

World Jewish Population Now 12,915,000; U. S. Figure 5 Million

NEW YORK — The World Jewish Congress has just completed a statistical survey of Jews all over the world, finding that there are 12,915,000 Jews living in 122 lands.

The survey, carried out by the WJC's Institute of Jewish Affairs, reports that 10,000,000 Jews live in three countries; 5,500,000 in the United States; 2,200,000 in Israel and about 2,300,000 in the Soviet Union according to figures available following the 1959 Russian census.

With the recent influx of Jews from North Africa, particularly Algeria, France has moved ahead becoming the fourth largest Jewish community in the world with a population of 500,000 Jews. Next are Argentina and Britain, 450,000 each; Canada, 250,000; Rumania, 150,000; Brazil, 140,000; Morocco 125,000 and the Union of South Africa 110,000.

The eleven largest communities, in which 12,175,000 Jews live, comprise 93.7 per cent of the total world Jewish population. There are communities of between 20,000 and less than 100,000 in 14 lands, the largest in all 570,000 the largest being Iran, about 80,000; Hungary, 75,000, Australia, 70,000 and Uruguay, about 50,000. Another 14 countries house communities between 5,000 and 20,000, while Jewish populations of between 1,000 and 5,000 live in 18 lands. Jews in numbers ranging between just a few and several hundred live in 64 countries and regions.

In announcing completion of the new statistical survey, Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, Director of the Institute of Jewish Affairs, said that no basic changes had occurred in the geographic distribution of the Jewish people in 1962, with the exception of a move on the part of North African Jews into France.

Algerian Jewry was reduced from an old-established, prosperous community of about 130,000 to between 10,000 and 15,000. There were also reductions in the number of Jews in Morocco and Tunisia, many of whom, with Algerian Jews, moved to France, boosting that country's community to become the fourth largest in the world.

Except for Jewish immigrants from North Africa, some of whom went to Israel, Jewish migration was on a minor scale in 1962, involving only modest movements of Jews from Eastern Europe to Israel.

Providence To Observe 25th UJA Anniversary

Judge Frank Licht, a vice president of the General Jewish Committee, has been named chairman of the Providence Committee for the observance of the 25th anniversary of the United Jewish Appeal.

The appointment of Judge Licht was announced by Joseph W. Ress, GJC president, and Merrill L. Hassenfeld, general campaign chairman.

Providence will be joining scores of other communities throughout the country in paying tribute to the UJA which, since 1939, has given direct assistance to three million persons and rescued and resettled a million and a half people in free lands, including Israel and the United States.

Other members of the 25th UJA anniversary Providence Committee will be announced soon.

Judge Licht said that during the millennial history of the Jews, few periods have been as filled with tragedy and such swift recovery as has been the case in the last 25 years. To meet the unprecedented challenge posed by the forces of the Nazi era, the American Jewish community united to form one strong fund-raising agency to rescue and resettle victims of oppression.

Separated 50 Years, Brother, Sister Meet

CHICAGO — O'Hare Airport was the scene of a heartwarming reunion last week.

A brother and sister who were separated for 50 years, were united when an 8 P.M. plane landed from New York.

Riva Ehrlich left Berchever, near Kiev, in the U.S.S.R. about two years ago and was brought to the Jewish State by the Israel government. Once there she sought the aid of American newspapers to find out if her brother, Ben Shulman, was alive.

Luckily, someone noticed the story and called his West Rogers Park home. Letters began to flow between Chicago and Israel, and friends of the Shulman family began dropping in on the Erlichs when they would travel to the Jewish State. Were it not for these intermediaries, brother and sister would have had a hard time recognizing each other, since Riva was only two when 20 year old Ben left. "I do not know how my sister escaped from the Soviet Union, and I do not ask her," Shulman excitedly told a Sentinel reporter. "I thought I didn't have any family," he said, but his sister brought an added surprise. Two brothers and a sister are still living in Russia. "I was the only one of eight children to leave the old country and come to America."

According to Shulman, of 6207 N. Francisco, his sister will visit in Chicago for about three months.

KING VISITS

JERUSALEM — King Charles Mwambutsa IV of Burundi, the first monarch to visit the State of Israel, was given a rousing welcome.

Sees Need For Central Body

NEW YORK — Nahum Goldmann, President of the World Zionist Organization, asserted that the American Jewish community suffers from "a harmful decentralization" as any central body or platform from which the great problems of American Jewish life are being discussed and clarified. He also charged that there is "a lack of understanding in the community for the great historical dangers facing Jewish survival in the 20th century, with the reduction of the central problem of Jewish life concerning the relations between the Diaspora (lands outside of Israel) and Israel to the lowest common denominator" of financial help in various forms.

Other Campaigns Interfere With US-UJA Drive

JERUSALEM — Separate Jewish fund-raising campaigns in the United States are "seriously interfering" with the United Jewish Appeal's drive in America, Aryeh Pincus, treasurer of the Jewish Agency warned here at a meeting of the agency executive. He returned recently from a visit to the United States.

Urging an "immediate solution" of the problem, Mr. Pincus said that some of the American drives competing with the UJA are being conducted "with approval coming from Israel." He stated that the current UJA drive is facing "difficulties" because UJA campaigners "are unable to divulge full details about the influx of immigration into Israel, thus being unable to provide the full background of the needs."

At the same meeting, Aaron Zising, head of the Agency's immigrant absorption department, reported that the current housing budget would not meet the needs to be felt during the coming year.

Birch Society Withdraws From Boston Book Store

BOSTON — Spokesmen for the John Birch Society were reported to have concluded this week that the organization doesn't want to be identified with a Boston backer of George Lincoln Rockwell, fuedhrer of the American Nazi Party.

The Rockwell ally, much in the news the past few days, is Speros Lagoullis, who operates the Broadway Costume Company, 116 Broadway, Boston. The Joe McCarthy Book Store at 327 Broadway, South Boston, opened this week.

First reports on the opening of the bookstore linked the Rockwell supporter with the John Birch Society through a letter bearing the signature of a Birch Society employe. The latter urged Birchers to support the store and offer their services as part-time clerks.

However, after the story came to light and after the Jewish Community Council of Boston and the New England Regional office of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith issued a statement expressing their amazement at the reported tie-up of the Birch Society and the American Nazi Party backer, the Birch Society officials took action. They revealed that Lagoullis, a member of the Birch Society, had had his membership revoked and indicated also the Birch Society would supply no more books to Lagoullis for his Joe McCarthy Book Store.

Pointing to the virulent anti-Semitism of Rockwell's organization, the statement from the Jewish Community Council and ADL recalled that "as recently as a month ago at Ford Hall Forum in Boston, Robert Welch had reiterated his stand on anti-Semitism."

Sharp denial of affiliation with Lagoullis came last week from Thomas Hill, administrative aide to Robert Welch. He said the venture was Lagoullis' and that the John Birch Society had no connection with it.

Lagoullis also denied direct affiliation with the Birch group but did admit purchasing books from the John Birch Society.

Lagoullis has been closely associated with Rockwell both on a national and local level. In 1961 he was fined $25 in Boston Municipal Court for using the name "Nathan Ginsberg" in registering for hotel rooms used by Rockwell when he came to Boston in January of that year to picket the movie, "Exodus". Rockwell has also used Lagoullis' telephone for making local contacts. When arrested in Topsfield by the State Police last year, Rockwell was driving a car registered to Lagoullis' wife.

Argentina Won't Give Welcome To Nazi Rockwell

NEW YORK — An assurance that the Argentinian Government and its people would not welcome any application by George Lincoln Rockwell, or anyone else, to hold an international Nazi congress in Argentina was given by Ambassador Mario Pico, Argentinian representative at the United Nations, to the World Jewish Congress.

This assurance was given in response to a statement by Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, who expressed the hope that the action of the British Government in expelling Rockwell would be followed by all other countries.

Dr. Pico, who was accompanied by Dr. Julio Barboza, First Secretary, and Roberto Dalton, Press Attache, was the guest of Samuel Bronfman, vice-president of the UJC, at a luncheon in New York. Mr. Bronfman expressed concern at recent manifestations of anti-Semitism in Argentina.

Sponsors said they hoped to start classes next spring.

Klutznick Quits Post At UN

UNITED NATION, N. Y. — The resignation of Phillip M. Klutznick from his Ambassadorial post as a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations for the last two years has become effective it was revealed here recently through the disclosure of an exchange of letters between Klutznick and President Kennedy.

In his letter to the President, Klutznick recalled that he had informed Kennedy last fall that he would have to retire from the delegation "for personal and business reasons." Klutznick, former national president of B'nai B'rith and ex-general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, has been serving chiefly as the American representative to the UN Economic and Social Council.

In reply, Kennedy wrote, "I am disappointed to see you leave the Mission." He expressed "warm appreciation" for Klutznick's services, and accepted the resignation "with regret."

Problems of Chicago, of which the committee was a founder. The bureau surveyed 2,289 job orders, received by two private job agencies from 2,000 business concerns in the Chicago area. The bureau also studies application blanks of 13 private employment agencies.

The bureau reported that, of 1,070 job orders of one agency, 155 or 14 percent were found to be biased. Of 1,219 orders from another agency, 34 or three percent were discriminatory, the committee said, adding that bias against Catholics, Negroes and Jews ran as high as 20 to 25 percent of all job orders at one agency.

The committee reported that requests were found for "Nordic only," "gentle," "Protestant only," with specific rejections of Negroes and Jews. The total effect was to bar Jews in 30 cases, Catholics in seven, and Negroes in 15.

High Level Judgment

They say that judging bidding situations at a high level requires more skill than any other part of the game. A player may be considered very good, but if he lacks this judgment he will be responsible for many expensive errors. I watched the hand below being bid and played.

Both sides vulnerable; South dealer:

North		East
♠—x	♠—A, Q, 10, 8, x, x.	♠—A, 10, 9, x.
♥—K, 8, 7, x, x	♥—4	♥—9, x, x, x, x
West		♦—A, Q, x, x	♦—x
♠—K, Q, J, x.		♣—8, 6, 3, 2	♣—9, 7
♥—None
♦—A, Q, x, x
♣—8, 6, 3, 2

South
 ♠—x, x
 ♥—K, J
 ♦—J, 10, 9
 ♣—A, K, Q, J, 10 5

The bidding went:
 South West North East
 1C 1S 2H 3S
 4H 4S 5D Double
 5H 5S NB NB
 Double NB NB NB

Without seeing all the hands it seemed that a club contract for North-South would be the best bet, but after supporting hearts before rebidding clubs South could never have convinced his partner that the hand should be played in his suit. As the cards were placed, 5C would have been much more expensive than 5H, especially on a spade lead taken over by East, who could then return a diamond. In fact the defense could come to one spade trick, one diamond trick, and two ruffs in each of the red suits. It seemed therefore, that South had done the right thing by supporting hearts. 5H, even on a diamond lead and two ruffs, would only produce 500 for East-West. Nevertheless I agree with West's judgment in bidding 5S. On his freak hand he could not be sure where the defense's tricks would come from if opponents played the hand, but he knew that if he found the right cards in his partner's hand he might have a chance to make his contract or at least a cheap save.

And this is in fact what happened: North led the four of clubs and South cashed his two club tricks and returned a diamond. After seeing dummy he should have realized that his best chance to beat the contract was a trump return. Even if his partner held the ace of diamonds, the trump return was indicated. Declarer took advantage of the slip in defense by making the ace of diamonds and trumping his five losers in dummy and five hearts in his own hand for eleven tricks (plus 850), instead of going one down doubled. With one round of trumps South would have held the contract to 10 tricks—four heart ruffs in West's hand, the ace of diamonds, and the five trumps in dummy.

Find Bias In Employment Agencies In Chicago Survey

CHICAGO — The Jewish Labor Committee of Chicago, citing survey findings of employment agency bias against Catholics, Negroes and Jews, urged the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to investigate such discrimination in bank and insurance company employment.

The committee said that the survey showed these two types of business to be the "worst offenders," and that the federal agency should seek to learn whether, by underwriting deposits in banks, "it is not underwriting racial and religious bias."

CRACKED CRYSTAL BALLS

We're now into the days when economists the nation over gaze long and hard into their crystal balls to get guidance on their 1963 predictions. The "standard forecast" which already has emerged is for a continually modest rise through the early months of the new year, not sufficient to take up the slack in employment or production, but no serious downturn either.

Could be right, could be not. How the economy actually will perform will depend on many forces -- ranging from congressional action or non-action on tax reduction to easing or worsening of world crisis. At this stage, the most one can make on taxes, world crisis and a lot of other fundamentals is an informed guess.

If ever there has been a year in which the economists' crystal balls have been shattered, it has been 1962. The noise of the cracking balls in Washington, Wall Street, the industrial cities of our nation has been thunderous month after month.

First to crack were Washington's crystal balls. Even as the White House's experts were still uttering their glittering optimistic forecasts for 1962, the economy was slowing down.

Why did Washington's forecasts go so wrong? A highly important answer here is that the optimistic projections were based on the premise that U.S. businessmen would step up their spending on inventories and new plants in this expansion of the 1960s the way they accelerated their spending in the expansions of the 1950s.

This premise turned out to be false. Instead of stocking up heavily on inventories in the expectation that customers would be waiting in line to buy, businessmen this time have adopted exceedingly cozy inventory policies. The new computers are helping them to maintain much stricter control over inventories. Their awareness of surpluses and their eagerness to hold down costs also have been factors. Instead of rushing to build modern plants in anticipation of big demands for their production, this time businessmen have waited for the demands to appear and have only moderately increased their spending on new factories. At the heart of this year's sluggish rise has been the disappointingly small increase in business spending.

Second to crack were Wall Street's crystal balls. Not even the most pessimistic stock market professional predicted the market crash of May 1962.

Why did Wall Street's forecasts go wrong? A key answer here is that while many investors recognized that stock prices had soared far out of line with corporation earnings and they had backed away from buying, they didn't expect others would act similarly. They forgot how selling feeds on selling, underestimated the attraction of simple savings accounts and bonds in comparison with low-yielding stocks, didn't realize the extent to which gamblers had weakened the market's foundation. Then came the steel price crisis in April -- which no one could have predicted -- the severe blow to business confidence, and the groundwork was laid for the panic of May 28.

Third to crack were the crystal balls of business economists who concluded that the sluggish economy and the crash of stock prices would lead us into recession by 1963.

Why have these business forecasts gone wrong? A factor here surely has been our successful showdown over Cuba in late October for this has significantly buoyed sentiment and has helped send the stock market sharply upward. Who could have forecast the stand President Kennedy would take after proof of Russia's military buildup in Cuba, the retreat of Khrushchev?

Forecasts on business in 1963 must be made. The White House couldn't even submit a budget without projecting profits and paychecks and the taxes to be paid on these. A manufacturer couldn't even begin to plan production without estimating his probable sales.

Thus, the annual economic forecasting season arrives on schedule -- and this year "standard" for the forecasts is restraint in both optimism and pessimism.

Could be, could be not. After gazing back on 1962's unforeseeables and peering ahead into 1963's unknowns, I'd suggest that the crystal ball industry go into all-out production -- just in case it's another year of shattered glass.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

Letter

From Florida

By Beryl Segal

The ransom paid for the Cuban captives is the news of the day here. It is headlined in every newspaper and is commented on by every radio and TV program. It is also the topic of discussion wherever people get together to talk about Castro and Donovan and ransom in general.

We Jews are old hands at paying ransom for our captives. We have paid ransom as far back as Talmudic times, and we have paid ransom in Medieval times. We have even tried to pay ransom in Modern times, but the enemy was bent on destroying his victim and not interested in ransom money.

The Laws of Ransom constitute a major part of Talmudic and Rabbinic Writings. We have laws on the duties of ransom on the communities. It is placed higher than the duties of feeding and clothing of the poor.

We have laws governing the paying of ransom for captives who are old; for women and children; for scholars and Rabbis; and even laws for paying ransom for the release of proselytes.

"He who causes the delay of the work of ransom is in the same category as a murderer," says one law.

There was a maxim in Jewish law that a community building a Synagogue should stop the building and even sell the building materials in order to pay ransom for captives.

Brad Dexter, who played Shilo; and Perry Lopez, Tony's film brother.

Said Curtis, "This is one of the few public appearances I've accepted since returning from Argentina. I made it a point to be here to express my personal gratitude for the Moskva Cliff's tribute."

When Tony introduced Christine Kaufmann, his film and real-life sweetheart, he pronounced it "Kowfmann." The beautiful 17-year-old actress was asked for her personal pronunciation and she replied, "Kaufmann." Tony, who thought he knew his new girl friend well, looked surprised and commented, "That's interesting."

During the film's pageantry and glamour, Brynner chops off Guy Rolfe's right hand (a fearful shot that made our household engineer bolt 10 feet out of her theater chair).

Curtis explained it. A false wrist and hand were attached at the end of Rolfe's own hand. All Rolfe had to do was pray that when Yule made the downward sweep with his sword, his aim would be true. Otherwise, Rolfe might lose his real hand.

Fortunately, Brynner's swordsmanship found its target.

In the final scenes, Curtis stands on the Russian steppes (actually the plains of Argentina) in battle armor. His father, Yule Brynner, shoots him in the chest

In general, every fund in the community should be diverted to the paying of ransom, states another law.

Such was the great duty of Pidyon Shevayim, Ransom of Captives in Jewish law.

Yet when the ransom demanded was too severe, the law prohibited paying it, lest the enemy be encouraged to repeat the capture of innocent people again and again.

There is a very touching story of a man who refused to be released from prison because the ransom demanded was too high.

It is a story dating back to the 13th century in Germany. In the city of Rottenburg of Tauber was a very distinguished Rabbi. He was known as Meir ben Baruch of Rottenburg. He was Chief Rabbi of Germany, appointed to this high post by the Emperor Rudolph of Hapsburg. Rabbi Meir was the foremost authority in Jewish law of his day and he wrote numerous responses, decisions in Jewish custom that were accepted throughout the world. In Rottenburg, he established a Yeshiva and taught many disciples who became teachers and Rabbis in Germany.

But due to repeated persecution in Germany, the constant insecurity of life and property, Rabbi Meir took his family and started out on the long journey to Palestine. Many Jews from his community did the same. They agreed to meet in Italy where they would for treason. Clearly seen is the impact of the pistol ball and the resultant hole in the armor.

This was no trick shot, explained Tony. The armor was soft. Underneath, a breast plate made of heavy steel covered his heart. An expert marksman stood out of camera range and fired an air gun. The pellet pierced the soft armor and struck the steel plate.

"I was worried," Curtis admitted. "In the first place, the marksman could miss the steel plate and hit me in the face or elsewhere. Luckily for me, he didn't. As it was, when the pellet struck the steel plate, it felt like Sonny Liston punching me in the chest. When I fell over backwards, I wasn't acting."

Perry Lopez, who did a highly sensitive job as Tony's brother, said, "It was a tough assignment all the way. When Mr. Brynner, Mr. Curtis, and I were charging our horses in advance of the Cossacks' sweeping attack, we didn't know what to expect ahead of us. At full speed forward, our horses could have stepped into holes, gullies, or tripped over roots or tree stumps.

"Afterwards, in my dressing room, I suddenly thought, 'What if my horse fell in the path of those hordes of 1700 wild Cossacks charging behind me with their swords churning the air?'"

"I wasn't scared during the charge, but the thought of it later made me turn white."

take passage to the Land of Security. Rabbi Meir and his family reached Lombardy, where they waited for the members of his community.

But while in Lombardy, he was recognized by a baptized Jew who was accompanying the Archbishop of Mayence. The Archbishop ordered the Rabbi seized and returned to Emperor Rudolph.

The Emperor confined the Rabbi to prison and prevented other Jews from leaving the country.

Friends of Rabbi Meir offered the Emperor a ransom of 20,000 marks in silver for the release of the prisoner. But when Rabbi Meir heard of the ransom offer, he refused to be released and stayed in the fortress for seven years until his death there. He received visitors, among them disciples whom he taught; and some of his works were written within the prison walls.

The story goes on to tell that even after his death, his body was not released. It was 14 years later that a Jew from Frankfurt paid a high ransom for the body which was buried in Worms. This man's only reward was that he was buried next to the great Rabbi when his time came.

The duties of ransom are known in the communities of Russia even to our day. As a child, I well remember that my father would go around from house to house and collect from the householder Pidyon Shevayim. The money was used to release a prisoner who was held for no crime, or to help someone escape to freedom because of his political ideas.

As Mr. Donovan explained on one of his TV appearances here: "Mr. Castro had something we wanted and we had something Mr. Castro wanted. So the exchange took place."

A very simple and a very old practice. The world of man has not changed much.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

THE BEARDS: A British-bearded contingent -- Alec Guinness, Peter Ustinov and Hugh Griffith-- arrived in N.Y. a few days ago. Ustinov flew here for the production of his play, "Photo Finish," in which he also will star. When Ustinov learned the play would open here Feb. 12, Lincoln's Birthday, he said, "Okay, but don't sell the box-seats."

Hugh Griffith is here to star in "Andorra." He said he'd polled his household staff on whether or not he should grow a beard. The beards had it. "It's like having two husbands, one bearded and the other clean-shaven," said his wife. Griffith said the beard saves time and effort, in not shaving. "And it's warmer, too, in this cold weather."

Griffith won an Academy Award for "Ben Hur." He said, "It's no good having only one Oscar. I want a second one, so that I could use them as dumb-bells in my exercises."

THE GROOM: Joe Mankiewicz, who directed and wrote the screenplay of "Cleopatra," introduced his bride to a group of his friends at a party recently. Mankiewicz acknowledged the toasts, then said: "This should end the rumors about Richard Burton and me."

THE PROJECT: Columbia Pictures has created a recording sub-division, "Colpix Corp." for recording the live performances of Broadway plays. Burgess Meredith will start the series by doing Joyce's "Ulysses In Night Town," with Zero Mostel. Then Meredith will record, at the theatre, a complete performance of "Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolf?"

THE POLITICIAN: Now that James Michener was defeated in his run for Congress, he is busy with two assignments; (1) He's completing his new novel, about Asia; (2) He's started dieting, to shed the 20 lbs. he gained in all those coffee-and-cake sessions of his campaign.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA-- Tony Curtis and Christine Kaufmann headed a list of press and celebrities who gathered at Raya Penoff's Moskva Cliff Restaurant recently to help dedicate the famous San Fernando Valley restaurant's new "Taras Bulba Room," inspired by the epic motion picture. The spectacular action film is based on Nikolai Gogol's powerful novel of Taras Bulba, legendary Cossack hero played by scenery-chewing Yule Brynner. Others on hand at the Moskva Cliff dedication were Harold Hecht, producer; J. Lee Thompson, director;

BIBLICAL SCROLLS ARRIVE

A Dilemma Confronts Welfare Fund Raisers

The General Assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Boards convened in Philadelphia in November. It was the usual annual get-together of the big city and the "grass root" fundraisers — professionals and volunteers—who provide the cash for much of the American Jewish establishment, as well as for the Israeli and overseas budgets of the United Jewish Appeal.

The small number of "non-fund-raisers" present felt out of place at most of the sessions and workshops where the "gift dollar" was the subject of statistical studies that explored campaign finances with the latest psychological and accounting methods. It was "all about money" and how to get it. Even the sessions devoted to the Jewish Day Schools and to the federations' Jewish Culture Foundation revolved about finances — the financing of Jewish day schools and of Jewish culture in America.

Free Literature

In the convention lobbies were huge tables covered with free items of "campaign literature." Among the forty-odd with which I came away from Philadelphia are a 130-page piece on "Building the Successful Campaign," several varieties of a model "Worksheet for Campaign Steering Committees," a set of the 1962 "Cash Collection Cues" and the pamphlets of the national organizations which are beneficiaries of the federations and which put their "best foot" forward with all the lure and seduction which the manual on "the successful campaign" proscribes.

The council represents 217 local Jewish federations and welfare boards, the central fundraising organizations of virtually all American and some Canadian Jewish communities which stage "united appeals." The New York Federation of Jewish Charities, however, has always gone its own separate way and is set to continue in its splendid isolation of providing exclusively for Greater New York local institutions.

Special Cabinet

Unlike all other federations, the New York Federation does not raise funds for overseas needs. As a result, the UJA has a special "campaign cabinet" and offices for the metropolis where almost half of American Jewry live.

Statistics Prove Strength In Inverse Ratio To Community

The fund-raising statistics prove that the strength of American Jewish identification is in inverse ratio to the size of the community. The figures on synagogue membership and Jewish school attendance substantiate these findings. The rule is: the larger the Jewish community, the smaller, by percentages, are synagogue memberships and the student bodies of Jewish religious schools. Inversely, in communities like Michigan City, practically every Jewish family is religiously and organizationally identified.

Suburbia Advantage

Jewish suburbia is not the best possible of all Jewish types of community. It has, however, the great advantage of providing a setting where almost every Jew knows almost every other Jew. Consequently, there are definite — though unwritten — laws of Jewish conduct. The same applies to the small towns where a Jewish family's status and position in the Jewish community — the only social set open to them — is determined by their "Jewish respectability." As a result, Jewish life is intense in the province and lagging in the big cities, where the "meeting-goers' set," representing a mere fraction of one per cent in New York and the three other U.S.

1946 to 1961 Period

In the 15-year-period from 1946 to 1961, the Jewish federations raised over $216 billion. The annual average campaign now nets about $125 million. This does not include the revenue of the New York Federation which in 1962 raised $66.8 million for its building fund and over $23 million for its regular maintenance budget.

The per capita "federation contribution" of U.S. Jews was about $25, larger in small communities and smaller in the large communities. According to "Council Reports" of October 1962, "it is imperative to find answers to these core questions: 'Why the difference in giving levels, with some cities raising less than $10 per capita and others ten times as much? How can the levels be lifted?'"

Low "Per Capita"

The "worksheets" of the Council Campaign Steering Committee clearly show that the federations do not reach the Jewish masses. The large sums raised bespeak the largeness of the "big donors." Many federations, especially those in communities with Jewish populations over 40,000, do not actively solicit those who might contribute small sums. They regard contributions of less than $25 "unprofitable" owing to the expenses connected with collecting and accounting. As a result, "per capita" participation in federation campaigns is extremely small. In Los Angeles only 9 out of every 100 Jews contribute. In Philadelphia, the percentage is 8. The Chicago and New York federations, which do not publish this type of statistic, have the lowest "per capita" participations.

Towns Over Cities

The rule without exception is that the larger the Jewish community, the smaller the "per capita" participation and gift. For example, during the most lucrative campaign in the 1951-60 decade, Baltimore, with a Jewish population of 80,000, raised $3,760,584; while Los Angeles, with a population of 435,000, raised $6,369,967. The largest "per capita" participation and gift scores are attained in Jewish communities with populations of under 5,000. Thus, in Michigan City (Jewish population 350) the "per capita" gift in 1961 was $106, as against $13 in Philadelphia (Jewish population, 331,000).

Big City Challenge

In the "fund-raising workshops" at the Philadelphia Council of Jewish Federations' Assembly, the concern was to "involve" larger numbers in the 40,000 and above Jewish communities. The challenge of hundreds of thousands of unaffiliated Jews in New York and of tens of thousands in other large Jewish communities has been on the agenda for many years. Thus far, "big city Jewish lethargy" has defied all efforts to bring about a change. "If we could approximate in New York and Chicago, in Boston and Philadelphia, in Los Angeles and another ten cities the campaign results of Tulsa, Oklahoma (Jewish population 2,400 'per capita' federation contribution 138, nearly eight times the national average), we could — 'what couldn't we accomplish?'" a big-city fund-raising expert told me.

Goldman "Astonished" At Israel Re-Action

To Hold Actions Meeting In N.Y.

NEW YORK — Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, said last week at a press conference that he was "astonished and sorry" over the "excitement" in Israel over the decision to hold the next meeting of the Zionist Actions Committee in New York. He asserted that the Israeli press had "distorted" facts of the discussion in American Zionist groups on the proposal.

He said he had supported the idea of a New York meeting because it was "bound to be impressive to the highest possible degree and carry influence, and be the beginning of a great Zionist activity among American Jews." He emphasized that when he gave such support to the proposal on his visit to Israel last November, it was clear that "even then, we decided first of all to consult with the members of the Actions Committee from the United States and the Zionist Organizations in the United States."

He declared that the Zionist Organization of America did not oppose such a meeting. Adding that "there were differences between ZOA leaders" on the idea, he said that the ZOA had decided to leave the final decision "to the appropriate institutions, which means through the Zionist executive and the praesidium of the Actions Committee."

He said that this was the stand taken by Mirzachi and the Labor Zionists, even though the majority of these organizations had supported the idea of a New York meeting. Hadassah, he declared, had decided to oppose the idea "but it has never stated it would not accept the decision of the majority."

"The problem of dual loyalty was never mentioned," he added, "and it would be dishonest to accuse the ZOA of allegedly demanding any kind of censorship over speeches at the proposed meeting." He said that the ZOA decided only that if the meeting did take place in New York, "an agenda and program would have to be thoroughly prepared."

Dr. Goldman then added he felt that it would be better to postpone the proposed meeting in New York to a later date because the American Zionist Council was currently in "a stage of reorganization." At the same time, he stressed that a meeting in New York would "increase the expenses very substantially."

"The Zionist executive in New York, at a meeting attended by the chairman of the Jewish Agency executive, Moshe Sharett, and its treasurer, Aryeh Pincus, both now on a visit to New York, decided unanimously to propose that the praesidium of the Actions Committee postpone the final decision to Dec. 24, at which date Sharett and Pincus will be back in Israel, and a joint meeting of the Zionist executive and the praesidium will be held," he said. "Any decision adopted at that meeting will be implemented."

High Court To Rule On Sabbath Compensation

WASHINGTON — The United States Supreme Court has agreed to review a ruling by the highest court of South Carolina which maintained that it was legal to deprive a person of state unemployment compensation for refusing for religious reasons to work on Saturdays. The case involved a Seventh Day Adventist, a sect which, like the Jews, observes Saturday as the Sabbath.

Now that the Supreme Court has accepted jurisdiction, Jewish groups are considering filing friend of the court briefs. The case will be argued early next year.

The Supreme Court yesterday dismissed a challenge to Kentucky's Sunday closing law which forbids the opening of business places on Sunday except for "work of necessity or charity" and some entertainment activities. The Kentucky law, like that in a few other states, exempts Jews and other who observe a day of rest other than Sunday.

Justice William O. Douglas, in his dissent from the ruling yesterday, argued that this exemption emphasized the religious nature of the law. "The law is thus plainly an aid to organized religion, bringing to heel anyone who violates the religious scruples of the majority by seeking his salvation not through organized religion but on his own," Justice Douglas wrote in his dissent.

In a series of rulings in May 1961, the Supreme Court upheld Sunday closing laws against the contention that they violated the church-state constitutional separation principle. The majority held that the laws were not to aid religion but to assure everyone a day of rest. Justice Douglas dissented then. In his dissent he asked "by what authority can government compel one person not to work on Sunday because the majority of the populace deem Sunday to be a Holy Day?"

Center To Inaugurate Open Discussion Program

The Jewish Community Center will open its new regular series of provocative open discussion programs, "Adventure in Thinking", at the East Side JCC building, 170 Sessions Street, this Thursday evening, January 10, at 8 P.M.

The new discussion series will cover the whole gamut of subjects as timely as today's headlines — from politics to parenthood, and from fiddles to fall-out. Prominent authorities, both local and visiting, will serve on the panel for each program, and all those who attend will have full opportunity to question and to participate.

Mort Blender, WPRO news commentator and special features personality, will serve as moderator for the "Adventure in Thinking" series. Mr. Blender has recently been appointed chairman of the Center's Adult Activities Committee.

"Should State Money Pay for Music and Opera?" will be the subject of the first "Adventure in Thinking" on January 10. All of the questions about the government's dabbling in the cultural arts are included; Who is to make decisions on quality? Who decides which groups are worthy of support? Does the state then control and influence the arts? These are only some of the issues to be touched upon.

The evening's panel will include the following: Senator Pat Nero; Martin Fisher, Professor of Music at Brown University and conductor of the Nashua Symphony Orchestra; Howard Presel, prominent local figure in the arts; and Francis Caprelli, president of the Providence Local, American Federation of Musicians.

Admission to "Adventure in Thinking" is open at no charge to all interested adults.

Golden Age Clubs To Resume Schedule

Why Do Women Work For Charity?

What are the motivations that induce women to become "Federation or Community Women?" In an article taken from the Intermountain Jewish News, Mrs. Jacob Blaustein, wife of a past president of American Jewish Committee, gave these answers at the Council of Jewish Federations Assembly:

1. "Boredom, or frustration with routine activities." This is a very strong motivation for participation in activities outside of the home. A young wife with a houseful of children is glad for a day away from "mommy this" and "mommy that". Or the older woman with children all at school or married finds herself suddenly in the house alone with a stranger—herself—and she longs to get out among her kind. Statistics show that the average American woman is 32 years old when her youngest child goes to school, and 77 years old when she dies, and this leaves 45 years of more leisure than most people want.

2. "Home influence started me in volunteer service," said the daughter of a tried and true community volunteer. "I was raised on Federation."

Religious Education

3. "Religious education made me community conscious," she said. "It brings you closer to existing problems and makes you want to help." Here we see a direct connection between commitment to service and Jewish education.

4. "Desire for growth. It is an outlet for me. I feel good when I leave the clinic where I work. I have done something for them but also for myself."

5. "Social climbing motivates many. Many husbands want their wives to work in the campaign for status."

The Dean of the New York School of Social Work at Columbia University says:

"Charity has traditionally worn two faces. One is the face of the giver, striving for his own salvation. The other is turned outward more mindful of the object than of the act of charity. Both represent noble attitudes and humanity continues to depend on them.

"The commitment of Jews to communal service is part of the essence of Judaism. Jews throughout history have had to rely upon themselves. Our numbers are not large, each one counts. Jewish life must be nourished by an inner loyalty to Judaism. I believe the Federation woman feels this too, in addition to the personal satisfaction that Federation offers her. To be a worker in this cause makes you at home among Jews wherever you travel and at once establishes a bond between you and them. It is the common denominator among Jews everywhere," said Mrs. Blaustein.

LAST OFFICIAL ACT

JERUSALEM — Attorney General Gideon Hausner has formally carried out his announced resignation. He attended part of the Cabinet meeting recently at which Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion reported on the Attorney General's determination to leave his post over differences with Justice Minister Dov Joseph.

Dr. Joseph will assume the post of acting Attorney General until a successor is named by the Cabinet.

MORE HOSPITAL BEDS

JERUSALEM — The establishment of a National Hospitalization Authority providing a four-year hospital expansion program at a cost of 60,000,000 Israeli pounds ($20,000,000), was announced here this week by Yitzhak Rafael, Deputy Minister of Health. There are now 16,000 hospital beds in Israel. Mr. Rafael said, representing a ratio of 7.2 beds per 1,000 population in this country.

Mrs. Malcolm C. Goldenberg

Temple Beth David was the scene of the wedding last Saturday night of Miss Avis Strauss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Strauss of 89 Washington Avenue, who was married to Malcolm C. Goldenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Goldenberg of 83 Huxley Avenue.

The 7:30 o'clock ceremony was performed by Rabbi Chill. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of imported silk bengaline with molded bodice and bell shape skirt. The jacket featured long tapered sleeves with a butterfly back. Her veil of French silk illusion fell from a cap of lace and imported stones. She carried a prayerbook with an orchid.

Miss Eleanor Goldenberg, sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor and Mrs. Michael Hoffer, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles Strauss and Mrs. Stephen Gordon.

Harvey Wagner was the best man while ushers were Charles Strauss, Michael Hoffer, Stephen Gordon, Roger Gleckman, Robert Levins and Irwin Greenberg.

A reception for 130 guests was held at the Temple, following which the couple left for a honeymoon trip to Bermuda.

Jewish Women More Opposed To Intermarriage

NEW YORK — Jewish women in the United States are much more strongly opposed to mixed marriages than are Protestant and Catholic women. The Saturday Evening Post reported in its current issue.

The report was based on a sampling study by Dr. George Gallup, head of the Gallup Poll, and Evan Hill, of 2,300 women—1,800 wives and 500 single women. One of the questions put to the respondents was, "Would it make much difference to you if a daughter of yours wished to marry a man of a different religion?"

The answers indicated that 74% of the Jewish women said they opposed such marriages, compared with 54% of Catholic women and 45% of Protestant women. The report added that few of the women protested such marriages on grounds of religious conviction. "More than half of those who disapproved are quite pragmatic in their reasons," the report noted, adding that such marriages "often do not work."

"Quiet" Drive In Detroit Nets Two Million

DETROIT — In one of the "quietest" fund-raising campaigns ever conducted on such a scale in this county, the Detroit Jewish community has raised all but $171,000 of a total of $2,200,000 needed to supplement the facilities of the present Home for the Aged with a new building program scheduled to be completed during 1963.

Announcement of the success of the drive was made by a committee headed by Harry Barnett and Leonard R. Simons. The Jewish Welfare Federation announced a contribution of $1,000,000 toward the project and private contributors gave $1,100,000.

Simons said that care for the aged represents a major medical program. There are 305 residents at all times, often rising to 311 when it becomes necessary to place additional aged in waiting rooms. The home, he said, is always at capacity or over-capacity, with 400 new applications being received yearly and space being available for only 90 yearly.

Max M. Fisher, president of the Jewish Welfare Federation, praised Simons at a dinner meeting at which the announcement was made of the results of the campaign. Referring to the functions of the capital needs committee of the Federation, which is providing the $1,000,000 towards the new building, Fisher spoke of the program as "serving human and communal needs."

General Rabbi Goren Sees Benefit In Religious Dispute

PITTSBURGH — Paratrooper Shlomo Goren, brigadier general and chief chaplain of the Israel Defense Forces is equally at home in discussing the "dawn of the Messianic Age" (which he believes coincides with the rebirth of Israel) and the implications of the massing of Syrian armies at Chanukah time on the Israel border

(which he believes is a flexing of muscles to flaunt Syrian independence of Egypt in the jockeying for leadership in the Arab world).

In an interview with the Chronicle, General Goren, a ruggedly built rabbi with snapping brown eyes and a black beard flecked with gray at age 45, said:

That we are starting to witness a religious renaissance in Israel, indigenous to that country's ancient history.

That the cultural infighting between religious and non-religious groups is a "good thing" for out of such intellectual conflict will come new spiritual ideas and a greater concern for things of the spirit.

That a "sovereign Jewish life in a sovereign Jewish State" is in the making; but that Jewish life in the diaspora has more to fear from assimilation than from anti-Semitism.

That if American religious leaders come to Israel to offer new styles of Jewish worship "nobody would object," but that they should not "export" American brands of Judaism, since Judaism should be "exported from Zion and not imported."

That for the first time in all of Jewish history, the Bible prophecies of the "ingathering of the exiles" from the four corners of the earth is being fulfilled in our day.

That the Sanhedrin, the highest Jewish religious body of ancient times, should be re-established in modern Israel to deal with the problems of modern Jewish life.

That the establishment of the Third Temple, according to Ezekiel's prophecy, is among the "functions" yet to be done in fulfilling the requirements of the beginning of the Messianic Age.

As for Syria, Israel is ready and unafraid, he said. But any outbreak of hostilities might bring "foreign intervention." (Presumably from Soviet Russian "volunteers," though Chaplain Goren named no names.)

He spoke here at Hillel Academy under auspices of the Religious Zionists of Pittsburgh, Bar Ilan Mizrahi-Hapoel Hamizrachi.

Affable on discussing most matters, General Goren held his ground on one: retreated before another.

How many parachute jumps has he made?

"Eleven!"

How many in peace and how many in war?

"That," he smiled, "is a military secret."

Is he still being seriously considered for government nomination as the Chief Rabbi of Israel? He didn't bat an eye. "No comment."

Jailed For Defacing Shul

NORWALK, Conn. — A former German national was in Norwalk jail, serving a 60-day sentence for defacing a Norwalk synagogue with swastikas, after dropping his appeal to the United States Supreme Court against the sentence.

William Arnold, 24, now living in Milford, Pa., had been convicted with a friend, Harold Fahy, 24, Norwalk, of defacing Beth Israel Synagogue on February 1, 1960. They were convicted by the Bridgeport Superior Court in June, 1960. They appealed to the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors, and that court rejected the appeal last July. They had been free on $3,000 bond each, pending the outcome of their appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. Fahy continued his appeal.

The prosecution had called them Nazi sympathizers in the trial, who had tried to shrug off the daubings as a prank.

Hassidim Celebrate Founder's Birthday

TEL AVIV — Thousands of Lubavitcher hassidim participated last week in the festive observance of the 150th anniversary of the death of Rabbi Shneur Zalman of Liadi, the first Lubavitcher Rebbe who founded the Chabad - Lubavitch hassidic movement in Czarist Russia approximately 190 years ago. He died on the 19th of Kislev in the Jewish year of 5573.

Police had to cordon off the synagogue where the hassidim danced and related legends of the Rebbe until the early hours of the morning. The Lubavitcher Rebbe of today, Rabbi Menachem M. Schneerson, lives in New York. He is a direct descendant of Rabbi Shneur Zalman and is the seventh in succession of the leaders of the Lubavitcher hassidic movement.

SYNAGOGUES TO MERGE

INDIANAPOLIS — Three of the smaller Orthodox congregations of Indianapolis have agreed to merge and to create a new synagogue on the city's north side, in line with the trend of Jewish population movements. The three congregations are Shaarah Tefilla, Knesses Israel and Ezrach Achim. Rabbi Solomon Silberberg will be leader of the consolidated congregation which will have about 250 members.

Little Sam Horner Stood Near The Goalpost Corner Watching the Football Fall

From The Sky He Stuck Out His Thumb Then Suddenly Was Glum And He Said: "What A Fumbler Am I"

Sam Horner's fumble was the big break in Green Bay's win over the New York Giants. On a day where the weather was a key factor, the team getting and exploiting the breaks was due to come up with the championship.

Certainly, the cold and windy weather reduced the effectiveness of the Giant passing attack. However, the Giants were able to move the ball on many occasions. Only when they reached the Green Bay inner perimeter, were they stymied.

A good deal of space was devoted to the deflection of a Tittle pass by linebacker, Ray Nitschke. This stopped the Giants on one of the two times they could move inside the Packer twenty yard line. The other threat was nullified by two successive fifteen yard penalties. This turned out to be the last chance for the gallant but outclassed New York contingent.

So far as the brilliant Giant defensive unit performed, not enough can be said. Not only were the defensive operatives immense, especially in the second half, but they also contributed the lone Giant score.

Immediately after the New Yorkers made the scoreboard is where the key to the game developed. After blocking Kramer's punt, which was covered by Collier in the end zone, the Giants were a fired-up club. They held the Packers for three downs forcing them to kick.

When the unfortunate Horner fumbled, and Green Bay's Nitschke pounced on the ball, the back of New York resistance suffered an irreparable blow. The tide of battle was now on the side of the opportunists and the fine Packer team quickly added three more points to their total.

This was a tough game for the Giants to lose but one clearly deserved by Green Bay. Unless the Giants can come up with a fast running halfback to bolster their running game, they appear out of luck for the 1963 championship game. And if Green Bay repeats, the weather will again favor the Wisconsin entry.

ABL FOLDS . . . A few weeks ago I had mentioned the financial troubles besetting the American Basketball League. Early this week the ABL was forced to close up Meeting Chairman — Louis I. Kramer, principal of Mount Pleasant High School, has been appointed chairman of the 33rd Annual Meeting of the Jewish Family and Children's Service to be held at the gymnasium of the Butler Health Center on Sunday, Jan. 20, at 3 P.M.

The announcement made by Irving Gertsacov, Board President, lists other board members assisting Mr. Kramer as Mr. Gertsacov, ex-officio; Mrs. Bertram Bernhardt, chairman of the social committee, and Mesdames Saul Feinberg, Perry Bernstein, Stanley Grossman, Benjamin Brier and Ludwig Regensteiner.

shop, unable to continue in the giant sea of red ink.

The National Basketball Association is the big gainer. No longer must they face competition, and they now have what amounts to a farm system of ABL players to build up the weaker teams in the league. Already the NBA clubs are negotiating for the top talent. St. Louis may prove very tough the rest of the year if they can secure Bill Bridges, the leading ABL scorer from the Kansas City Steers.

AFL TV BLACKOUT

Two Sundays ago the Dallas Texans and the Houston Oilers clashed for the American Football League championship. A few Rhode Islanders were fortunate in being able to see the game on their television sets. The majority, however, were shut out, unable to view the contest although they had not been denied the chance to witness AFL games on previous weeks.

Of course before the introduction of Channel 6 we had only two stations and on December 23rd, the one station which had presented AFL football was scheduled to show a special program. It seems to me that either the special program could have been shown later in the afternoon via tape, or the other station, which was showing a movie, could have by special arrangement undertaken to bring this big game into Rhode Island.

I hope that in the future the sports fans will not be treated so indifferently.

Judge Explains Why He Forced Skull-cap Removed

NEWARK — Magistrate George V. King explained last week in a statement issued to the press why he instructed an Orthodox Jewish defendant to remove his skull-cap in court. His action against Morris Steigman was protested by the New Jersey Region of the American Jewish Congress as a "direct impairment of religious freedom."

The magistrate said in his statement that in his 17 years of law practice he had never witnessed anyone wearing a hat in court and that he had never heard of a law or rule covering such a situation. He pointed out that it had always been customary and traditional for a person to remove his hat in court, and added that the defendant had refused, at the request of the court officer, to remove his cap; he informed the defendant that he would have to do so.

The judge said that Mr. Steigman "said it violated his religious principles, but he removed it without any further comment." The judge added that there were no threats made of holding the Brooklyn man in contempt of court.

The protest was sent to Gov. Hughes by Benjamin Epstein, president of the New Jersey Region. The man, noted the letter to the Governor, "is an Orthodox Jew whose religious principles require him to keep his head covered at all times." Epstein expressed the hope that the Governor would see to it that the courts of the state avoid "such abuses" in the future "and, in particular, that they are instructed that Orthodox Jews are permitted to keep their heads covered in the court room."

THE REVENGE: At the Stork Club recently the author of a 700-page, dull book told of the revenge he perpetrated on his friends — because they didn't buy any copies. The publisher was about to re-mainder the unsold copies. The author bought them all, at a low price, then sent them to his friends, anonymously, with a note: "I think you've been libeled in this."

THE PURPOSE: A Hollywood star gathered his friends in a campaign against their business-agents. He told them at his conclusion: "A business-agent is a man who invests your money for you, then gives you a detailed, itemized report on how it all disappeared."

THE GOWNS: In Sophia Loren's next film "Madame," she plays Mme. Sans Gene, the court favorite of Napoleon. She commissioned Itala Scandariato to create her wardrobe as the court favorite. And she hired Marcel Escoffier to design her wardrobe as the peasant girl.

MEMOS: Pres. Kennedy, who's seen "A Child Is Waiting" twice — it's Judy Garland's film about mentally retarded children — had it flown to Palm Beach to show to his family... Barbara Cook will play the leading role in "She Loves Me," the musical version of "Shop Around the Corner"... The New Yorker will publish Hannah Arendt's long series on the Richmann trial... Richard Aldrich, the producer, will head our A.I.D. program in Morocco.

THE CLOSING: Mike Romanoff just announced that on Dec. 29

he'll close his Beverly Hills restaurant. When he opened it, in 1940, it was with backing from friends. Jock Whitney's $500 was the largest single investment. Romanoff opened on schedule — with $4 left by trading in his expensive Capehart record-player for a second-hand ice-box.

THE SNOB: Romanoff was always proud of his friendship with Jock Whitney. He once was introduced to Sonny Whitney, and later asked his host: "Which Mr. Whitney is he?"... The host said "Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney," and Mike shrugged: "Oh, the wrong Whitney."

THE STAR: Ethel Merman has a contract to star at the Persian Room starting Jan. 23. Her contract stipulates that if the newspaper strike in N.Y. is still on, she's free to cancel the deal. "After all," said Merman, "I'm not going in there and have it kept a secret."

THE ACTRESS: Ruth Gordon, fingering her wedding ring, mentioned the fact that Katherine Cornell was one of the guests at the Ruth Gordon-Garson Kanin wedding reception. The bride had discussed the matter of wearing a wedding ring, and asked Miss Cornell: "Do you own a wedding ring?"... Miss Cornell nodded... "When do you wear it?" asked Miss Gordon. Miss Cornell said: "Only in 'Candida'."

THE PRAYER: Dr. Endicott Peabody, grandfather of the Governor of Mass., once presided at a Boston dinner given for Pres. Emeritus Elliot of Harvard. At that time Elliot had difficulty hearing. After the dinner, he told Mrs. Elliot: "I heard everything except Dr. Peabody's prayer"... "My dear," replied Mrs. Elliot, "he was not addressing you."

THE VIEW: Thomas Mitchell, the star who died recently, was a friend of John Barrymore and artist John Decker, who dressed and looked like Barrymore. Both Johns once came to Mitchell's home to see his newborn granddaughter. As the men peered at the baby, Barrymore snarled at Decker: "Don't let the baby see both of us at once."

Forecasts Opening Contacts In USSR

DETROIT — Continued pressures from the West will bring progress in opening communications for Russia's Jews with the outside world, predicts correspondent Harrison Salisbury, who won a Pulitzer Prize for his series on "Russia Reviewed," in The New York Times.

Indicted in the United Nations and other world forums on charges of national anti-Semitism, the Soviet government is not impervious to world public opinion and criticism, according to Salisbury.

Improve Lot
"I'm not without hope," he said. "Krushchev has created this situation himself. He must take note of this agitation and make changes so that the situation is not as obnoxious to the outside world. But such pressures must be kept on the Soviet government incessantly."

While he forecasts improved circumstances for Russia's 3,000,000 Jews, chances that they be allowed to emigrate are very dim and will be for a long time, he said.
