Announce Resignation Of Arthur Eisenstein

Leon Temkin, chairman of the Personnel Committee of the Jewish Community Center, this week announced the resignation of Arthur Eisenstein, assistant executive director of the Center. Mr. Eisenstein's resignation will become effective Jan. 31, 1963. He will enter private business locally.

Mr. Eisenstein has been a member of the Center staff for the past nine years, serving as program director, South Side Branch Director, and assistant executive director. Under his direction, several innovations in the Center program were instituted, including the Children's Theatre Series, the JACS Training Program, Camps Jaycee and Adventure, and the Sunday Clubday Program.

A graduate of Bryant College, Mr. Eisenstein also attended the University of Scranton and Temple University. He is chairman of the Committee on Camping of the R. I. Council of Community Services and a member of the Council Steering Committee, a member of the faculty of the Temple Beth El Religious School, and has served on several research committees of the National Jewish Welfare Board.

Exhibit Of Israeli Art Opens In Harrison, N. Y.

HARRISON, N.Y. — An exhibition of the art of Israel opened here this week with about 300 paintings and 50 pieces of sculpture by the major artists of the country.

Mrs. Shulamit Nardi, a member of the Israeli delegation to the United Nations, agreed with a number of art critics here that the exhibition was the most comprehensive ever exported.

Many of the artists and sculptors represented were former residents of Germany, France, England, Poland and the United States. They represented both the traditional and modern schools of art. Some of the paintings used life in the Nazi concentration camps as the theme for their works.

Also represented in the show is the "Grandma Moses" of Israel, 95-year-old Sholem Moskowitz.

Waves in the Aegean had a part in bringing the show here because they prevented a Greek steamship from taking Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bauman of Harrison to Tel Aviv from Piraeus, Greece.

Instead, the couple flew and arrived three days before they were due at their hotel. A convention forced the Baumans to register at a boarding house on the edge of Tel Aviv. At the

Sculptures Attempt To Humanize Immense Expanse Of Negev Desert

MITZPE RAMON, Israel — Deep in the Negev 11 sculptors have sought to humanize in stone an expanse of desert that is breathtaking in its primitive grandeur.

The works, which would be immense in studio or museum, are dwarfed by their present natural setting according to a New York Times article.

The non-figurative sculptures are scattered like monumental lumps of sugar for a mile or so along the rim of the Makhtesh Ramon, the 1,000-foot-deep crater that stretches 10 miles wide and 35 miles long, across the Biblical wilderness of Zin.

The sculptures are results of Israel's International Symposium of Sculptors on outdoor form and space relationships.

Besides Israel, seven other countries—Belgium, Cuba, the United States, Japan, Yugoslavia, Switzerland and Austria—were represented in this year's symposium.

New Community to Rise

The sculptors were housed here in quarters that will now be used for new settlers in this cooperative settlement. It seeks to set up a community based on small industry in one of the most desolate, although starkly beautiful, parts of the Negev desert.

Mitzpe Ramon is perched on the crater rim. The road south from Beersheba to Elath on the Gulf of Aqaba passes between the settlement and the sculptures, before it swings down into the great Ramon depression.

Miss Pat Diska, an American who has lived and worked in Paris since 1947, spoke for the symposium group when she said she was overwhelmed at her first sight of the setting in which she was to work.

The main problem was the light. "Here you have a harsh and brutal light which kills form, and you have to try to overcome it," Miss Diska said.

Most of the sculptors worked in limestone. But Miss Diska chose a 10-ton block of granite; the Belgian sculptor, Jacques Moeschal, used cement, and the Swiss artist, Josef Wyss, used basalt.

A Symbol of Eternity

Mr. Moeschal's piece rears up like a mammoth keyhole that is split in two. It represents construction rising from the barren soil, with the circular aperture at the top symbolizing plant, perhaps a cactus.

An Israeli critic said of Miss Diska's block of granite, with its pronounced but minimal surface cutting, that it looked as though it had "hardly got under way."

If the visitors were baffled by the sculpture, so were the residents of Mitzpe Ramon. Their most frequent question, as they walked among the great slabs and blocks of stone, was "what do they represent?"

It apparently was the intention of the symposium's sponsors that the sculptures should relieve the monotonous landscape along much of the Negev highway. If that was so, almost any spot other than the spectacular Ramon depression would have been more in need of such relief.

The Government has announced that the 11 sculptures represent the first step towards creating a national park at the Ramon crater.

Spectator Accuses Judge As Ex-Nazi

BERLIN — Proceedings against the Association of Victims of Nazism before the West German Supreme Administrative Court were interrupted here Friday for a week after a spectator in the court, a longtime Communist, rose and called to the presiding judge: "You were a member of the Nazi party and the S.A.!"

The incident occurred as the court president, Dr. Fritz Werner, and the four other red-robed federal judges were about to take their seats to open the second day of hearings against the association. The West Berlin Government is seeking to have it outlawed as an unconstitutional pro-Communist group.

Informed sources confirmed that the judge had been a member of the Nazi party but said he had been cleared by an Allied de-Nazification board.

N.Y. Rabbi Disagrees With Hasidic Leader On Prayer Decision

NEW YORK — An Orthodox rabbi disagreed with the leader of a Hasidic sect who criticized the Supreme Court's decision banning the Regent's prayer from the public schools.

The Rev. Dr. Kurt Klappholz, spiritual leader of Congregation Tifereth Israel in Brooklyn, commented on the statement of the Hasidic leader, Rabbi Menachem M. Schneerson of Brooklyn. The statement, he said, would arouse "deep anxiety and concern among many American Orthodox Jews who, in good conscience, must sharply disagree with the venerable rabbi's opinions."

Rabbi Schneerson, known to his ultra-Orthodox sect as the Lubavitcher Rebbe, urged last week that the Supreme Court's ruling be reversed.

He contended that for many children the recitation of the non-denominational prayer in school would offer the only chance for them to make personal "contact" with God every day.

But Dr. Klappholz declared: "The opinion expressed by the Hasidic leader that no conscientious parent can object to prayers in the public schools is misleading because we feel that conscientious parents—in full awareness of their religious heritage—would not want their own religious convictions to be watered down by a state-sponsored prayer."

Expressing the belief that "the overwhelming majority of religious Jews of all shades and opinions, together with their Christian brethren," had given their wholehearted support to the court decision barring the use of a prayer written and pre-

Rabbi Suggests Re-Establishment Of Religious Body

NEW YORK — The re-establishment of a Sanhedrin (supreme religious body) to interpret and resolve issues of Jewish religious life in a scientific age has been called for by Rabbi Shlomo Goren, chief spiritual leader of Israel's armed forces.

The last Sanhedrin existed just prior to the destruction of the Temple in Jerusalem by Roman forces in A.D. 70. The 71-man Sanhedrin, including a chief justice, enacted decrees of religious observances and interpreted Jewish law.

In an interview last week at the offices of the Religious Zionists of America on Fifth Avenue, Rabbi Goren cited the "urgent need" to reconvene such a council.

Rabbi Goren said that the Sanhedrin would "raise immeasurably the prestige, stature and dignity of Orthodox Jewry" the world over and would make the "Talmudic and Biblical codes an accepted part of the behavioral patterns of Jews in their multifarious activities."

The 45-year-old rabbi said that the mass destruction of centers of Jewish learning and education during the Hitler period had resulted in a "death of learned scholars, rabbis and teachers who could help in the formation of such a paramount council of Jewish law."

In this connection, Rabbi Goren pleaded for an intensive training of "gifted young Jewish men" in this country and Israel who could assume the leadership in the operation of a Sanhedrin. He said that the council should again be located in Israel.

Rabbi Goren held that the Sanhedrin was "sure to fill the vacuum in world Jewish life because of the present lack of an effective rabbinic authority which could issue binding orders and rulings on difficult religious matters."

He expressed the hope that spiritual leaders of Conservative and Reform Judaism in this country would support the rulings of the Sanhedrin.

Arab Links With Argentine Nazis Bring About 'Hot' Debates In UN

NEW YORK — Possible Arab links with Nazi groups in Argentina and Chile have become a hot issue in the current UN debate on the Palestine refugee problem. According to Israeli Ambassador Comay, the development "has deep and serious implications."

Speaking in the General Assembly's special Political Committee Comay referred to the arrest in Chile of Walter Hermann Rauff, accused in Germany of mass murder of Jews, and noted that many other ex-Nazis had found havens abroad through "underground railways" operated by Arabs.

For the second time Comay also indicted the Arabs, particularly Saudi Arabia's Ambassador Shukairy, for bestowing "blessing" on the Nazi Tacuara group in Argentina, and urging its propagation throughout the world. "This episode," Comay said, "has deep and serious implications."

Pointing out that the UN was born of the destruction of Nazi Germany, Comay added: "It would be a sad day for the United Nations if it were to become indifferent or insensitive to any renewal of the Nazi spirit."

Comay's speech, in which he reiterated Israel's standing offer to negotiate a settlement with the Arabs, was violently attacked by Shukairy and other Arab spokesmen along familiar anti-Zionist lines. Despite the bitter exchanges, however, veteran diplomats with contacts on both sides still cling to a thin hope for progress toward a solution of the refugee problem.

Behind the scenes, the U.S. is reportedly working on a compromise plan while trying—so far with no apparent success—to persuade the Israelis not to back a resolution calling for direct peace talks. The Kennedy Administration is represented by informed sources as determined to get the refugee issue off dead center this year.

Precisely what action will be proposed by Washington is still uncertain. The U.S. has not yet made a formal statement in the Palestine debate but is expected to do so.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

WOMAN'S GROWING ROLE IN WALL STREET

Keith Funston, president of the New York Stock Exchange, is more of a gentleman in taking the "nuts" in print I sent to him recently than I was a lady in selecting this descriptive greeting.

Instead of rearing up in anger because I wrote that the New York Stock Exchange's recent report dissecting Black Monday, May 28, gave the misleading impression that women panicked and helped kick off that historic stock market break, his reply was a gentle, "We only cited statistics, drew no conclusions and we're not the least bit concerned about the behavior of women in the market." Funston then proceeded to load me with statistics to prove the "great emphasis the NYSE is continuing to place on women's growing role in the stock market."

Here, therefore, is new information about the American woman in Wall Street in 1962 -- and this story I submit with pleasure.

Item: About half of the 1,500,000 people now annually attending the courses offered by NYSE member firms across the country are women.

Women also are among the most devoted participants in the 25,000 investment clubs currently operating in the U.S. The rough estimate is that one-third of the 350,000 members of the clubs are women and one-fourth are exclusively women's groups.

Item: Women are entering important jobs in the securities industry at a far faster rate than men. In 1946, there were 9,260 registered representatives of NYSE firms, of which 178 were women. Today there are 32,506 registered representatives of NYSE firms, of which 1,808 are women. The overall growth rate is 353 per cent, but the growth rate for women alone is 1,016 per cent. In 1940, there were 2,480 NYSE partners, but women held only 24 general and 45 limited partnerships at that time. Today there are 5,806 partners, with women holding 59 general and 474 limited partnerships. The overall growth rate is 234 per cent, but the growth rate for women alone is 774 per cent.

Item: "The Lady and the Stock Exchange," the Big Board's first "screenplay" was completed and titled AFTER the May crackup in the stock market. In that film, the woman makes the shrewd investment decision, the husband is the one who acts on a tip, finally backs down. Actually, NYSE officials report they've received complaints that the movie makes fun of the head of the family. Since its release this past September, there have been 55 TV showings of the play.

Item: To underline its lack of concern about women's behavior in the market, the NYSE has started a new educational radio series -- 26 weeks of five-minute shows -- beamed to women, and it is continuing its special women's ads in major women's magazines. Preliminary studies of responses to the ads indicate that they have had extremely high readership. Says an NYSE official, "Increasingly, and particularly with newly investing families, wives have the majer say in family investment decisions. And we mean investments, not speculations."

It was unfortunate that the NYSE highlighted its finding that during the chaotic days of May 28, 29 and 31, in Wall Street, "Women, whose total volume was about one third that for men, nevertheless had a sales balance in the aggregate for the three days which was two-and-a-half times as great as that for men." This does give the misleading impression that women dumped stocks in skyrocketing volume. The NYSE has no proof that they dumped. Women accounted for only 25.5 per cent of total trading by individuals.

Of course, some women panic under violent strain -- financial as well as emotional or spiritual. So do some men. Of course, some women sold at the bottom May 29. So did some men.

The fundamental fact is, though, that women are increasingly a part of the backbone of our nation's securities markets. They are investing not only the nest-eggs they accumulate out of their own earnings, but also the funds they inherit. They are less and less stockholders in name only, more and more active observers (and critics) of the companies in which they own shares.

The NYSE is digging up some fascinating -- and still unreported -- aspects of the great stock crash of 1962. But "panicky women" is not among them.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

REB AARON KOTLER, Z'L

By Beryl Segal

We lived in the same generation, in the same country, in fact as near as New Jersey, with a great man and we did not know it. Death had to come and take him away from our midst for us to learn about him. But then it was too late.

But fifty thousand people in New York knew about him, and thirty thousand men and women in Israel heard of him, and they came to pay their respects to him, and to cry for him, as they walked with him to his resting place.

They cried for the death of Rabbi Aaron Kotler who died at the age of 71, on Thursday, the 29th of November, 1962.

Who was Rabbi Aaron Kotler?

He started life as the son of a Rabbi in Sislowitz, Russia. At the age of 13 he became a student in the famous Yeshiva of Slobodka. He was known there as the Ilue of Sislowitz. That was the name applied to a youngster who displays unusual intelligence and a keen insight into the intricacies of learning. In the case of young Aaron, he combined intelligence with great perseverance. He studied during the day. He studied at night. And he studied even while sitting at the table to eat his meager meal. He was a Masmid.

He studied the Torah and the Talmud with their commentaries. And he studied Lishmo -- that is for the sake of study, and not for particular aim. To know, to understand, to delve into the depths of the words of Torah, was his delight.

His fame grew, and reached the shores of this country as well. An American Jew wanted to support four scholars in the Yeshiva, so that he might have a share in their devotion to learning. One of the four chosen to receive the benevolence of the American was Aaron, the Ilue of Sislowitz.

At the age of twenty-two Reb Aaron Kotler became the Rosh Yeshiva, the Head of the Academy, at Slutsk. That was a singular honor. Thousands of students came to his Academy and the great attraction was the Head of the Academy, Reb Aaron Kotler himself. He would read for the students a lesson in Talmud, and the new vistas he uncovered for them in the pages of the Talmud would then be repeated the length and breadth of the land. Later, that Yeshiva moved to Kletsk, and he became known as the Gaon of Kletsk.

The Communist regime closed the Yeshivos all over Russia, and Reb Aaron Kotler came to America. That was in 1940, and he began immediately to put up "The Tents of Torah" in the new soil. The Yeshiva in Lakewood, New Jersey, became a point of attraction to which came young men to sit at the feet of Reb Aaron Kotler. And he also did not rest until the greater part of his former students came to this country to continue their interrupted studies.

Through China and Japan they made their way. They trekked through the barren land of Siberia. The privations of these men are hard to tell. But they were encouraged by the letters of Reb Aaron. Lakewood, New Jersey, became what Slobodka and Kletsk were in Lithuania.

We have the testimony of one of his students, now the Head of the Yeshiva of Providence, the Hebrew Day School.

In the introduction to his book "Lights in the Darkness," Rabbi Akiva Egozi says:

"I wish to avail myself of this opportunity to express publicly my gratitude to my master and teacher, the world renowned sage and Torah authority, Rabbi Aaron Kotler, the Rosh Yeshiva of the world famous academy of Kletsk (presently located in Lakewood, New Jersey), who helped me come to this country and who looked after my welfare like a father. May God grant him the reward he so richly deserved."

What a relationship between Rabbi and pupil! What a touching appreciation of one who had the privilege to sit at Reb Aaron's feet and listen to his discourses.

Rabbi Egozi has also written on the methods of the Yeshiva of Lakewood. The article was published in the Shevilei Hachinuch and can be obtained at the Library of the Bureau of Jewish Education. Those who are interested in reading it should get a copy.

Now thousands came into New York to walk with their Rabbi on his way to Israel. Thousands came to receive his body in Israel. And we are that much poorer by the absence of Reb Aaron Kotler from our midst.

But such is the great faith of Orthodox Jews, such is the strength of their conviction that Torah study must go on, that even as Rabbi Aaron lies in his Mitte, they crowned his son, Reb Shneur Kotler, as the Rosh Yeshiva, the Head of the Lakewood Academy. Reb Shneur Kotler, himself a great scholar, is the third generation of scholars to sit at the head of great Academies.

One of the speakers at the funeral said: "I congratulate you, Reb Aaron, that you had the privilege to leave a son, capable to continue your holy work, and to become the head of a great Yeshiva."

At that, the report goes on, all assembled cried. They cried for Reb Aaron, and they cried also for joy in his successor.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA--

My deepest sympathy is extended to Freida Kraines, publisher of the St. Paul Jewish News, on the untimely passing of her beloved husband and co-publisher, Harry. This column will miss a wonderful friend who always made me feel like I was the most important writer in the national press. If I am not as Harry indicated, I am at least the better for it. As the ink on this paper will never dry, Harry Kraines' memory and influence will endure forever. Sleep lightly, dear friend.

Charles LeMaire, famous film-land dress designer, still shudders whenever he thinks about the Wilshire Boulevard department store dress buyer who phoned him one day and asked if he had anything in his collection like the dress Tony Curtis wore in "Some Like It Hot."

Author Irving Wallace recently discussed his current novel "The Prize" to be filmed by Pandor Berman for MGM Studios. Hero of Wallace's novel is Andrew Craig, alcoholic author from Wisconsin who wins the Nobel Prize, goes to Stockholm, and while intoxicated becomes involved with a beautiful and uninhibited Swedish girl.

Author Wallace has been accused of making unfair use of William Faulkner and/or Eugene O'Neill and/or Sinclair Lewis and/or Ernest Hemingway. All are Americans who have won the Nobel Literary award in real life and have acquired intimate acquaintance with hangovers.

Replies Wallace to his accusers, "I did not carbon copy any of these great writers. I have never found it necessary. My hero is of my own invention."

SHOCK pictures with all their killings and heinous crimes are beneficial for teenagers and adults because they rid them of their fears! So claims Herman Cohen who made his first horror film "I Was a Teenage Werewolf" in 1958 and currently is shooting his ninth horror film "Black Zoo."

Cohen's statement is corroborated by a noted psychiatry professor who said, "Certain childhood anxieties never die. Fear of ghosts, witches, the dark, the sinister, the terrible all stay with the adolescent. There are three ways to overcome these anxieties: psychoanalysis, nightmares and terror movies. In shock films, old childhood anxieties are activated, given life and a form of objective reality on the screen, and then quickly dispelled forever."

IN A recent issue of a Los Angeles newspaper carrying this column the following lino-fluff appeared, "Elizabeth Taylor has been appointed to the Fall of Fame." Prophecy anyone?

Our driver sighed: "Luxuries are cheap here, but necessities are high."

A political storm is brewing here over the plan to compete with Hong Kong. The spectacular views from the hilltops can compete with Hong Kong's and the mean temperature here is better. The Commissioner of Commerce, Henry L. Kimelman, permits no member of his staff to visit the Continent without first spending three days in the sun, to display a V.I. tan up north.

The controversy is over the project for importing Chinese tailors, who would make men's suits as low-priced as Hong Kong's. Although there is no unemployment in the Virgin Islands, violent opposition is being raised against bringing in the tragic refugees from China.

The local citizens are avid, too, about athletic competitions. During the war the baseball teams here beat the U.S. Navy teams regularly -- until the day the Secretary of the Navy arrived to witness a game. The Navy's ball club was augmented by a quickly-transferred sailor, Bob Feller. The Secretary saw the Navy win the ballgame, 1-0.

Mrs. Stanley Irwin Blank

Carrying a Bible adorned with white orchids and miniature carnations with cascading stephanotis and lilies of the valley. Miss Paula Gail Dressler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Dressler of 224 Fifth Street, became the bride of Stanley Irwin Blank of Waltham, Mass., son of Mrs. Fannie Blank of 121 Burnside Street, Cranston, and the late Herman S. Blank.

The six o'clock ceremony was performed on Sunday, Nov. 25, at Temple Emanu-El by Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk organza with re-embroidered Alencon appliqued lace beaded with seed pearls, portrait neckline and full length train. Her veil of French illusion was caught to a rose appliqued with lace and beaded with seed pearls.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Marty Kaufman, sister of the bridegroom, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Alan L. Dressler, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Paul M. Schaffer.

Best man was Marty Kaufman, brother-in-law of the bridegroom. Ushers were Alan L. Dressler, brother of the bride, and Ivan D. Gare, William F. Steinfeld and Ivan Samuels.

The wedding was followed by a reception held in the Temple Emanu-El Meeting House.

The couple's wedding trip was to Caneel Bay, Saint John's.

The Dog and his Shadow

"The allegation by the venerable rabbi that those who identify themselves with the opposition to the prayer are quite naturally to be placed in the same camp with the secularists, shows little respect for the integrity of millions of Americans who are moved by their religious conscience to oppose prayers in public school."

Rabbi Goren who is a colonel in the paratroops, is known in Israel as a Talmudic scholar and colorful personality. During the Sinai campaign against Egypt in 1956, he parachuted with his forces to conduct religious services.

The bearded chief chaplain asserted that Israel's "spiritual renaissance is apt to leave a deep imprint on the destiny of world Jewry, and assist in linking diverse Jewish communities in a more solid association and bond."

While here, Rabbi Goren will speak on behalf of the Israel bond campaign, and is expected to address the executive boards of the Rabbinical Council of America on religious problems in Israel and the United States.

Urge U.S. To Ease Payments For Hawk Missiles To Israel

WASHINGTON — National Commander Morton London of the Jewish War Veterans asked the Department of State, in the light of developments in India and Cuba, to facilitate Israel's acquisition of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles by permitting Israel to pay in local currency—Israeli pounds—just as India has now been permitted to pay for arms in rupees.

"It is incredible to expect tiny Israel to defend herself against the world communist onslaught, as manifested by the Soviet offensive weapons now poised on her borders, without a more realistic approach to financing Israel's purchase of such a sophisticated defense weapons system as the Hawk," he wrote to Secretary of State Rusk.

30,000 Jews Attend Rabbi Kotler Funeral

NEW YORK—Close to 30,000 Jews from every walk of life formed a solemn assemblage last Sunday at the funeral of Rabbi Aaron Kotler, one of the world's eminent Orthodox scholars, who died at the age of 71.

The great tribute was described by Rabbi Shulem Rubin, president of the Young Israel Rabbis, in these words:

"In the entire history of the Jews, there has never been such a demonstration of respect for erudition and scholarship of the highest Torah caliber."

Rabbi Kotler, whose religious achievements included his participation in the founding of Israel's independent Orthodox educational system, died Thursday in Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

Rabbi Kotler, who came to the United States from Poland in 1941, was the dean of Beth Medrash Govoha, a graduate school of rabbinical studies in Lakewood, N.J.

As chairman of the Rabbinical Council of Torah Umesorah — The National Society of Jewish Day Schools — he guided the expansion of Jewish educational efforts in the United States.

The services were held at the Kalvaryer synagogue on Pike Street, between East Broadway and Henry St. The synagogue is one of the oldest on New York's East Side. Among the mourners at the synagogue was Col. Shlomo Goren, chief chaplain of Israel's army.

A number of speakers eulogized the Rabbi, among them Rabbi Pinchas Teitz, Rabbi Joel Teitelbaum and others.

The body of Rabbi Kotler was flown to Israel for burial abroad a Trans World Airways plane. It was accompanied by a minyan of Jews.

Old residents of the East Side said they could not recollect such an outpouring for a funeral since the death of Rabbi Jacob Joseph.

5,000 At Airport

Monday night a crowd of 5,000 gathered at the airport in Israel when Kotler's body was flown in from New York. During the night and Tuesday morning thousands more, chanting psalms, fled through the Etz Hayim Yeshiva where his body lay to pay their last tributes. Many had come from all over Israel.

An estimated 30,000 mourners jammed Jerusalem Tuesday in the funeral procession.

Clergymen Send Cable To Premier Assailing Soviet Official Policy

NEW YORK—A group of 46 Protestant, Catholic and Jewish clergymen have assailed Soviet anti-Semitism in a cable to Soviet Premier Khrushchev and urged the Russian Government to lift its official policy of oppression against its Jewish citizens.

The religious leaders sharply criticized the "blanket restraints" against all religions in the Soviet Union and emphasized that Judaism was placed outside even "the narrow framework of permissible religious practice" in Russia. The cable will be published Friday as an advertisement in four metropolitan newspapers as a cooperative undertaking by the religious signatories and the American Jewish Committee. The religious leaders signed in their individual capacities.

They included: Dr. John C. Bennett, Dean of Faculty of the Union Theological Seminary; Dr. Harold E. Fey, editor of the Christian Century; Dr. Alvin Rogness, president of the Lutheran Theological Seminary; Archbishop Karl J. Alter Cincinnati; Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, President of Notre Dame University; Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle of Washington; Dr.

Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation; Dr. Nelson Glueck, President of the Hebrew Union College—Jewish Institute of Religion; Rabbi Julius Mark, president of the Synagogue Council of America; and Archbishop Iskovos of the Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of North and South America.

The protest pointed out the sharp contrast between the Soviet Constitution in which equality of citizens is guaranteed and the Soviet Government's "persistent enmity to religion." Devout members of any religion "suffer harassment," the statement said. The cable delivered last week to the Soviet Embassy in New York for transmission to Premier Khrushchev charged that while most other faiths are permitted "bare necessities" for religious practice, the almost 3,000,000 Russian Jews were "denied minimal rights conceded to adherents of other faiths."

West wins the first two tricks with the queen and jack of hearts. West then leads a small diamond which South takes with the ace. South clears the trumps ending in the closed hand, then leads the queen of clubs; West covers and dummy wins with the ace. South now lays down the hand to easily make five.

COMMENT: North took all the blame for missing the bid on a game hand. North should have bid the clubs, then raised the spades, thus taking South to at least four spades.

Israel Supreme Court Rejects Application Of Jewish Convert

JERUSALEM — The Israel Supreme Court rejected last week in a four to one ruling, the application of a Polish-born Jewish convert to Catholicism for Israeli Jewish citizenship specifically under the law of return.

The petitioner was Oswald Rufeisen who became a Carmelite monk and is now living in a monastery in Haifa. Justice Moshe Silberg, president of the court, declared that a convert was not a Jew as far as the law of return was concerned.

He rejected the contention that such a view constituted a theocratic approach, emphasizing that on the contrary under Jewish religious law a convert is a Jew. He declared that precisely because the laws of return was a secular law the petition "must be unequivocally rejected." Justice Silberg declared that with all its historical significance, the law of return was a national law "and must be interpreted in accordance with current accepted concepts."

'CANNOT DESECRATE NAME'

Declaring that "we cannot desecrate the name and content of the term Jew," Justice Silberg wrote that "accepting a convert as a Jew would mean a distortion of Jewish history.

"There is one common aspect binding all who live in Zion and that is that we cannot cut ourselves off from the historical past and we do not reject our father's heritage."

"Our new culture" in Israel "is but a new edition of our past," he continued. "Whether religious, non-religious or anti-religious, all Jews are bound to the Jewish people's heritage. We have no quarrel with the Catholic Church and certainly to identify it with a church of medieval times and the personal merits of Rufeisen are irrelevant here."

The question the Justice declared "is whether he can be regarded as a Jew and this we must answer negatively." He referred to the convert's work in saving Jews in Nazi-occupied Poland and said this posed "a psychological difficulty" but he insisted that the record could not affect the basic question.

Lone Dissenter

The lone dissenter was Justice Haim Cohen who declared that interpretation of the Law of Return did not permit rejection of the convert's application and the denial of his rights as a Jew under the Law of Return. He said that under that law it was intended that every person have the right to declare himself a Jew wishing to return to his country. He added that the government contention that a convert ceased to be a Jew had no basis in law.

Justice Moshe Landau held that the petition failed even under the petitioner's contention that Israel was not a theocratic state but was rather the product of Zionism. He continued that if the Zionist criterion was applied "one must accept Herzl's viewpoint in rejecting Zionist membership for a converted Jew." He cited the Jewish nationalist philosopher Ahad Haam on that point as well as the preamble of the proclamation of the State of Israel on which he said the spirit of the Law of Return was based. He argued that this law was intended primarily for Jews outside of Israel and that it was axiomatic to such Jews that convert alienated himself from the heritage and the destiny of Jewry.

TAKES ISSUE WITH JUSTICE

Justice Landau also took issue with Justice Cohen asserting that the drafters of the Law of Return had not granted any right to discard or accept Judaism at will.

Justice Alia Humani stated that he concurred without reservations with the views of Justice Silberg and Landau.

In the fourth judgment, Justice Avi Berinson said he was "most reluctantly" bound by the provisions of the Law of Return to reject the petition. He said Brother Daniel, the Carmelite Monk, was a Jew by every criterion. He cited the fact that as a youth Rufeisen engaged in Zionist activities after conversion; he persisted in identifying himself as a Jew and in applying to Polish authorities for permission to migrate to Israel he stressed his desire — even though he was then a monk — to return to the land of his fathers. However, he added the test of the Law of Naturalization was a rider which stated that a person who in good faith declared himself a Jew should be so registered in Israel "unless he adopted another religion."

Says Rider Unconstitutional

Justice Cohen also held that the rider was unconstitutional and countered the spirit of the Law of Return. He called it an expression of galut philosophy which, he said, became outdated with the advent of Israel.

The highlight of the ruling was a majority rejection of the government's thesis that the issue could not be divorced from Jewish religious law (Halakhah), namely that religion and nationality as regards Judaism were indivisible. On the contrary, Justice Silberg wrote the contemporary view in that the Law of Return was "a sharp and clearcut no to the petition question as expressed in the He is not a Jew."

UJA Sets '63 Goal At $96 Million

Merrill L. Hassenfeld, a vice president of the General Jewish Committee and 1962 general campaign chairman, was re-elected as a member of the national campaign cabinet at the United Jewish Appeal's 25th annual conference last weekend in New York city.

The conference elected new officers and adopted a $96-million goal for 1963. The money will be used to help and alleviate the suffering of 575,000 refugees and distressed Jewish men, women and children in 28 countries.

Mrs. Merrill L. Hassenfeld was elected to the board of the National Women's Division of the UJA. Mrs. Albert Pilavian, past national chairman of the UJA Women's Division, was presented a gold medallion by William Rosenwald, honorary UJA chairman, for services to the UJA as part of the organization's 25th anniversary.

A 20-member delegation, headed by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ress, GJC president, attended the UJA Conference at the Americana Hotel.

Detail Israel's Need To Maintain Security In View Of World Crises

TEL AVIV — Israel's needs for maintaining its security in view of critical events throughout the world as well as in the Middle East were detailed here recently to the 145-member United Jewish Appeal Mission by Shimon Peres, Israel's Deputy Minister of Defense.

At the same time, the American leaders heard from Israel's Finance Minister, Levi Eshkol, a prediction that the country's Jewish population would rise to 3,000,000 in the next 10 years.

Moshe Sharett, chairman of the Jewish Agency executive, told the American leaders about the urgent needs posed by increased immigration and the problems of immigration absorption, while Abba Eban, minister of education, spoke of the necessity for greater funds to help "close the gap in education between various sections of the Israel population."

ELEVATE MISSIONS

JERUSALEM — The elevation by Israel and Poland of their missions to Embassies is seen here by diplomatic sources as a further expression of the developing friendship between the two countries.

A Polish trade mission visited Israel recently, and a new trade agreement was signed. It involves an exchange of goods totaling $4,500,000 each way.

The elevation in diplomatic status, in which it was understood that Israel took the initiative, was not expected to produce any personnel changes. Envoy Antony Bida and Avigdor Dagan will remain in their present respective posts.

SOME 10,000 clubs and special interest groups affiliated with Jewish community centers throughout the country provide services to members.

A LOOK AT SPORTS

by LEON SAPERSTEIN

Professional football will be dominating the sports headlines during the next few weeks. Both the National and the American Football Leagues are nearing the finish lines.

Two races have already been settled. In the NFL, the New York Giants are the Eastern champions, currently playing out the string as they patiently await the title game to be played at Yankee Stadium on December 30th. Their opponents will be the Green Bay Packers, although the Detroit Lions are grimly clinging to the hope that a miracle can bring about a tie, forcing a playoff between them and the Packers.

Over in the AFL, the Western Division race is over with the Dallas Texans on top. However, in the East a dogfight exists with only a half game edge separating the leading Houston Oilers and their determined pursuers, the Boston Patriots.

Here, my crystal ball sees the Oilers staying on top, bringing about an all Texas championship contest.

Although the National Football League Big Game is more than two weeks distant, now might be the time to assess the Giants' chances for victory. Last year the New York club was massacred 37-0 and the bitter taste of that defeat still rankles the proud Giants team. After that day of infamy, most sports writers were prone to rate the Giants as a second-rate squad, woefully inadequate to the role of NFL champion.

In my opinion the writers were using the Giants as whipping boys in order to cloak their dismay in being made to look foolish by having earlier contended that the New York entry was indeed championship material. Now, these same scribes will no doubt climb aboard the Green Bay bandwagon, since they don't want to be wrong two years running. I was one of those unfortunate who underestimated the Packers last year, but my analysis will not be altered because of fear of another wrong prediction. So here I go again out on that shaky limb of prognostication.

The 1962 edition of the New York Giants is, in my earnest opinion, a stronger club than the hapless contingent which was wrecked in last season's title game. First of all they have a more dangerous passing attack, augmented by the return this year of Frank Gifford, probably the most versatile back in the National Football League. Veteran Y.A. Tittle now has four excellent receivers to throw to and this state of affairs spreads the enemy secondary, making a completed pass more likely than last year.

Several weeks ago the Detroit Lions proved that the rock-ribbed Packer forward wall had developed a few chinks in its armor. Considered almost invincible, the men of Vince Lombardi, were proved humans after all. This discovery should bolster the Giants' confidence which was shaken on the hard Wisconsin sod a year ago.

However I feel that in order for the Giants to beat Green Bay they must do two things. First their defense, a mighty bulwark in the past six games, must follow the lesson taught by the Lions. In that memorable Thanksgiving Day encounter with the Packers, the Lions blitzed Bart Starr, the Green Bay quarterback constantly, they stunted: that is to say the ends circled to the inside and the tackles to the outside. So fast were the actions of the Lion defensive operatives, that the Packers could not effectively block out all the opposition, forcing Starr to spend a long afternoon being embraced by hungry enemy linemen.

The second factor necessary for New York supremacy rests on the running success of Alex Webster and Phil King. With these two juggernauts moving efficiently, less pressure will rest on the passing arm of Tittle, since he will be able to employ the two plays that he does better than any other quarterback: the screen pass and the bootleg maneuver, where he hides the ball and then uncorks a quick toss to a momentarily open receiver.

Del Shofner was tremendous in 1961. This year he has been supreme. When he is guarded on a man-on-man basis, he is almost impossible to stop. And despite the defensive brilliance of the Packers' Herb Adderley, Shofner, with his speed and quick moves, will be too tough to contain. Green Bay will not be able to afford the luxury of (Continued on Page 15)

The Lyon's Den

We drove around the island, from Estates Contant Inn, with its view on a clear day of the local Catalina - St. Croix, 39 miles away -- to Smith's Bay, from which yachtsmen can sail all the way to South America without ever losing sight of the land. The hibiscus grows wild, and even is used as live adornments on restaurant menus.

In the hills and along the waterfront are beautiful, modernistic homes built as winter playgrounds by wealthy Continentals. Ralph Schneider, chairman of the board of Diners' Club, recently put up his St. Thomas home for sale at $500,000. My wife admired the place, and said: "$500,000? I'll buy it, if he'll let me put it on my Diners' Club card."

There are low-cost housing projects for tenants whose varying rents are based upon a percentage of their earnings. They use an informer system to weed out those whose housekeeping habits do not meet the standard of maintaining the proud cleanliness of the homes.

They're proud of Emile Griffith, the first Virgin Island to win a prizefight championship, and named their girls' softball field the "Emile Griffith Stadium." The major league ballclubs send their stars and coaches here to conduct baseball clinics. And Nat Holman, the veteran CCNY coach, will come soon to hold basketball clinics.

We paused at Sapphire Bay to swim in the clear waters with Edward Black of Brooklyn, who uses the "Baron" byline in writing about resorts. He told of the phone call he once received from the late Countess Cassini, inviting the "Baron" to the Knickerbocker Ball. Black quickly told her that he was not a titled man, that the "Baron" was phony.

"How charming. Then do come," said the Countess. "A phony Baron? You'll be so welcome."

From the former slave-trading post in the center of town, and Emancipation Garden where all slaves were freed in 1848, we drove to the promontory where Herman Wouk makes his home, and where he now is at work on his next book. Wouk had flown to St. Croix for the day, on a committed matter regarding the new university being established here.

"Over there," said our guide, "is Tortola, the British Virgin Isle -- the only place in the entire British Commonwealth where the American dollar is legal tender." And then to "Tootoo Estate," owned by Jim Tillett, the artist. It was named "Tootoo" because over a century ago the owner would summon the slaves by blowing a conch shell, a sound they called "tootoo."

Tillett is looking for artisans to join him there -- leatherworkers, weavers, etc. -- in an industrial complex. I accidentally stepped on his Angora cat, and he said: "Don't worry. I've trained it against rough treatment." Not too rough, though. Tillett once drove past a Mexican boy carrying a goat by one leg. He stopped, lifted the boy by one leg, and asked, by way of a lesson: "Now, how do YOU like it?"

The President's Home

The President of the State of Israel Mr. Izhak Ben-Zvi was elected for the first time in 5713 (1953). The Knesset elects the president once every five years. The President has a number of official duties, but besides all these manifold are the activities conducted in the president's home, on behalf of the new immigrants. The President and his wife interest themselves in everything concerning the new immigration and visit the new towns and villages. The President and his wife came to Haifa harbour to welcome immigrant ships and talked with the newcomers and greeted them in their new homeland.

The President introduced a praiseworthy custom: Rosh Hodesh ("head of the month—New Moon") gatherings. On every Rosh Hodesh the President and his wife invite representatives of communities who relate about their congregations in the Diaspora. There have already been such gatherings for Persian and Polish, Egyptian, Hungarian, Iraqi, British newcomers and the like.

Another attractive custom: "At Home" day. This day takes place on Hol Hamoed Succot (the intermediate days of the feast of tabernacles). On this day, in the afternoon the doors of the President's Home are open to all comers. On this day, every person in Israel can come and honour the President of the State and his wife with a visit greet them and receive their greetings.

Editors

All papers that carry Sylvia Porter

This is regarding the column "Your Money's Worth" in the column published in the Rhode Island Herald on November 23, 1962 on the subject "Save on Taxes NOW!"

The suggestions made by Miss Porter though they may in practice be followed by some people reach an interesting low for a pseudo professional economist. These suggestions elevate to a policy the rather reprehensible practise of donating to a worthy charity a moth-eaten fur coat the like of which no self respecting junk dealer would give $10 for and setting it up as a tax loss or contribution of $100.

Not only does Miss Porter suggest this but she indicates that since the government is taking a dim view of this practise, if you haven't already taken advantage of it, you'd better rush to do so because there are only 20 more days till Xmas.

I think that your paper and those who publish Miss Porter's valuable suggestions should issue some kind of an apology. J. S. Fuerst

P.S. I find it particularly interesting that next to the article mentioned above you printed an article on Rabbi Braude's Midrash. This shows that the paper is at least unbiased.

assigning two men to stay with Del since this allows a fair pass-catcher like Joe Walton or Frank Gifford or even Alex Webster a nice zone to romp unmolested.

As a final note the state of health of Paul Hornung will influence the final result. No doubt Hornung will see some action in the title game but he is still not at full strength and his job will be primarily as a decoy so as to draw the Giants away from concentrating on the bull like rushes of Jim Taylor, this year's top ground-gainer.

My prediction is that the game will be won by the team most desperate for victory. In this case I feel that although Green Bay is the better club, the New York Giants will narrowly escape with the triumph.

WASHINGTON — Two leaders of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations warned last week that a new migration of young Jews in America from small and middle sized towns to large cities presents dangers in the future growth of Reform Judaism.

These concerns were voiced by Rabbi Jay Kaufman, UAHC vice-president and Myron E. Schoen, director of the UAHC Commission on Synagogue Administration, at a four-day leadership conference here.

Rabbi Kaufman and Schoen observed that among the dangers confronting Reform Judaism are the disintegration of the old congregations in smaller communities.

Urge Jews Take Part In Politics

MONTREAL — Senator David Croll of Toronto the only Jewish Senator in Canadian history, urged Jews last week to participate more in Canadian Federal politics. Speaking at the first conference here of the Canadian Council of Reform Congregations, Croll said, "We have isolated ourselves as a religious group."

Rabbi Bernard Baskin of Hamilton, criticized Israel's Minister for Religious Affairs Zorah Warhaftig for labeling Reform Jewry a sect instead of recognizing it as part of the main stream of Judaism. "Warhaftig's attitude," he declared, "is calculated to engender tension and hostility among Jew."

Montreal — Senator David Croll of Toronto the only Jewish Senator in Canadian history, urged Jews last week to participate more in Canadian Federal politics which reward you for being a careful driver. Torah Scroll Placed In Ark

WASHINGTON, D. C. — A Torah scroll belonging to President Kennedy has been placed in the Ark of the new Religious Action Center of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, 2027 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W. as part of a religious service dedicating the new building.

The ceremony was a highlight of a Leadership Conference gathering lay and rabbinic representatives of the UAHC's 640 member Reform congregations in the Western Hemisphere, with a membership over one million. The new Center is located in the Emily R. and Kivie Kaplan Building, a three-story red brick building which is a former embassy. The Center serves the Commission on Social Action of Reform Judaism—a joint body of the UAHC and the Central Conference of American Rabbis.
