Israel's Coalition Cabinet Showing Signs Of Strain

TEL AVIV — Premier Golda Meir's coalition government has been showing signs of internal tension.

The hawkish Gahal party has complained that its ministers have not been kept informed about international affairs, and the National Religious party has demanded legislation that would bar state recognition of conversions performed by reform rabbis in Israel.

Of the 24 ministers in the Government, six represent the Gahal party and three the National Religious party. Their defection would not bring down Mrs. Meir's government, as the remaining parties have enough parliamentary votes to defeat any motion of no confidence.

Nevertheless, it is likely every effort will be made to preserve the broad coalition, as there is a strong desire for political unity.

Gahal's members abstained in a vote in the Knesset last week on a political statement by Mrs. Meir. The abstention was preceded by protests that none of the Cabinet ministers had been asked to participate in meetings with the United States Assistant Secretary of State, Joseph J. Sisco, or Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin, who had been summoned from Washington for consultations.

The party also complained that Mrs. Meir had not shown her prepared speech to any Gahal Minister.

The Gahal party disassociated itself from her declaration reaffirming Israel's acceptance of a United Nations Security Council resolution of November, 1967, which called for an Israeli withdrawal from Arab territory.

The party also objected to her statement repeating Israel's willingness to negotiate with the Arabs under the formula that produced the armistice agreements in 1949. At that time, the parties assembled on the Greek Island of Rhodes and held initial exchanges through United Nations mediators. At an advanced stage, the delegation sat in the same room but always in the presence of a United Nations mediator.

The Gahal's members' abstention drew international attention to those parts of Mrs. Meir's speech. Israeli doves and some newspapers abroad acclaimed it as a conciliatory move toward the Arabs. Mrs. Meir herself was somewhat surprised.

Gahal was again ruffled this week. During question time in the Knesset, Foreign Minister Abba Eban dissociated the Government from views expressed by the Gahal Transport Minister, Ezer Weizman, who spoke of transferring Arab refugees from Gaza and of Hebron's being included in the state of Israel.

Mr. Eban and other doves would probably feel better, it is believed if General Weizman and men who think as he does were outside the Government. A split may indeed become necessary if there is a real chance of negotiating with the Arabs.

But so long as the Arabs refuse to talk under any conditions, most Israelis see no reason to break up the government of national unity.

The conflict with the National Religious party has hardened as Mrs. Meir has refused to support its demand for legislation that would give Orthodox rabbis control over conversions to Judaism in Israel.

With the threat of increased Soviet military involvement in the region, it is unlikely that either dispute will be permitted to break up the coalition.

Orthodox Refuse To Accept As Jews Those Converted By Reform Rabbis

JERUSALEM — The Executive of the National Religious Party, overruling two of its leaders, voted last week to quit the Coalition Government unless the Labor alignment agrees to push a law through the Knesset making conversions to Judaism invalid if not performed by an Orthodox Rabbi. The Labor Party absolutely refused but offered a compromise in the form of an informal agreement to recognize conversions performed in Israel only if they are approved by the Chief Rabbinate.

The NRP Executive rejected the offer.

The adamant of the religious bloc precipitated a new crisis for Premier Golda Meir's six month old "unity" coalition, shaken when the Nationalistic Gahal faction refused to endorse her report to the Knesset on Israel's security and political situation. The Orthodox refuse to recognize Reform or Conservative Rabbis. But an American woman, now a citizen of Israel, who was converted to Judaism by a Reform Rabbi in Tel Aviv, is suing the Government for official recognition as a Jew.

Mrs. Helen Zeldman, a member of Kibbutz Nahal Oz, was granted an order Nisi against the Interior Ministry by the Supreme Court. At a hearing this morning, the State's Attorney General refused to oppose the order. He acted in accordance with an amendment to the law of return which the Knesset passed last March 10. It states that a person may be registered as Jewish only if born of a Jewish mother or converted to Judaism. The text of the amendment deliberately fails to stipulate that conversion must be in accordance with Halacha, religious law, which in effect means only by an Orthodox Rabbi. The religious bloc was unable to get such a stipulation included when the amendment was drafted.

Mrs. Zeldman married a Jew in a non-religious ceremony in Mexico. Later she was converted and went through a religious wedding ceremony performed by a Reform Rabbi in Tel Aviv. Neither Reform nor Conservative Rabbis have any official standing in Israel. The Interior Ministry, headed by an NRP Minister, refused to recognize her conversion. The couple have a son and although a citizen of Israel, he will not be granted status as a Jew unless his mother's conversion is recognized by the government.

AJ Congress Criticizes Decision Of Cardinal To Attend Play

NEW YORK — The American Jewish Congress has criticized the decision of Julius Cardinal Doepfner, Archbishop of Munich, to attend the opening of the Oberammergau Passion Play and called for a worldwide boycott of the performances that are scheduled from now through September.

In a statement Rabbi Arthur J. Lelyveld, Congress president, said the West German prelate's action would "invariably be interpreted as Church endorsement of an anti-Semitic spectacle whose producers have obstinately refused to change the text in accordance with Vatican Council II." Last March 28 the Congress and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith examined the 1970 "revised" text and found it still identified Jews as "the principal malefactors who scheme to bring about the death of Jesus" and still imputed collective guilt for the death of the Jewish people.

A suit was filed in a Munich court charging the organizers of the Passion Play with anti-Semitism and incitement against the Jewish people. Cardinal Doepfner, who attended the performance with members of the Bavarian state government, rejected charges that it was anti-Semitic.

But the Cardinal apparently had some reservations. He published an open letter two days ago in which he said he felt uneasy about certain "over-exaggerations" in the script which could be interpreted as blaming the Jewish people collectively for the Crucifixion. Cardinal Doepfner wrote that the next production of the Passion Play, ten years hence, would "clearly express that Christ died for all mankind."

The Cardinal's letter was reportedly the result of pressure from world Jewry. Legal action against the play was taken by Berni Engelman, a non-Jewish German writer who is chairman of the League of Human Rights.

Report Oilmen Warn Against Aid To Israel

WASHINGTON — Oil company officials, meeting privately with Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco, warned him that military aid to Israel, especially planes, would severely damage relations between the United States and Arab nations and jeopardize U.S. oil interests in the Middle East, according to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

Ten representatives of the Saudi-Arabian based Arabian-American Oil Company and its four owners, they said, — Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, Texaco and Mobil — flew to Washington last week from New York and California to discuss the effect of politics on their interests, according to sources.

Representatives of ARAMCO were said to be concerned with efforts to soothe Arabian nerves in the Middle East and to get its Trans-Arabian pipeline repaired. The pipeline, which carries oil from Saudi Arabia to the Mediterranean, was sabotaged recently in Syria. The Syrian government will not permit technicians into the country to repair it.

The ARAMCO officials were reported to have told Sisco that patching of up diplomatic relations and patching up the pipeline can be accomplished only if the U.S. eases its "strong support" of Israel. They expressed the feeling that the sabotage was a direct result of American support of Israel, according to these sources.

Dedicate Kennedy Research Center

NEW YORK — A $10 million Rose F. Kennedy Center for Research in Mental Retardation and Human Development was dedicated in ceremonies at Yeshiva University's Albert Einstein College of Medicine. The 10-story center, which is part of the college, will provide counseling as well as preventive diagnostic and treatment services, and serve as a training ground for teachers and other workers in the retardation field.

Yeshiva University's Belfer Graduate School of Science has received a $166,301 grant from the National Science Foundation.

HOPES FOR HELP

JERUSALEM — Political circles here believe the United States will act to restore the military balance in the Middle East in a manner satisfactory to Israel but without publicity and apparently without a public warning to the Soviet Union. Foreign Minister Abba Eban told newsmen on his return from the U.S. that Israel's request for more American Phantom jets was being considered "with urgency" by the Nixon administration. Mr. Eban said President Nixon expressed concern over Israel's security in their talk in Washington. He said he had stressed to the President and to Secretary of State William P. Rogers that it was vital to maintain the balance of power in the Mideast in order to avoid a new war.

Israeli Soldiers Have No Problem Hitchhiking

TEL AVIV — You see them thumbing a ride outside every town and city — Israel's hitchhiking soldiers.

The practice has become part of the Israeli scene. But many people are demanding a better travel deal for the troops.

Visitors are amazed that a nation so dependent on its armed forces allows young soldiers to waste hours every week standing in the sun waiting for kind-hearted motorists to stop.

The question even reached the Israeli Knesset (Parliament), where two legislators asked for free travel passes for soldiers in uniform on buses and trains.

But an army spokesman pointed out that some troops came from kibbutzim (cooperative farm settlements) off regular bus routes and found difficulty reaching them.

Others are in regular office jobs in Tel Aviv, Haifa or Jerusalem and travel home each evening by choice — travel that does not warrant free passes.

But Israelis are proud of their army and a soldier has a better chance of hitching a ride here than probably in any other country in the world.

VISIT JEWISH MUSEUM

LONDON — Half a million persons visited the Jewish Museum in Prague last year, according to reports received here, which also mentioned that the museum sent abroad exhibits of paintings by Jewish children interned in Nazi concentration camps. A similar exhibit was held in London in 1955.

RECEIVE EXIT PERMITS COPENHAGEN, DENMARK — 4,000 Egyptian Jews have received exit permits, according to a report filed by Kopat Hansen, correspondent for the "Berlinska", who just returned from a visit to the U.A.R. Hansen declared that he learned of this from official Egyptian sources. 400 Jews have left Egypt and are now in Europe.

Yellow Is the Color of Cowardice

It was ironic that the school bus attacked by Arab guerrillas should have been painted bright yellow. For yellow is the color associated with cowardice; it applies totally to the stomach-turning bombast with which the General Command of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (a guerrilla splinter group led by the surgeon, Dr. George Habash) leaped in to claim responsibility for the attack. Its statement said, "A unit of our fighters ambushed a motor bus carrying Zionist experts and attacked it with rockets, completely destroying it. More than 50 Israelis were killed or wounded." There was no mention of the vehicle as a school bus—an unmistakable bright yellow bus which used the same route at the same time nearly every day along the Israeli-Lebanese border. It is inconceivable that the "fighters" who ambushed it did not know what it was—or that the "experts" it carried were children.

Eight of those "experts," three teachers, and the bus driver are dead; others were wounded. Some may be cynical enough to say that the ambush at Bar Am helps to even the score for the 30 Arab children who died early last month when an Israeli jet bombed their school at Bahr al Bakr. Computations of that nature are no more than a ghoulish exercise in the mathematics of barbarism. Whatever excuses may be offered for Bahr al Bakr—that the school there was enclosed in a compound under attack as a genuine military target—or Bar Am, the fact remains that innocent children are dead. They are further victims of the apparent abandon with which children are attacked in times of war and stress—the children of the gas chambers; the children of North and South Vietnam, victims of napalm, bombs, bullets, and massacre; or the older "children" of the Kent State University campus (and the further killing of children by the Arabs in their shelling of towns near the border of Lebanon). We have a long way to go before civilization sets in, and the bazooka bravery of Bar Am shows just how long the road still is.

Within minutes of the ambush, the Israeli guns began to shell Lebanese border villages. There were reports of 11 killed, 32 injured, and damage to 83 houses. And what satisfaction is there in that? There is now a danger that the Israelis will be tempted by the Bar Am tragedy to adopt even more dangerous, punitive measures, or try to settle the Lebanese border guerrilla problems once and for all.

Now, Low Price Items Are Rising Fastest

"Substitution" always has been a key weapon you could use to help cut your cost of living — and since this inflation spiral took off in 1965, I, among others, have repeatedly recommended a policy of "substitution" for meats and other foods, for non-foods and services wherever feasible.

But now, ironically although understandably, your adoption of this policy on a mass scale is driving up the prices of the popular substitutions more rapidly than the original higher-priced items. In short, as inflationary price increases drain our pocketbooks, we have fewer and fewer ways to protect ourselves.

To put it succinctly, while hamburger is a fine substitute for steak, cheese and dried beans are scarcely satisfactory substitutes for hamburger.

When the prices of the basics in foods, goods and services climb more rapidly than the prices of luxuries in these spheres, the danger signals are flashing very high.

To illustrate, between the start of '69 and of '70, the cost of hamburger rose 11.9 per cent — more than twice the 5.8 per cent rise for sirloin steak. The average price of a pound of hamburger was 66 cents according to latest official nationwide Bureau of Labor Statistics figures.

Also during this same 12-month period, the price of hot dogs rose 13.6 per cent — nearly double the 6.8 per cent rise for roast beef. At latest official report, frankfurters cost an average of 83 cents a pound throughout the U.S.

Several times during '69, I underlined how big a bargain turkey was and how you could adapt turkey for year-round meals. Between January and January, though, poultry prices rose a full 9.6 per cent — with the key factor behind this increase a jump of nearly 14 per cent for turkey. The BLS now reports the average price for turkey at 56 cents a pound.

And so it has gone: fresh and frozen fish prices rose 13.3 per cent from January to January; pork (another traditionally lower cost beef substitute) rose 17.2 per cent overall; beef liver was up close to 12 per cent; liverwurst was up nearly 11 per cent; sausage, 18; bologna, 13; eggs, 19 per cent. As for bacon, this has entered the category of gourmet, condiment foods.

This is in direct contrast to

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

The Trio

By BERYL SEGAL

The Conference Room of the General Jewish Committee of Rhode Island is also the Hall of Fame of the Jews of Providence. There on the walls are the pictures of all the Presidents of the GJC, a committee which is by general consent the leading, overall, community agency. On the Eastern wall in that room hangs a picture that attracts the attention of all who see it. It is a photograph of three Jewish personalities who had influenced, if not determined, Jewish life in this city for the past half a century. This trio could tell more of the history of Providence than any other people among us.

But the strength of this trio was in doing things, and not in talking. There they are, in alphabetical order:

DR. ILIE BERGER, ALTER BOYMAN, ARCHIBALD SILVERMAN.

Dr. Ilie Berger, a Doctor of Dentistry by profession, and a Zionist by conviction. He mixed the two in his life in perfect proportions, and if you were sitting in his chair you were bound to get a filling of your teeth together with a lesson in Zionism, a talk on Israel, and an application to buy a Bond.

For years Dr. Berger had been sending instruments and tools of his profession to Israel. He was one of the builders of the College of Dentistry at the Hebrew University, and his name is forever memorialized at the Hadassah Hospital in Jerusalem.

Dr. Berger was a prolific writer of letters. He wrote to everybody of importance and received answers back on many matters. But the letter that he wrote to the Herald in the last days of his life stands out in my mind. He dispatched a letter to tell the newspaper and the people of Providence about a successful gathering he had in his house in Miami, and of the thousands of dollars' worth of Bonds he sold for his favorite Israel. But soon after, even before the newspaper had time to print his letter, came the sad news of his death.

Such was Dr. Berger to the end of his life.

And Alter Boyman. His name was a Shem Dovor, a Trade Mark in Providence and beyond the community. A grateful immigrant once wrote a letter thanking him for the kindness he had shown the immigrant, a perfect stranger, when he arrived by the Fabre Line in the Port of Providence. The man did not know his address, but he knew Alter Boyman, and this is what he wrote on the envelope. The letter was duly received on the strength of the name alone.

Alter Boyman always began his talks in public and in private with the words, "I Do Believe." This is a translation of the Hebrew phrase that has become so famous: "Ani Maamin, I Do Believe," a phrase which Jews stated every day in their prayers, and a phrase which the dwellers of the Concentration Camps in Germany chanted during their last march to extermination.

Alter Boyman did believe in what he did, even though it seemed, at times unbelievable to others. He believed with perfect faith in Labor Zionism, in the correctness of its decision, and he had an abiding adoration for its leaders. Besides all this he was an avid reader of books: Hebrew books, Yiddish books, English books. In his home there was a built-in shelf near the door of his living room and on that shelf were piled up books of every description, books which Alter Boyman was in the process of reading. He read them all, and he had time to attend to all the organizations and agencies, dozens of them, to which he belonged and in whose affairs he was actively involved. His pockets were always bulging with pledge cards, membership applications and tickets for an event that was to take place in the near future.

The third in that photograph is Archibald Silverman. Archie he was known to everybody from the days when he sold newspapers downtown to the days when he became President of a downtown bank. He was Archie when he became the first President of the General Jewish Committee of Rhode Island. He was Archie when he was appointed to the Board of Education of the State of Rhode Island. He was Archie to the old people at the Home for the Aged when he visited every Sabbath after noon. He was Archie to the hundreds of boys and girls whom he gave admission tickets to the Strand Theater, although he did not know who the children were. And he was Archie to the thousands of immigrant whom he met as they put their first footsteps on the soil of America at the Port of Providence, together with Alter Boyman. He often told of a five dollar bill that was circulated among the immigrants on board ship to show that they were not paupers and would not be a burden on the community. That five dollars was his, and at the end of the day it was returned to him, to start another shipload of immigrants on their way to their relatives in America.

Silverman, Boyman and Berger. These three were sure to be present at every worthwhile meeting, at every community conference, and their support could be counted on for every undertaking.

Berger, Boyman and Silverman. They were the founders of the General Jewish Committee. And although they will not be present at the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary, let us remember them with a blessing on our lips.

Sex and Earthquakes

The summer vacations, I suspect, will cool the youth demonstrations. Whether their demonstrations continue through the summer or not is one of the keys to how successful their protest against Cambodia, Vietnam and the Kent State Massacre will prove.

One of the truths almost any precinct leader or district leader can attest to is that by and large the young don't vote, which, in the words of the young themselves, makes them irrelevant to much of the political process.

There isn't an efficient voting registrar or district leader who doesn't put in a good week every fall outlining to departing college students how to go about getting an absentee ballot and if one-quarter of those circulated makes application to City Hall the effort is well justified.

The young begin to vote when they get a job and when they start paying their own rent. Then the young social worker whose father was a Republican and the young market analyst whose father was a Democrat will vote Democratic.

Sex and earthquakes move students around. Cambodia and Kent State were literally earthquakes and thousands upon thousands of students moved around. The question is: when the rubble settles will the students keep moving?

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Many things might have happened in today's hand as far as the bidding is concerned but after the bidding ended the play of the hand should have been practically automatic. Yet I watched as several Declarers sitting South created their own problems. The card combinations involved in the hand should become familiar to all who play fairly regularly.

North
 ♦ K 10 7 4
 ♥ K 8
 ♠ K 4 2
 ♣ K 8 7 3

West

South
 ♦ A Q 9 5 3
 ♥ 6
 ♠ A Q 10 6 5
 ♣ 6 4

Mr. and Mrs. David Wakeman were North and South, East Dealer, East - West vulnerable. The bidding:

E	S	W	N
1♥	1♠	P	3♣
P	4♣	End.

That is the way the bidding probably should have gone. Two Souths, however, made Takeout Doubles after East's opening bid instead of making the Spade Overcall. What happened is that West now took the opportunity to raise the Hearts after the Double. This does not show nearly as much after the Double as it would if there had been another bid made by South. That little innocent-sounding call enabled East to find the very nice "Sacrifice" after his opponents arrived at game. I put the word "Sacrifice" in quotation marks because they made their Double contract with an overtrick.

The Souths that made the overcall were jumped right to three by their partners. This effectively kept the Vulnerable Easts out of the bidding now for remember they had not received any help from their partners. South, with his two good five card suits now carried on to game and played it there.

Some Wests led the singleton Diamond, others the Heart Jack. Either would make the play of the hand exactly the same. Quite easy and automatic, really, but some of the Declarers didn't find it so. The Heart lead would leave the problem of handling both of Declarer's long suits correctly whereas that Diamond lead would donate that suit to the cause at trick one.

With the Heart lead Declarer would ruff the second Heart and as Mr. Wakeman did, turn his attention to the Trumps. Although it looks simple, some of the Declarers led a small Spade to the King at the first Trump lead, losing a trick to West when East showed out. This is really an automatic card combination. A trick should never be lost with the cards the way they are no matter which opponent might have all four honors. There is a sure way to handle this combination to lose no tricks no matter which opponent might have all four outstanding cards. Simply play one of the double honors (either the Ace or Queen) first. Now if either shows out a sure finesse to either the 9 or 10 can be taken. That settles the Trump suit.

Next, the Diamond suit. Again, a trick might be needlessly lost here by playing this suit wrong, again guarding against four to the Jack. The singleton lead would eliminate this problem but if left to one's own devices the suit has to be handled a certain way. This combination is no sure thing as compared to the Spades for if West has the four to the Jack, nothing can be done. Some Declarers did the same here, they led the first lead of the suit to North's King and then back to their own Ace. When West showed out they now had to lose a trick to East. True, they could have still taken a finesse against that Jack if they could have gotten over to Dummy but remember, all the Trumps in Dummy had been played to draw West's four so now there were no more entries to take that now certain finesse. What should Declarer have done? Just what Mr. Wakeman did. Lead the Ace first and then over to Dummy's King. Again, if all

Mrs. Benjamin Chinitz Heads Dvorah Dayan

Mrs. Benjamin Chinitz will be installed as president of the Dvorah Dayan Club of Pioneer Women at its 14th birthday celebration on Monday, June 8. The installation will be held at 8:15 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Seymour Block of 78 Bryant Road, Cranston.

Other officers who will be installed are Mesdames Raymond Eichenbaum, first vice-president, Moetzet Hapoolot; Sidney Jaffa, second vice-president, program; William Melzer, treasurer; Oscar Davidson, recording secretary; Alton Barclay, corresponding secretary. Mrs. Joseph Teverow will be installing officer. Outgoing president, Mrs. Esther Kanter, will give the year end report.

follow the rest of the suit is good. If West had four to the Jack he must get a trick. But as the cards are, West is the one who will show out. Now you are in Dummy just where you want to be. Now take the proven finesse against that Jack and make the contract.

Moral: Two more card combinations to examine, digest and learn. Never lose a trick that should not be lost by misplaying a definite card combination.

Time To Spare

By GERALD ANDREWS - Retirement Adviser

Remember Washington Irving If Americans were polled on the question of their favorite author, I have an idea that quite a few of us would reply — Washington Irving.

With good reason. Irving is one writer we all meet in high school. The authorities who run our educational system realized a long time ago that it's a good idea to introduce youngsters to the antics of Rip Van Winkle, the Headless Horseman, and the rest of the characters who parade through the pages of those famous short stories.

Still, we keep reading them beyond childhood, which means that Irving appeals to all ages. His art is that of the great storyteller. And like all great storytellers, he has different virtues that appeal to different age groups.

Exhibit A — myself. When I was first exposed to the Headless Horseman, I thought he was as terrifying an apparition as one could find on the printed page. I fully shared the fear of Ichabod Crane riding home through the darkness.

Today, that scene strikes me as a delicious example of Irving's gift for humor. It's also full of those little touches that bring literary characters to life. Think of the gaunt schoolmaster clinging to his horse, galloping for dear life away from his pursuer.

I'd like to continue in this vein since Washington Irving is one of my favorite subjects. However, my precise subject just now is Irving's home.

You probably know that Sunnyside, north of New York City near Tarryton, is one of our priceless national possessions. If you've never been there, you've missed something really worth seeing.

Irving called Sunnyside "a little, old-fashioned stone mansion, all made up of gable ends, and as full of angles and corners as an old cocked hat."

So it remains. The house and the grounds show how Irving lived. The rooms are full of memorabilia, things he owned, bought and collected. A tour through Sunnyside is an unforgettable experience. That's as it should be. Washington Irving is an unforgettable American.

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

'S' APPENED BEFORE — A swafest, I mean, like the one between the Sox-es, Red and White, last Sunday. Back in 1845, a team called the Knickerbockers was formed, eventually challenging any team to come up for a trouncing. The "New York Nine" accepted the challenge and shellacked them, 23 to 1, in four innings. After that, the Knickerbockers limited their play to practice games and after five years of practice, they took on the Washington Baseball Club of New York and beat them 22-20. (That info is from a story by Raymond Schuessler in The Elks Magazine for this month. Every baseball fan should get a copy).

MORE BY SCHUESSLER — The story in Elks mag thwarts the theory that baseball was invented by Abner Doubleday, revealing that a game called "base-ball" appeared in a book called "The Little Pretty Pocketbook" published in England in 1744 and re-published in New York in 1762. The tale also tells of a soldier at Valley Forge in 1778 telling of playing baseball, and also mentions a newspaper in 1820 stating that the Rochester Baseball Club, with a squad of 50, was in practice for the season's activities.

AND SO — Back to the swafest involving the Red Sox and White Sox. Twenty-two to thirteen! It doesn't mean a thing in baseball. Back in the halcyon days of the Melrose League, (Anyone remember that League?) the Columbias lost the opening-day game to the Brunswicks, 25 to 1 - AND - the same Columbias beat the Belmonts out of the pennant in a thrilling 3-2 game that went 12-innings. And, back in 1901, the Detroit Tigers made 12 errors in a nine inning game with the White Sox - and - two years later the White Sox made 12 errors in a nine inning game with Detroit. As mentioned above, the Knickerbockers played only practice games for five years after being shellacked by the "New York Nine," 23 to 1. And I wonder just what the Red Sox would do if they adopted a similar plan?

THIS TIME OF THE YEAR — It's the time of the year when the old grads return to the campus, renew old acquaintances and enlighten the younger generation with facts and figures concerning athletic performances those old timers think can never be equaled. "Ah now, lad - when we were playing etc., etc." SO-O-O, Old-Timer, tell them about this one if you want to admit that it took place forty-six years ago. The Place - Andrews Field; The Day - Bright and Sunny; The late Charles B. Coppen sat before a radio-microphone as a pioneer baseball broadcaster and the game made history when it went 20-innings. Here's the box score:

YIDDISH PRESS
NEW YORK — The 100th anniversary of the Yiddish press in the United States was celebrated here by more than 2,000 persons. The celebration was arranged by J.L. Peretz Verein, the Yiddish writers Union. President Nixon, in a message addressed to the gathering, lauded the role which the Yiddish press played in the development of Jewish cultural, social and economic life in the country and in bringing Jewish immigrants closer to American life. Greetings were also received from Israel president S.Z. Shazar and Prime Minister Golda Meir.

CO-INCIDENCE — As a small boy, I visited Franklin, Mass. on Garfield St. and Crescent St. The other day, while driving through, I discovered that right where I walked many times there now stands a Dean Academy Gymnasium named for Louis A.R. Roman Catholics were represented by the rector of St. Emonds College, the Superior of the White Fathers and the acting commissary of the Holy Land. Also participating were the Free Churches and the Eastern Churches.

Blind Youth Enters Cantorial Institute

NEW YORK — A 26-year-old youth, blind from birth, will enter the School of Sacred Music of the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in September as the first blind candidate for a cantorial degree from the Reform cantorial school, according to the Jewish Braille Institute of America.

Stephen Casell was one of the institute's first blind bar mitzva candidates, according to Judge Emil N. Baar, president of the institute. The youth took a Master's degree in music at Manhattan School of Music. The Braille Institute sponsored the youth, after his graduation, for private cantorial training by Paul Kwartin, the cantor of Union Temple, the Reform synagogue in Brooklyn.

The youth conducted half of the regular Friday night services recently at the Union Temple and will conduct the overflow services for the next High Holy Days there. The institute provided the youth with all of his religious school textbooks in Braille and taught him Hebrew Braille. It has also since provided him with all his Braille music manuscripts for his religious music studies.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

By Roger E. Spear

Earnings Downtrend Continues For North American Rockwell

Q: We hold 212 shares of North American Rockwell acquired at 13 3/4 in 1967 through merger. Do you see any possibility of immediate growth? Do you expect the dividend to be restored soon? — R.G.

A: I have a 50% loss in North American Rockwell. Does it have a chance of ever increasing? — L.S.

A: The recent dividend cut will release about $19 million annually, funds which can be used to help finance various expansion programs scheduled over the next few years. For this reason a restoration of the old rate is improbable. On the other hand, further reductions do not appear likely.

For a person seeking income, North American yields a generous 7.5% with some prospect of gradual capital growth. North American's dependence on government business has been reduced through acquisitions but this area still contributes about two-thirds of annual volume. Loss of some government contracts, stretch-outs and renegotiation on others have all taken their toll on company operations.

Earnings erosion, begun four years ago, was still apparent in the first three months of the current fiscal year to end Sept. 30. In this period earnings dropped 21% on a 15% decline in volume. A turnaround in the economy or receipt of a major government award would provide impetus for share recovery.

Q: We have $10,000 earning 5% in the bank which we would like to invest in a secure short-term bond for 7 1/2-8%. When you speak of income do you mean current income or does one have to wait until the bond matures? — R.P.

A: If this $10,000 is your total capital I would strongly advise against investing all of it because no bond provides the liquidity of a savings account. Bonds pay interest semiannually, one-half of the amount of the coupon or interest rate. Chrysler 8 3/4s of 1975, trading slightly above par, will pay $43.75 per bond twice a year. These notes, rated A, yield 8.6% held to maturity and would be suitable for your purpose.

Multiple Problems At Enterprise Fund

Q: I hold shares of Enterprise Fund for long-term growth. For the past several weeks only a bid or redemption price has been listed. My broker tells me they cannot sell shares. What does this mean? — R.M. and F.W.

A: In an early March action the federal court in Los Angeles barred Enterprise from selling additional shares pending correction of their records. This climaxed a back-office paperwork problem that began in early 1967. Enterprise, in 24 months, had exploded from a $30 million to an almost $1 billion asset fund. Back-office procedures capable of handling accounts for a small fund could simply not be expanded sufficiently to cope with the added volume. As a result, discrepancies between the number of shares credited to individual accounts and those in the capital stock control account were discovered.

Enterprise claims that changes instituted over the last several months have almost wholly reconciled these differences. Clearing operations were transferred to the State Bank & Trust Co., a firm which is accustomed to handling accounts of the size. Parent company, Shareholders Management, has installed computer-based back-office systems for funds under its aegis.

The earlier resignation of Fred Carr, who had been closely linked in peoples' minds with the growth of Enterprise, also marred the fund's image. Portfolio management has now been divided among five men, under the leadership of highly qualified Larry Rader, a company veteran.

By splitting responsibility for the portfolio, it is hoped that growth will more closely resemble that of a small fund. Although there is validity in this system, it also creates difficulties and duplication. A central trading desk eliminates the possibility of two managers bidding in competition on one issue — or one buying what the other is selling. Recent portfolio positions taken by the five managers represent both large companies selling at depressed multiples and young firms with high potential and also high risk.

Dividend Not The Most Important Factor

Q: I own shares of Thomas Industries and Quaker Oats. Thomas has distributed several stock dividends and paid a cash dividend every year. Since Quaker's dividend is not much, should I sell it and buy more Thomas? — C.B.

A: Cash dividends for Quaker and Thomas both yield 2.1%. While a stock dividend is attractive, an investment decision should not be made on this factor alone.

Thomas' good earnings growth was interrupted in 1969 when profits were adversely affected by plant start-up costs and a strike. The outlook for 1970 is obscured by tight money and reduced consumer buying. However, Thomas should maintain its leading industry position through active industry development and promotional programs.

While cereal is still Quaker's best-known product line, the company has completed acquisitions which will not only add to sales and earnings but will broaden consumer markets. The most important of these, Fisher-Price, a producer of preschool games and toys, places OAT in an intensely competitive market with a highly regarded product line. Other expansion areas include frozen foods and gourmet prepared food items. Established products such as pet foods are continuing their healthy uptrend. Hold both for long-term growth.

Q: I am interested in forming an investment club. Are there any figures available on the investment success of such groups? — N.P.

A: According to the National Assn. of Investment Clubs, which represents about 25% of the 60,000 clubs in the country, members have fared well. A survey conducted in February, 1969, revealed that of those which responded 90% showed a profit over the life of the club and 92% outperformed Standard & Poor's Industrials in 1968.

The NAIC, a volunteer organization, had, by the end of 1969, 13,797 clubs enrolled with portfolios valued at $360 million. Founded in 1951, this nonprofit organization offers assistance to groups interested in forming clubs. Write National Assn. of Investment Clubs, 1300 Washington Blvd. Building, Detroit, Mich., 48231.

enlisted a significant number of the young. But when the Senator failed to win the nomination, these young aides did not form a cadre able to train still other platoons to recognize their own self-interests. In fact, I think they did nothing during the '68 campaign although their interests were certainly central to the discussions waged then.

In the light of his campaign promises in 1968, Nixon's decision to invade Cambodia is simply an outrage. In view of what the administration tried to do at New Haven, foment a riot in order to quell it, Kent State is even a larger, more devastating outrage.

The protest marches and the demonstrations gave vent to this feeling of pent-up rage and at least made Richard Nixon think, if the demonstrations did not make Spiro T. calm down, but then Spiro T. always strikes me as the PTA run wild in its own nightmare.

Out of this May weekend, the request of the Princeton students for a two-week vacation in the fall to help work for political candidates of their choice struck me as the most effective and sensible demand. I wonder why our ivory towers didn't institute this practice years and years ago.

The crux of the matter, or as the young put it, the nitty-gritty, is whether they as citizens can marshal themselves into a voting bloc. It took Dr. Reginald Hawkins and Fred and Kelly Alexander and other Negro leaders 15 years and all the legislation in Washington before they could overcome the voting apathy of the colored neighborhoods and elect one Negro to the seven-man Charlotte City Council.

Singing songs at Woodstock next September may well be a display of fervor and ardency; ringing doorbells will herald maturity. Ringing doorbells and addressing envelopes is dull, dull work.

the trend in the previous couple of years, for then, you may recall, the big boosts were for sirloin steaks, roast beef, veal cutlets. And it was to beat these increases and still get sufficient protein that millions of Americans "traded down" from high-priced cuts of beef to hamburgers and hot dogs, chicken and fish.

And the same trend is evident across the board. Among vegetables, such old standbys as carrots, celery and tomatoes all increased 19 per cent or more.

Among home ownership costs, prices are rising rapidly for such necessities as repair of furnaces and washing machines, replacement of sinks, reshingling of roofs.

Among transportation costs, public transit fares are rising more rapidly than any other major category. And traditionally bargain inter-city bus fares are climbing at a rate nearly four times that of new car prices.

Among personal care items, prices for do-it-yourself home permanent refills are increasing faster than prices of cold waves performed at the hairdresser. Among women's apparel costs, casual shoe prices are rising faster than evening slippers. Among alcoholic beverages, wine prices are rising four times as fast as whiskey prices. Among health costs, semi-private hospital room rates are rising faster than private room rates.

This 1969-70 era is murderous: business recession, a stock market crash, climbing unemployment, mounting bankruptcies and now an inflation zeroing in on the basics.

And the most tragic aspect of all is that at the heart of it is a war which everyone says must be ended but which drags on and on endlessly.

President Kennedy Arranged Meeting With Dobrynin To Aid Soviet Jews

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The late president John F. Kennedy aided the cause of Soviet Jews by arranging a private meeting in the fall of 1963 between Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, Arthur Goldberg and Senators Abraham Ribicoff and Jacob Javits.

Accounts of Mr. Kennedy's actions to assist American Jewish leaders in pressing USSR authorities to improve conditions for Soviet Jews are told now for the first time, in one chapter of a new Doubleday book, Three Million More?, by Gunther Lawrence. The volume provides a comprehensive account of the historic and contemporary cultural and religious discrimination against the USSR's more than three million Jews.

According to the author, Jewish leaders were "optimistic and heartened" by Mr. Kennedy's sympathy on the issue, and were prepared to rally behind his leadership in dealing with the problem.

The talk with Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin was arranged after Mr. Goldberg and Senator Ribicoff raised the problem with President Kennedy at the White House in the fall of 1963, during a ceremony honoring the two men for their work as former members of the cabinet. Both men, in conjunction with Senator Javits, had determined that silence regarding the USSR's discrimination against its Jewish citizens must end, and that the United States should officially discuss the matter at the highest level with Soviet leaders.

When they brought up the situation to Mr. Kennedy, both were surprised at the president's "comprehensive knowledge" on the subject. In their presence, he then called his leading Soviet expert, Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, who recommended that perhaps a group of American businessmen leaving on an exchange visit should raise the issue with Soviet authorities. Only a few days earlier, former Secretary of State Dean Rusk, in a meeting with Messrs. Goldberg, Javits and Ribicoff, had rejected unilateral American action, and instead proposed that a delegation of leading Jews from all over the world meet with Soviet officials to discuss the matter. This suggestion was rejected by the three as inappropriate and lending credence to the consistent Soviet charge that world Jewry represents an international conspiracy. Messrs. Goldberg and Ribicoff also rejected Thompson's proposal, and suggested to President Kennedy that a meeting between them and Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin might be preferable.

On October 29, 1963, Messrs. Goldberg, Ribicoff and Javits met with Ambassador Dobrynin at the Soviet Embassy in Washington. Mr. Thompson had called the Russian diplomat beforehand, making it clear that although he was not seeking the appointment on behalf of the President, Mr. Kennedy did have a personal interest in the meeting.

During lengthy discussions with Mr. Dobrynin, the three covered various forms of discrimination carried out by the Soviet government against its Jews in the areas of religion and culture. The Soviet ambassador denied that discrimination existed against Jews in either education or employment and "violently" rejected the idea that they were being singled out in the then ongoing economic trials.

He cited frequently repeated Soviet statistics on Jews engaged in medicine, science, engineering and other technical areas, saying "We are proud of our Jewish citizens. They are treated like everyone else."

The three then suggested that perhaps the conversation could profitably be continued with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, in Moscow. The ambassador indicated that since the premier would receive a report on their meeting, he would decide personally about the possibility of the one now proposed. No such conference ever took place with either Mr. Khrushchev or his successors.

Mr. Kennedy was specifically concerned for Jews in the USSR who wished to rejoin relatives from whom they had been separated since World War II. (Prior to the Nazis' invasion of Russia, German and Red armies had conquered Poland. Fleeing families were often compelled to separate, some going to the West and others to the Soviet Union. Immediately after the war, an opportunity was offered many of these divided families to reunite, but thousands were unable to take advantage of this opportunity and, based on recent figures, more than 50,000 families still remain separated.)

Since the 1967 war in the Mideast, the USSR has increased its anti-Israel propaganda campaign with cartoons and almost daily stories in both its internal and external media. Differentiation between anti-Israel, anti-Zionism and anti-Jewish criticism is usually lost in such stories. This propaganda has been accelerated in recent months, and, as Lawrence points out in his book, is directly linked to the USSR's pro-Arab policies.

Also, during the past number of months, many Soviet Jews have exposed themselves in openly protesting the USSR's policy by singing petitions, sending letters to western journalists, the U.N. Human Rights Committee, and Mrs. Golda Meir, Israeli Prime Minister, and other Israeli officials. Many Soviet Jews have also applied for emigration visas to Israel and other countries.

According to former White House counsel Meyer Feldman, President Kennedy agreed to take up the question of divided families during a meeting in 1963 with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, Feldman told Lawrence that the late president asked him to prepare, with the assistance of the State Department, a document summarizing the grievances of Soviet Jews.

As a result of a Berlin Autobahn incident, Mr. Kennedy could not utilize the prepared document, but, according to Mr. Feldman, did raise the matter of the divided families and the larger question of discrimination against Soviet Jews.

Mr. Gromyko told President Kennedy that the Soviet government could not publicly or in any other way comply with his request. He assured the president that the matter would be looked into "sympathetically." At a later date, Mr. Feldman was told by President Kennedy that the Soviet Union had informed him that the best they could do regarding the divided families "would be to temper the current prohibitions."

According to Mr. Feldman, President Kennedy believed that his direct involvement could accomplish little to alleviate the condition of Soviet Jews. Nevertheless, Feldman says, the president was still willing, especially on the divided families, to send a personal message to Premier Khrushchev, as well as utilizing private diplomatic channels to get leaders of other governments to plead the same cause.

On November 19, 1963, in Washington, D.C., Arthur Goldberg and Senator Javits reported to the leaders of twenty-one major American Jewish secular and religious agencies their discussions with President Kennedy and the Dobrynin meeting. They called upon the Jewish groups to proceed with a planned 1964 protest mobilization to begin educating and arousing American and world opinion on this humanitarian question. Messrs. Goldberg and Javits indicated that they would continue to pursue the matter with Mr. Kennedy.

Romper Room To Open First Unit In East Providence In July

Romper Room Schools, an association of nursery and day care centers, will accept registration for the summer day camp and fall term, which will begin Sept. 9, for both the full day program and morning and afternoon half day nursery school programs.

There are a limited number of openings and registration will begin in the East Providence area on June 3 and continue through June 30. Registration in East Providence will be on Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday at the Romper Room trailers, from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturday, at the lot at the corner of Ferris Avenue and Circle Street in East Providence.

The Romper Room School is designed to accommodate from 80 to 100 students with a ratio of 10 students to each teacher. In place of traditional classrooms, Romper Room School will have a variety of specially designed activity areas in which a child can learn at his own pace. They include interest areas such as science, physical activity, art, creative drama, dress-up and music.

There will be no teachers in the traditional sense. The Romper Room staff will act as supervisors who facilitate the learning process. All are specially trained to guide and encourage the child's learning experience rather than interrupt it.

The Romper Room School has been designed by Ronald Haase, AIA, who served as planning consultant to the Head Start and Parent and Child Centers division of the Office of Economic Opportunity. Mr. Haase is one of the country's leading architects specializing in the field of school design.

To provide the children with the physical activity they never seem to tire from, there are large areas, indoors and out, for play. Both the indoor climbing structure and the outdoor area were especially designed for Romper Room School, so they are more than a playground — they are learning environments. All the pieces of equipment are innovative versions of traditional playground equipment.

The East Providence school will be one of three which will open officially in mid-July. The other Romper Room Schools will be located in Cranston and Warwick.

Jewish leaders left the meeting confident that, with a sympathetic president of the United States to rally behind, they could help their fellow Jews. Three days later, President Kennedy was assassinated.

The spring mobilization took place at the Willard Hotel, and since that period Jewish organizations have banded together to help Soviet Jews under the ad hoc organization called The American Conference on Soviet Jewry.

Holland Commemorates Anniversary Of Liberation

AMSTERDAM — Holland is commemorating this month the 25th anniversary of the liberation of the victims of the German occupation with the end of the Second World War in Europe. More than 100,000 Dutch Jews were deported and killed and although the Dutch ceremonies opened with a service in synagogue, there has been no specific Jewish service or observance, a situation which the leaders of the umbrella Jewish organization for some 45 congregations feel should be remedied.

The main reason for this situation is that the Dutch Jewish community has not yet recovered from the savage blows it received from the Nazis during the 1940-45 occupation.

It was a flourishing community with more than 140,000 members in 1940. Today a mere 30,000 live in Holland. Of these, some 15,000 belong to the Orthodox Jewish community, with perhaps no more than 1,000 actively involved.

In the whole of the country it is estimated that only 280 men attend Sabbath synagogue services. Some 2,000 Jews are members of one of the three Reform congregations and 750 belong to the single Portuguese congregation.

Jewish life has continued through the sense of duty of a few dedicated individuals, but hardly any of them are among the young generation. Most young people, however, support Israel either by contributing to the United Israel Appeal or by emigrating.

In 1969, a total of 350 Jews emigrated from Holland to Israel, 80 percent aged under 30 years. This total is proportionately the highest in Western Europe. Since the end of the war 8,000 Dutch Jews have settled in Israel.

The scanty Jewish activity which remains is centered in Amsterdam, the seat of all the lesser extent are in Rotterdam, The Hague and Utrecht.

During the darkest days of persecution there were people who sought to preserve Jewish life for the time when peace would return.

Like the Marranos of Spain, Jews met in hiding and received lectures from their scholarly brethren, and throughout the war secret prayers were recited in synagogues in Amsterdam on the Sabbath and the festivals. They were attended by a few Jews, some of them of mixed parentage.

Even in Bergen-Belsen concentration camp Dutch Jews attempted to maintain Jewish life as much as possible. The poet, Joseph Gompers, wrote a poem, "Power," on August 5, 1944, as a present for the Bar Mitzvah of Max Keizer, an Amsterdam boy in the camp.

There also Dr. Simon Colthof, later the rector of a Jewish grammar school, compiled a handwritten Jewish calendar so that the inmates would know the dates of the Sabbath and the festivals.

Boston Community Council Presses Action On Fires

BOSTON, Mass. — Firm and vigorous action is being pressed in contacts by the Jewish Community Council with law enforcement officials, the Police Department and the Mayor's office to speedily apprehend those responsible for the senseless desecration of Congregation Agudath Israel and Congregation Chevra Shas in Dorchester earlier this week.

An appeal for corrective and preventive action was made by the Council and also the Anti Defamation League, as representatives viewed the destruction on the scene and conferred with rabbis and synagogue officials.

A broad thrust of action has been strongly proposed, calling for the involvement of state and federal law enforcement agencies in support of the Boston Police investigation. The evidence in last week's synagogue fire points to the deliberateness of the wanton vandalism and destruction — the deliberate fire set to the Holy Torah Scroll of Chevra Shas and the fires set in two places at Agudath Israel.

At the same time, action is under way to involve the Mayor's Office of Human Rights and the marshalling of a coalition of community representation to develop further means that will insure the safety and security of the Jewish residents and institutions in the Dorchester-Mattapan community.

Expressions of deep concern were received from Tom Arnold, head of Youth Inc., which is located near Agudath Israel. Members of B'nai B'rith Youth groups and from Youth Inc., it was also learned, are joining forces in an offer to help clean up the debris at Agudath Israel, and to help in any manner possible at that Synagogue as well as the Chevra Shas.

Every effort will be explored and firmly directed to immediate and continuing long-range action to insure safety and security of the community, to attempt to overcome the various problems which are plaguing the area, so that stability and security can be hopefully achieved, a Council official said.

A. Reginald Eaves, Administrator of the Mayor's Office of Human Rights, issued the following statement:

"The City of Boston joins its Jewish community in mourning the desecration of Synagogues Agudath Israel and Chevras Shaas.

"...the tragic events in Mattapan-Dorchester are symptomatic of the need for citizen participation in the protection of their neighborhoods.

"The Mattapan-Dorchester Task Force realized this need and for the past two months has studied a program developed by the community and the Mayor's Office of Human Rights with Mayor Kevin White's support and that of Police Commissioner Edmond McNamara. Members of the Task Force will vote next week on the final draft of the rules and regulations. The rapid implementation of this program should prevent recurrences of such incidents as these; and that rapid implementation is assured. That implementation will significantly reduce the incidence of crime in the Mattapan - Dorchester community.

"The Mayor's Office of Human Rights hopes that the citizens of Boston will not respond negatively to these unfortunate happenings and to the rhetoric of those who would polarize our city."

Increases In Cost Held Responsible For Drop In Church, Synagogue Building

NEW YORK — A Department of Commerce report that inflation-spurred increases in building costs have been responsible for a drop in church and synagog construction appears to apply to Orthodox synagogues but not to Conservative and Reform building which has dropped for other reasons, according to a Jewish Telegraphic Agency survey.

The Commerce Department reported that construction outlays for Jewish and Christian houses of worship had dropped from a peak of $1,207 million in 1965 to $951 million in 1969, with a projection of $900 million for 1970. The report said that construction costs rose 30 percent during the half decade, with religious groups finding it hard to get bank loans because of their non-commercial nature. Higher interest rates also were cited as a factor.

The report said that "inflation takes a bigger toll of spiritual and cultural construction than that erected to serve material needs — unfortunately." A source at the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America confirmed that the construction of new Orthodox synagogues "has slowed down due to the peak in building costs," but he estimated the dip as only "a slight decline." He said "a considerable number of new congregations" had been formed during that period, emphasizing that a new congregation could manage by use of private homes or by doubling up with other congregations in existing synagogues.

A spokesman for the United Synagog of America, the Conservative congregational association, said that while Conservative synagog construction was down from a post-war average of 25 a year, the total number of Conservative congregations had risen from 250 to a fairly level total of 826. Thus, he said, new Conservative synagogues have not been a major need in recent years.

Radical Group Members Interrupt Services

NEW YORK — Rabbi A. Bruce Goldman, adviser to the Radical Jewish Union of Columbia University, and 22-year-old Annie Rosen, a member of the union, were arrested this week after they disrupted services at Temple Emanu-El. They were charged with interfering with a worship service.

Midway during the service, Miss Rosen dressed in red, rushed to the pulpit and attempted to seize the microphone. She was pulled back by ushers and several plainclothes policemen.

said there had been a drop in Reform temple construction but he attributed it mainly to higher taxes, lack of space and the continuing "major push out of the big cities to suburbia." He estimated the eight to 10 new Reform congregations had been organized annually during 1968, 1969 and 1970, compared with 18 to 25 annually a decade ago, adding that merging of congregations has resulted in a lesser need for new buildings.

He reported also that there had been "quite a bit of refurbishing and modernizing" of older synagogues. He referred, in that connection, to the protests of youth groups against a $7 million "palace" planned by Temple Beth El in Detroit.

As Miss Rosen was dragged away, Rabbi Goldman shouted, "Is this a house of God?"

The rabbi and Miss Rosen were among 15 members of the union who entered the synagogue and occupied a front-row pew. The group was trying to express antiwar and pro black Panther sentiments.

After the service, Rabbi Nathan A. Perilman, senior rabbi of the temple, said this was the third time the Radical Jewish Union has visited the temple. Two weeks ago, Rabbi Goldman was arrested along with a follower.

Lebanese Cabinet Votes To Crack Down On Guerrillas

LONDON — The Lebanese cabinet voted to crack down on Arab guerrillas using its territories for attacks on Israel. The cabinet authorized Lebanese troops to shoot to kill any guerrillas caught firing on Israel from Lebanese soil or planting mines in the border region. Such acts were said to be in violation of the agreement between the Beirut government and the Palestinian guerrilla command last Nov. 3.

The terms of the agreement, though never officially disclosed, are known to permit the guerrillas to use southern Lebanon as a staging area. But the pact allows them to attack Israeli targets only after infiltrating Israeli territory, not from Lebanese soil. The recent school bus ambush that killed eight Israeli children and four adults was carried out with bazooka and small arms fire from behind Lebanese lines. The Beirut cabinet also voted a million dollars to bolster the country's defense against Israel. But it postponed a decision on Premier Rashid Karami's controversial proposal to ask other Arab countries for troops to help defend Lebanon and Israel. Mr. Karami proposed that such aid be summoned from Morocco and Tunisia or other Arab countries.

Following this, Lebanese troops moved into the southern border area, taking up positions near the lines where Israeli patrols this week began periodically to cross over into Lebanon to guard against guerrilla incursions. No clashes occurred between Lebanese regulars and Israeli forces.

Educator Blames Jewish Parents For Uncommitted Children

GROSSINGERS, N.Y., — A Jewish educator blamed Jewish parents last week for the failure of their children to become "committed, literate, enthusiastic Jews."

William Goldfarb, of Cleveland, vice president of the American Association for Jewish Education, claimed that parents who manifest only a token interest in Jewish education and provide a limited Jewish environment at home have only themselves to blame when confronted by assimilationism and inter-marriage by their young.

Mr. Goldfarb addressed 500 Jewish community leaders and educators at the organization's annual meeting here.

The American Association for Jewish Education represents 43 bureaus of Jewish education in the U.S. and Canada and 17 national organizations including the Conservative, Reform and Orthodox branches of Judaism.

The speaker, a former chairman of the Cleveland Bureau of Education, said that Jewish parents have set the standards for their own children.

"Children are quick and accurate to perceive the true feeling and values of their parents, and no amount of pushing the child to attend religious school will be taken seriously by the child if he senses that the parent himself does not really care," Mr. Goldfarb said.

"If the home atmosphere consciously or unconsciously communicates to the child that his parents do not really consider Jewish learning and Jewish living the objects in life, no amount of schooling will create motivated, committed, literate, enthusiastic Jews."

Mr. Goldfarb cautioned against planning contemporary activities such as programs on pollution, civil rights or Vietnam "merely to attract our young people" unless "we clearly define the relationship of their Jewish heritage to such modern problems."

American Jews were warned that they face the religious and cultural destruction of the Jewish community unless they adopt drastic measures, through new programs of Jewish education, to combat a growing assimilationist trend among young and adult.

Philip M. Klutznick, Chicago, a former president of B'nai B'rith told the special gathering of 500 Jewish community leaders and educators that "we must especially pay attention to the revolt of our young people calling for a revision of our outmoded and outdated educational and cultural programs.

Mr. Klutznick, a former Ambassador of the United States to ECOSOC at the United Nations, said "Jewish youths seek answers to the broad questions of ecology, racism, world peace and law and order — to which many answers can be found in our learned heritage as a people."

He pointed out, however, "they deplore the priorities of their fathers and grandfathers — the establishment. They see little hope for meaningful Jewish survival without change in values and priorities, even with an Israel they admire and revere."

The Jewish leader said that while North American Jews were concentrating their efforts on helping Israel, Soviet Jews and other overseas causes, they were "losing the more subtle and sophisticated battle at home of the Jewish mind and soul."

Mr. Klutznick emphasized that he was not suggesting a reduction of American Jewish aid to Israel and similar concerns. However, he said, "Let us not permit emergency events in Israel, as desperate as they are, to blind us to the emergency here at home. We can and must conquer both."

New York Stock Exchange Reverses Position On Wearing Yarmulka At Work

NEW YORK — The New York Stock Exchange has reversed its position against permitting the wearing of yarmulkas on the job.

The American Jewish Congress confirmed it had received a letter to that effect from Exchange president Robert W. Haack, addressed to Theodore J. Kollish, executive board chairman of the AJCongress' Metropolitan Council. Haack said a de facto reversal was made "immediately following" the uproar over the decision, in the wake of a suit filed with the City Commission of Human Rights by Abraham Jacob Goldstein, of Forest Hills, N.Y. Haack said "a formal settlement" would be made "within a day or two." The Commission's scheduled hearing on the suit was thus canceled.

Goldstein, a 25-year-old tube operator at the Exchange since April, 1968, had agreed when hired not to wear a skullcap on the floor during trading hours so as not to "disturb the brokers." He filed his complaint this past January when a supervisor forbade him from wearing a yarmulka on an upper level of the Exchange.

Mayor John V. Lindsay pledged the city's aid in eradicating discrimination against the city's 100,000

Sabbath-observing employees. He said the Human Rights Commission was soliciting employers' policy statements and preparing hearings on discrimination charges by those denied employment because of their need to leave work early Sabbath eve.

Center Fund Reaches Almost $100,000 Mark

The Jewish Community Center's "Completion Fund Effort" to raise an additional $500,000 for the Center Building Campaign, opened on June 1 at the Center with a meeting of the campaigners in the General Solicitation Division under the chairmanship of Haskell Wallick and Harlan J. Espo.

At this meeting, Bertram L. Bernhardt, general campaign chairman, reported that the new effort had almost reached the $100,000 mark, a figure that has since been exceeded.

The General Solicitation Division includes twenty solicitations teams that are headed by the four vice chairmen, Marvin Grabel, Jeremiah Gorin, Karl Foss and Mrs. John Yashar.

This division adopted a goal of $60,000 and was assigned more than 300 family prospects for solicitation.

The twenty captains who will supervise the solicitation teams are Alan Brier, Irving Chase, Harold Cohen, Jason Cohen, Edward Feldstein, Bernard Gladstone, Mrs. Jules Goldsmith, Sheldon Green, Lawrence Hopfenberg and David Horovitz.

SUPPORT PORT AUTHORITY
JERUSALEM — About 200 Hebrew University students volunteered to work as stevedores at Israel's ports if they become strike-bound again. The students distributed leaflets starting their support for Maj. Gen. Haim Laskov, former Israeli Chief of Staff, now chairman of the National Port Authority. They assailed Yitzhak Ben Aharon, recently elected secretary general of Histadrut, who has been in dispute with Gen. Laskov and has demanded his dismissal. About 2000 other students have signed the statement of support.

ARNOW ELECTED
GROSSINGERS, N.Y. — Robert H. Arnov, Scarsdale, N.Y., was elected president of the American Association for Jewish Education meeting here. He succeeds Isadore Breslau, Washington, Abram P. Pivosky and Jacob Rockower, both of Philadelphia, were elected vice presidents.

U.S. Political Analysts Speculate USSR May Move To Open Suez

WASHINGTON — American political analysts are now speculating that the Soviet Union may move to open shipping in the Suez Canal. The Russian escalation seems likely since the prospect of negotiating a peace settlement to include reopening of the canal is remote.

The possibility of such a Soviet move in the Suez is now more than an idle threat following recent confirmed reports that the hundred or so Soviet pilots now flying air defense missions in Egypt have standing orders to open fire on any threatening Israeli aircraft.

Meanwhile Foreign Minister Abba Eban is understood to have used these reports during his four day visit here last week to bolster his request for an American commitment to sell more supersonic aircraft to Israel.

President Nixon did not give Mr. Eban an immediate reply, but said that he was deeply impressed by the evidence of stepped up Soviet military involvement in the Mideast.

Both United States and Israeli intelligence organizations have expressed the belief that there have already been at least a few Soviet casualties in the recent months of combat along the Suez cease-fire line, though neither Moscow nor Cairo has acknowledged Russian losses.

In the Israeli view, the Soviet aim is to inch up by cautious stages to challenge Israel's longstanding supremacy over the canal.

In an article in the current edition of Newsweek, Senior Editor Edro Arnaud de Borchgrave quotes a high Soviet official as saying "If Israel persists in attacking Egypt she will have to be taught a lesson. And that lesson can only be a dose of the same medicine."

"It won't be long before the Egyptians are capable of bombing targets in Israel the way Israel bombs targets in Egypt. Then hopefully, Israel will at last realize that this war must be stopped and the occupied territories evacuated."

Asked how the Soviets would respond if the Israelis shot down their planes, the official replied, "We are a major power—a superpower as you Americans call us — and superpowers do not like to be humiliated."

"In that respect we are no different from the United States. If Israel wishes to escalate, we can also escalate."

The key to the Soviet expansion in the Mideast lies in the battle to overcome Israeli air supremacy. The Soviets recently retaliated against Israeli planes sneaking through Egyptian radar on the tail of civilian passenger flights by forcing a detour of incoming air traffic.

When the detour did not stop the Israeli Phantom jets, the Russians asked the Egyptians to drastically curtail civilian traffic. Cairo rejected the idea of such self-imposed isolation.

If, however, the Soviets can guarantee immunity from Israeli attack along the Suez Canal, it is believed that a channel for vessels of 40,000 tons could be opened in a matter of only a few weeks.

Despite the tensions and military buildup along the canal there have been no direct engagements.

NAZIS LIVE SAFELY

PARIS — The newspaper France Soir named 19 wanted nazi war criminals who it says are living safely in South America and in Egypt. According to France Soir, Gen. Heinrich Mueller, former Gestapo commander, was last seen in Port Said wearing an Egyptian uniform, and there are 16 other wanted nazis in Egypt, many of them employed by the police or the Propaganda Ministry.

The top nazis still at large in South America are Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy who lives in the Paraguay-Brazilian border region and Dr. Joseph Mengele, the Auschwitz physician who selected inmates for the gas chambers, France Soir said.

Dedicates Poem To Kent Victim

LONDON — The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda published a poem dedicated to Allison Krause, the 19 year-old Pittsburgh girl who was one of four students shot to death by National Guardsmen at Kent State College in Ohio May 4.

The poem was written by Yevgeny Yevtushenko, author of the famous poem Babi Yar which described the nazi massacre of Jews in the Ukraine during World War II.

Miss Krause and two other of the slain students were Jewish. The poem was titled "Flowers and Bullets." Its theme was based on reports that on the day before her death, Miss Krause put a flower in the muzzle of a Guardsman's rifle and said, "Flowers are better than bullets."

Yevtushenko wrote, "Don't give flowers to the state, where truth is punished. Such a state's gift in return is cynical and cruel, and the gift to you in return, Allison Krause, was a bullet that pushed the flower back."

In another verse, the poet declared, "Rise murdered Allison Krause, like an Immortelle of the epoch, a thorny flower of protest."

An Immortelle is a flower frequently placed on graves. "Flowers and Bullets" was described in Moscow as both a good poem and one that met the Kremlin's propaganda needs.

For And About Teenagers

MY BOYFRIEND GETS MAD AT ME AND WON'T TELL ME WHY...

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "My boyfriend gets mad at me and won't tell me why. He has done this two times. The first time it happened, my mother got us back together again. This time she said I should forget about him. I can't. He means too much to me. Can you help me?"

OUR REPLY: No one can help you. You must help yourself. There is no better advice than that which your mother has already given to you—and you would be wise to heed her advice and forget the boy. If he gets mad at you, for no apparent reason, and refuses to tell you what he is mad about, he is the one who needs help and some advice. And, it is fairly certain that he is not going to change. If anything, he will probably become more difficult to get along with as time goes by. Take your mother's advice. You'll find that you can indeed forget him. It will become more difficult to break away as time goes on and as you become more and more accustomed to putting up with his child-like behavior. Do it—now—and you'll be amazed at how soon you can forget him.
