THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE of Christians and Jews announced plans this week for a four-year program, financed by a $325,000 Ford Foundation grant, to raise the general level of public discussion and understanding among religious groups differing on public issues. Dr. Lewis W. Jones, NCCJ head, pointed out that the increasingly complex and wider scope of governmental action was provoking religious differences on such questions as public support for parochial schools, birth control policies and Sunday closing laws.

THE KNESSET ADOPTED A RESOLUTION last week expressing regret that the Defense Ministry had distributed to all military personnel a booklet on the August 15 elections. The booklet was denounced as a propaganda device on behalf of Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's Mapai party.

A MEETING OF THE NEO NAZI German Reichs party, called to protest the trial of Adolf Eichmann as a "wholesale slander of the German people" was banned last week by police in Duisburg.

JO AHANA, A JEW WAS NAMED Chief of the Moroccan Cabinet for the Ministry of Commerce and Industry in Rabat. He had occupied the post for two years before he was dismissed.

THE LOWER HOUSE OF THE West German Parliament approved the report of a judicial committee which cleared Theodor Oberlander, the former West German Minister for Refugees, of charges of complicity in the slaughter of Jews and Poles in Poland during the war.

FORMER UN SECRETARY general Trygve Lie and other Norwegian statesmen are members of a new ORT committee.

PLANS FOR CONSTRUCTION of a farm village of 40 housing units and farm buildings for western newcomers near Rehovot received final approval this week from the Jewish Agency.

J. J. TRUNK, YIDDISH NOVELIST, poet, scholar and journalist, died in New York last week at the age of 74. Born in Poland and a protegee there of I. L. Peretz, Mr. Trunk came to the United States in 1941 and became a member of the staff of the Day-Morning Journal. He was the author of 20 books, including 7 volumes of poetry.

ISRAEL'S ELECTION CAMPAIGN for a new Knesset will be enlivened by the entry of four new lists — a Yemenite list, a Sephardic list and two more Arab lists. One Arab list consists of one name — Dagud Khuri of Nazareth, who announced he was unemployed and declined to tell where he got the 5,000 pound deposit required for filing a list. He also brought the money entirely in small bills, giving election committee officials a busy hour of counting. The election will be held August 15.

Israelis Defend Satire On Arabs

JAFFA, Israel — A small storm of protest has arisen here out of a rollicking Israeli satire by actors in Arab dress according to New York Times reporter, Lawrence Fellows.

The show, an assortment of sketches and songs called "Arab Fables" is being staged in El Haman (The Bathhouse), an alluring theatre and night club built into the rambling passages and high-arched interiors of a century-old Turkish bath.

Each night except Sunday 250 persons crowd into the theatre hall to see the actors lampoon Israel's Arabs, or perhaps Israel's Jews. Not everyone is sure which.

But most in the predominantly young audience shriek with laughter. The few who leave with anger and shame have been demanding that the show close.

The Jews who stage the show have made a ludicrous figure of the Arab, these critics say. The Arab is lovable but dim-witted. He murders the Hebrew language and imitates and flatters the Jews. He could hardly be more like the comedy Jew that pricked Jewish sensibilities in other countries, they argue.

But clearly the satire goes beyond that. It tweaks the Jews for their attitudes towards the Arabs in Israel. It ridicules the military rule over the Arabs and the restrictions on their movements. It spoofs the efforts to impose upon the Arabs an alien culture and ideals they cannot possibly accept.

Boys Confused

In one sketch, a teacher questions Arab schoolboys on Israel's history. The boys wax lyrical over the illustrious early Zionists and the heroic Israeli army's pursuits against the Arab states. But sometimes, as follows, the boys get confused:

TEACHER — Who can tell me why Independence Day is our greatest holiday?

PUPIL — Sorry, teacher, I was absent from class the day that was explained.

A song praises the wonderful life the Arabs lead in Israel. They can get permits to visit their friends, or to celebrate a wedding, or even to plow their fields. Life for the Jews would also be wonderful if only they could have it regulated for them by military government, it is indicated.

The authors of the show, Dahn Ben Amotz and Hayim Hefer, are young and highly regarded. Four gifted actors — Uri Zohar, Rahel Attas, Arik Einstein and Alisa Rosen — deliver the sketches and songs with enormous energy and in an ornate Hebrew that just misses being accurate.

Mapam Protests Censorship; New Groups Enter Campaign

JERUSALEM — The Arab refugee problem and the dominant Mapai Party's stand on that issue following Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's recent discussion with American President John F. Kennedy, was hotly discussed in the Cabinet here, and exploded in partisan attacks outside the Cabinet.

The left-wing Mapam is accusing Mapai of maintaining secrecy about the Kennedy - Ben-Gurion talks on the refugee issue — while informing the Mapai members of the Cabinet at a caucus. Mapam accuses Mr. Ben-Gurion of having adopted its policy for admission into Israel of some refugees, at least those who may be reunited with their families here — but keeping that decision secret due to the current Knesset (Parliament) election campaign.

Meanwhile, Michael S. Comay, Israel's permanent representative at the United Nations is due here at which time the Cabinet will resume discussion of that topic. The Government is maintaining strict secrecy regarding whatever plans it might have on the refugee issue, and it is expected that Israel's policy on the question, to be implemented at the next session of the UN General Assembly next September, may be decided in a week.

Eichmann Image Repels Germans

BONN, Germany — The West German housewife rose from her chair and angrily snapped off the television set, reports Gerd Wilcke of the New York Times. "I can't take any more," she apologized to her friends. "This man disgusts me."

The man was Adolf Eichmann. The housewife and a neighborhood couple had been watching "Epoch on Trial," a half-hour program of scenes from Eichmann's trial in Jerusalem. It is shown twice a week.

What had angered the woman was the Nazi jargon used by the former Gestapo colonel, his squirming and his tiresome references to superior officers.

It is a safe assumption that the woman's reaction to the filmed court proceedings was not exceptional among those viewing the programs. No specific information is available on just how many are watching it.

Trial Found Too Long

First observers agree, the length of the trial has diminished interest here. Second, Eichmann's lackluster personality, which surprised many, caused viewers to shun the regular programs.

Since April 11, the day the trial began, West German newspapers and magazines have given detailed accounts of the proceedings. But the impact of the articles becomes more difficult to determine the longer the trial runs.

This is a country where long debates take place in letter columns of newspapers, but no letters discussing the Eichmann trial or several smaller war crimes trials in progress in West Germany have appeared in any of a dozen representative papers since July 1.

People in restaurants or on trains or sports fields may talk about the Berlin crisis, but they hesitate to speak about the trial.

Verdict Awaited Eagerly

A teacher with a record as an anti-Nazi put it this way: "Most persons, after the initial shock felt at the opening of the trial, now cannot wait to have Eichmann sentenced. They know Eichmann is guilty, but they cannot

UAHC Declares Knowing Aid Given To Bigots

NEW YORK — The real estate industry, financial institutions, insurance agencies and Federal governmental agencies were accused by a leading religious leader of perpetuating housing segregation and thus contributing to the growing crisis of the metropolitan center.

These charges and other moral problems facing large metropolitan communities in meeting changing city patterns were outlined in a study pamphlet by Rabbi Richard G. Hirsch, of Chicago, "Judaism and Cities in Crisis," released this week.

The 103-page booklet was issued by the Commission on Social Action of Reform Judaism representing the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and its affiliated bodies.

The study deals with many moral and social problems which effects the metropolitan city in crisis, including the clog of transportation, need for better urban planning, population changes, higher educational standards, elimination of slums, and abuses of slum landlords.

One section includes an historical analysis of the Jewish views towards the city as it evolves from Jewish history.

"It would be unjust to place the blame for the perpetuation of segregation on any single group or

State Department Source Feels Rocket Project 'Presumptuous'

WASHINGTON — A State Department source advanced last week an admittedly "unofficial" view that Israel's security would be better assured if funds spent for "presumptuous" rocket projects were applied to compensation and repatriation of the Palestinian Arab refugees. There was no official State Department reaction to the Israeli announcement.

This source, insisting on anonymity, said Israel's main emphasis should be on settlement of the Arab refugee issue as a "giant step" toward regional peace rather than on plans for rockets with atomic warheads. In this view, "responsible small nations" should address themselves to pursuit of peace through implementation of principles of peace and justice rather than embark on an "obvious" drive for nuclear rockets.

Arab fears of Israeli expansionism, while described here as possibly unjustified, were "reinforced" by Israeli rocketry and atomic research. Also, according to this line of thinking, any "unilateral" atomic testing by Israel, in its small territory, could justifiably arouse Arab fear of radiation contamination of the region.

Since Israel is an isolated enclave in the Arab world, it should seek formulas for resolution of differences with the Arabs, beginning with the Arab refugee problem, rather than a policy indicated by rocket launching. This, according to the Department source, showed a tendency toward militarism rather than peaceful accommodation because such rocketry could not be reasonably linked with realistic Israeli economic and industrial needs considering Israel's size.

It was contended that Israel, dependent on outside aid and philanthropy should respond to the desire of the international community to limit atomic testing, avoid "presumptuous" rocket projects of enormous expense, and concentrate on concessions leading to peace with neighboring states.

In New York, the National Broadcasting Company radio network broadcast a report from its Jerusalem correspondent, Alvin Rosenfeld, who quoted Shimon Peres, Israel's Deputy Minister of Defense, answering the assertions made by a State Department source in Washington. NBC quoted Peres as saying:

"Each nation must be master of its own priorities and decide for itself what is vital for its well-being. Israel must take defensive measures, and things would be different if other countries such as Egypt abandoned aggressive tendencies."

THE LION is the King of Beasts and stalks his prey with little fear of attack from other animals. But when old age comes the lion falters. He is King of Beasts no longer. The other animals lose their fear of him and he is attacked and destroyed.

Fortunately men and women, unlike the lion, can have a happy old age—if they prepare for it. The best way to prepare for it, financially, is through a Sun Life retirement income policy. Let me tell you how.

Yeshiva Leaders Hail Federation

PERNDALE, N. Y. — A group of 90 principals of Hebrew day schools from all parts of the United States last week hailed "the increased interest of Jewish federation" in the financial problems of such schools and expressed the hope that this would lead to greater participation by federations in the financing of the schools.

That stand was taken by the principals as delegates at the fourth annual convention of the National Conference of Yeshiva Principals. The principals, in a resolution approved at the closing session of their convention, also said they agreed that if the federations had faced their "communal responsibility and supported days schools in the same measure that federations support other communal agencies, the need for Federal aid might have been obviated."

In another resolution, the principals endorsed the efforts of Chairman Newton Minow of the Federal Communications Communications Commission to improve television programming for children.

Hate Peddler To Get Five Years In Prison

RIO DE JANEIRO — A 20-year-old student held responsible for dissemination of anti-Semitic leaflets last spring at the time the Adolf Eichmann trial got under way in Jerusalem, will be prosecuted under a law calling for five years' imprisonment upon conviction, it was announced here last week by Prosecutor Sebastio Barreto.

The law was enacted two years ago, after it had been introduced in Parliament by the then Sen. Alfonso Arinos, now Brazilian Minister of Justice. It forbids the dissemination of race-hate materials, on penalty of five years' imprisonment. No one has yet been prosecuted under that act.

Last spring, police arrested two Brazilian students who had tossed anti-Semitic leaflets into the garden adjoining the Jewish Center at Sao Paulo. The students said their action was "just a prank," and told police the leaflets had been given to them by another student, Walter Piepke, 20. The two students were released with reprimands, but Piepke was arrested.

In announcing that Piepke will be prosecuted under the two-year-old anti-racist law, Barreto said, "Piepke is of German extraction. Had he been of Brazilian extraction, I would have believed him, as I believed the two other students, that he was engaged in 'a prank.' But since he is of German extraction, and furthermore used Brazilian students to spread the leaflets, I shall prosecute him."

Bundestag Passes Bill Against Nazis

BONN — The West German Bundestag, the lower house of Parliament, approved last week with one dissenting vote a bill urging 72 ex-Nazis now serving in the West German judiciary to resign. The House coupled the action with a warning that, if the advice was ignored, a constitutional amendment would be sought authorizing removal of such former Nazis with loss of pension rights and possible trial.

The measure is aimed specifically at judges and prosecutors who were involved during the Nazi period in court cases ending in "illegal death sentences." The measures called on such former Nazis to resign "voluntarily" before June 1962, and it assured full pension payments to those who did so.

The threat of removal action came in a declaration by the House that the constitutional amendment would be sought, under which procedures would be established to find which of such judges and prosecutors had been responsible for "inhuman and illegal" death sentences.

Attacks Denial of Jewish Rights

BUENOS AIRES — A resounding attack against the denial of full rights to the 3,000,000 Jews in the Soviet Union was delivered here recently by Yaakov Zerubavel, Israeli Labor Zionist leader director of the Jewish Labor Movement at Tel Aviv. Zerubavel was the principal speaker at the opening session of the national convention of Ahdut Avodah Poale Zion here.

Asserting that "we are not mixing into the internal affairs of the country," Zerubavel told the gathering that "what happens to the Jews in the Soviet Union is not merely a Russian problem. It is a Jewish problem and we cannot remain indifferent to the fate of our brethren in the USSR."

"The Jews in the Soviet Union," he continued, "are being robbed of their fundamental human right of establishing contact with their families in other lands or, with other Jews abroad, Jews inside Russia and outside that country had greeted the Russian revolution enthusiastically—although we of the Poale Zion had never given up our Zionism. But many of us had hoped that the Bolshevik revolution would lead to a spiritual revival among our fellow-Jews in the Soviet Union. Instead, freedom has been betrayed there.

"Jews in the Soviet Union are forbidden to make contact with Jews elsewhere, especially with Israel. They are forbidden to emigrate. They are being robbed of all fundamental human rights."

"I came out of the show with clenched teeth," said Yosifon in a dialogue published recently in The Jerusalem Post. Yosifon is a popular humorist here, born sixty-five years ago in Poland.

"I ask myself why these Israeli Jews are enjoying it so much and I am ashamed and embarrassed for them," he said. "This show at El Hamam is not humor. I demand that they take this mockery of the Arabs off the stage."

The authors maintain that Yosifon and most of the other attackers of the show have misunderstood the satire and laughter. In this dialogue, Mr. Hefer explained:

"The mistake that Yosifon makes is that this is not a program on the Arab problem but on the problem of the Jews in relation to the Arabs."

Laughter With Arabs

The audience, he said, laughs with the Arabs as much as at them, and at the absurdities of the way the Arabs are governed. Only Jews with a persecution mentality are offended, he said.

Mr. Ben Amotz studied the young faces in his audience and said they were typical of young Israelis. They do not look down upon the Arabs. Neither do they want the Arabs to give up their ways or their convictions. The feeling, he said, has made the show a success. It was recited in the chorus at the beginning of the satire:

"Is it not strange that two brothers should share the same house yet remain strangers to each other? Is it not true that the Jew and the Arab were nursed from the same bosom of history? Is the time not ripe for the brothers to become acquainted?"

These are about 200,000 Arabs among Israel's population of more than 2,000,000.

any single cause," states Rabbi Hirsch. "Nevertheless, some elements in our society are more directly involved than others."

Rabbi Hirsch charges the real estate industry with such malpractices as continued sanctioning of the maintenance of segregated neighborhoods, ostracizing real estate agents who sell property to Negroes in a white area, pressuring whites into selling property at a lower value at the threat of Negroes entering the neighborhood and then reselling the same property at a highly lucrative profit to Negroes, combating legislation against discriminatory practices, and refusing admittance of Negroes to real estate boards and professional associations.

"The real estate industry as a whole has operated on the basic premise that whites and Negroes do not want to live together and that any attempt to change their pattern of segregation will result in a loss of property values and a deterioration of neighborhood life," states Rabbi Hirsch.

"Not only have real estate boards sanctioned the maintenance of segregated neighborhoods but they have opposed all attempts to establish more liberal policies," the rabbi notes.

Similar charges are brought by Rabbi Hirsch against mortgage lenders, banks, savings and loan associations.

"It is virtually impossible for a Negro to get mortgage on property in a white neighborhood," pointed out Rabbi Hirsch. "Even if a Negro is fortunate enough to obtain a mortgage his problems are not over. Insurance companies are loath to grant coverage in Negro areas because of deteriorated conditions and in white areas because of fear of damage in case of race violence. If insurance is granted, the terms are invariably high."

Rabbi Hirsch accuses Federal government agencies and officials as "one of the primary forces sustaining segregation."

Rabbi Hirsch observes that when the Federal Housing Administration was established, it not only practiced, but encouraged segregation. Although the 1948 Supreme Court decision eliminated FHA racial policies, Rabbi Hirsch states in the pamphlet that he doubts whether the officials who administer the policies were able to reverse their attitudes and practices.

bring themselves to admit their own share of the guilt."

To a degree, the teacher's remarks were confirmed by a poll taken recently among 1,455 West Germans by the Institute of Applied Social Sciences in Bad Godesberg.

While 40 per cent were satisfied with the work of German reporters in Jerusalem, 32 per cent thought the press was overdoing it.

In the latter group, according to the institute, a large number of persons "accepted" the past but did not want to be reminded of it because "we did not know about the crimes committed by the Nazis."

"Moreover, the Federal government still permits local housing authorities to determine whether or not public and private housing projects shall be segregated," writes the rabbi.

Let's Make Up

By Jack Stein
 MAKE-UP ARTIST

Dear Mr. Stein:
 My friend and I have been watching a great many fashion shows recently and have admired the appearance of the models. Are these girls as beautiful as they appear, if not, what is their secret? I know that you work with models and wouldn't mind passing along the information as to what makes them look so great.
 Helen, Cranston

These young ladies have made it a career of looking well groomed. To look like a model, one must first understand the definition of the word. Here I quote Webster's Dictionary: Model -- "A person or thing considered as a standard of excellence to be imitated."

These girls and matron models spend a great deal of time at some school first learning the art of the profession. This does not make them into a model, but it provides the first steps in the right direction. Modeling not unlike any other vocation, requires continuous practice in figure control, make-up, hairstyling, walking, sitting and general good grooming.

Most of all, it is the continuous effort and hard work on their behalf to always look ultra feminine. Many of these girls are housewives or are occupied in a profession. They seem to find the time to always look perfect without neglecting their other activities.

Dear Mr. Stein:
 I have just passed my sixtieth birthday and feel a little out of place using cosmetics. What do you think of older women using make-up?
 A.M., Attleboro

You can be too young to use cosmetics, but there is no such thing as being too old. Every woman should compliment her beauty by the addition of a little make-up. You will not only look better, but it will also give you a lift, physically, and mentally.

Dear Mr. Stein:
 Should my liquid base and my face powder be determined by my complexion or my hair coloring?
 L.K., Providence

It is most important to select a liquid base that compliments your skin coloring. At times, it may have to be a shade lighter or darker than the hair color for contrasting results. For example, if your hair and complexion is dark, it would be advisable to use a slightly lighter base. On the other hand, if the hair coloring is very light, darkening the face will relieve a monotone look.

I remember that when I was a youngster, my mother would make me cross the street when we encountered a woman smoking a cigarette. I'm sure that many of you are too young to remember those days. Times have changed considerably, and now it is not only acceptable, but in many cases fashionable (that is if you're old enough).

Benson and Hedges has written a pamphlet as to the proper etiquette of smoking called "Cigarette Etiquette." Copies are available to individuals or large groups by writing to me: Let's Make-up, The R. I. Jewish Herald, 1117 Douglas Ave., Providence, or to Jack Stein, 80 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

COMMUTES SENTENCE
 TEL AVIV — President Izhak Ben Zvi recently commuted the life sentence of Dan Shemer, one of the three Israelis previously given sentences of life imprisonment for the assassination of Israel Kastner, formerly a leader of the Hungarian Jewish Community. Ben Zvi cut Shemer's sentence to 15 years. Two others convicted of that murder were Zev Eckstein and Joseph Tences.

State Says Devices Are Not Military Weapons

WASHINGTON — The State Department, in a letter by Assistant Secretary of State Brooks Hays to Senator Jacob K. Javits of New York, sought last week to justify the provision of American rockets to the United Arab Republic and specifically noted that Israel had experimented "most recently" with a similar rocket.

Mr. Hays said "... UAR agreed to purchase several small Javelin lower stage and Viper upper stage rockets of a type hitherto used for propulsion ... in connection with various types of research testing. It is our understanding that the UAR planned to use these rockets to study meteorological conditions in the upper atmosphere, including measurements of wind direction and velocity."

According to Mr. Hays, "this is somewhat the same type of scientific experiment as we have ourselves been conducting at Wallops Island; and a large number of foreign countries, notably Italy, Japan, and, most recently, Israel, have also carried out during and since the International Geophysical Year."

He said that "exports of Javelin and Viper type (rocket) vehicles have already been made to a number of countries and we recently released a somewhat similar rocket to Sweden ... Since these items cannot be regarded as effective military weapons, no objection was raised to the export of these rockets from a security standpoint."

Senator Javits commenting on the letter, told the Senate that "within two days" after Israel had "a successful scientific achievement, which all free peoples should hail with joy ... we now, through the State Department, give Nasser what he asks for, although he originally could not get it from the United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration, just to help him out because he is a dictator, and dictators always like to show up well."

The Senator said "the only conceivable reason that anyone can assign for this action is that if we had not made the rockets available to Nasser, he could have got them from Russians. Nothing is said about Nasser getting a great many things from the Russians, including arms." Senator Javits termed the State Department's role in the rocket decision "most shortsighted."

Israeli sources disclosed that the United States had repeatedly refused Israeli requests for the projectiles.

Jurist Says World Must Know Evils

LONDON — Lord Birkett, one of the judges at the Nuremberg war crimes trials, warned here that the world must be reminded "from time to time" about the evils of anti-Semitism and racial prejudice.

In a message to the opening of an exhibit of materials depicting the tragic story of the Warsaw Ghetto under the Nazi regime, the famous barrister and jurist stated:

"While the records of the Nuremberg trials are in most of the world's libraries, the public at large must be reminded, from time to time, of the fearful fate that befalls a nation and people when justice is cast out, and when evil things such as anti-Semitism and racial prejudice are allowed to pervade the State and are actively encouraged."

The exhibit is made up chiefly of photographs, paintings and mementoes of the Warsaw Ghetto collected by a former native of Warsaw, Dr. Alexander Bernfes. The exhibit is being sponsored by the Board of Deputies of British Jews, the World Jewish Congress, the Polish-Jewish Ex-Servicemen's Association and a special memorial committee.

Ex-Mufti Refuses To Aid Eichmann

JERUSALEM — The former Mufti of Jerusalem has refused to prepare a statement to aid the defense of Adolf Eichmann because he does not recognize Israel or its courts and says "every sane person considers this show trial to be a farce." The Jerusalem Post reported recently.

Haj Amin el Hussein, in a letter to Eichmann's defense attorney Dr. Robert Servatius, carried in the Beirut daily El Hayat, said, "I do not recall ever seeing your client or talking to him." The paper also published a request by Servatius to the former Mufti to put into legal form for submission to the Jerusalem District Court a denial of the prosecution's claim that Eichmann had a strong connection with him and that Eichmann exterminated the Jews "in accordance with an undertaking made to you."

Hussein said that he did not even hear Eichmann's name during World War 2.

A "Storehouse" of Knowledge

By MOSHE KATAN

THE Jewish and National University Library has recently taken possession of a fine new building located in the midst of the Hebrew University Campus in Jerusalem. This brings to a successful conclusion a tale of many difficulties and means the promise of a brighter future.

As the name implies, it is both the National Library of the Jewish people and the Library of the Hebrew University. In its former capacity it collects books, manuscripts, periodicals and other material reflecting the life and culture of the Jewish people. As the central library of the University it collects works in all fields of study, with particular reference to the subjects of instruction and research in the University's programme. In addition, it also serves as the central library of Israel, its facilities being at the disposal of the population as a whole. Its collection of Hebrew and Judaica is among the largest in the world.

The history of the library is a fascinating one. At the end of the 19th century a small group of Jerusalem scholars integrated their small collections into a library founded by the B'nai B'rith Lodge in Jerusalem. But the idea of a national library was first developed by an enthusiastic Bialystok physician, Dr. Joseph Chasanowitz, while on a visit to Palestine in 1890. Immediately on his return to Russia, Dr. Chasanowitz began to collect Hebrew works devoted to Judaica, dedicating his life to this task. In 1895 he sent 8,800 volumes to Jerusalem, which were followed by other large shipments in the course of years.

Books for the Library were also collected by the Zionist Organization, B'nai B'rith Lodges in many countries and the Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden, and by 1902 the collections had grown to 22,000 volumes.

In 1920, the Library which by then consisted of about 30,000 volumes, was taken over by the World Zionist Organization. It was named the Jewish National Library in token of its new function, and Dr. Hugo Bergman, formerly of the University Library of Prague was appointed Director. Five years later it was incorporated in the Hebrew University, and since then has been known as the Jewish National and University Library.

The number of books in the Library grew steadily, and soon the original B'nai B'rith building plus the five houses which had in the meantime been rented in the neighbourhood proved far too small to accommodate them. Special premises were built on Mount Scopus in 1929, when the library had 225,000 volumes.

Trials and Tribulations

As the first Director of the Library, Dr. Bergman found himself obliged to start from very modest beginnings. Though the book collections had grown rapidly they were still far from adequate to the needs of a national library. In addition, proper equipment was lacking, and most of the members of the small staff had not been trained in librarianship. While organizing the library and sending assistants abroad for training, Dr. Bergman appealed to friends in various parts of the world to collect books and funds and soon Library Committees were formed in many countries. Gifts of books were also received from several European governments, and by 1935, when Dr. Bergman retired from the position of Director in order to devote himself completely to his work as a Professor of Philosophy at the Hebrew University, the collections comprised about 300,000 volumes.

Dr. Bergman was succeeded by Professor Gotthold Weil, formerly head of the Oriental Department of the Preussische Staatsbibliothek in Berlin and Professor of Semitic Philology at the University of Frankfurt, who, during the 11 years in which he held office as Director, reorganized the various departments of the Library.

In 1946 Professor Weil resigned to concentrate entirely on his duties as Professor of Arabic and Turkish Philology at the Hebrew University. Professor D. H. Baneth and Dr. I. Joel served as temporary directors for periods of six months each, and in October, 1947, Dr. Curt Wormann, Chief of the Foreign Language Section of the Municipal Library in Tel Aviv and formerly Director of Public Libraries and Lecturer in Library Science and General Literature in Berlin, was appointed Chief Librarian, and shortly afterwards, Director.

Dr. Wormann who is at present visiting Harvard University in the U.S., still holds this latter position today, having served the Library during what was perhaps the most difficult period of its existence. Only a few months after he took up office, access to Mount Scopus was cut off.

The Library then owned about 465,000 volumes, of which Hebrew and Judaica accounted for almost 40 per cent. But the only items available were the small quantity of books out on loan, and it was from this virtually insignificant nucleus that a new library had to be built up in town.

Friends and supporters in Israel and abroad responded magnificently to the appeals for help, and many collections and individual items were presented. Gifts were also made by governments and institutions abroad, whilst some 200,000 books, pamphlets and periodicals salvaged from public and private libraries of destroyed Jewish communities in Europe, many of them of considerable importance, were received mainly through the Jewish Cultural Reconstruction, Inc. Work in this connection, which is carried out by the "Otzroth Hagola" Department, is being continued, as is also the distribution of thousands of books among various institutions in Israel. The same Department was also responsible for securing valuable North African, Yemenite and Italian Hebrew manuscripts.

During and after the War of Liberation members of the Library staff, at great danger to themselves, salvaged books from abandoned private and public Arab libraries, and the Library is now holding these in trusteeship for the rightful owners. The British Council lent a collection of English works comprising about 15,000 volumes, which constitute a very much needed reference library. Today the Library possesses a total of approximately 900,000 volumes including those on Mount Scopus, still cut off from Israel.

In the last few years, the Library situated in the Christian College of "Terra Sancta," has been increasingly pressed for space. Even when the different faculties of the University situated in the same building had been transferred to the luxurious buildings on Givat Ram and left more accommodation for the library, the interior construction of "Terra Sancta" was not suitable, and books had to be dispersed amongst different storehouses all over the town.

New Premises

In its new abode, amongst the ultra-modern buildings of the University Campus, between lawns and fountains, the new Library building stands proudly. Its three stories are supported by thick cylindrical columns. As you enter, you see the Exhibition Hall, the catalogues, the library and lending services. Then come the offices where all essential work appertaining to the Library is carried on. A wide staircase leads from the hall to the reading rooms, of which the two principal ones are for general studies and for Jewish and Oriental studies. These are actually two stories in height, an encircling gallery dividing the two stories.

The Reading Room of Periodicals has also been opened, and has on display a colourful array of the most important of the thousands of publications to which the Library subscribes. Other rooms specializing in manuscripts, music, works of art, will be completed in the next few years. There are also "studies" on the third floor, designed for the use of professors who need to work in a quiet atmosphere. A cafeteria is to be constructed on the roof. From the roof one has a panoramic view of the whole of Jerusalem.

The three storeys underground contain the storage rooms with a capacity for at least two million volumes. Besides these facilities, there are different technical services such as the Secretariat, the book-binders, photographic and new book departments.

Perhaps it is unnecessary to point out that the new Library is equipped with all such practical advantages as: lifts, not only for people, but a specially-designed one for bringing up books ordered from the stores and the basement to the reading-rooms. Modern furniture specially constructed for library use is another feature and naturally an internal telephone system.

Henceforth, intellectual work will be free to develop with all the most up-to-date documentation at its disposal. True, there are people who grumble at all this super-modern "gadgetry," but nevertheless architectural planning and construction was undertaken with the view to increasing efficiency in the running of the Library.

World Jewish Leaders See Eichmann Trial As Means Of Educating Present Generation

LONDON, England — The Eichmann Trial has made a far-reaching impact upon world public opinion, and one important result of the proceedings at Jerusalem is that non-Jews are now demonstrating a new understanding of the holocaust suffered by Jews under Hitler.

This was the consensus of a symposium held at the Twelfth International Conference of the World Union for Progressive Judaism at the Liberal Jewish Synagogue in London. Delegates from Brazil, Great Britain, the United States, India, the Netherlands and South Africa discussed the effect of the Trial on general public opinion and on the Jewish communities of their own nations. They reported a general widespread approval of the manner in which the State of Israel is conducting the Trial. Criticisms and misgivings that may have been voiced before the Trial began have now largely disappeared. And now that massive documentation has been placed on the record for all the world to see, Israel's decision to hold the Trial, the delegates noted, is now regarded as "good," "necessary" and "wise."

One adverse effect was reported by the delegates from the Netherlands, Rabbi Jacob Soetendorp, spiritual head of the Progressive Jewish communities in Amsterdam and the Hague. He stated that Jewish survivors of the concentration camps in Holland had been trying to forget their terrible experiences, but that the revelation of atrocities had re-opened the frightful chapter, with some tragic results.

Delegates participating in the symposium were agreed that the fate of Adolf Eichmann is of "no importance." Whatever punishment is meted out to the Nazi cannot in any way measure up to the enormity of the crime. The important function of the Trial is not the conviction or punishment of the Nazi, they felt, but rather, the recording of the history of hatred and the lessons to be learned by the new generation of mankind.

Dutch Change Attitude

Before the trial opened, Rabbi Soetendorp said, opinion in the Netherlands was divided about whether it should be held at all. After the evidence began to be presented, the general feeling, both in the Jewish and general community, was that the Trial was "necessary." "There is no group of Jews in the Netherlands," he said, "that has not been affected by the revelations."

Prior to the opening of the Trial, the rabbi stated, the Dutch Government had begun to soften its attitude toward collaborators and war criminals, but recently, as a direct result of the disclosures in Jerusalem, the Government's attitude has once more stiffened. Four war criminals who were about to be released from prison have now lost their appeal for freedom.

English "Impressed"

Dr. W. Van der Zyl, Rabbi of the West London Synagogue, reported that the dignity of the Israeli Court and the Trial procedure have made "a great impression" upon the British public. There is "great interest" in the impartiality of the Jerusalem court, and "the press is full of praise" about the conduct of the Trial.

"As it is being conducted," he noted, "the Trial has been doing a lot of good. Many people did not know the facts, or they were inclined to believe that there had been an exaggeration of the details. Now, however, they are convinced of the truth of documentation. The Trial has demonstrated the tragedy that can result from a little 'mild anti-Semitism.' This has been a great lesson."

Understanding In The U. S.

Summarizing the reaction in the United States, Rabbi Albert G. Minda of Temple Israel, Minneapolis, Minnesota, and newly-elected President of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, declared that the Trial has sensitized Americans to the dangers of ultra reactionary movements.

Industrial Bank Makes Savings Changes

Starting August 1, savings accounts at Industrial National Bank will earn interest every day from the day of deposit to the day of withdrawal, according to an announcement by John Simmen, President. Effective November 1, 1961, interest on savings deposits will be compounded and credited to all savings accounts four times a year: November 1, February 1, May 1, and August 1. If money is withdrawn from the bank before the end of the quarter, there will be no interest loss provided a minimum balance of $5 is maintained in the account to the end of the quarter.

In making the announcement, Mr. Simmen noted that the new method of computing interest of savings deposits is the most liberal of any financial institution in Rhode Island. Industrial National Bank will be the first Bank in Rhode Island to pay interest on a quarterly basis, thus making income available to depositors every three months instead of at six month intervals. These interest changes, he explained, should increase the bank's deposits and hence its loanable funds. With more money available, the bank will be able to increase its home loans and mortgages, commercial loans, and generally expand its banking services in the Rhode Island area.

CONTEST ANNOUNCED

The Jewish Theatre for Children is offering a prize of $1,000.00 for the best full length play for children in English on a Jewish theme, according to an announcement made by Philip Kasakove, Chairman of the Theatre. This is the sixth time in as many years that the Theatre has offered a similar prize in its annual Golden Pen Playwriting Contest. Funds for the prize are made available by Norma U. Levitt, a member of the Theatre's Board of Directors. Prize winning manuscripts are also given a professional production.

Manuscripts for the 1961 competition must be submitted no later than April 15, 1962. Rules of the Contest may be obtained by writing to the Jewish Theatre for Children, 426 West 58th Street, New York 19, N. Y.

Delegation Concludes Talks With Government Officials

HERZLIA, ISRAEL — A series of consultations between members of the overseas delegation of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds and top government officials and leaders of American-supported philanthropic agencies in Israel has just been concluded here it was announced by Irving Kane, council president.

The meetings, which Mr. Kane described as "very arduous but very satisfying," ranged over a vast area, but concentrated especially on the primary responsibilities of American Jewish community organizations in relation to Israel's needs.

Mr. Kane indicated that he expected a series of recommendations on immigration, absorption, voluntary fund raising here and in America, and the deepening of mutual understanding, to emerge as a result of the discussions, which will be presented for approval and action by the organized Jewish communities of the United States and Canada at the annual General Assembly of the CJFWF in Dallas, Texas, November 16-19, 1961.

Mr. Kane indicated that the rising curve of immigration to Israel in the past three months received the very special attention of the American community leaders and declared:

"Our programs in America for helping to meet Israel's immigration and absorption needs were viewed in the larger perspective of the total measures which might be taken here in Israel as well — all of which it was agreed, are closely interrelated. They included setting of philanthropic budget priorities and adjustments, tighter control of competing multiple appeals, debt controls, clearer division of responsibilities between the government and the Agency, and implementation of new procedures for grants to constructive enterprises."

Mr. Kane stated that the delegation was encouraged by the interest expressed by Israeli leaders in the possibilities of greater voluntary fund raising in Israel even though all recognized "the heavy burden the citizens are carrying through taxations for welfare needs and the voluntary contributions already being made." He said that his group will "have definite recommendations on how we can cooperate in such a development."

Miss Weiner is attending Burdett College in Boston, Mass. and Mr. Mittleman is a senior at Colby College in Waterville, Maine. He is a member of Pi Lambda Phi fraternity.

The couple plan to marry on August 12, 1962.

In last week's edition the names of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Mittleman were inadvertently omitted. The Herald regrets the error.

First Child

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Feldman of 427 Crafts Street, West Newton, Mass., announce the birth of their first child, Meriann, on July 15.

Maternal grandfather is Samuel Frumkin of Los Angeles, Calif., and paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. David M. Feldman of Newton Centre, Mass., formerly of Providence.

A deepening mutual American-Israel understanding beyond the dimension of financial aid is being sought by both countries, Mr. Kane stressed, declaring that the delegation is preparing a list of suggestions to enable Israelis to get a better knowledge of what American Jewish life and community organization are really like and, on the other hand, to give American Jews a more accurate picture of life in Israel.

Orthodox Rabbis To Meet In Israel

NEW YORK — More than 500 Orthodox rabbis flew to Israel last week to attend the first religious convocation ever to be held in that country by an American rabbinic body.

Two non-stop jets departed Sunday from New York International Airport at Idelwild, Queens, and a third set out at the same hour on Wednesday.

The convocation, to be conducted by the Rabbinical Council of America, will begin on July 24 and continue through July 28. A new $500,000 academic center will be dedicated in Rehovoth on July 27.

To be known as the Yeshivath Hadorom, the center includes two dormitories, dining rooms, a high school and a teachers' seminary for some 250 students from over the world.

The institution will be patterned after Yeshiva University here. Rabbi Emanuel Marcus of New York will be in permanent charge of the center.

Rabbi Charles Chavel of Congregation Shaare Zedek in Far Rockaway, Queens, will be chairman of the five-day convocation.

To Foster Religious Ties

Rabbi Charles Weinberg, president of the Rabbinical Council expressed the hope that the convocation would "spur the rabbinical bodies of Israel and the United States to engage in a concerted drive to capture the spiritual allegiance and the religious devotion of individuals, particularly young persons in the two countries."

"Orthodox Jews and the rabinate in Israel," he said, "could benefit considerably from the American rabbis' approach to administrative, welfare and organizational techniques."

"The convocation will strengthen and cement the relations of American and Israel Jews. It will set up a spiritual thoroughfare whereby the fruits, ideas and thoughts of Israel and American Jews will be exchanged, fertilized and developed on a high religious plane. There is every hope that this rabbinical liaison will solve some of the most perplexing dilemmas confronting Judaism over the globe."

Sessions of the convocation will be held in Jerusalem and in Tel Aviv. United States Ambassador Walworth Barbour will attend the dedication of the Rehovoth center along with many other political and religious leaders.

Rabbi Bernard Twersky, press director of the Rabbinical Council, said that the Ambassador would bring greetings from President Kennedy.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

THREATS IN A '62' RETIREMENT AGE

According to Maurice Chevalier's reminiscences in last Sunday's "American Weekly," a thought which has taken this "laughing, appreciating" youngster of 72 a "lifetime to learn" is that "there is no substitute for work no matter what your age."

According to a background paper prepared for the White House Conference on Aging a few months ago, one of the most shattering events in the individual lives of older persons is "retirement from work." Even when retirement does not slash the individual's income, the average American "suffers a loss of status and a decrease of self-esteem."

According to a recent report of the Senate Subcommittee on Problems of the Aged and Aging, a "striking note" appearing in the testimony of older people is "the feeling of loneliness" and this "social isolation is felt as keenly by those who are relatively comfortable, materially, as those who are not."

As of Aug. 1 men may choose to have their social security benefits start at age 62 -- and since women have been able to do this since 1956, this means, in effect, that the voluntary retirement age in the basic pension system of our country has been cut from 65 to 62.

This step is being hailed as a great improvement in the system. It was initially proposed by West Virginia's Senator Byrd in 1960, was turned down only because of its cost. It was strongly recommended by President Kennedy early this year, has just been passed as a "non-controversial" measure by Congress. In the words of the Senate Finance Committee, it "will help to alleviate the hardships faced by that group of men who, because of ill health, automation, or other technological change, are forced into premature retirement before age 65" In the words of Wilbur J. Cohen, Asst. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, this will give some "degree of protection" to workers who are unable to get work "because of conditions beyond their control when they are getting along in years, even though they have not reached 65."

In plainer terms, it is designed as a sort of permanent jobless insurance for men between 62 and 65 and in a short series beginning next week, I'll explain what this and other provisions mean to you.

In advance of this, though, it is important to spell out some of the disturbing aspects of this move, to suggest at least two social, economic and financial implications which have been virtually ignored.

(1) This lowering of the voluntary retirement age is contrary to every trend in life expectancy and health in the United States.

We are living longer and longer and 62 is becoming a young, healthy age. Every survey emphasizes that the typical worker doesn't want to retire at 65, much less at 62. All the evidence, as indicated at the start of this column, is that he needs to be needed, to be occupied, to be interested and only among the unskilled is there a large group of men who say they'd like to quit work if they could afford to.

(2) This lowering of the voluntary retirement age could start pressures for a lowering of the compulsory retirement age from 65 to 62 -- and it certainly will help maintain the cut-off age of 65.

When in 1935, the voluntary retirement age of 65 was written into the law, it set a precedent for the retirement rules of most corporations. Before that date, about two of three men worked beyond 65; now only one of three does.

The threat is that this experience could be repeated -- and it's a threat, not a promise. If this becomes the trend, it will intensify the unhappiness of our exploding over-60 population. It will raise the costs of pensions, add to the burden on the younger worker. It might lead to a slowdown in expansion of private pension plans just because of the cost -- and of State and local retirement plans too.

This "humane" move of 1961 could pave the way for a national tragedy. In view of the trends in our population and health, the basically humane move would be an upward, not a downward revision in the retirement age. Sound national policies should encourage, not discourage this. A compulsory retirement age of 65 is already obsolete. Let's not, for all our sakes, permit the tiniest trend toward making it "62"!

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

OBIT: Whittaker Chambers' end -- a sudden announcement that he'd died and been cremated -- was consistent with his strange way of life. During the Hiss trial I asked him about a fan letter Lincoln Steffens had written to him at the New Masses, a letter referred to in a book by Steffens. "I never received it," said the ex-Soviet agent. "I was underground at the time."

When Chambers first was hired by Time magazine, the then managing editor, Frank Norris, phoned a friend and said: "Well, at last we've got a real screwball here. He thinks Joe Stalin is after him." Chambers never could be reached by phone; he would call in from pay stations. After he quit the Communist Party, he hid out in movie houses and saw so many films that when a movie reviewer's job on Time became open, he qualified for it.

He once was late for the Senate hearings on the Hiss case because he had to milk his cows. And he said he started to write his book "Witness" by way of explanation to his son about his involvement with Alger Hiss. It developed into a 700-page document.

I once wrote to him to verify a story that he'd declined to review a book written by a former prisoner of the Soviet Union, and he confirmed it. He refused, he said, "because suffering and not tragedy was involved, because the author seemed to have learned nothing from his sufferings; apparently he went into a prison a Socialist and came out a Socialist."

Chambers added, about my trying to confirm the story: "When a columnist writes to verify a fact -- then is the judgment at hand, or, as the Russian peasants say, 'Buttered larks are about to drop into our mouths.'"

NIGHTCLUB NOTE: Joe E. Lewis returned to New York recently and had a reunion with Millie Considine at El Morocco. He had escorted her to an event at El Rancho Vegas, where a mid-western woman halted the comic and said: "Why, it's Joe E. Brown" . . . "No. It's Lewis. Lewis," Joe E. corrected her . . . "Of course," the lady replied, "Why it's Lewis E. Brown."

SPORTS NOTE: Joe E., incidentally, once refused to contribute for a statue of Paul Revere. The veteran horseplayer explained: "Because Paul Revere gave his horse a bad ride that night. A real bad ride. He swung the horse too wide at Lexington."

FINANCE NOTE: When the press reported a robbery at the Trousdale Estates home of Edd (Kookie) Byrnes, the neighbors were surprised, because they didn't know Byrnes lived there. That's the community where Dinah Shore, Frank Sinatra, Groucho Marx, Ernie Kovacs and Richard Nixon live. One neighbor said to Kovacs: "I didn't know Kookie had enough to live in Trousdale Estates" . . . Kovacs replied: "I didn't know Kookie had enough to get robbed."

MOVIES: Ed Gardner, of "Duffy's Tavern," saw the new movie "The Guns of Navarone." He studied the scenes where men are knifed, strangled, shot and hurled off cliffs, and also the sexy scenes. Gardner said: "And the trouble with TV is too much sex and violence."

LABOR NOTE: Billy Rose listened to one of Jimmy Hoffa's admirers justifying Hoffa's new $75,000-a-year salary, and the dues increase giving the union leader $12,000,000 a year for the treasury. Rose replied: "I'll say this about Hoffa -- a St. Francis of Assisi, he's not."

BUSINESS NOTE: Barney Balaban, head of Paramount, has the ledger of his first venture into the movie business in 1906, showing that he and his brother raised $135 as their start. They used only $60 of it, and grossed $88 the first week. Their first year's profits were $2,300, the start of their empire.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Back in the late 20's and early 30's, I followed the movies like a tail follows a horse. I read so much about the Cocomat Grove and all the stars who used to dance there, especially on Friday nights, and listen to the Rhythm Boys and a young fellow with big ears and an even bigger voice, named Bing, that I lived it like a dream.

Some day, I hoped, I would like to become part of these proceedings.

I kept thinking about this last Friday night while I was seated at the Grove where I had been assigned to review the Louie Prima-Keely Smith opening. For a few years, the Grove had lost a bit of its color, but this evening its stardust was brighter than its blazing marquee lights.

On and off the stage, the place was jumping with celebrities. This was the stuff dreams were made of and at last I was part of it.

I spoke with Danny Thomas but could scarcely hear his usually warm greeting. He goes into a sanitarium for ten days with strict orders to shut up and rest up until his laryngitis gets lost.

A week earlier, I had congratulated Danny backstage at the Sands Hotel, Las Vegas, for his performance. His hand was hot to the touch. The laryngitis was beginning to plague him then, but he kept the show going.

After Prima and Smith and their whirling dervishes had concluded their wild performance, Benny Goodman was invited on stage. He remarked: "All I can say, Louie, is - you must be tired."

Prima begged him to play "Sing Sing Sing," which Louie had written especially for him many years ago. The two conducted a scavenger hunt for an idle clarinet and Benny went to work in earnest with an assist from Prima's trumpet.

After Goodman had been tendered a well-deserved standing ovation, Prima asked: "Now what do we do?" and Danny Thomas,

POLITICS: The audience-heckling comics are an offshoot from Jack White's 18 Club. It was a cellar joint on W. 52nd St. in the late 30's. There White and his troupe -- Pat Harrington, Jackie Gleason and Frankie Hyers -- made caustic cracks at each arrival. On Election Night in '36, when the Hearst-supported Alf Landon lost every state but two, George and Bill Hearst entered the club. White greeted them: "Here come Maine and Vermont."

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: Fred Hutchinson, manager of the league-leading Cincinnati Reds, used to manage the St. Louis Cardinals. The night before he lost that job, he was in Toots Shor's, where he accurately predicted he'd be fired the next day. "How do you know?" a friend asked. Hutchinson replied: "When Louis XVI saw the guillotine, did he have to be told his job was over?"

PERSONAL: Mrs. Jules Dassin told an Insider's Newsletter man why she's divorcing her husband over the star of his "Never on Sunday" film, Melina Mercouri: "He spends every day with her -- Sunday included."

(Distributed 1961, by The Hall Syndicate, Inc.) (All Rights Reserved)

against his doctor's orders, shouted: "Let's all sing 'Benny's from Heaven,'" which of course he was.

Vic Damone was called out of the audience and told Goodman: "Back in 1945, while I was ushering at the N.Y. Paramount, you were breaking it up, and you're still doing it."

There was a party afterwards in the Venetian Room, the kind of affair I had read and dreamed about when I was a kid cashing in pop bottle empties around Echo Park. It was silly of me, I know, to dream back in those days that I would ever attend one of these parties, but here I was wondering what I was doing here.

Keely Smith gave Vic Damone SUCH a hug, but she only cupped both my cheeks in the palms of her hands and smiled at me indulgently. It was even more than I had dreamed about, so I was satisfied. Keely's mom, Fannie Smith, told me she's living in the Hollywood Hills and supervising her grandchildren, Toni, 6 and Luanne, 4.

She also verified that Keely is 1/4 and Keely's grandfather is all Cherokee.

Walter Winchell and Prima tolerated my standing between them while newsreelmen, Bill Banks, photographed their conversation, and this wasn't even in any of my dreams. Louella nodded my way and she definitely was a part of my early imagination.

Robert Fuller, star of "Laramie," was introduced to me by "The Real McCoys" Kathy Nolan and Fuller discussed his recent trip to Japan where he watched his show and flipped over himself talking Japanese. He's now learning the language and expects to speak all his lines in Japanese for a future feature film there.

The party was over. I picked up my car in the Ambassador's parking lot. The doorman bowed, saluted, helped me into my car, shut the door, and I tipped him $5.

After all, this was only a dream.

Lubavitcher Airliner Arrives In N. Y.

NEW YORK — One hundred eighteen Chassidim, followers of the Chabad-Lubavitch movement, arrived at Idlewild airport last week from Manchester, England, aboard a chartered "Flying Tiger" airliner. They are on a two week pilgrimage to the Lubavitcher Rebbe, the very eminent Rabbi Menachem M. Schneerson, the leader of the movement, who resides in Brooklyn.

After being warmly welcomed by hundreds of Lubavitchers at the airport, the visitors were brought by special busses to the Lubavitcher Center at 770 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn. Here at 3:30 a.m., despite the late hour, the Rebbe honored the guests with a personal appearance briefly addressing the visitors on the meaning and significance of the traditional Jewish greeting of "Shalom" (peace), stating that peace and friendship are the channels through which God's material and spiritual blessings are bestowed.

While the Rebbe was addressing the crowd, one of the visitors, apparently seeing the Rebbe for the first time, was heard saying, "I've already had my money's worth".

During their stay each of the visiting group will be received by the Rebbe in private audience.

Charges Against Globke Renewed

Bonn — Charges of active collaboration with the Nazi anti-Semitic program by Dr. Hans Globke, state secretary and principal aide to Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, were renewed last week. Dr. Globke, who wrote the official Nazi Government commentary on the anti-Semitic Nuremberg laws during the war, has been cleared by the Bonn Government on the grounds that he had actually helped ease the Jewish situation as a legal officer of the Government headed at the time by Adolf Hitler.

At a meeting of the Assn. for Freedom and Human Dignity, at Frankfurt, a demand for Dr. Globke's immediate resignation was voiced by one of the principal speakers, George Prinz. He contended that "no argument can do away with the fact that Dr. Globke's commentary on the Nuremberg race laws constituted participation in Nazi crimes."

Plans 'Spiritual Summit' To Aid World Peace

LONDON — A broad, world-wide plan to mobilize the world's religious leaders of all faiths at a "spiritual summit" meeting, in aid of world peace, was announced at the 12th international conference of the World Union for Progressive Judaism. The announcement was made by Dr. Maurice N. Eisendrath, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, who said that Dr. Albert Schweitzer, famous philosopher and Christian missionary surgeon, has agreed to serve as honorary chairman of the "spiritual summit."

"We live at a time," Dr. Eisendrath said, "when the Jewish vision of peace faces a deadly challenge. As people and as religious movements in our respective lands, we have spoken tepidly, acted tardily without fervor or fire. We must break out of the straight-jacket of the past and now proclaim our readiness for almost any sacrifice that the holocaust which threatens imminently may be averted."

Dr. Eisendrath said he is communicating with religious leaders of various faiths to serve on the organizing committee for the "spiritual summit." He said he hopes to convene a meeting of North American religious leaders in New York early next year, and believes that the world meeting may be held late in 1962 or early in 1963. He recommended Bombay as the site for the world meeting.

Study Plight Of Jews Under Soviet Rule

LONDON — Delegates to the twelfth annual convention of the World Union for Progressive Judaism left at the close of the conclave on study tours of Jews in Iron Curtain countries and to examine the status of Reform Judaism in Israel.

Two special study groups were organized for the visits. One group will visit Hungary and Yugoslavia as well as Holland, Austria, Italy and France. The group will make a special study of conditions of the Jews in Hungary.

The group going to Israel will seek reassurances from Israeli leaders that the liberal religious movement will be allowed to develop without official hindrance. Rabbi Jay Kaufman of New York, vice-president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, leads the Israel group.

At an earlier session of the conference, it was pointed out that Jews must unite to save the 3,000,000 Soviet Jews from "spiritual genocide" which is "being practiced in the Soviet Union." The warning was sounded by Rabbi Richard Hertz of Detroit, reporting on the plight of the Jewish communities behind the Iron Curtain. He said that "our fellow Jews behind the Iron Curtain are in greater danger than were the Jews under the Nazi regime."

Rabbi Hertz asserted that the Soviet Government was carrying out a calculated program of "spiritual starvation" against Soviet Jewry and that "silence by feared" had resulted in the "withering of Jewish life and spiritual genocide for Jews and Judaism." Rabbi Hertz made an extended tour of the Soviet Union in 1959.

The delegates then adopted a resolution calling on "all Jews and men of goodwill to use their good offices on behalf of the Jews of the Soviet Union that their institutions and traditions may be perpetuated."

In another resolution, the delegates said they "strongly protested the "decision" of the Israel rabbinate in its "refusal" to permit marriages of members of Bene Israel, the Jews of India, to members of the Sephardic and Ashkenazic communities in Israel. The delegates asserted that "at this stage of Jewish history, when the broken fragments of our people need a new and stronger sense of brotherhood, the time has come for a more kindly interpretation of legal technicalities, and for friendliness to all who offer loyal hearts to the world brotherhood of Israel."

Oklahoma Comes To Warwick Theatre

Oklahoma, the musical comedy success that first brought together the team of Rodgers and Hammerstein, will star John Raitt at the Warwick Musical Theatre beginning Monday, July 24.

Mr. Raitt, whose superb performance in "Carousel" was one of the highlights of last season, returns to the tent to recreate the role of Curley. He first played this role in the national company in Chicago, and this led to his portrayal of Billy Bigelow in "Carousel" on Broadway in 1945 . . . for which he won both the Drama Critics and Donaldson awards for the best performance of the year.

Before "My Fair Lady" replaced it this month, "Oklahoma" held the record for the most continuous performances ever tabulated for a musical play on Broadway. By the time the show closed, over 800,000 record albums of the original Broadway cast had been sold. Playing with Mr. Raitt will be Wendy Martin as Laurie, Edith Gresham as Aunt Eller, Dorothy Keller as Ado Annie, the girl that just "cain't say no" and Kenneth Smith, Edward Fuller and Chaunc Conklin.

"Oklahoma" will run for six evening performances and will be followed by "The King and I" with Giselle MacKenzie on July 31.
