'Patch' And Rena . . . Talented Young Ladies

by Brenda Slack

Rena and Patch are good friends. . . friends that have spent the past five years studying, working and performing together under the able direction of Myles Marsden.

Exceptionally talented for their ages Rena Rotenberg and Patricia Simons began their dancing careers at an age when most young ladies are involved in a world of dolls and make-believe.

Rena, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rotenberg of 555 Lloyd Avenue, had an unusual beginning to her career in ballet. She couldn't walk for the first two years of her life and yet while she was still struggling with braces her father would pick her up and dance around a room with her. Whenever she heard music she would waltz or tango to whatever rhythm was playing and was so amazing and unbelievable that when she finally learned to walk her parents sent her to dancing school at the age of three. By the time she was seven she was entertaining with exhibition ballroom dancing at the Mayflower in Plymouth and the Hollywood Beach Hotel in Florida. She has performed many times but feels that this year's performance at the Providence Arts Festival was her most rewarding.

This year, at the age of 14, Rena became a member of the State Ballet Company but has been in many, many performances with the company since its inception in 1960.

Rena finds dancing to be all consuming but her love for the theatre and dramatics have prompted her to be in many camp plays and she was in her senior play at Nathan Bishop Junior High School this past year. Rena plans to spend her summer at Camp Mar-Ven where she is a member of the dramatic staff.

Storm Offices Of ORT For Places In School

TEL AVIV — A crowd of over a thousand parents and youngsters stormed the offices of the ORT school at Derech Hatayassin in Tel Aviv recently in an effort to register their sons. So great was the crush that at one point the police arrived to restore order. The registration was being held for admission to the fall semester.

The ORT Center here is the largest and most modern trade school in the Middle East. An application roster several times the number of available places has become an annual event.

Early last week, lines started forming in front of the school at 2 A.M. Many parents camped overnight. When the school opened many scrambled over barriers to get to the head of the line. Calm was re-established only when the school's director, Zvi Rivlin, announced that numbered tickets would be distributed in the order of arrival.

'Based on Grades'

Rivlin told the parents, "Admission will be based on the grades of students and their achievements in examinations. Those who made top honors in the tests will have first preference. But each applicant will be considered individually on his own merit." However, he warned of disappointment for many, since the school could make available only 288 places in its secondary level division.

The episode highlighted the heightened interest in vocational and technical education in Israel in recent years. It was viewed as an encouraging trend among parents and youth. The ORT schools in Israel have enlarged their facilities and enrollment to provide instruction in 1961 for over 13,000 persons, and the 1962 attendance is expected to be 15,000.

Government and educational authorities are eager to direct larger segments of youth toward technical studies.

Jews In Algeria Attempt To Save Lives Of Children

PARIS — A "save our children" campaign was in full swing last week among the remaining Jews of Algeria, particularly in the strife-torn city of Oran where new bloodshed is feared as Algeria becomes independent under Moslem rule.

Some 200 unaccompanied child refugees have arrived in France and several hundred more were expected last week. The total may reach 3,000 before the end of the year, according to projections prepared by Jewish social workers.

Looming over the Algerian drama is the tragedy of countless Algerian children threatened with physical violence and exposed to daily scenes of unparalleled bloodshed and violence. Their parents are anxious to get them to metropolitan France at the earliest possible moment.

Prepare Buildings

A total of 150 Jewish child refugees have been placed in Jewish communal institutions in Strasbourg, and the Fonds Social Juif Unifie, the principal Jewish welfare agency, is making special efforts to arrange similar facilities in Paris and other centers.

The buildings formerly used by the Alliance Israelite Universelle Teachers Seminary have been prepared to receive several hundred Jewish children and work is in preparation on other sites.

A representative of the Joint Distribution Committee is in Algeria. Together with the FSJU, he is arranging for the transport of children to France. With some 3,500 Jewish refugees arriving in France over the past weekend, the influx is reaching unprecedented totals. Most Jews were seeking to leave Algeria before independence day, July 1, although French authorities had pledged to provide transportation after that date.

Golda Meir Declares Relations Between United States, Israel Rest On Friendly Foundation

JERUSALEM — Describing as "baseless," speculation about Israel's relations with the Kennedy Administration, Mrs. Golda Meir, Israel's Foreign Minister, declared in Parliament last week that she had no doubt that the basic relations between Israel and the United States would continue to rest as in previous years on "firm foundations of friendship" and friendly discussion on all matters of common interest.

She said it was only natural that the new Administration should intensify its study of the international problems it faced. Conceding there were differences on some matters, she pointed out that in any appraisal of the Middle East situation it would be "altogether difficult" to assume there could be a complete identity of views between two countries, particularly between countries as different in size and world standing as the United States and Israel.

Mrs. Meir, who made these comments in introducing her Ministry's budget, expressed "regret, astonishment and concern" at the indifference of the great nations to anti-Israel hostility of the Arab countries. She expressed concern that the "flouting" of the United Nations Charter by the Arab states and their anti-Israel boycott had not led to "the sharp reaction" they deserved. She referred specifically to the election of Egypt to the UN Security Council and to the UN committee on disarmament.

Budget Increased

Foreign Ministry budget estimates have been raised to $12,000,000 for this fiscal year as against a budget of $6,666,666 for the previous year. Mrs. Meir said the budget would make possible increased activities in international cooperation, cultural relations and public relations as well as the needs of a broadening of Israel's representation abroad.

She expressed the hope that an independent Algeria would not be drawn automatically into the Arab "circle of hate and hostility" toward Israel. She added that Israel would be happy "if the independence of Algeria will become the first sign pointing toward a new chapter in Israel-Arab relations." She reiterated Israel's readiness to meet with its Arab neighbors for talks on any issue at any place at any level and without pre-conditions in the "firm conviction" that differences could be peacefully resolved.

Mrs. Meir also said no threat of any kind will influence Israel to slow down work on the Jordan River irrigation project which is vital to Israel's development and which will be completed as quickly as technical considerations permit.

Rejects Herut Proposal

She rejected a proposal by Herut deputy Aryeh ben Eliezer that Israel should "get tough" with Ghana and base its relationships with African states on a "quid pro quo" approach.

Mrs. Meir said she was not prepared to demand from Ghana an explanation of what constituted friendship and added that what Israel was doing in Africa was more than "policy," that it was a continuation of the traditions of the Jewish people.

'Commercializing' Religion Opposed

MIAMI — The Greater Rabbinical Association served advance notice last week on Miami Jewry that it vigorously opposed any plans "to commercialize religion and in particular using the High Holy Day services for financial profit and personal benefit."

The statement said the rabbis understood the need for fund-raising activities by established congregations and the fact that some seasons of the Jewish religious year "naturally lend themselves more advantageously to the pledging or collection of dues and fees."

Supreme Court Decision Touches Off Mixed Reaction Throughout Nation

NEW YORK—The Supreme Court's historic decision banning official prayers in public schools last week touched off a nation-wide reaction which included an increase in inter-religious debate on the issue.

Included in the first public reaction was unanimous acclaim for the decision by Jewish organizations, criticism from Catholic spokesmen and a mixed reaction from Protestant organizations. Members of Congress were bitter in their protests and several moved to start the machinery for a constitutional amendment to permit voluntary prayers in schools.

Simultaneously, predictions were made that there would be a drive throughout the United States to eliminate many standard sectarian practices in American Schools. The American Civil Liberties Union noted that several related suits were moving through lower courts en route to the Supreme Court. The organization said it planned to ask its 33 affiliates nationally to measure local school practices against the Supreme Court decision. Among the practices now facing the court tests are Christians and Hanuaka observances, Easter programs, recitation of the Lord's Prayer and baccalaureate services.

As bitterness mounted against the decision—which many experts said was not as embracing as the critics assumed—Anti-Semitic undertones began to emerge.

One of the five parents who conducted the suit against the New York Regents prayer which ended with the Supreme Court ban reported that he and his family had been vilified with anti-Semitic insults and threats of death.

The parent, Lawrence Roth, of Roslyn Heights, in suburban Long Island, said so many abusive calls had come in during the 48 hours after the decision that the family took the telephone off the hook.

Finally reunited — Yossele Schumacher, 10-year-old Israeli youngster, is shown with his mother, Mrs. Ida Schumacher, 37, and sister, Zina, 15, in New York, where they were reunited on July 3. (See Story on page 10).

Nehru States, "No Relations With Israel"

NEW DELHI — Prime Minister Nehru told the Indian Parliament last weekend that India has not entered diplomatic relations with Israel partly because Israel's activities had been "unfortunately aggressive" in the past and because it might be harmful to India's relations with other countries.

He added that relations between Israel and some West Asian countries were "strained" and any action taken by India in regard to any of these countries might affect another and might be resented by the other countries. He said "one had therefore to see what advantages" there would be in balance and whether a particular action would contribute to the settlement of dispute among those countries.

He said India did not plan to exchange diplomatic representatives with Israel now because such an exchange "in balance" would not be advantageous to the cause "India is pursuing in West Asia." His principal theme was Algeria and he said India would recognize an independent Algeria promptly.

His comments on Israel were in reply to a supplementary question by Hvkamat Paja, a Socialist deputy, who had asked "whether India's approach" to Israel "was conditioned by Arab susceptibilities." He also asked whether it was not a fact "that many European and Asian countries had cordial relations with both the Arab countries and Israel and that such being the case, what was India's difficulty in recognizing Israel?"

Find 5% of Top Officials Jewish

WASHINGTON — About 5% of a sample of top-ranking Federal officials named by the Kennedy Administration were reported to be Jewish, in a survey released recently by Protestants and Other Americans United.

The survey found that 80% were Protestants and 15% of the officials were Roman Catholics, indicating that, "religion-wise," the appointments to the more important jobs of this Administration are generally commensurate with the religious percentages of the population. The survey was made of a selection of 1,000 of the top-ranking officials as the sample.

The report also covered recent appointments to Federal judgeships and found the percentages, on a religious breakdown, to be roughly equivalent to those for the high-ranking agency positions. About 80% of the judges named were Protestants, 17% were Roman Catholics and 3% were Jewish.

The POAU said, however, that it found complaints of "sectarian orientation" in the area of United States foreign policy, and the Central Intelligence Agency. The organization said it found certain divisions in the Federal Government where, "as a result of seeming collusion between directors of personnel procurement and division or section heads, various forms of religious, racial and geographical bias have been exhibited" and suggested the need for a "more detailed study in depth" of this problem.

Israeli Investment Totals $40,000,000

TEL AVIV — Israel will need more than $1,000,000,000 in investments next year, delegates to the Third International Congress of Bi-National Chambers of Commerce were told last week. Most of the possible investments will go to development projects and basic industries as well as housing projects.

Nathan Strauss of New York, president of the American-Israel Chamber of Commerce told the opening session that American private investment in Israel has increased 500% since the Congress was started in 1955. He said that as compared with American private investment then of $8,000,000 a year the total now was $40,000,000 annually.

He also reported that the number of American firms operating in Israel had neared the 200 mark and that they included such well-known companies as Studebaker-Packard, Dun and Bradstreet and Fair-

מתי נוסדה ירושלים? אין ההיסטוריה נותנת תשובה מדויקת לשאלה זו, אף-על-פי שמקבל לחשב, כי ירושלים היא העתיקה ביותר מבין ערי העולם, שהיתה מושבת ללא הפסקה.

ירושלים נזכרת בראשונה במכתבים שנחננו במצרים, שבהם הזכירו אותה השליטים, שהיו כפופים לשלטון מצרים, כעיר, ששלמה את מסייה לפרעונים.

רק אחרי כבושה של ירושלים על-ידי בני-ישראל נכנסה להיסטוריה העולמית, כאשר הפך אותה דוד לבירת ישראל (1000 לפני הספירה).

עם הקמת בית-המקדש על הר-המוריה בידי שלמה היתה ירושלים למרכז הדתי של המדינה.

העיר ירושלים נהרסה ושבה-נבנתה פעמים הרבה. היא נמצאה בידי עשרות כובשים: אשור ובבל, היונים והרומאים הביזנטים והמוסלמים, הצלבנים, המונגולים, הממלוכים, התורכים והאנגלים.

כיום משמשת ירושלים כעיר-הבירה של מדינת-ישראל.

WINS AWARD

NEW YORK — Professor Jacob Neuser, chairman of the department of Hebrew studies at the University of Wisconsin, was awarded the $1,000 Abraham Berliner Prize in Jewish history for his book on "A Life of Rabban Yohanan Ben Zakai" at Jewish Theological Seminary of America.

When was Jerusalem founded? History does not provide us with a precise answer to this question, though it is common to imagine that Jerusalem is the most ancient city of the world, to be continuously inhabited.

Jerusalem is first mentioned in letters discovered in Egypt, alluded to by those governors who were subject to Egyptian rule as a city which payed its tribute to the Pharaohs.

Only after the conquest of Jerusalem by the children of Israel did it enter world history, when David turned it into the capital of Israel (1000 BCE).

With the erection of the Temple on mount Moriah by Solomon, Jerusalem became centre of the State.

The city of Jerusalem was frequently destroyed and rebuilt. It experienced dozens of conquerors: Assyria, Greeks and Romans, Crusaders, Mongols, Mamelukes, Turks and English.

Today it serves as the capital city of the State of Israel.

Urges Efforts To Help Plight Of USSR Jews

TORONTO — The Canadian Jewish Congress concluded its 13th plenary session here last week with the adoption of a resolution urging maximum efforts to "help alleviate the plight of our brethren in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics." Michael Garber of Montreal was elected president of the organization to succeed Samuel Bronfman, who served in the post for the past 23 years and who was named chairman of the board of directors.

Study Commission

The Congress also established a national study commission to explore ways and means of meeting the financial requirements of Jewish day schools in Canada through the development of new sources of revenue. It also called upon the CJC national executive to encourage the establishment of chairs in Yiddish and Hebrew language and culture and Jewish history.

Criminal Code

The CJC reaffirmed "its active opposition to religious education in the public schools in those provinces where public schools exist." It also urged the taking of all steps necessary "to bring about amendments in the criminal code to make it a criminal offense to preach hate mongering, race slaughter or genocide toward any ethnic or religious groups" and that this be done "without infringing on the democratic freedoms of Canadians."

Call for Alertness

Bronfman said in an address that Canadian Jewry must believe implicitly in the need for a complete existence and must realize that there can be no virile and meaningful Jewish life in Canada without authenticity. He referred to the responsibility of Canadian Jewry to show concern for the harassed Jews of communist countries and of other countries where there are forebodings of further disabilities for Jews.

Bronfman urged Canadian Jewry to be alert to the eroding influence of assimilationism, which, he said, is paradoxically all the more persuasive in a society, such as the Canadian, where anti-Semitism has abated since the war.

Saul Hayes, executive vice-president, stressed that the Canadian Jewish community, living in a predominantly Anglo Saxon culture, and no longer rooted in an east European background, must realize that the future of the Jewish community can no longer be directly related to the culture of the past.

Slow Progress In Fringe Benefits

AAJE Surveys Pensions And Welfare Plans For Teachers

NEW YORK — The American Association for Jewish Education issued a report last week indicating that while gains had been made in recent years in provision of fringe benefits for Jewish teachers, progress had been "painfully and distressingly slow."

The report was issued on the basis of a nationwide survey undertaken several months ago for the purpose of determining the extent to which communities now participate in contributing to retirement or pension programs for Jewish education workers.

The survey was limited to Jewish communities having coordinating bodies for Jewish education, on the assumption "that in the absence of such an instrument for community action, cooperative educational endeavors entailing large-scale expenditure of communal funds are an unlikely possibility."

Survey 33 Cities

In all, 33 Jewish communities with a combined population of more than 2,000,000 were surveyed. In answer to a question as to whether Jewish communal resources were tapped for any fringe benefits for weekday teachers, 20 central agencies, representing communities with a total Jewish population of 1,565,000, responded in the affirmative. Agencies in 13 cities, with an aggregation of 558,000 Jewish residents, responded in the negative.

The survey was directed by the AAJE's national committee on teacher education and welfare, which said it had "maintained consistently that a planned program for the dignified exit of aged educational personnel from active service is an obligation not only of the employing educational institution but of the community as a whole."

The cities which responded to the questions posed in the survey included Atlanta, Boston, Bridgeport, Buffalo, Camden, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Detroit, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Louisville, Miami, Minneapolis, Newark (Essex County), New Haven, Oakland, Cal., Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Portland Me., St. Paul, Savannah, St. Louis, East St. Louis, Ill., Toronto, Washington, D. C., and Winnipeg.

Support Pension Plans

The survey found that there was a 100% coincidence in that all of the 20 Jewish communities which contributed to some fringe benefit plan for teachers made provision for a retirement fund for them.

The survey also examined what had been done by communities to enable teaching personnel to acquire relatively inexpensive group life insurance coverage. The survey found that San Francisco was the only responding community "in which the teacher was not expected to contribute to the cost of his life insurance."

In another area, the survey found that a hospitalization insurance program was in effect in 15 to the 33 communities.

Health, accident, major medical insurance or a paid sick leave plan was in effect in 12 of the cities, the survey found, but in some of the communities, sick leave pay was found not to be guaranteed by an insured program but was underwritten by the community school or central agency.

The survey report concluded with the observation that the response to the repeated calls by the AAJE to communities "for realistic economic measures to meet the critical shortage of competent educational personnel is painfully and distressingly slow." The AAJE said that low salaries were still the most "formidable deterrent" to entrance of more Jews into teaching "but a close second is the continued absence of a comprehensive program of additional financial emoluments and benefits which will add up to job stability and economic security."

Two Young Ladies and the World of Ballet

"Patch" Simons

Similar to Rena, Patch, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Simons of 11 Loring Avenue, began her career at the age of three when she astonished everyone and insisted on going to camp for the summer. While at camp the dramatic group was putting on "Midsummer Night's Dream" and Patch showed an unbelievable amount of talent and ease on the stage. A tiny little girl of three she made encore after encore without blinking an eye. Now 12 years old, Patricia, known to all as "Patch", has been taking dancing lessons for four years and really became seriously involved in ballet three years ago. She has performed many times with the State Ballet Company although she is not yet a member. The minimum age is 13. Along with Rena, Patch felt that the performance at the Arts Festival this year was the greatest for as she put it: "It lasted three nights . . . it wasn't all over in just one performance."

Plans Academy

Patch has some unusual plans for the future . . . she hopes to attend Barnard or Radcliff when she completes high school and has aspirations of starting an academy of dancing. She firmly believes that the United States should have a college where one can obtain a Fine Arts Degree and major in dance just as they do in Russia. On the subject of Russia Patch very definitely has more praise for the Russian Ballet artists than any others the world over.

An avid reader Patch has many books and reads whenever she has a spare moment. She plays the piano because she feels that in order to dance one should also be able to read music. Her love for singing and dancing far outweigh her interest in piano, however.

At present both girls are at camp . . . Rena busy with the dramatics and Patch majoring in dance at a dramatics camp. Rena plans on taking voice lessons in the fall and both girls agree that in order to be a good dancer it is a necessity to be exceptional in acting and singing . . . in this respect each has had an excellent beginning.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

WHO'S 'LUCKIER' IN STOCK MARKET — WOMEN OR MEN?

Have women been "smarter" in handling their stock transactions than men in the past few years and thus, made more and lost less? Or have they perhaps been "luckier" than men, because they didn't get in on the hot-hot new issues and over-priced glamor stocks in 1961 and so they've not been stuck with these now glacier cold stocks in 1962?

There's more than a suspicion that the answer to at least the second question, if not the first, is "yes."

The evidence lies in the latest statistics comparing ownership of stocks by women and by men, disclosed recently in the fourth and most comprehensive survey so far of stock ownership in the U.S. by the New York Stock Exchange. Here are the statistics and following is a logical interpretation leading to the above provocative comment.

Statistic: Today, women account for 51 per cent of the total adult shareholder population, as against 49 per cent for men. In 1959, women shareowners outnumbered men by 52.5 to 47.5 per cent, and in 1956 by 51.4 to 48.6 per cent. The division between the sexes is more even than at any time during the previous decade.

Statistic: Today, 15.6 per cent of the total population of adult males are stockholders compared with 14.9 per cent women. In 1959 the percentage of women topped that of men by a slim margin.

Statistic: Nearly 5.5 million housewives are shareholders, up from 4 million in 1959, and housewives are the largest single group of shareholders. But as far as the percentage of the total goes, the housewife group has risen only from 33.1 per cent in 1959 to 33.6 per cent now.

Statistic: Women lead most markedly in the 65-and-over age group, where they outnumber men by nearly 500,000. Men, though, account for a higher proportion than women in the most active ages of 21 to 54.

Statistic: More than twice as many women as men -- 1.5 million to 713,000 -- obtain their first share of stock through inheritance or gifts.

Statistic: Among the shareholders who have entered the market for the first time since 1959, about 55 per cent are women, a clear majority. But of those who became new adult shareholders between 1956 and 1959, more than 56 per cent were women.

Put all these statistics together, place them against the background of a shareholder population skyrocketing 4.5 million just since 1959 to a record 17 million and a market which in the past few months has erased most of the gains of this entire period and where do you come out?

You come out suspecting women recently have been either smarter or luckier than men in the market--and here's why.

Obviously, the individuals feverishly gambling in new stock issues and bidding up the glamor stocks to fantastic levels last year were primarily men. Otherwise, the percentage of women to men shareholders would not have dropped as it did. The census itself includes a footnote that "data assembled suggests that many more men than women participated in the unusual stock market activity in the spring of 1961."

Obviously too, a lot of women who owned shares in 1959 were no longer shareholders at the time of the 1962 census. This is the only explanation for the fact that, while 55 per cent of new shareholders since 1959 have been women, the proportion of men in the total shareholder population between 1959 and 1962 climbed substantially.

The new issues and glamor stocks have been the securities which have taken the severest licking and hurt their owners the most.

Perhaps the reason women didn't play the new issues in 1961 is that they weren't on brokers' preferred lists and didn't get the chance. Perhaps the reason is that they didn't know what was going on in the glamor stocks because women at home don't get the variety and quantity of tips that husbands get in their offices. Perhaps the reason is that an elderly widow who has inherited her securities is naturally more conservative than a young man in his 20's or 30's -- and she should be.

Whatever the reason or combination of reasons, the fact is that the percentage of women to men shareholders has dwindled for the first time in these past few years -- and this has been a period of the worst stock market crackup in modern times. Smarter? Luckier? You decide.

Probe Blasting of Wald Monument

JOHANNESBURG — Police experts in explosives began an intensive investigation recently to find the person who damaged Sculptor Herman Wald's massive memorial to martyred European Jews in Johannesburg's Westpark Jewish Cemetery with a dynamite blast.

The vandalism apparently was connected with a telephone call to the Johannesburg Star, from a man who said, "I am Adolf Eichmann, see me in Westpark Cemetery." The blast destroyed the Ner Tamid which lights up the sculptured phrase "Lo Tirzach".

Charles Boyer has been on the French Riviera these past few months making the movie "The Grand Duke and Mr. Pimm." During dinner at La Bonne Auberge, he was shown the Life Magazine pictures of Marilyn Monroe's 36th birthday party, given by her studio. Boyer, sipping his wine, declined to comment on the birthday story. He said: "A Frenchman always remembers the age of a wine, and forgets the age of a woman."

Sue Lyon, who plays the title role in "Lolita," sat unrecognized at midnight beside the fountain at the Seagram Building, dipping her toes into the pool. There will be an announcement soon of the first movie ever to be based on a story by Isak Dinesen. Charles Goren, the bridge champion, will be in Hershey, Penna., July 2, for the governors' convention. Goren will give a bridge seminar for the governors' wives.

At the Amherst commencement exercises, the story was told of the day Mike Todd Jr. was graduated. His father, the showman who'd come up from the streets of Milwaukee and Chicago, attended the exercises. On the drive back to New York, young Mike handed his diploma to his father, who noticed that the name on it was Michael Todd -- no "Jr." The youngster explained, "You put me through, so it's as much yours as mine."

Robert Merrill will write the lyrics for "The Unfair Sex," the musical being dramatized by Ketti Frings. Felix Frankfurter Reminiscences, which was a best-seller, now is being issued as an Anchor paperback. But Justice Frankfurter, who dictated these memoirs for Columbia's Oral History Dept., won't get a dime in royalties. The veteran, tireless Sophia Tucker, now touring Australia, will extend her trip to

by Leonard Lyons

South Africa.

Few sound engineers and experts agree on what constitutes acceptable acoustics for a hall. Leopold Stokowski was invited, with other authorities, to a New York Philharmonic rehearsal in the new hall at Lincoln Center to test the acoustics. Stokowski was asked to mount the podium. He instructed the orchestra to strike the first two chords of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. Then he paused and told the group, "Gentlemen, you called me too late."

Because of the backstage feuds at "The Night of the Iguana," the stage crews refer to the dressing room sections as "East Berlin" and "West Berlin." The sponsors of the Hartford pay-TV experiment wanted to use the City Center's current production of "Fiorello." But Hal Prince, who produced the original Broadway show, refused to consent. Dick Silbert, art director of "Baby Doll" and "Splendor in the Grass," at last will direct a movie, "Faster! Faster!"

Richard Burton was not the only men involved in both "The Longest Day" and "Cleopatra." Andrew Marton, the special effects expert who directed the chariot race scenes in "Ben-Hur," worked a year commuting between "Cleopatra" in Rome and "The Longest Day" in Paris. "It was an unusual experience," said Marton. "After all, how many men get to go to war with both Caesar and Eisenhower in the same year?"

Bea Lillie flew to Canada and then to Europe to while away the weeks before starting rehearsals here. Robert Moses, who as Park Commissioner fought in vain to prevent the establishment of the Shakespeare Theater in Central Park, was invited to the premiere. He declined, in a stinging letter to his successor, Newbold Morris. Producer Alexander Ince tells this story about his late friend, playwright Ferenc Molnar. One night during a card game, Molnar was asked about a new playwright who had a hit. "I don't like him," said Molnar. When asked why, he said, "He wears long underwear." A card player who'd dropped a chip searched for it on the floor, then said, "but Molnar, you're wearing long underwear." Molnar looked down, then said, "No. Those feet you looked at were not mine."

Warren Beatty's next movie will be Robert Rossen's "Cocoa Beach." Natalie Wood is eager to work on the Broadway stage. She'll be free to make the move after she does one more movie for Warner Bros. The BBC taped "Bravo Giovanni" for broadcasting to Kenya next month. Vienna's famed Burgtheater has invited Harry Horner, the producer-director-designer, to produce a series of modern plays by American authors.

Bert Stern, the photographer, recently flew to Italy to spend Sunday, Monday and Tuesday shooting Elizabeth Taylor. On Wednesday he flew to Hollywood to spend Thursday, Friday and Saturday photographing Marilyn Monroe for Vogue. Paulette Goddard chose Padua as the place for holding the 64th birthday party for her husband, Erich Maria Remarque. A major problem in the new musical about Fannie Brice is that her ex-husband, Nicky Arnstein, is still alive.

Stella Adler, the actress and drama coach, was at a dinner party where the guests talked about the theater. "Why do you insist on discussing MY business?" Miss Adler complained. She turned to one man and said: "Let's talk about your business. What business are you in?" He was Howard Taubman, the Times' drama critic.

STRICTLY KOSHER

HOUSTON — The Jewish Community Center here has, for the first time, converted its dining facilities to strictly kosher status.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

"Israel may not be heaven but while there I had a feeling I had never been so close to God," remarked Ben Goffstein, President of the Las Vegas Riviera Hotel on his recent return from his first visit to the young democratic nation.

"Nothing has ever impressed me so much," said the executive. "I imagined I had seen everything but this visit made me prouder than ever that I am a Jew."

He confessed that prior to his trip he was far from being an enthusiastic supporter of the tiny country. "I'm convinced now," he conceded.

Goffstein repeated what has been discussed so often... dedicated people working under adverse conditions and displaying a lion's fortitude instead of shriveling up before the hundreds of tons of arms shipped to Egypt by Russia... the beautiful Hebrew University with its new buildings and wide variety of courses made available to 8,000 students... and the new Senate building in Jerusalem built with financing by the Rothschild family.

Observing that Israel is the only country completely devoid of religious or racial discrimination, Goffstein laughingly remarked that if a youngster were to be called "a dirty Jew," he'd probably naively deny: "I am not! I took a bath this morning!"

A touch of humor was unveiled during the Las Vegas leader's visit when a former Hungarian landed in the local pokey. Brought before the judge, the prisoner explained that he had done only what was required of all new arrivals--pursued his former profession. In Hungary, it was revealed, he had been a pickpocket.

"Israelis are encouraged to speak their minds," Goffstein observed. "They have a democracy in the truest sense of the word. No other country in the Middle East offers a democratic stronghold to an anxious world."

It was the hotel magnate's opinion that the United States should channel a heavy percentage of its foreign aid to the little power especially in view of the fact that we have now decided to cancel aid to communist countries. "What better insurance for freedom than to transfer financial aid from communism to democracy?" he challenged.

"The way of Israel is the American way," beamed Goffstein proudly. "The United States can rest assured that this dedicated nation will never sell out to the highest bidder."

"Israel has its share of malcontents and misfits," admitted Goffstein. "That isn't surprising, considering that its citizens have arrived from all parts of the world. However, they are being molded as one, slowly but surely. The results will become evident conclusively in the next generation, children who are now learning the ideals of democracy in school classes."

During his visit, the hotel man watched five little girls playing in the street. Only recently, these children had arrived from five different countries. "Yet here they were, playing together with the universal language of love, without understanding a word one said to the other."

Water from the Jordan River project will turn desert wastes into valuable farm land. Trouble is expected from Jordan who claims that the water, resulting from melted snow in their mountains, belongs to them. One Israel official told the Riviera Hotel's president: "It seems to me that God's snow belongs to anyone energetic enough to gather it in any form it may assume."

Israel needs equipment and manpower desperately, Goffstein pointed out. He feels that every Jew's financial support should be stepped up through the United Jewish Appeal. He urged the purchase of Israel bonds. "If anyone is considering a trip to Israel," he suggested, "these bonds may be cashed there at any time. It is an excellent way to finance a future trip."

New Roman ruins have been discovered in Israel. A coliseum even larger than the famous Flavian amphitheater in Rome has been found. "These ruins are expected to develop a major tourist attraction and thus provide an additional source of revenue," said the executive enthusiastically.

"If Israel can win the support of Jews throughout the world morally and financially," Goffstein emphasized, "it will develop a country that Jews everywhere will be proud to call their homeland for generations to come."

Extend Fulbright Israeli Program

JERUSALEM — An extension of the United States Educational Foundation in Israel for the exchange of Israeli and American students and educators was announced here last week.

The budget for the project, known as the Fulbright program, will be $150,000 for the first year which is $60,000 more than during the previous year. The program will provide grants for travel to the United States for 25 Israeli students and educators and for 15 opposite numbers to come to Israel from the United States.
