A NATION

By Beryl Segal

Hardly a year has passed by since the death of Boris Pasternak, the author of the novel Doctor Zhivago, and once more the literary world of the Soviet Union is stirred by another work of art.

In the story "Doctor Zhivago" the author is critical of the new Soviet system and of the people who are entrusted with putting that system to work. He mentions also some Jews, but his main story is that of the Soviet system. Boris Pasternak was praised and condemned, applauded for his courage and prevented from accepting the Nobel Prize for literature. Boris Pasternak was a Jew.

But the subject of the new literary furore is something different entirely.

He is not a Jew. He is of Ukrainian extraction. His name is Eugene Yewtushenko, and he was born in Siberia. Unlike Pasternak, he is young, only twenty-eight years old. But he, like Pasternak, writes poetry and he is as popular among the youth of Russia as the older author was popular among the older generation of readers.

His poem that caused all the stir in the Soviet Union is called Babi-Yar, and it is about Jews entirely.

Let me tell you the story of the poem and how it came to be written.

In the year 1943, the Nazis came to Kiev and brought all the Jews of that city to a valley named Babi-Yar. There they were all killed and buried in a common grave. It is estimated that about 40,000 Jews met their death as martyrs in that place.

In November of the same year, after the city was liberated from the Nazis, the people of Kiev counted their dead. Not a single Jew remained in Kiev.

On the day after the liberation, a young Russian officer spoke at a rally of the people of Kiev, and he said about the 40,000 martyrs at Babi-Yar:

"In Babi-Yar we will build a monument to the memory of the Jewish victims. In Babi-Yar, we will erect a high tower that will forever send forth its light to the most distant places and will serve as a warning and a promise that such things shall never again happen."

That young officer was Nikita Khrushchev himself. In later years, in his printed speeches and pronouncements, that reference was deleted. Babi-Yar stands now deserted, overgrown with weeds, and Jews do not dare go there to say Kaddish for the souls of the martyrs.

But the poet Eugene Yewtushenko passed by the grave and he was moved to pity. Pity for the Jews who lie there unmarked, unremembered, and pity for himself. The poet knew that the Nazis were not the only ones that murdered. His own people, the Ukrainians, helped. He went home and wrote a poem, and he sent this poem to the Literary Gazette, Russia's leading journal for prose and poetry.

The poem in part tells of this visit and of his feelings.

"The graves in Babi-Yar have no monuments.

The place is itself a monument. I shudder when I see it.

I am as old as the Jewish people. I am a Jew."

And he goes on to say that he identifies himself with the Jews, with every Jew that was ever a martyr. He is like Dreyfus in France. He is like Anna Frank in Holland. He is the boy from Bialystok who was crushed by the boots of a drunkard.

The poem goes on to say: "I take off my hat and feel That I am getting grey slowly. I am every old man that was shot here.

I am every young child that lies here.
Never can I forget it."
And of himself he says:
"I have no drop of Jewish blood in my blood.
Yet with my hate and anger,
To every Jew-hater, I am a Jew.
And this is why I am a true Russian."

The poem was printed in the Literary Gazette, and that started the flood of praise and of criticism.

Those who praise it say that it was courageous of the poet and of the journal to publish such a poem. It is high time that things should be spelled out. The people of Russia must know that Jew hatred is degrading. That every Jew hater is a drunkard and a hooligan. That it is time to wipe out the evil from the face of the earth. That a Jew hater is not a true Russian.

On the other hand, there are those who condemn the poet and the journal for publishing a poem like Babi-Yar. The poet, they say, singled out the Jewish victims, while there are millions of unmarked graves in Russia, of people murdered by the Nazis.

In the meantime, the controversy grows. And all because of a poem. And I thought:

"It is better for a poem or a book to stir up a nation, than for them to be written and be ignored and be forgotten."

How we wish that poems and novels written in this country on similar subjects would make an impression, and become the subject of national controversy. But they are written and printed and are either never read or are soon forgotten.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

THE WISE MAN: An illustrious American scholar, whose reflections on the attainment of wisdom have been quoted in full-pages, bought a suburban estate for his bride-to-be. She chose the place and installed a gardener. The scholar arranged to present the deed of the estate to the lady as a wedding gift. But the wedding plans were canceled.

They were canceled because the wise man's associates had taken the precaution of hiring private detectives to check on the lady's background. Then the wise man and his bride-to-be were requested to appear at an attorney's office, where the detectives submitted their evidence. It consisted of the lady's criminal record--and her gardener's too.

The lady admitted all. But, she insisted, she hadn't deceived the wise man: "He never asked me."

THE GOLFER: The story is told of Ben Hogan, playing St. Andrews' golf course. He asked his caddy how far it was to the green, and the caddy said: "Oh, between 145 and 150 yards."... Hogan replied: "Make up your mind, boy."

THE LOSS: Mr. and Mrs. James Michener recently attended a party on E. 61 St. They parked their car nearby, and thieves broke into it and took Mrs. Michener's bag. It contained $200 in cash, the proceeds from a check Mrs. Michener had cashed. But the loss she minds --the only item she wants returned --is her address-book. "It had the addresses of all our friends throughout the world," she sighed, "and now we can't correspond with them."

THE SCALE: A famed-manuscript and autograph shop on E. 53 St. had a display of Presidential autographs. George Washington's is priced at $175, U.S. Grant's is

Rockwell Guilty In Domestic Court

ARLINGTON, Va., — George Lincoln Rockwell, leader of the American Nazi Party, was held in contempt of court recently for delay in making support payments for three children by a previous marriage.

Judge Hugh Reid of the Arlington County Domestic Relations Court delayed sentence pending an examination of the party's financial records, which he said were "as full of holes as a Swiss cheese."

Several verbal exchanges occurred between the judge and Rockwell during the hearing, and about a dozen of Rockwell's followers were ordered from the courtroom because they laughed at the proceedings.

Rockwell previously had been ordered to pay $200 a month for the support of his three children by his first marriage. The court was told the children are living in Connecticut in a house without adequate heat or sanitary facilities and are in need of medical care.

Rockwell contended that he could not make the support payments on time because he had to use most of the receipts for the party.

Artist Charged For Anti-Semitism

WESTPORT, Conn. — Alan F. P. Moyler, a 35-year-old freelance commercial artist living near Westport, is being held in $11,000 bail after being arrested and arraigned on 16 separate charges of violating Federal and State laws by spreading and mailing anti-Semitic propaganda.

According to police, Moyler has been, for three years, mailing anti-Semitic materials, scribbling slogans in telephone booths and other public places, and sending dead rats in the mails to Jews in this area. Government handwriting experts traced the offensive materials to Moyler, police said.

Greyhound Derby At Taunton Dog Track

TAUNTON — The champions greyhound racing world are already in action at the Taunton Dog Track, battling their way into the finals of the $25,000 added American Greyhound Derby which has its 13th running on Saturday, Oct. 21.

On Wednesday night the field of 64 candidates will be whittled down to those who still possess the mathematical chance of scoring enough points to move into the Derby final. As early indications show, the last of the qualifying rounds may see the majority of the greyhounds still in there, so close does this year's Derby appear.

While the six Derby winners entered in this year's Taunton classic appeared to have royal chances of gaining the select spot, their work has been cut out for them. Taunton's own Serape and Velvet Sis, winners of the American Derby and Florida Derby respectively; Mr. Stuff, the Hollywood Derby winner; Mac Tray, who garnered the Sodrac Derby; Cost Buster, Southland Derby champion and Broadway Donna, Revere Derby victor, are due to run into some tough opposition before gaining the title round.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Hollywood, Calif. — In our local "Guys and Dolls" Philharmonic Auditorium stager "Guys and Dolls," Janis Paige gifts Shelley Berman with a belt accompanied by this original felicitous whimsy: "Sugar is sweet and so is jelly, put this belt around your belly" . . . Janice then wails to her recalcitrant fiancée of 14 indecisive years: "In Rhode Island they don't have long engagements. They all get married!" Demands the maritally elusive Shelly Berman: "Then why is it such a small state?"

ERNEST Gold, who won an Oscar for his scoring of "Exodus," is married to Marni Nixon, a vocalist of exceptional accomplishment. When you see Mirisch Pictures' "West Side Story" and listen to Leonard Bernstein's incomparable music, you will marvel at Natalie Wood's beautiful singing voice. Don't like to disillusion you, but it's actually the singing voice of Marni Nixon.

PRIVATE-EYEFUL heart-wrecker Leslie Summers (my daughter) appears in the October 9 and 16 segments of the "Ben Casey" TV series. Leslie, whose real name is Charlene, had a torrid love scene recently with Paul Newman in the MGM movie "Sweet Bird of Youth." When the lingering kiss finally concluded, Director Richard Brooks told my young offspring: "That was swell, and thanks for doing it in one take, Leslie." My daughter gathered her trembling frame back into the semblance of one unit and gasped: "Are you kidding? I'm out of my mind to do that in one-take. I should have stalled it with seven or eight takes." Newman's blue eyes flashed. Nothing like praising a man's virility.

THOSE who howled they can visualize Doris Day, Carol Burnett and especially Connie Francis in the Belle Baker film role, but never non-vocalist Barbara Rush, aren't aware that Barbara used to front name brands and could belt with the best. My brother Billy Glason, one of vaudeville's biggest and best comic singles out of Boston, and now author of Funmaster, the comic's bible, wires me from New York that Belle Baker was the first femme single headliner and he was the first comedy single headliner to close a bill at the Palace. Billy adds that Belle led the simple life such as forever relishing a hunka rye bread and a piece herring. She was always fussin' and feudin' with other femme headliners including Sophie Tucker.

MAZELTOV to Mark Fraser Landon, "Bonanza's" Number One Fan and 13-year-old apple of Dodie and Michael Landon's eyes, who will be Bar Mitzvah October 7 at Wilshire Boulevard Temple, and a lifetime of leakproof fountain pens to you, son!

SOMEONE missed a good bet when "Berlin Melody" was recorded. The flipside of this single should have been "Don't Fence Me In" . . . Herschel "Herschie" Bernardi apologized to me at the opening of Ben Shapiro's new Renaissance on the Sunset Strip for his chin fuzz. "It isn't for a role," admitted "Peter Gunn's" Lt. Jacoby, "it's just that I want to prove my masculinity."

DON'T blame Milton Berle's wife, Ruth, for the Dodgers' failure to make the World Series. At the Hollywood party for the debut of the magazine Show Business Illustrated Ruth glued herself to a transistor radio in a far corner of the big room and refused to answer any questions while listening to a Dodger game. At times like this, even Miltie was second choice.

The Lachish District: Proof Of A Partnership That Worked

NEW YORK — Just over five years ago, one had to be an expert on Israel's geography to have heard of the Lachish district. Then one was told of official plans to take this region out of the archaeologists' hands and make it live. A new-style development was planned — and putting over the story proved a public relations man's nightmare.

A Crossroads

Now take a look at the area. There is Kiryat Gat that forms a crossroads for southern traffic and the region contains a settled population of 16,000. There are 3,200 farm units.

The district of Lachish occupies some 220,000 acres (900,000 dumas) in the heart of the country and at the narrows just below Jerusalem and between the Jordan frontier and the coast. Its southwest extremity lies close to the Gaza strip; its northern tip juts out into the Corridor. A battleground through the ages, it was, in October 1948, the scene of "Operation Ten Plagues", which changed the course of the Arab-Israel War.

A barren, open territory for centuries, Zionist colonization experts had their eyes on this expanse even in the early thirties, and, starting with Negba, kibbutzim were established at key points. In 1954, there were 36 villages dotted over the region — each of them a unit on its own, each a lone guardian of its environs, all of them a constant security worry to the Israel High Command.

The turning point was 1955. A comprehensive plan was introduced at a cost of 60 million Israeli Pounds and this provided for the extension of the irrigation network, road-building and a railway halt at Kiryat Gat, afforestation and reclamation with the planting of field crops and orchards. Most revolutionary of all was the creation of the township of Kiryat Gat as the 'capital' of the area. This urban center concentrated all the major services of the region, factories and workshops for light engineering and processing of agricultural produce. Here were located secondary and vocational schools, cold-storage facilities, a hospital and administration offices. Skilled personnel of professional caliber had to be directed to Kiryat Gat and given the type of housing their specialized qualifications would earn in the large cities.

The Jewish National Fund assumed the responsibility for the large-scale land reclamation and afforestation. Today, the sixty villages farm between them 16,000 acres of irrigated land, sustaining such industrial crops as cotton, sugar beet and ground nuts. There is an immense output of all kinds of vegetables, dairy products and livestock. Cotton production has multiplied seven times since 1957 and sugar beet has doubled.

What has happened has been a dramatic vindication of the policy of courageous long-term planning that has as its objective the fullest utilization of all of Israel's land resources and the integration of the country into a single economic unit. Lachish has proved a pilot plant in which the vision and energy of Israel's people, combined with the generosity of world Jewry, have brought off an economic and sociological achievement.

FREE TO TRAVEL

JERUSALEM — Israelis will be free to travel abroad after October 15 without having to obtain the exit visas which have been required for such travel since the establishment of Israel in 1948, it was learned here. The regulations originally curtailed travel in the interests of security and economics. Since 1955, they had been gradually eased and the Government recently found it possible to recommend to Israel's Parliament a bill for abolition of the requirement. The law will become effective on October 15.

PRISON TERMS

JERUSALEM — Four 16 and 17-year-old Arab youths were sentenced to prison terms of 15 to 21 months for leaving a restricted area without permission and trying to cross into the Egyptian held Gaza Strip.

Engaged — Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dress of 131 Fourth St., announce the engagement of their daughter, Rosilyn Alberta, to Milton Burton Bolski, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bolski of 128 Sumter Street.

Miss Dress is a graduate of Hope High School and the Rhode Island Institute of Pathology. Mr. Bolski is a graduate of Hope High School and the New England Technical Institute.

The couple plan to be married in a year.

COMPLETE TALKS

PARIS — Shimon Peres, Israel's Deputy Defense Minister, has completed a week of consultations and negotiations with French defense and Army officials and said he was "most satisfied" with results of the talks.

The Lyons Den

$55, Franklin D. Roosevelt's $75, Teddy Roosevelt's $67.50 and John F. Kennedy's $75.

THE SUIT: The $500,000 law suit brought by Filmorsa, S.A., against Orson Welles -- suit revealed recently -- is somewhat strange. The president of Filmorsa, Louis Dolivet had been an editor concerned with UN activities, under the sponsorship of Welles-- who put him into the movie business. Dolivet is co-producer of the current hit, "La Dolce Vita." His complaint that Welles had forced him to use Paola Mori, "an unknown," also is odd.

It's odd because I have a home-movie I made in Vienna around that period, with Dolivet, Welles and Miss Mori -- now Welles' wife ... Nor is it true that Miss Mori hasn't worked since. I saw her last month, in Malaga, starring in Welles' TV film on Spain.

THE CASTING: In Darryl Zanuck's film, "The Longest Day," the cast includes France's foremost theater couple, Jean-Louis Barrault and Madeleine Renaud. Barrault will play a priest and his wife will play a nun -- but they'll have no scenes together ... Zanuck, incidentally, again is giving employment to a female who has caught his fancy -- this time it's Irina Demich. He was asked about the possibility of her use in future films.

"I can never tell," said Zanuck. "My history shows that I give people a chance. What they do with it after that is entirely up to them."

MEMOS: Julie Styne is flying to Los Angeles to conduct the local premiere of "Gypsy," and to write two additional songs for Rosalind Russell to sing in the film version ... Stuart Millar, who signed Judy Garland for "The Lonely Stage," will produce the movie in London this spring ... Grove Press will publish the off-Broadway hit, "Red Eye of Love."

Lucy Daniels' new novel, "High on a Hill," is a remarkable book, about the sadness and hopefulness in a modern mental hospital. It's even better than her "Caleb, My Son," which won her a Guggenheim Award ... Alex Guinness, who left "Lawrence of Arabia" to star in "The Mutineers" in Spain, will return to the Lawrence film for three months' more work.

THE REPORT: Donald Scott, of the London company of "Sound of Music," arrived here to take over Theo Bikel's role. Co-author Russel Crouse asked Scott how the London company was faring. Scott told him about the grosses: "They are even standing in the ashtrays."

The Compass, in Chicago, launched Nichols & May, Shelley Berman, Ted Flicker's Premise and the new, brilliant "From the Second City." Flicker, incidentally, will open another Premise next month, in Washington ... Rod Steiger, now starring in Hemingway's "A Short Happy Life," will try movie-directing next ... Hal Holbrook will use no makeup in "Do You Know the Milky Way?" His last role, as Mark Twain required 2 1/2 hours of makeup at each show.

THE SHOWMAN: Billy Rose had a chance to install Ossie Davis' new play, "Purlie Victorious," into his theater, but didn't like the script. When he read the rave notices in the morning papers, Rose said: "Well, that's what makes the theater an interesting crap game. So interesting, in fact, that I won't play. I prefer to invest in AT&T or Allied Chemical -- because whether they go up or down doesn't depend on a handful of critics."

Newest Fashions For Fall And Fun

Autumn! Days are crisp and golden ... nights turn long and chilly. Phones buzz with plans for the crowd to get together again! What will it be — the season's first football game? A romp over hills wild with color? Or maybe a dress-up date ... cocktails and a theatre party in town.

Whatever the destination — dressing for cool weather creates a problem. You want to be warm and comfortable ... without bundling up like an Eskimo!

Fashion showings for Fall provide an answer — that's all but invisible. News-maker is urethane foam interlining — used in everything from rainwear to gloves, with every material from poplin to tweed.

The new linings give warmth and body — with hardly an ounce of added weight — to soft, dressy or stretchable fabrics. The wafer-thin sheets of foam are laminated (or bonded) to light outer fabrics before material is cut for sewing. For zip-out linings — or quilted robes — foam is "sandwiched" between two layers of fabric.

Result? Figure-flattering comfort ... plus a lively resiliency that helps a garment keep its shape. Soft fabrics will still drape easily ... and fight wrinkling ... great for clothes "that love to travel!"

Unlike other synthetics, urethane foam is porous. Laminated to fabric with good air permeability, it leaves fabric pores unblocked. This means year round utility of laminated garments.

The soft, sturdy lining will bar both cold and heat from reaching the wearer.

Colleagues and homemakers will be pleased to hear the new laminates don't require coddling.

They won't shrink or crumble in washing or drycleaning ... are quick-drying ... need little or no ironing ... are odorless ... bacteria, mildew and fungus resistant. All of which helps account for the rise from near-zero use of laminated knit goods in 1959 to over 90 million yards in 1961!

Slim Janes who can wear long 'n' lean tapered pants — and gals who hide over-ample curves under soft, loose lines — know the new laminates aren't "fattening"! Slivered 1/16" thin, they add next to nothing in "size"!

ROCKWELL RALLY

WASHINGTON — George Rockwell, commander of the so-called "Nazi Party", paid a $100 fine for disorderly conduct at two anti-Semitic rallies in Washington last summer. After paying the fine, Rockwell's group staged an anti-Semitic rally in Judiciary Square.

INTERFAITH DAY

ALBANY — Gov. Rockefeller issued a proclamation here which designated a day as "Interfaith Day" in order to "promote the traditional American spirit of true friendship and mutual respect between Americans of all sects and creeds."
