Calls For Comprehensive Program To Banish 'Inequality . . . Poverty'

NEW YORK — Nine major national Jewish agencies and 81 community relations agencies affiliated with the National Community Relations Advisory Council, called for a comprehensive Federal program to "banish inequality, injustice and poverty" from this land and said that they and their membership were prepared "willingly to assume whatever share may fall upon us" of the economic costs entailed. They called upon President Johnson to propose this comprehensive program and on Congress to enact it.

A resolution adopted by the executive committee of NCRAC and transmitted to President Johnson affirmed that this country "has the resources to provide all our people with the essentials of a decent, dignified human life, while meeting our obligations abroad." It said that "failure to use those resources to banish inequality, injustice and poverty is as immoral as it is indefensible. There can be no higher priority for the nation."

The resolution expressed readiness to assume a share of the costs involved and urged member organizations and their constituents "to make known to their legislators and other officials of government their like commitment." It pledged the fullest commitment to programs of education and interpretation to assure acceptance and support of the proposed measures "as matters of the greatest urgency."

The program urged on the President and Congress would provide, the resolution stated, a decent job for all who are employable or can be made so by retraining; income sufficient to provide all others with essentials of civilized living; decent dwellings for all; medical care for all; education to the limits of each person's capacity, and the elimination of all forms of discrimination and segregation from the life of our society.

The resolution noted that the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and the emotions aroused by it, attested to the urgency of decisive action. It warned that such action must be initiated now lest the nation "be precipitated into an irreversibly destructive course toward internecine strife that could sunder our national unity and debase the character of our social order."

It denounced rioting, pillaging and looting but warned that the alternative to violence must not be "blind repression," noting that the sources of the disorders "lie deep in the long history of enslavement, oppression, denial, segregation and discrimination to which Negroes have been subjected in our society."

In his letter of transmittal to President Johnson, Jordan C. Band, NCRAC chairman, expressed the hope that the Civil Rights Bill of 1968 would be enacted within the next few days.

Washington Riots Hard On Jewish Business

WASHINGTON — The outbreak of rioting following the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., is believed by Jewish sources here to have brought many Jewish businessmen in the stricken cities to the brink of economic ruin.

Although anti-Semitic motivation was completely lacking in the Negro outbreaks in the cities of America, Jews were hit the hardest because of the fact that they were conducting business in the very hearts of the Negro ghettos. What happens to the Jewish owned stores that have been looted here, in Chicago, Detroit, Kansas City, Newark and in a score of other cities of rioting is now problematical since there is no complete estimate of the extent of the damage.

Some Jewish merchants said they would reopen their stores and continue business, particularly if a way could be found to have them insured against future losses. Others said they would rather go out of business than face another outbreak of rioting. Many Jewish storekeepers told newsmen they were particularly disturbed since it was common knowledge in the areas they operated that they were employing a high proportion of Negroes who would now be unemployed.

Full details of the extent of damage to Jewish merchants will not be available to central agencies until the local groups send in reports, which may take weeks.

Israel To Cooperate With Thant Mission

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Secretary General Thant announced this week that he planned to send a new "humanitarian" mission to the Middle East to gather first-hand information on the security and welfare of civilians in territories occupied by Israel.

Israel's agreement to cooperate with such a mission was received in reply to a letter proposing the mission. The letter was sent by Mr. Thant on Feb. 26.

Earlier, an agreement had been received from the United Arab Republic, Jordan and Syria, which have been sending repeated notes to Mr. Thant alleging Israeli violations against Arab civilians and property in the occupied areas.

(The Jordanian Foreign Minister said in Amman that if Israel made a "simple declaration" of intention to implement the United Nations resolution on the Middle East, the Arabs would be prepared to open "indirect negotiations" with an Israeli delegation in New York immediately.)

The timing of Israel's agreement was seen here as an indication of a desire to show cooperation with the United Nations on the Middle East problem, which is on the agenda of the resumed session of the General Assembly.

Israel is also showing a favorable attitude toward the efforts of Mr. Thant's special representative from Sweden, Dr. Gunnar Jarring, who has been seeking agreement on a formula to begin talks on a Middle East peace settlement.

In his announcement, Mr. Thant said that a new fact-finding mission on "conditions affecting the civilian population" in areas where the Middle East war was fought last June was necessary so that he could comply with resolutions requiring that he report to the Security Council on this problem.

A United Nations mission headed by Nils-Goran Gussing of Sweden visited the occupied areas and refugee centers last August. The visit provided the basis for a report by Mr. Thant on Oct. 2 to the Security Council and the General Assembly, calling for greater international aid to persons "affected by the war." The report did not attribute political responsibilities for their plight.

Mr. Thant noted that there had been new allegations by Arab governments this year that Arab civilians in occupied areas were suffering ill-treatment. He said that this was contributing to the refugee problem in the Middle East. Israel's opponents in the war — Syria, Jordan and particularly the United Arab Republic — have been pressing Mr. Thant to send a new mission. This is part of the Arab diplomatic efforts to keep the Middle East question in the United Nations.

The Israeli note accepting the mission asked that the fact-finding effort include the "situation of the Jewish communities in the Arab countries situated in the area of conflict."

The earlier report by Mr. Gussing contained token references to the situation of Jews in Arab countries. These were based on reports provided by the governments of Syria, Jordan, and the United Arab Republic.

Mr. Thant did not announce immediately who would carry out the new mission. United Nations sources said it was expected to be someone other than Mr. Gussing.

NEW HEALTH STATIONS

HEBRON — Israel's Minister of Social Welfare, Dr. Joseph Burg, visited this West Bank town to inaugurate three new social welfare stations in surrounding villages. He said his Ministry was placing $1.1 million at the disposal of the Military Government for aid to social cases. Dr. Burg was greeted by Sheikh Ali Jaabri, mayor of Hebron, who deplored a March 31 fatal shooting of an Israeli border policeman in the local market place and dissociated himself from the crime.

Report UAR Receives Soviet Ground-To-Ground Missiles

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has for the first time shipped a short-range ground-to-ground missile to the United Arab Republic, authoritative sources reported this week.

The sources described the missile as a modification of the 28-foot Kennel air-to-ground missile, which has been adapted for surface use by the Egyptians. They said it had begun arriving in Egypt in the last few weeks.

The missile, with a range of about 45 miles, can be used in coastal defense against naval targets or as a tactical weapon against such ground targets as troop concentrations, fixed positions or convoys.

The sources said that according to official American estimates the Soviet Union has shipped to the Nasser regime about 20 of the new missiles, known by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as the Samlet-Salesh type of missile.

This is the first time that American officials have accepted as true any reports that Moscow is providing Cairo with surface missiles that can be used offensively.

In months past, Israeli intelligence has reported shipment to Egypt of another Soviet ground missile — the Luna-M — but American officials have discounted these reports.

Washington still asserts it has no hard evidence that Cairo has received Luna-M missiles.

The sources said that despite the delivery of the Kennel missiles and the continuing shipment of jet aircraft, tanks and other equipment, the Egyptian armed forces have not reached a level of armament equal to that of before the war with Israel last June.

According to the latest estimates here, the Egyptian air force now has about 300 jet fighters and fewer than 50 bombers as against 365 fighters and 69 bombers before the war.

In particular, the sources said, the United States estimates that the Egyptians have fewer of the more advanced Soviet jets.

American officials also report that despite an embargo, the French arms manufacturer, Marcel Dassault, is proceeding with development for Israel of a 280-mile ground-to-ground missile known as the MD-620, which can carry a 1,000 to 1,200-pound warhead.

It is understood that Israel has spent more than $100-million on this missile, which was scheduled for delivery early this year. Because of reported difficulties with the guidance system, however, delivery has been delayed until next year.

Anti-Zionist Heckled At Press Conference

PARIS — Rabbi Elmer Bergen, a representative of the anti-Zionist American Council for Judaism, was heckled by young Jews here, when he tried to hold a press conference.

The conference was sponsored by G.R.A.F.F., a left-wing, pro-Arab body headed by Marxist Professor Maxime Rodinson.

This was the first time the American body had made a public appearance in France, where it is unknown outside a limited circle of specialists.

Rabbi Bergen said that, while condemning all violence, he understood the motivation of El Fatah members.

Another pro-Arab meeting was presided over by Louis Terrenoire, a Gaullist former Minister of Information. Films showing the plight of "destitute Arab refugees" were shown, and a Lebanese philosopher and an Egyptian jurist spoke.

Elect Paul Levinger To Third Term As President Of The Miriam Hospital

Paul Levinger was elected to a third term as president of The Miriam Hospital at the 42nd Annual Meeting of the hospital corporation which was held this week.

Norman M. Fain was elected vice-president. Re-elected to office were Edwin S. Soforenko, treasurer, and Councilman Edmund Wexler, secretary. Harry A. Schwartz was named an honorary vice-president in recognition of his many years of service to the hospital.

New members of the board of trustees are Herbert Malin and Mrs. Leonard J. Triedman, who represents the Women's Association.

New members of the corporation include Laurence J. Ackerman of Norwich, Conn.; S. George Ambrosino, Lawrence S. Gates, executive counsel to Governor John H. Chafee; Leonard Y. Goldman, William Kolb, and Councilman Thomas W. Pearlman.

Also, Robert H. Rothman, Dr. Merton P. Stoltz, provost of Brown University; Mrs. Jacob S. Temkin, and Dr. Henry S. M. Uhl and Dr. Julian L. VanLancker of the Brown University Division of Biological and Medical Sciences.

Mr. Levinger paid special tribute to the late Alvin A. Sopkin, honorary vice-president, and the late Jacob S. Temkin, chairman of the hospital's legal committee, both of whom died during the past year.

DAY OF THANKS

LONDON — Chief Rabbi Immanuel Jakobovits of the British Commonwealth has proclaimed Sunday, May 26, as a day of thanksgiving for Jews to mark Israel's victory in the Six-Day War and the re-unification of Jerusalem. The date corresponds to the 28th of Iyar, 5728 on the Hebrew calendar.

Obituaries

MRS. SAMUEL ELMAN

Funeral services for Mrs. Mamie Elman, 72, of 648 East 81st Street, Brooklyn, N.Y., who died Monday, were held Wednesday at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

A Providence resident for most of her life, formerly living on Ontario Street, she had moved to New York nine years ago.

Mrs. Elman was born in Russia, a daughter of the late Sidney and Annie Aaron. She was a member of the Rhode Island Jewish Fraternal Association.

She is survived by her husband, Samuel Elman; a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Light of Brooklyn, and two grandchildren.

HAROLD GOLDENBERG

Funeral services for Harold Goldenberg, 49, of 13 Ogden Street, who died Wednesday after a four-week illness, were held at Temple Beth El on the following day. Burial was in Congregation Sons of Israel and David Cemetery.

The husband of Charlotte (Finkler) Goldenberg, he was born in Providence, the son of Annie (Teplitsky) Goldenberg and the late Jonas Goldenberg. He had been a resident of this city all his life.

He was associated with the Plante and Fontaine Jewelry Manufacturing Company of North Attleboro before retiring five years ago because of illness.

He was a member of Temple

Beth El and the board of the temple brotherhood, and was a past commander of Fineman Trinkel Post 439, Jewish War Veterans, of which he was quartermaster at the time of his death.

During World War II, as a first lieutenant in the Army Air Corps, he flew 61 missions over the Anzio beachhead.

Survivors besides his wife and mother, include two sons, Lewis E. Goldenberg, a student at the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Jonas B. Goldenberg; one daughter, Corinne M. Goldenberg; and a sister, Mrs. Murry M. Halpert, all of Providence.

LOUIS J. MASSEVER

Funeral services for Louis J. Massover, 57, owner of Lou's Greenville Hardware in Greenville, who died Sunday after a two-day illness, were held the following day at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Mr. Massover, who lived at 347 Morris Avenue in Providence, was the husband of Ida (Roy) Massover. The son of Paula (Frye) Massover and the late Benjamin Massover, he had lived in Providence for 25 years.

He was a member of Temple Emanu-El and its Men's Club, Overseas Lodge, AF&AM, the Jewish War Veterans, Greenville Grange, the New England Hardware Dealers Association, the Jewish Home for the Aged and the Jewish Community Center.

He was a veteran of World War II, having served in the Army Air Force as a warrant officer. Survivors besides his wife and mother are a daughter, Karen Beth Massover of Providence, and a sister, Mrs. Edward Consove of Pawtucket.

MRS. MAURICE PHILLIPS

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna H. Phillips, 76, a resident of Hall Manor at 70 Warwick Avenue, Cranston, who died Monday after a three months illness, were held Wednesday at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

The wife of Maurice Phillips, she was a native of New York City. A Providence resident for about 50 years, she had moved to Cranston in 1962. She was born July 5, 1891, a daughter of the late Morris and Mathilda (Eisenberg) Morino.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a son, Carlton D. Phillips of Mill Valley, Calif.; two daughters, Mrs. Samuel Shuster of Cranston, and Mrs. Irving Fishman of Providence; three grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Mrs. Burton M. Greifer

Miss Carol Nancy Speigel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry I. Speigel of Brookline, Mass., became the bride on Sunday, April 7, of Dr. Burton M. Greifer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greifer of Providence. Rabbi Manuel Saltzman officiated at the 2 p.m. ceremony which was held at Longwood Towers, Brookline.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a cage style wedding gown of white ottoman fashioned with a high stand-up collar finished with a bow in back. A wide bias band extended down the front of the A-line skirt which had a chapel length train. A matching Dior bow headdress held a short veil of white illusion tulle. She carried white roses and stephanotis in a Colonial bouquet.

Mrs. Roger LaMora and Mrs. Burton Slatoff, sisters of the bride, served as matrons of honor.

Richard Greifer was best man for his brother. Ushers were Morley Kahn, Roger LaMora, Burton Slatoff and Roy Spiegel.

After a Caribbean cruise, the couple will reside in Warwick.

The bride was graduated from the Massachusetts College of Art with a B.S. degree, and the State College of Boston with an Ed.M.

Dr. Greifer is a graduate of the University of Rhode Island and the University of Maryland Dental School.

Jewish Labor Group Helps With Boycott

NEW YORK — The Jewish Labor Committee reported last week that it was helping to organize a nationwide boycott against California table grapes as part of its campaign in support of efforts by farm workers at the Giumarra Corp. in California to obtain recognition of their union.

A strike against the corporation by the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, AFL-CIO, is now in its eighth month. A spokesman said that the JLC had organized a number of Jewish organizations for a concerted effort to persuade the New York metropolitan wholesaler of table grapes, Victor Joseph Co., to stop buying grapes from Giumarra. The New York firm handles most of the Giumarra grapes sold in this area.

Czech Says Country 'Cannot Act Alone'

BONN — The former Czechoslovakian Ambassador to Israel said in a television interview here that his country could not "act alone" to restore diplomatic relations with Israel that it severed after last June's Arab-Israel war.

Prof. Edward Goldstucker, president of the Writers Union of Czechoslovakia, was asked whether Prague would resume relations with Israel in the near future.

He replied, "Our breaking of diplomatic relations with Israel was the result of an agreement with the socialist states. Any change in the situation can only come about as a result of common action by all the states who were parties to this agreement."

They Lowered The Flag In Virginia

On Thursday evening, April 4, I was in Blacksburg, Va., scheduled to debate Sen. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina in the auditorium of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. I was in the ante-room waiting for the debate to get underway when one of the student sponsors came in and told me that Martin Luther King had been shot in Memphis.

Our debate was underway before the dean interrupted us and told the assembly that Martin Luther King was dead, murdered.

The student body at V.P.I. is all white. But no Negro audience could have been more shocked as the news washed over them. I heard groans of despair. The dean then asked me, if I would say a few words about Dr. King, since I had known him well.

I said, "It is a sad day for the world and a sadder day for Americans. Like Pope John, Dr. Luther King proved to all of us that Christianity has its uses.

"King borrowed an idea from Ghandi and transformed that idea of non-violence into an American and Christian tradition. When Pope John died, however, he did not leave a vacuum behind him. Martin Luther King's death does create a vacuum; an ominous vacuum, which may be filled not with love and brotherhood but hate and terror."

I finished. The students still were too shocked to know whether to applaud the sentiments or not.

As they fidgeted, Sen. Thurmond, the leading segregationist of the South, who once ran for President on the Dixiecrat party ticket, rose and said, "I disagree with Mr. Golden's estimate of Dr. King. King was an agitator, an outside agitator bent on stirring people up, making everyone dissatisfied."

Then we proceeded with the debate. Sen. Thurmond urged that the answer to our problem was law and order and I urged the answer was law and justice. He argued the federal government was too big, that it encroached on the sovereign rights of the state and I argued that there hasn't been a sovereign state since 1789 when the first 13 states ratified the Constitution. I said everyone in South Carolina worries about big government except when they cash their federal checks. With its subsidies, South Carolina is a federal preserve like Yellowstone National Park.

The students applauded our arguments in equal measure. Before I left the next morning, I learned a group of students asked the V.P.I. President if they could lower the flag to half staff for Dr. King.

The president said the flag could be lowered only by federal proclamation. The students thanked him and went out and lowered the flag anyway.

As I was leaving the campus I saw they had also lowered to half staff the stage flag of Virginia.

If they could lower the flag for Martin Luther King in a state which once closed its school rather than integrate them, maybe his life wasn't in vain. Martin Luther King's life was too short, but maybe it made ours fuller.

POTATO KUGEL

5 egg yolks
3 cups grated potatoes
1/2 cup grated onion
2 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
5 egg whites, stiffly beaten
Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored; add grated potatoes. Mix in the grated onion, oil, chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Fold potato mixture into the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into an oiled 1 1/2-quart casserole. Bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) for 40 minutes, or until done.

* * *

ORANGE HONEY CHICKEN

1 4-pound chicken, cut in serving pieces
1/2 orange
2 teaspoons ground ginger
Pinch salt
1/3 cup Oil
1/4 cup honey
Orange slices

Rub chicken pieces with half orange. Sprinkle with teaspoon ground ginger and salt. Combine oil, honey and remaining teaspoon ginger. Arrange chicken in baking dish and brush with honey mixture.

Roast in moderate oven (350 F.) 1 1/2 to 2 hours, basting occasionally with the honey mixture. Garnish with orange slices before serving. Makes 4-6 servings.

CRISPY CHEESE PUFFS

Baking sheet, ungreased
375 oven
10-12 min.
1/4 c Butter or Margarine
2 c Cheddar Cheese, grated
1/2 t Worcestershire Sauce
Pinch Cayenne Pepper
4 c Crushed Cornflakes
3/4 c sifted Flour, all purpose
1/4 t Paprika

In medium bowl, with electric mixer, beat butter with cheese until well blended and smooth - about 5 minutes. Add Worcestershire sauce and pepper.

Combine crushed cornflakes with flour and paprika; add to cheese mixture and beat until thoroughly blended. Drop dough from a teaspoon, filling it generously, about 2" apart on the baking sheet. Bake.

If wafers are desired, flatten each mound with the bottom of a tumbler dipped in flour.

Serve warm or cold.

* * *

CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE

5 pounds corned beef
6 potatoes peeled
6 white turnips
6 carrots
6 onions
1 large cabbage cut in sixths
Simmer corned beef for about four hours, changing water once after first hour of cooking. One half hour before meat is done, add vegetables. When meat is done, remove from pot. Serve meat and vegetables with freshly grated horseradish and mustard. Serves 6 to 8.

BOEUF STROGONOFF

SAUTEED BEEF WITH SAUCE
1 1/2 pounds rib steak, cut in thin slices
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 1/2 teaspoon flour
1 1/2 teaspoon fat
1 1/2 cups beef stock
1 tablespoon tomato paste

Saute meat in deep fat with minced onion and seasonings to taste, until tender. Blend flour and fat over a low flame. When smooth remove from flame. Add beef stock and tomato paste and stir until smooth. Add sauteed meat to sauce and simmer for 20 minutes. Garnish with chopped parsley before serving. Serves 2.

MARMALADE BREAD

Loaf Pan, greased
60 min.

3 c Flour, all purpose
3 t Baking Powder
1 t Salt
3/4 c Orange Juice
1 c Nuts, chopped
1/4 t Baking Soda
1 1/2 c Marmalade
1 Egg
1/4 c liquid Shortening

Sift together dry ingredients. Reserving one quarter cup marmalade, combine balance with remaining ingredients, except nuts. Add to flour mixture and stir until moistened. Fold in nuts. Turn into pan and bake. When done, remove onto cookie sheet and spread top with reserved marmalade. Return to oven for one more minute.

* * *

CRANBERRY-ORANGE BREAD

9x5 pan, greased
350 oven
55 min.

2 c sifted Flour, all purpose

1/2 t Baking Soda

1/2 t Salt

1 c Sugar

3 t Baking Powder

Rind of 1 Orange

3/4 c Orange Juice

1 Egg, slightly beaten

3 T Shortening, melted

2 T Hot Water

1 c Chopped Nuts

1 c Cranberries, raw, cut in halves

Sift together all dry ingredients and stir in the orange rind. In another bowl, combine egg, juice, shortening and water. Fold into dry ingredients. Stir in nuts and cranberries. Turn into pan and bake.

CHEESE BLINTZAS

Sift 1 c. flour, 1/4 tsp. baking powder, 1/2 tsp. salt and 1/2 tsp. sugar. Add 2 beaten eggs and 1 c. water. Spoon 2 tbsp. batter into 7" cast iron frying pan barely covering the bottom. When edges begin to curl, turn over on dish towel to dry.

For the filling, combine 1 pt. dry cottage cheese, 1 tbsp. sugar, pinch of salt and 1 egg. Place 1 tbsp. filling in each blintza and fold in sides. Prepare the day before and refrigerate overnight. Fry in hot oil on both sides. Serve with sour cream and varieties of jams.

POTATO FILLING

1 cup chopped onions
1/3 cup chicken fat
2 cups mashed potatoes
1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon white pepper
Saute onions in fat until golden-brown. Beat in remaining ingredients.

The true expert, holding today's South hand, could take one quick glance at Dummy after the opening lead and spread his hand face up on the table claiming his contract. To use Bridge parlance, the hand was now "cold" with even seven a possibility. The expert would not ever fall to make this hand yet some of our Declarers holding the same hand did not make six. A couple, not in six, were even quite happy to make five - until they saw how few match points they received when the scores came out.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Shaulson were North and South, no one vulnerable, South dealer. The bidding:

1S	Db1	4S	P
6S	P	P	P

After West's takeout Double, North really had a perfect bid, four Spades. This was what we call a two-way bid. His hand was good enough distributionally and had just about enough high cards to enable his partner to have a reasonable play for game. At the same time, should South have a minimum it would serve to keep East out of the auction. The opposition might be able to make a lot of Hearts or Clubs. And should South have a powerhouse as she did, it would show a type of hand that might enable the partnership to even bid and make a slam.

South heard her partner's bid and said to herself "What cards could he have for a bid like that?" Knowing that a two Spade bid after a Double is extremely weak and a three Spade bid does not show a very potent hand, the four Spade should be just about enough for slam. With that and also holding three Aces and a singleton, in no danger of losing the first two tricks, South simply leaped right into the slam.

West's lead was the Heart King, won by Dummy's Ace. The only problem in the hand was centered around the Diamond suit. Would there be two Diamond losers? There indeed would if two finesses were taken and both honors were with West. With the Double that appeared likely but even without that help from the opponents those two cards could still be there but was it necessary to take two finesses? Some Declarers did and either made five at game or with the same eleven tricks, were down one in slam.

Our Declarer saw the solution to that problem immediately. She postponed the Diamond finesse until a more propitious time. Instead, she removed the opposition's Trumps in one round and ruffed all of her Clubs in Dummy and all of Dummy's Hearts in her own hand - after cashing both Aces, of course. She ended in Dummy and now there were only Diamonds and Trumps in both hands, the Hearts and Clubs had been removed. The play described here is called a Strip and End Play, the ruffing away the Hearts and Clubs was the stripping and now came the End Play: A Diamond was now led from Dummy and the 10 inserted. West did have both honors but it made no difference, he won his Jack but had no convenient return. Any suit but a Diamond would provide a sluff and ruff while a Diamond would give Declarer a free finesse for the lead would come right into Declarer's Ace, Queen. If East had had both honors the first finesse to the 10 would have won and a Trump return to Dummy would give an entry to take another finesse. Thus if East had both honors seven was in, whereas with any other holding, six was assured provided the hand was stripped prior to taking any finesses.

Moral: Today's hand is an example of a typical End Play situation. Examine it and learn the technique involved. Then, use it when applicable.

Insurance and the Senior Citizen

If you look up the word "insurance" in the dictionary, you'll find a definition that runs something like this: "a contractual obligation by which the insurer, in return for premiums, undertakes to pay the insured a sum of money in case of loss or damage to his property, or at his or another's death."

Few dictionary definitions are more significant than that one as far as older people are concerned. Most of us have some form of life insurance. Many have a whole series of other forms covering house, car, health, and so on.

It's easy to take the premiums, and the protection, for granted when they've been in force for years. But that's a bad habit when you're headed toward your sixty-fifth birthday. What you should do is give your insurance policies a thorough re-examination in the light of your future plans.

A lot of questions may arise that you never thought of before—questions that need to be answered for your own peace of mind.

You'll probably begin with your life insurance policy. If it gives you coverage for the rest of your life, it may continue to fit your needs, especially if you don't have to pay any more premiums after a certain age.

But if you could use more money and less insurance, then a number of options are probably open to you, including simply cashing in your policy.

On the other hand, if you have term life insurance that stops at a certain age, you may want to convert it to a permanent policy. When this is possible, the premiums often rise sharply. So you have to decide whether the added protection is worth the cost.

Annuities present different problems. One type provides only the buyer with a fixed income. Another type protects both husband and wife. Yet a third type allows your heirs to collect the difference between what you paid and what you received. All these factors have to be balanced out.

Different types of insurance have to be considered on their own merits. The average person can't be expected to know all the ins and outs. But there are written guides to basic information, and a good one appeared in Harvest Years magazine. You can get a copy by sending 50c to Harvest Years, Dept. 9-67, 104 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016.

The Warsaw Ghetto

It seems grimly appropriate that the anniversary of the uprising in the Warsaw Ghetto should occur at the same time that the Polish government has chosen what seems a persecution of the Jews a little similar to that of the Germans more than 25 years ago.

The Polish government insists that it is anti-Zionist rather than anti-Semitic . . . but the results are the same. Many Jewish professional people have lost their positions because their viewpoint does not agree with that of the government. Those Jews still left in Poland have good reason to be frightened of a repetition of what has already happened before.

The anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto when a comparatively small group of Jews fought the armies of Germans and Poles and although most were massacred managed to cause havoc among the enemy comes at a most important time. The Jews in Poland must know that they can count on the Jews throughout the world, and other fair-minded people, to help them before their position becomes too precarious. They must know that if it does worsen, they can count on help from the outside world.

What an individual can do seems very little when faced with a problem caused by a large country over in Europe. But it is amazing what one person can bring about if he really works at it.

The martyrs of the Warsaw Ghetto should be remembered even if there should be no need for their type of heroism ever again. A group of people who are willing to fight for what they believe is right even if they know they cannot win must be remembered.

'We Must Remember' Martyrs Of Warsaw Ghetto Uprising

Every Yom Kippur, during the Mussaf service, we read the martyrology, the "Eileh Ezkoroh," in which we remember the deaths of the ten Rabbis, the ten great sages of Israel, who were executed after the fall of the Bar-Kochba uprising of 135 A.D. As I read the powerful lines of this martyrology, my thoughts go back to a time not so long ago when we witnessed the brutal annihilation of six million of our brethren, and I cannot help but compare their deaths with the deaths of the Ten Sages. "How," I ask myself, "will future generations come to remember the tragic slaughter of more than a third of our people?"

Will our children remember that the brutal events of which we speak did not take place in the Dark Ages, nor in the days of the Roman arena; that they, in fact, took place in the supposedly civilized twentieth century? These brutalities took place at a time when the whole world knew that a tyrant had erected death factories for the sole purpose of eliminating an entire people from the face of the earth.

This era was, perhaps, the darkest period in the history of mankind. Where was there to be found an Emil Zola of the twentieth century who would point his finger to stir the conscience of mankind with the cry, "I accuse!" The entire civilized world shares the guilt of genocide, for it was guilty of almost as great a crime — the crime of silence.

However, the Nazis did not go unopposed. Exactly twenty-five years ago, the remnant of the once large Polish Jewry took up arms against Nazi tyranny; this was the Warsaw Ghetto uprising.

This uprising is outstanding in Jewish history. It was not a battle for victory, as the resistance fighters themselves knew, full well, from the beginning, since the Jews of the Ghetto found themselves surrounded by a mighty military force and in the midst of a sea of Polish anti-Semitism. Indeed, the Poles almost fully collaborated with the Nazis in the plans to annihilate the rest of the Jews of Poland.

Rather, the fighters of the Warsaw Ghetto took up arms for one purpose — to defend the honor of the Jewish people, and in the struggle many Nazis paid with their lives for their attempt at the liquidation of Judaism.

The ideals upon which the Warsaw Ghetto uprising was based are found in three basic concepts which are recurrent in Judaism: 1) "Kiddush Hashem," martyrdom; 2) "Eminah," faith; and 3) "Gevurah," heroism. We must always remember the Warsaw Ghetto martyrs who perished "al kiddush Hashem," in martyrdom, with the "emunah" that a better world will follow their death, and remember we must the "gevurah" with which the fighters of the Ghetto defended the honor of the Jewish people.

Out of the ashes of Auschwitz, Treblinka, Maidanek and other death camps there arose a new spirit of courage, heroism and the determination never again to be homeless, lest another attempt be made at mass annihilation of Jews. This new spirit has given rise to the new hope of the Jewish people, our homeland, the land of Israel.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY The Story Of An Old Shul

By Beryl Segal

Rabbi Jerome S. Gurland of Temple Sinai, read my study of the Sons of Zion Shul in the Rhode Island Jewish Historical Notes and it reminded him of a "Visit to a Shul" which appears below. Sons of Zion and Rabbi Gurland's unnamed Shul are remarkably similar.

On the day when Temple Sinai celebrates its tenth anniversary we wish the temple spiritual growth and prosperity. May it be spared the fate of the Shul which Rabbi Gurland visited.

A Visit To A Shul

The story I shall tell you sounds like a fairy tale — unfortunately a fairy tale in reverse. I heard it one afternoon as I sat in the vestry of a shul and heard about the congregation's history. At one time, I was told, it could boast of having five hundred students in its school. And though not given the pretentious name Adult Education, there was instruction of the highest order for the adult membership as well. Of the fourteen thousand Jews in the state, one thousand were affiliated with it. When the local press sought to present a description of the observance of Yom Kippur to the general public, it was the service at this synagogue that was reported. But the distinction of the congregation went beyond its buildings, its numbers and its program. For the rabbi, the cantor and the principal who served it were men of renown. The rabbi who was recognized as the Chief Rabbi of the State is said to have left his mark not only upon the Jews of the congregation but upon the community at large. Even in those years which were some thirty or forty ago, he was asked to teach in the extension division of the local university. And the cantor in his own right was a man of great distinction described by one historian as "a scholar of eminence . . . who brought color and dignity to his position." Along with the principal he helped the school to attain a "high level of excellence."

The beauty of the tale, however, now comes to an end. Presently the former glory is evident only in the physical aspects of the building which suggest it must have been occupied by a sizeable congregation. The accomplishments of the congregation are now known only from the official records and the historian's writings. Its membership having been reduced to some dozen families, its activities limited to religious services and its building soon to be acquired by the state as part of the urban re-development plan, the name of the congregation will henceforth probably exist only on a trust fund containing the remainder of its assets. In the words of David, we not only lament, but ask: "how have the mighty fallen?" How did this fairy tale in reverse take place? How did a congregation established to nurture the spirit end its days with only the material?

The answer came to me as a result of a conversation with one of its leaders. It may even be an answer which has never been recorded and may never reach the historian's eyes and ears. It is an answer which may one day be buried along with the congregation's last survivors. Yet for me, at least, there is an answer. It is an answer not only to explain the nature of the death of that congregation but to warn us lest we too write a fairy tale in reverse. It is of this answer and this warning that I shall now speak.

How and why did the mighty fall? To begin with, I was told that as time passed not only was the governing body of the congregation limited to a handful of elders but even the general membership was restricted. Thus some one hundred young men of the Men's Club were refused admission to the congregation as bona fide members though the funds they raised were considerable and their activities vigorous. The fear of the elders was the rise to power of the young. Thus discouraged, the young left and affiliated elsewhere. In the other congregations their minds were welcome as well as their money. There they could govern as well as give. The inability to transmit authority and leadership willingly from one generation or even from one group to another leads to the destruction not of individuals but of a congregation, of any congregation — that one and this one too!

Then I was told of a conflict between the lay and rabbinical leadership. After all kinds of indirect pressures failed to wrest the pulpit from the hands of the rabbi, it was decided to literally "starve him out." Thus for six months he received no salary. Finally at the instigation of some of the rabbi's supporters a meeting was called to ascertain the consensus of the membership. So determined were the rabbi's opponents to rid the congregation of his leadership that they "stacked" the meeting to guarantee that the vote would favor them and remove him. Upon checking the congregation's roster, it was discovered many of those present were not even members in good standing. But so determined were they to get in their "lick" against the rabbi, that they refused to leave the meeting when requested. Members of the local police had to remove them bodily. Needless to say, the rabbi was not destroyed either physically or financially. He was given his salary and ultimately found an agreeable pulpit. The congregation, however, had been dealt a serious if not irreparable blow. Its internal and already dwindling ranks were split, its external image severely tarnished. Stubborn conflict and shameful techniques when employed by a congregation's leadership is tantamount to congregational suicide — wherever that congregation may be.

Now to that which causes a congregation dedicated to glorify the intangibles to end its days with only the tangible — money. For the desire to balance the books at any expense left that congregation financially rich but spiritually poor. A changing neighborhood which should have prompted a change in location was undoubtedly rejected because of the indebtedness it would involve. And at the door step of this resistance to movement and to change in deference to an obsession with finances one can place the blame for the comparative death of this congregation's philosophy of Judaism in the community at large. For other congregations representing other philosophies of Judaism moved into the newer areas thus leaving little room for the financially solvent but spiritually bankrupt congregation to influence a younger generation. And many of those who from time to time made their way to this now dying congregation generally did so not of conviction but only as a result of a pledge extracted from them by an aged dying parent. A congregation obsessed with budget and lacking boldness, strong in dollars but weak in daring, guided by the creditor and indifferent to the creator, concerned with cash but never demonstrating courage will die despite its wealth.

These are the reasons, I believe, why the mighty among men, among nations and even among congregations fall. With these thoughts before us let us direct our thinking and govern our actions so that those who visit Temple Sinai in all the years to come will be prompted to repeat the Psalmists words: "I give. . . thanks in the midst of a great congregation."

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Your Chances Of A Tax Audit

Q. Now that you've filed your 1967 Federal income tax return, what are the chances that the Internal Revenue Service's mechanical brains will pick up even your slightest error?

A. Not as great as you have been led to think.

In the past couple of weeks, a flurry of scare stories have appeared in newspapers and magazines reporting that the IRS's computers are relentlessly whirling 24 hours a day, seven days a week and giving the impression that the computers will select millions of our just-filed returns for questioning — among them, of course, yours. The implication is that tons of returns are being automatically fed into the giant system and that never before has an audit of your return been so likely.

Well. This being the season for stories such as this, I've done my own investigating. And THE FACTS are quite different from what these stories seem to suggest.

Hello Again!

Sports News By Warren Walden

ALL EXCITED — "Such stick-handling! I've never seen anything like it!" So said Allan Peterson who is public relations man for Riverdale Roller Rink. He was referring to a Portuguese Roller Hockey team that recently played at Warren Roller Rink. Ah — shades of the old roller polo games at Infantry Hall. "I'll let you know when they're going to play again," said "Pete." And I say, "When he does, I'll let you know."

GREATEST OF THE GREAT — That exclamation, "Such stick handling!" brought the name "Jigger Higgins" to my mind. Jigger was the most elusive, talented, wriggling, squirming artful dodger the great old game of Roller Polo ever had. I have remarked before and repeat that I think Jigger in his best days could have played the whole R.I. Reds hockey team alone. Rash statement? Not at all, especially if you had seen Mr. Higgins work his way up and down a polo rink as an entire team tried to get the ball off his polo stick. It appeared to be glued there. And so I say that of all the great athletes, Jigger Higgins mastered his particular game better than any of the others. When I find the listing of the next roller hockey game, I'm also going to find Jigger and ask him if he'd like to go along and see it. Who can tell? Maybe the great old roller skating game will again gain the prominence it once enjoyed. And maybe Jigger can help with a demonstration of a few of his old tricks on the rollers.

SAY IT ISN'T SO — The Rhode Island Amateur Baseball League is preparing to open its season on May 26th at McCoy Stadium. It's a circuit that stems from the Tim O'Neil Providence Amateur League, an institution in Rhode Island for sixty-seven years. Will the name of the former "Sandlot King" still be associated with the off-shoot from the former Providence Amateur League? There's a new board of governors and so far they haven't definitely connected Tim's name with their league. They should. Tim devoted a lifetime in the interest of promoting amateur baseball and building good citizens through the game at the same time. Some of his teachings could carry on through his name. He's as much a part of amateur baseball and the league as is Col. Abner Doubleday of the game.

EIGHT, MAYBE NINE — There are eight teams ready to play in the Rhode Island Amateur League and each will appear at least once a week under lights at McCoy Stadium. Regular weekly league games will be played on Saturday afternoons as in the past. One team, representing Westerly, will play its home games on Friday nights at McCoy Stadium instead of on Saturdays. Teams in the League are Cranston Oil, McGarry's, Emma's Heating, Warwick Barons, Lincoln Merchants, Paul Arpin Van Lines, Westerly and Harris Auto. Another is expected to represent Woonsocket.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS — Here are the names of the Board of Governors for the Rhode Island Amateur Baseball League: Joseph Dragon, Chet Nichols, Wilfred "Lefty" LeFebvre, Ed Hopkinson, Bill Renaud, Joe Scungio, Mike Keenan, Pete Johnson, Bob Butler, John O'Gorman, Larry Gallogly, Ivano Giutini and Warren Walden. (Who's he?)

AHEAD OF TIME — Frank Koslov says "Hockey Magazine" was way out front in recognizing Dave Creighton, Buster Clegg and the R. I. Reds before they made their gallant Playoff fight . . . Bob Arrighy, former pro baseballer, is manager of the Lincoln team in the R. I. Amateur League . . . A poll of 500 Major-Leaguers on pennant choices is listed in May SPORT magazine. They pick the St. Louis Cardinals and Minnesota

Twins . . . SPORT also has an interesting yarn by Bill Veeck on re-alignment of American and National League cities in the interest of rivalries. It is calculated to capitalize on natural rivalries, to facilitate intraleague play, reduce travel expenses and so forth. . . . President "Mulligan" of the Bijou Chowder and Marching Club that meets mornings in the Waldorf, has switched to the Tigers as his favorite in the American League race. A fellow member questioned the switch to which "Mulligan" replied, "When I picked the Red Sox, I was counting on Tony C. and Lonborg." And so were others, Mr. President.

"It's serving, striving through strain and stress; It's doing your noblest - that's success! CARRY ON!

Polish Weekly Defends Its Policies In Recent Purges Against Critics

WARSAW — Polityka, a weekly newspaper closely associated with Wladyslaw Gomulka, Communist party leader, defended itself against critics who have included Maj. Gen. Mieczyslaw Moczar, the Interior Minister.

The weekly's editorial board made its stand a day after Jozef Kepa, the party secretary in Warsaw and an associate of Mr. Gomulka, warned that the current purge was getting out of hand.

The newspaper's reply marked the first time that any publication under attack had chosen to defend itself in the seven weeks since the political crisis began.

Meanwhile, Mr. Gomulka held talks with Marshal Ivan Jakubovsky, the Soviet Commander of the Warsaw military pact forces. Marshal Jakubovsky arrived here to inspect the Polish armed forces, which have undergone two major command reshuffles since the political crisis began six weeks ago.

The reply by Polityka was addressed to Wieslaw Mylek, who wrote in Trybuna Ludu, the party newspaper, that Polityka had exaggerated the importance of the managerial elite and underplayed the importance of the working class.

Although General Moczar's name was not mentioned. The weekly's reply touched on his charge last week that Polityka had made light of Polish heroism and patriotism during World War I.

The reply said that such charges overlooked articles that Polityka had published and books to which it had awarded prizes.

One of the prize-winning books was "The Partisans of the Kielce Region." General Moczar commanded a resistance group in

Rabbi Shacter Protests Warsaw Govt. Action

NEW YORK — The Chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, Rabbi Herschel Shacter, said last week that the Jewish community of Poland was too small to have caused the wave of unrest gripping that country.

In a news conference the rabbi said that he would lead a delegation to Washington to express concern to the Polish Ambassador over the Warsaw Government's attack on what it has termed the Zionist clique.

The American Jewish Committee reported, meanwhile, that its officials had met with a Polish Embassy staff member in Washington to raise questions and "elicit assurances" from the Polish Government that it will suppress any and all public manifestations of anti-Semitism.

Plan Military Display On Independence Day

JERUSALEM — Brand new weapons of an as yet undisclosed nature and weapons captured from the Arabs during the Six-Day war, topped off by a Russian-type SA-2 missile taken intact in the Sinai Desert, will highlight Israel's Independence Day parade here on May 2.

The parade, the largest in the country's 20 years of independence, will begin in East Jerusalem and end in West Jerusalem.

According to senior officers at military headquarters, 3,000 infantrymen and armored columns will participate in the parade while the Air Force will stage fly-overs, for the first time in the skies over Jerusalem.

An official reviewing stand will be set up on what was formerly known as "ammunition hill" near Shoafat in Northeast Jerusalem. Thirty-thousand seats will be erected for tourists and 12,000 will be reserved for the families of fallen soldiers.

the Kielce region in south-central Poland during the Nazi occupation.

The weekly charged that Mr. Myslek had purposely quoted small pieces from its articles to confirm his "preconceived charges and polemical remarks."

Polityka acknowledged that the intelligentsia constituted a good part of its readers, but denied Mr. Myslek's charges that it favored a "new class" of elite-minded managers and technocrats.

The weekly also contested the recent thesis that has praised the egalitarian qualities of the working class in terms reminiscent of the Stalinist period.

"The concept of primitive egalitarianism," the weekly said, "seems to us utopian in practical terms, which is what the history of Socialism in many countries teaches us."

The weekly asked if Mr. Myslek wanted "us to found the future of old technology, on old techniques and outdated forms of administration rather than new ideas, economic incentives and improvement in planning that the party had tried to apply for the past 12 years?"

It argued that real equality meant nothing more or less than providing citizens with equal opportunity for developing their talents, not the kind of enforced equality that deadens initiative.

Meanwhile, the current issue of Kultura, another weekly, called for purges in such literary and social sciences periodicals as Kultura I, Spoleczenstwo, Pamietnik Literacki and Studia Filozoficzne.

The weekly noted that the editor of Kultura I Spoleczenstwo was Prof. Stefan Zollewski, a Jew who was recently dismissed as secretary of the social sciences department of the Academy of Sciences.

"I think that the time has come to entrust Kultura I Spoleczenstwo once again to someone competent and to end once and for all this singular episode of the history of liberalism in People's Poland," the editorial writer of Kultura said.

On last Friday, diplomats from the United States Embassy laid a wreath on the monument honoring the uprising by ghetto Jews against the Nazis 25 years ago. A streamer on the wreath said: "To honor those whose causes endure — freedom and human dignity."

The official ceremony took place last Thursday under the auspices of the Polish Veterans' organization headed by General Moczar. Although United States spokesmen declined comment, informed sources suggested that the embassy had sought to dissociate itself from any ceremony organized by General Moczar's group.

Center President Answers Critics Of JCC Campaign Champagne Ball

Criticism of the propriety and expense of holding a Champagne Ball as a windup for the New Building Campaign of the Jewish Community Center was rebutted by Sidney Meyer, Center president, in a recent communication to Center members:

"I have been questioned by several interested Center members as to the need - or even the propriety - of having a 'Champagne Ball' to wind up our campaign for a new Jewish Community Center.

"Let me first say that we who have directed this campaign are very proud to advise the community that all our expenses, including those for the Ball and for professional fund raising assistance, will total about 3% of the amount raised. This 3% figure is far less than the United Fund or General Jewish Committee spend on their campaign. Many individual capital fund drives spend as much as 20% for expenses.

"Secondly, many people have increased their pledges from $100 and $200 to $500 just to become eligible to attend the Ball. This will go a long way toward covering the very reasonable expenses of the affair.

"Most important, however, is the fact that the Ball gives us an opportunity to thank publicly all our volunteer workers who helped us lift our drive over the $1,500,000 mark. Every worker who brought in $500 or more will be invited to attend the Ball, even though his personal pledge did not reach that amount. We are very proud of these people and want the community to know it..."

Sherman To Retire From Newport Office

William A. Sherman, vice-president in charge of Industrial National Bank's District 5 branches, Bellevue and Thames Street in Newport, and the offices at Jamestown and Middletown, will retire on June 1 of this year. He will be on vacation from May 2 until the retirement date.

At the same time the bank has announced the appointment of Keith C. Humphreys as assistant manager in charge of the Bellevue office.

In addition to these changes, the bank reported a revision of its branch structure, to take effect on May 1. Districts 4 and 5 will be combined into a new District 4, comprising ten offices. Edward P. Gosling, vice-president, will head the enlarged district, assisted by Thomas J. Murphy, district manager.

General Jewish Committee To Launch Fund-Raising Campaign Immediately

Because of the existing emergency in Israel, the General Jewish Committee has decided to launch its annual campaign immediately.

In connection with this decision, a meeting of Initial Gifts workers for the 23rd annual campaign of the GJC has been called to take place at the home of general campaign chairman Robert Riesman of 140 Freeman Parkway, on Wednesday, May 1, at 8 p.m.

Joe Thaler, Initial Gifts chairman, said the purpose of this meeting is to hear reports on the recent UJA Study Mission to Israel by 37 leaders of the Greater Providence Jewish community, to discuss the urgency of the 1968 campaign, and to complete plans for the fund-raising drive. There will be no solicitation of funds at this meeting.

Mr. Thaler pointed out that while all phases of the campaign are important, the Initial Gifts division plays a major role in the overall success of the annual drive. The Initial Gifts phase of the campaign will be concentrated between May 1 and 22.

He also announced that his associate chairmen are Milton M. Dubinsky, Albert I. Gordon, Paul Leviten, Martin Lifland, and Edwin Soforenko.

The annual fund-raising drive of the GJC is customarily held in the fall but was moved ahead to the spring last year to help Israel meet the emergency created by the war. The campaign has again been moved up and will start early in May.

Open School To Train Mohelim At Mount Sinai Hospital In N.Y.

NEW YORK — A school for training practitioners of ritual circumcision opened at Mount Sinai Hospital with a class of 10 rabbinical students. Sponsors called it the first such formal school in the 4,000 year-old history of the Jews. Traditionally, the training of practitioners — called Mohelim in Hebrew — has been achieved through an apprenticeship system.

The new Brith Milah School will offer a two-year course of instruction and a one-year internship, according to a joint announcement of the Brith Milah president of the Brith Milah Board of New York, and Dr. Martin R. Steinberg, director of the hospital. Graduates will receive certificates from the board.

Organized in 1914, the board has certified to date more than 700 practitioners. The director of the new program, Rabbi Eugene J. Cohen, reported that the formal curriculum would include three-hour classes twice a week, in addition to operating-room observation.

Classes in anatomy, physiology, the pathology of healing, blood circulation, asepsis, microbiology and the techniques of circumcision and postoperative care will be taught by two Mount Sinai doctors, two rabbis and three mohelim.

FOR HALL OF FAME

An educator who served for 30 years as president of Brown University and a businessman who developed a two-by-four shop with packing-box counters into one of New England's largest retail establishments will be inducted into the Rhode Island Heritage Hall of Fame at the annual awards dinner which will be held at the Hummocks Restaurant on Thursday, May 7.

The Hall of Fame selection committee has announced that the late Dr. William Herbert Perry Faunce, president of Brown from 1899 to 1929, and the late Colonel Joseph Samuels, founder and president of the Outlet Company and one of the state's leading philanthropists, have been named for their "contributions to the illustrious heritage of the State of Rhode Island."

Six living persons will also be inducted into the Hall of Fame on May 7.

LAW GROUP TO MEET

Professor Robert E. Keeton, Professor of Law at the Harvard Law School, will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Harvard Law School Association of Rhode Island which will be held on Tuesday, May 7, at the University Club at 219 Benefit Street. Cocktails will be served at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

Walter Adler is president of the Harvard Law School Association of Rhode Island. Mr. Adler will attend the annual meeting of the National Council of the Harvard Law School Association, of which he is a vice-president, in Cambridge, Mass., on Saturday, April 27. William H. Edwards, chairman of Region I (New England) will also attend.

REFORM JEWISH APPEAL

Members of the committee appointed by Albert I. Gordon, chairman of the Reform Jewish Appeal drive at Temple Beth El include co-chairmen Walter Adler, Bertram L. Bernhardt, William Bojar, Irving J. Fain, Stanley Grossman, Ernest Nathan, Dr. Samuel Pritzker, Benjamin F. Ruttenberg and Melvin L. Zurier.

Committeemen include Abraham Adelman, Harold P. Braunstein, Raymond G. Franks, Murry M. Halpert, Nathan Newburger, Harold S. Roberts, Dr. Edward Spindell and Alan E. Symonds.

Rabbi Sanford Seltzer, regional director of New England Council UAH, will open the drive on Monday, April 29, when he speaks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon on 21 Glen Drive.

Women's Division To Review Plans For GJC Campaign

Plans for the Women's Division phase of the 1968 General Jewish Committee campaign which starts next month will be discussed and reviewed at a brunch of chairmen, co-chairmen, officers and past chairmen on Thursday, May 2, at 11:30 a.m. at the home of Mrs. David Horvitz of 9 Dorset Road, Pawtucket. The meeting was called by Mrs. Max Alperin, Women's Division campaign chairman.

Mrs. Alperin announced that the division chairmen who will take part in the business session of the meeting are Mesdames Merrill L. Hassenfeld, Vanguard Division; Lawrence A. Paley, Pace Setters; Albert I. Gordon and Martin Lifland, Initial Gifts; Irving Goldfarb, Vital Gifts; Gerald C. Finkelman, Life Savers, and Manfred Weil, Telethon. Also attending will be the co-chairmen of the various divisions and past chairmen of previous campaigns.

Mrs. Alperin also announced that a Worker's Conference will be held on Tuesday, May 7, at Temple Emanu-El at 10:30 a.m. at which the workers in the various divisions will be briefed on the 1968 campaign. A coffee hour will precede the meeting. Mrs. Albert I. Gordon is chairman, and she will be assisted by co-chairmen, Mrs. Daniel Jacobs, Mrs. Martin Lifland, Mrs. Jacob Stone and Mrs. Joe Thaler.

ARREST NAZI SUSPECT

COLOGNE — The head of the homicide squad of the general crime investigations bureau here has been arrested on suspicion of having ordered the shooting of 18 Jewish civilians when he was head of an Einsatzkommando group during the war. The suspect is Theodor Lippe, 58, who holds the rank of Chief Police Commissioner. He is considered one of Germany's leading murder investigators.

Emergency Program Introduced To Hasten Teaching Of Chaplains

NEW YORK — In an effort to meet a shortage of Jewish chaplains in the armed forces, the Jewish Theological Seminary of America has announced an emergency program that will drastically reduce the time of preparation.

Dr. Louis Finkelstein, chancellor of the seminary, said the new program, which is similar to one used in World War II, would reduce the time of preparation from a minimum of 48 months to 27 months.

He made the announcement at a news conference at the Seminary campus. The school, which represents Conservative Judaism, will open on July 1 and graduate its first class in 1970.

Dr. Finkelstein said that the armed services required 87 Conservative chaplains and only 66 were now on duty. He said the school would attempt to fill the gap. There are now four Conservative chaplains in Vietnam, he noted.

Dr. Finkelstein said he felt the shortage was general.

"The problem of the Jewish chaplaincy is part of the total problem of a religious community suffering from an acute shortage of spiritual and educational leaders," he said.

"Were there enough men entering the rabbinate to serve all the needs of our people, the army, navy and air force chaplaincy requirements would undoubtedly be filled. But this is not the reality of the situation.

"If young men in the armed forces are to be served by Jewish chaplains it was clear to us that someone had to take the responsibility for providing these chaplains."

In a telephone interview, Col. John F. Graf, chief of the personnel division of the Air Force in Washington, said there was not a general shortage, "but we always seem to need more Jewish and Catholic chaplains."

However, Capt. George A. Wright, Third Naval District Chaplain, who attended the conference, said there was a need of chaplains of all denominations.

Rabbis' Group Demands Dissociation From Views

NEW YORK — Dissociation of the Jewish Advisory Board of Columbia University from a statement by Rabbi A. Bruce Goldman that he could accept "meaningful" premarital sex relations between students was demanded last week by the Rabbinical Alliance of America, an Orthodox rabbinic body.

Rabbi Goldman is Jewish advisor to the student body at Columbia. The rabbinic organization, in a letter to the board, demanded that it ask Rabbi Goldman, "to desist from such preachments to our college students." The letter said of Dr. Goldman's assertion that it contravened "the teachings of Judaism" and tended to "encourage promiscuity and free love."

Requisitions 29 Acres At Wailing Wall To Restore Jewish Quarter Of Jerusalem

TEL AVIV — Israel requisitioned an area of about 29 acres last week near the Wailing Wall to restore the ancient Jewish Quarter of the Old City in Jerusalem. Jordan destroyed much of the quarter after its seizure during the 1948 war.

The area is mostly slum. The abodes of more than 600 Arab families in the narrow cobbled alleys may be bulldozed. Officials said those who had to move would receive suitable housing elsewhere. For the present no one is required to move.

The quarter was a Jewish center from the Middle Ages until 1948. It contained dozens of synagogues and religious study centers, but nearly all were destroyed during Jordanian rule.

Restoration of some synagogues and educational institutions is to be given priority in plans for the quarter. Improvements in the facilities for pilgrims at the Wailing Wall also are planned.

Part of the requisitioned land was cleared last year to provide space opposite the Wailing Wall for the flood of pilgrims who streamed to the shrine after the Old City was taken by the Israelis in the war last June.

Officials said all Arabs whose homes were demolished last year had received other housing.

Excluded from the requisition order were Moslem and Christian religious properties. Two mosques, some churches and a Moslem library will remain in the restored Jewish Quarter.

Last year the Government served notice of its intention by issuing an order freezing all transactions or construction in the quarter.

In a separate move, the Government also requisitioned a Jewish village captured by the Arabs during the 1948 war and used by the Jordanians as a military camp. This measure will not displace any Arabs, since there were no civilian inhabitants in the place.

This area covers some 190 acres north of Jerusalem, but within the city's municipal area.

Officials said only 44 acres was owned by Arabs.

The site was an Israeli workers' settlement, Neve Yaakov, which was overrun by the Arabs in May, 1948.

Government sources said the Israeli army could have continued using the base without a requisition order and that the order had been issued only to clear legal obstacles to the payment of compensation to the owners of the property.

Palestinian Arabs Return From Egypt

TEL AVIV — A total of 225 Palestinian Arabs stranded in Egypt when the June war broke out returned to their homes in occupied Sinai and the Gaza Strip while at the same time 700 Egyptian civilians trapped during the war were returned to Egypt proper.

The exchange was arranged by Israel under auspices of the International Red Cross. The cross-over took place at Kantara in the Sinai.

The Lyons Den

Mrs. Dewi Sukarno, the Japanese wife of Indonesia's ex-leader, said she saw "Fiddler on the Roof" this week, and cried and laughed so much that her false eye-lashes fell off...Yevtushenko, the Soviet poet, saw "Fiddler on the Roof" the same night. He was recognized on his way in, and invited to go backstage later. "Only if I like the show," he said. He went backstage.

Mike Nichols, who's won an Oscar for "The Graduate" and probably will win a Tony for "Plaza Suite," may do a change-of-pace and direct "Hamlet" at Lincoln Center...David Amram, the composer, has been signed by Edgar Lansbury to do the score for the film, "The Subject Was Roses"...Don Loper, the designer, says his new look for men and women stresses "sanity in fashion." He's been commissioned to design modern habits for nuns in Los Angeles.

Edward Bennett Williams will defend two men, under death sentence in Louisiana and New Jersey, who've been in the death house longer than Caryl Chessman was...Williams, incidentally, brought Joe DiMaggio to meet his 7-year-old son Ned - who asked the baseball immortal a question nobody'd ever asked: "How many outs did you make?" DiMaggio estimated "6,000."

Esquire's "special network" for the Democratic National Convention will have Jean Genet covering Kennedy, Georges Ionesco covering Humphrey, William Burroughs assigned to McCarthy and Terry Sothern as "anchor man"...A group of famed music artists who've used the same tax expert are all in tax trouble. So is their expert...Ambassador Douglas MacArthur gave a supper party in Vienna for Leonard Bernstein after his "Rosenkavalier" drew 46 curtain calls.

Franco Corelli and Mirella Freni, who'll sing "Romeo and Juliet" with the Met Opera on tour this spring, had dinner at the Quo Vadis. Corelli refused to let Freni order a rich dessert: "Remember, I have to carry you in my arms to your bed, clear across the stage, for eight performances - and sing a high note at the same time..."

When John Ball submitted his novel to Harper & Row, the title was "Blunt Instrument." The publisher's "suspense editor," Joan Kahn, changed the title to "In the Heat of the Night"...Jackel Gleason will miss the GOP convention in Miami. After "Skiddoo" he'll do a Bob Hope movie that will keep him in Hollywood until Sept. 6.

Jack Benny makes light of his 74 years, at his current Empire Room engagement. He concedes that he may not be as passionate now as he was in his younger days: "But occasionally I look at the African section of the National Geographic magazine."

Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the American Symphony Orchestra, will be honored by the City of N.Y., May 15 - complete with medal and the John Lindsays' fete at Grace Mansion...Bob Merrill, co-author of the "Funny Girl" score, will try Hollywood production - with three films for Warners/7 Arts...The Carter Burdens of Bobby Kennedy's staff were at "Eugene," the McCarthy club, the other night...At the Royal Box Edie Adams described a McCarthy doll: "You wind it up and Bobby Kennedy starts running."

Next month, "The Fantasticks" will celebrate its eighth anniversary. Producer Lore Noto will celebrate by having the backstage quarters renovated: the only girl in the cast of eight, who's been sharing one dressing room with the men, at last will have a screened-off room for herself.

Philip Burton is casting a novel version of "Romeo and Juliet": the Capulets will be Negro and the Montagues white...The Waldorf has special Russian menus and Russian-speaking personnel for the Russian stars of "War and Peace"...The "hostility" dart boards in a 46th St. shop still offer Nixon, Ho Chi Minh and De Gaulle at $4 each. But the dart board with LBJ's photo as target has been marked down to $3.25.

Edna Ferber was one of the world's most successful authors. "I've been kept busy since I was 17," she told me recently, "and I've reached the stage where I enjoy a few silk pillows." She had a remarkable sales record: Only one of her countless articles was ever rejected. It was her essay denouncing the late Sen. Joe McCarthy at the peak of his career.

She enjoyed her winter holidays at a swank Western spa, where each guest is ministered to by a large staff: "I enjoy it because they treat me as if I were a feeble-minded princess." She said of Moss Hart and his elegant attire: "A Bronx Byron, monogrammed in the most improbable places." George S. Kaufman, with whom she wrote "Stage Door," "Dinner at Eight" and "Royal Family," said it always took them two years to collaborate on a play.

"Edna works from 9 a.m. to 3:10. I work from 3 to 9 p.m. It gives us 10 minutes a day together."

Once, at the Colony, she saw her agent, I.P. Lazar, order chicken hash. She told me: "I find it strangely decadent to order hash in the most expensive restaurant. We've come full cycle, in a way. On my first day in N.Y., at the Ritz, I saw a man order one apple..." (Distributed 1968 by Publishers-Hall Syndicate) (All Rights Reserved)

TO SERVE AS CHAIRMAN: Archie Chaset of Temple Emanu-El will serve with Louis Stone of Tifereth Israel Synagogue of New Bedford, Mass., as chairman of the Conference for Synagogue Leaders to be held by the New England Region of the United Synagogue of America on Sunday, May 5, at Temple Emanu-El. Joseph Sargon of Temple Beth Zion in Brookline, Mass., is general chairman. The conference will begin at 10 a.m.

The theme of the conference will be on standards for synagogue practice, particularly in programming, wedding and Bar Mitzvah, funeral and fund-raising.

Survivor Of Grodno Testifies At Trial

BONN — A survivor of the wartime liquidation of the Grodno ghetto in occupied Poland, who is now a resident of New York, testified in a trial in Cologne of two former Nazi participants in the destruction of the ghetto.

Max Dolub told the court that he had watched from a hiding place the activities of the Nazi execution squad which killed 20 Jews in March, 1943, but that he could not say whether Kurt Wiese and Heinz Errelis, the defendants, had taken part in the shootings.

Your Money's Worth

paperwork," says the Research Institute of America in a report privately circulated to its subscribers. The Research Institute adds:

"The computer system itself is in trouble. Because the demand for computer usage far exceeds the present IRS computer capability, individual returns with underpayments and overpayments of tax get processing priority. So-called "full-paid" individual returns received by the IRS in 1967 may not get properly entered in the IRS computer set up until 1969." (Italics mine.)

ITEM: The heart of the problem is that an overwhelming 105,000,000 returns were received and 49,000,000 refunds were made last year — a volume of paper the IRS didn't anticipate until 1970. This reflects the spectacular expansion of business and the upgrading of millions of workers to taxpaying levels.

ITEM: On top of this, the IRS has been receiving tens of millions of information returns on dividends and interest — and also a soaring number of complex individual returns.

ITEM: Then on top of all this in turn, the IRS computers have been uncovering more errors than ever before and thus its employees have been doing more corresponding with taxpayers than ever before.

This hardly adds up to the publicized picture of an efficient mechanical brain quickly ferreting out your new return and pouncing on your "little errors." Hardly. In fact, the IRS itself has calculated that your chances of an audit are as follows:

If you're filing as an individual, about one in 25;

If you're filing as a corporation, about one in eight;

If you're filing an estate tax return, about one in four and a gift tax return, about one in 14.

But, cautions Leon Gold, chief tax expert of the Research Institute, your odds of an audit are much greater if your adjusted gross income is $25,000 or more; if you are in a trade or profession in which payment in cash is widespread practice; if you claim any deductions which appear abnormally big against average deductions for your income bracket; if you have substantial unreimbursed entertainment expenses. And expect your arithmetic to be checked.

Clincher: So scarce has IRS manpower become that the service has "temporarily suspended" its Taxpayer Compliance Measurement Program. These TCMP audits were exhaustive, time-consuming examinations of a small cross-section of returns designed to help the Treasury improve its audit-collection procedures.

DRAPERY SERVICE?

ad responders oftentimes phone and ask... what precisely do you do? i install drapery rodding. it makes no difference whether on wall or ceiling, in plaster, cement, tile, brick, aluminum or steel. and once up it stays up.

there are many in the decorator trade who say i do this better than anyone else in the area. perhaps i do. the difference, i think, is that i really care, try my hardest and my standards are very high.

if this clarifies matters for you and you think i can be of service... call. if you are still not sure... call anyway. perhaps i can or know someone else that might.

In Danger Of Destruction

Jordan Says Israel's Reprisal Shellings Threaten Season's Crops East Of River

AMMAN, Jordan — The authorities here report that what remains of Jordanian agriculture since the Israeli occupation of the west bank of the Jordan River last June is in danger of destruction by Israeli "reprisals."

The crucial area is the Jordan valley east of the river, a large part of which is irrigated by water from the Yarmuk River by means of the East Gore Canal, built with United States funds.

The canal has been cut twice by Israeli artillery fire and is no longer carrying water because the Jordanian Army has advised the National Resources Authority that for the time being the area is too dangerous for repairs to be undertaken.

Farmers in the irrigated area face not only the loss of this season's crop, worth about $12-million, but also the permanent loss of citrus and banana trees, which can survive only about three weeks without irrigation. The value of the threatened trees, according to the National Resources Authority, is about $13-million.

The Jordanian authorities regard the damage to the canal as Israeli counter sabotage in reprisal for raids by Arab guerrilla commandos from the east bank into Israeli-held territory. In support of this belief, they say that major damage to the canal was done twice in the same place by artillery apparently zeroed in on an important stretch near the canal source.

The canal irrigates about 300,000 acres in the valley, a fourth of which is planted in citrus and bananas, and the rest in tomatoes and other annual crops. The harvest from the area represents, since the loss of the west bank, about 19 per cent of Jordan's agricultural earnings.

In addition to the area irrigated by the canal, 22,000 acres in the valley east of the river get water from other sources — wells, direct pumping from the river, and small tributaries of the Jordan.

These farms are in serious jeopardy as well, according to the Jordanian authorities, because farm laborers are afraid to work in the area under threat of Israeli fire. Pumping from the river has also become too dangerous, the Jordanians report, and therefore crops near the river bank that depended directly on the Jordan for irrigation have been abandoned.

In other areas, laborers are brought in daily by truck from the Jordan plateau because they no longer dare live in the valley. But their wages have doubled and trebled, and frequently the army warns them to stay out of the threatened areas.

The authorities say they cannot estimate what the losses may be in the 22,000 acres, from which the annual crop value is about $7-million. But they say that nearly a third of the current production is menaced by Israeli attacks — this in addition to the 37 per cent of the former output that disappeared when the Israelis occupied the west bank.

CITES ARAB 'INCURSIONS' UNITED NATION, N.Y.

Israel notified the Security Council that she regards Arab armed incursions and sabotage raids against her as a rejection of cease-fire obligations by Syria, the United Arab Republic, Iraq, Algeria and Jordan.

In a letter delivered to Yakov A. Malk, the President of the Security Council this month, and chief delegate of the Soviet Union, Yosef Tekoah, the Israeli representative, declared that the Arab states had "chosen warfare by terror and sabotage as the primary military tactic to be employed at this stage against Israel."

OUTLOOK BLEAK JERUSALEM

— Informed sources in Jerusalem offered little hope for any break in the impasse in the Middle East after the latest visit to Israel by Dr. Gunnar V. Jarring, the United Nations peace envoy.

According to the Israelis, the talks focused almost entirely on Dr. Jarring's last trip to Cairo. Egyptian officials were characterized by sources here as intransigent as ever on the question of opening peace talks with Israel, even indirectly through Dr. Jarring.

Yeshiva University Receives $500,000 To Develop Social Work Program

NEW YORK — Yeshiva University has received a $500,000 grant to develop a doctoral program in social work at its Wurzweller School of Social Work.

Dr. Samuel Belkin, university president, said that the grant from the Gustav Wurzweller Foundation made Yeshiva the second institution in New York and the 19th in the United States to offer a doctorate in social work. Until now, Columbia University has been the only school in New York granting the degree.

The purpose of the program will be to prepare selected social workers for creative and scholarly leadership in social work practice, theory development, policy formation and organization. Particular emphasis will be placed on developing leadership for Jewish communal service, Dr. Belkin said.

The president of the Wurzweller Foundation, Dr. Joseph H. Lookstein, rabbi of Congregation Khilath Jeshurun in Manhattan, and Chancellor of Bar

Ilan University in Israel, explained that under the terms of the grant $300,000 would be given to Yeshiva University in annual $100,000 installments, with $200,000 to follow in the future.

The Gustav Wurzweller Foundation was established after Mr. Wurzweller's death in 1954. A native of Germany, Mrs. Wurzweller had been affiliated with the brokerage house of Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co., and was a member of the New York Stock Exchange. He was also a founder and board member of Help and Reconstruction, an organization that assists refugees from Central Europe.

In 1957 the Wurzweller Foundation presented Yeshiva with $1-million to develop the nation's first university-based school of social work under Jewish auspices.

Since its establishment, the Wurzweller School of Social Work has offered a two-year program of study, with concentrations in social group work and social casework, leading to a Master of Social Work degree.

Revisionist History Finds Anti-Semitism Based On Secular Roots, Not Christian

NEW YORK — The roots of modern anti-Semitism are not Christian but secular, according to a revisionist history of the French Enlightenment to be published May 14 by Columbia University Press.

The book argues that the Enlightenment, the 18th-century intellectual movement that placed great stress on reason and freedom, is actually the father of 20th-century anti-Semitism and totalitarianism.

Arthur Hertzberg, lecturer in history at Columbia University and rabbi of Temple Emanu-El in Englewood, N.J., is the author of the book, "The French Enlightenment and the Jews." It has already won the Jewish Publication Society's first annual Amram Award as the best manuscript in the field of Jewish studies.

"All the major anti-Semitic and totalitarian arguments are planted firmly in the Western mind by Voltaire, Diderot and the other major thinkers of the Enlightenment," Rabbi Hertzberg said in an interview yesterday.

"These men were not pluralists; thought in terms of a new synthesis, a new world culture with no room for Jews. They peddled the idea that for the purity of Europe, you've got to keep out the alien bearers of an Oriental miasma — the hopeless Jews."

From this emphasis on a unified and pure culture, he added, it is only a short step to Hitler, De Gaulle's negative comments on Jews, and Gomulka's remark that Jews are irretrievable aliens to the Communist vision.

"Yet my book is not really about anti-Semitism," he said. "It's about the West's dirty little secret — its cultural arrogance, of which Jews, as the longest resident dissenting community, are only the most conspicuous victim."

The West's cultural arrogance began with the Greek and Roman notion that Christians and Jews were disruptive Oriental aliens, he said.

"When Christians took over the West, they merely cloaked the old notion of the alien Jew in theology," he went on. "At the critical moment when Christian dominance of Europe was breaking down, Voltaire and the others reached back to the pagan era to stamp the modern world with the old cultural arrogance."

Rabbi Hertzberg argued that this attitude still infected the Western mind.

"This is why the West, in its encounter with the Negro, Africa and the Orient, is heading for a debacle," he said. "At the core of Western culture is the idea that in order to arrive at culture, you've got to be like us. Here at home we say to the Negro, 'Be an amateur white man or stew in your bloody ghetto.' This is essentially a re-enactment of what the Enlightenment said to the Jew."

The dominant scholarly view of the Enlightenment is far more favorable. The intellectual movement, which quickly spread through Europe, propagating confidence in human reason, political equality and the perfectability of man, is generally regarded as a great liberating force that shaped the modern era.

"It provided the intellectual support for the French and American revolutions and the secular, democratic state.

"It was liberating, but only in part," Rabbi Hertzberg said. "It is also responsible for the Western inability to meet other peoples as equals, the determination to remake or exclude them."

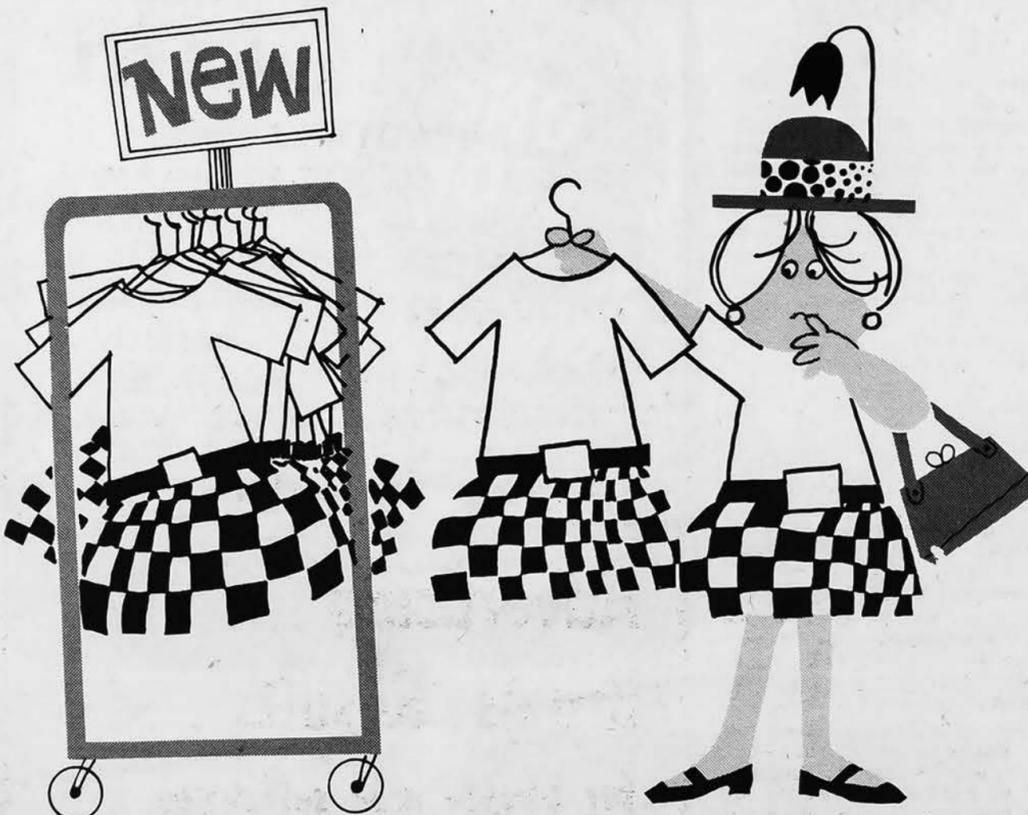

America is less infected than Europe with the Enlightenment heritage of cultural arrogance, he said.

"Here you have a counter-theme: People have a right to be themselves. America was founded by the descendants of Montesquieu — not Voltaire, who never counted for much in the New World. Montesquieu is the one major figure in the French Enlightenment who wanted to give all groups and traditions freedom. He is the ancestor of the American idea: 'Leave them alone.'"

Does the book clear Christians of anti-Semitism?

"Well, yes and not," Rabbi Hertzberg replied. "Christians have made their own contribution to anti-Semitism, but from the 17th Century on, anti-Semitism is no longer Christian. The energies that drive the modern world are not Christian but ideological — liberalism, nationalism, internationalism, communism. All these ideologies have their origins in the last half of the 18th century, when educated men were no longer Christian."

The future figure, he said, is Voltaire — the link between pagan and modern anti-Semitism, who argued powerfully that the Jew stood outside Western society.

who'd want a new dress if it were just like your old one?

How much fun would be left in fashion if all style were standardized? This system would cut down on shopping time. But it would also cut down on your individuality.

In turn, standardization would cut down on advertising, there'd be a cutback in production. And if we worked hard to do so, we might wreck the economy.

Wouldn't we be better off to leave things the way they are? Today's advertising is already policed by the world's smartest defective . . . the American consumer.

Chaplain Service In Army Put On Voluntary Basis

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. —

After four hours of animated debate, the Rabbinical Assembly — an international association of Conservative rabbis — voted to suspend its system requiring newly ordained rabbis to serve as military chaplains. It voted instead to substitute a voluntary system.

The action taken at the Assembly's 68th annual convention at the Concord Hotel, called for all theological seminaries and rabbinical groups to cooperate in setting up a voluntary system that would increase the number of Jewish chaplains in the armed forces.

Mrs. George S. Sacerdote

Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman officiated at the wedding of Miss Carol Ann Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Robinson of 212 Cleveland Street, Pawtucket, and George Steven Sacerdote, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Sacerdote of 253 East Palisade Avenue, Englewood, N.J., on Sunday, April 7. The 5:30 p.m. ceremony, which was held at Temple Emanu-El, was followed by a reception at the Providence Hebrew Day School.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was gowned in silk organza highlighted with Alencon lace and embroidered with seeded pearls and fashioned with a portrait band collar of lace, an empire bodice and flared bell sleeves. Her silk illusion veil fell from a matching cone-shaped pillbox. She carried a bouquet of white orchids, stephanotis and sweet peas.

Mrs. Anthony L. Rosner was matron of honor, and her sister, Miss Lisa Hope Robinson, served as junior bridesmaid. Both wore apricot gowns with matching headbands, and carried cascades of tea roses.

Peter M. Sacerdote served as best man for his brother. Ushers were Albert Sacerdote, brother of the bridegroom, Stanely Gambirilli, Mark Khanna and Raymond Murphy.

After a wedding trip to the Virgin Islands, the couple will reside at 401 S. Race Street, Urbana, Ill.

BARNEY GLAZER

In Hollywood

In an interview with a national magazine reporter recently, Walter Brennan referred to a Jewish restaurateur as a "Hebe."

The star of the television series, "The Guns of Will Sonnett," had used the word while resenting the innkeeper who had sold his pawned, cherished gold piece. Loosely interpreted, the situation implied that Brennan struck back by selecting a word that would hurt the most.

The reporter discussed that "word" - labeling it unthinkable for our generation, certainly; and bad manners for our parents; but as for our grandparents, they could be excused on the grounds of flopping semantics. At his age, 73, Brennan fell into the grandparent area and could be excused for not really meaning the implication.

The magazine's west coast management told me that its New York editor stared long and hard at the "word" and weighed carefully the decision either to publish it as a quotation in order to show the man for what he is or to delete it for its slur.

One magazine representative said, "Brennan has a history for this sort of thing. We believed our writer that Brennan did use the word."

I was curious. If staff members recognized the word's impropriety, why had the magazine elected to expose it to thousands of readers who surely would include some anti-Semites, who were sympathetic to the word as abusive and would welcome a celebrated star's usage as another hatred-drenched log to fire up their bigotry?

Aaron Spelling, who coproduces with Danny Thomas the television series starring Brennan, said that during many years of association with the actor he has not once observed any vestige of anti-Semitism.

"If he used the 'word,'" said the producer, "it has to reduce to simple vocabulary habit. Naturally, I don't condone its use. The word reviles me, no matter who uses it, but Brennan obviously regards it as harmless colloquialism. I'm sure that if you question him he will voice honest surprise about violating respect."

Spelling pointed out that he is Jewish, Danny Thomas thinks Jewish, many of Brennan's coworkers are Jewish as well as his agents Phil Weltman and Abe Lastfogel of the William Morris Agency. If Brennan, reasoned Spelling, had indicated any signs of anti-Semitism in the many years he has worked with Jews, they would have tossed him out long ago on his drawing affectation or he would have quit to work with non-Jews.

Weltman accused the national magazine and its reporter of making an issue out of that "word" to grind an editorial axe. "If Brennan did use the word," said Weltman, "he certainly didn't do so with disrespect. Many Jews call one another the same name but certainly mean no slur."

I agreed but suggested that Jews call one another names as Italians call other Italians names — with a twinkle in their eye, a tongue in one cheek, and a slap on the back. But let a Jew call an Italian an Italian name, let an Italian call a Jew a Jewish name, and someone had better make a decision quickly: to fight or run.

At this point, the question remained not so much "Did Walter Brennan use the 'word'?" but "If Walter Brennan used the word, how did he mean it?"

I phoned Brennan at his Thousand Oaks home. He admitted without hesitation, "Yes, I did say Hebe. I use it all the time."

"Why do you use it?" I asked. "When I lived in Cambridge, Mass.," he replied, "people called me a Mick. I never resented it. I always thought that Jewish people liked to be called a Hebe."

"I'm Jewish," I informed him. "I don't like to be called a Hebe."

Brennan said, "I have no hates. It's ridiculous to think I have. I would never think of using names to hurt anyone. When I say Hebe, I mean a Jew. I don't attach any other meaning to it."

I told Brennan that some persons in the industry had told me he has been "that way" about Jews for years. He denied it, emphasizing that his Jewish associates through the years represented his best character references.

At no time did he seek refuge in "some of my best friends," for which I remained grateful. During our conversation, he sounded sincere, never apologized, gave no indication he had done anything to regret.

Those who had branded Brennan as anti-Semitic justified themselves with opinion and hearsay. When challenged, none produced an iota of evidence, so Brennan gets the benefit of my doubt.

Please clip and file today's column for a very good reason. Now that Walter Brennan knows that we are Jews, not Hebes, he undoubtedly will hesitate long and wisely before using that "word."

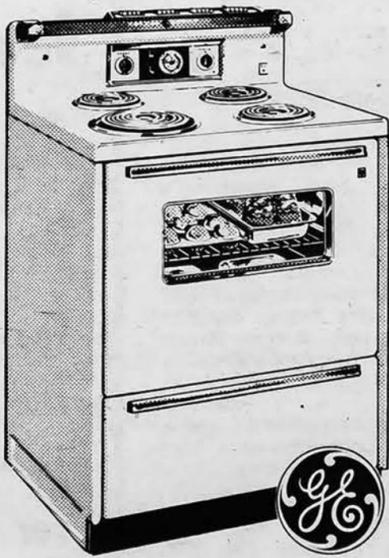

If he does use it, put this column to any purpose that may strike your fancy at the time.

For And About Teenagers

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "I need help badly. My girl and I had a little argument a few days ago and I got mad and hit her a couple of times. I didn't mean to do it because I love her. You see, I get mad easily, and she just made me mad. What should I do to get her back and to make her listen and understand?"

OUR REPLY: Change your ways. There is no explanation in the fact you get mad easily. This is an excuse you make to yourself and no one else will appreciate it.

More than you need to get the girl back, you need to put a curb upon your emotions. You cannot go through life lashing out everytime something doesn't suit you. It is wrong and it will bring you to serious difficulties as you grow older.

You owe the girl an apology. Show that you are man enough to make it. Promise that it will never happen again — and be sure you are man enough to see that it never does.

Inaugurate Pavilion To Memory Of Jews At Site Of Auschwitz Death Camp

OSWIECIM, Poland, — A pavilion in memory of the six million Jews who died in the Nazi holocaust was inaugurated by the Polish Government today at the site of the Auschwitz death camp here.

The pavilion displays photographs tracing the history of anti-Semitism, accompanied by such legends as "Those who forget the past are condemned to repeat it" and "Don't wake up the beast in man because when it is aroused nothing can stop it."

Housed in a red brick barracks known as Cell Block 27, where three million Jews and a million non-Jews were killed in World War II, the two-story pavilion was officially opened by Lucjan Motyka, the Culture Minister.

Mr. Motyka, himself a former Auschwitz inmate, sought in his speech to steer a middle course between the Government's "anti-Zionist" policy and its proclaimed concern for Poland's 30,000 remaining Jews.

Last week Jozef Kepa, the Communist party secretary for Warsaw, charged that "down-right filthy defaming of people" had resulted from overzealous application of the "anti-Zionist" policy. Most victims of the current political purge are Jews.

In his speech, Mr. Motyka said: "We hope that those who visit this museum, including the block on the martyrdom of the Jews, will draw proper conclusions and appropriate evaluations as regards the present."

But the Minister said that the World War II deaths of six million Polish citizens — half of them Jews — gave his country "a moral right to protest against violence and attacks wherever they occur."

"We stand on the side of the weak and the attacked in the Far and Middle East," he added, "because we have been through the bitterness of defeat and suffered the highest human loss in our history."

Israeli "aggression" in the Middle East and United States "aggression" in Vietnam are constant themes of the Polish leadership. So is criticism of West Germany, which Mr. Motyka apparently had in mind in denouncing a "revival of fascism in the Western world."

The gradualness with which German anti-Semitism built up was a main theme of the exposition, which was divided into sections dealing with the forced registration of Jews, their segregation in ghettos and finally their elimination.

The pavilion traced the history of anti-Semitism from the middle of the 19th century to Hitler's rise and the application of his "final solution" in the crematories of Auschwitz.

Special display cases contained Jewish prayer shawls, children's shoes and a baby's shirt.

The pavilion was studded with quotations from Nazi leaders and blown-up photographs. They showed Nazis herding Jews into ghettos and concentration camps, naked women being pushed into gas chambers, Nazi soldiers in gas masks pouring out deadly Cyclon B gas and piles of naked bodies.

Typical of the anti-Semitic quotations was one from "Mein Kampf," which read: "The Jew is and remains an eternal parasite, similar to a harmful bacillus that reproduces continuously."

Next to a headline from Der Sturmer, the Jew-baiting journal of Julius Streicher, was a star of David and the legend "Whoever carries this sign is an enemy of our people."

Alluding to the Nazis' early penchant for torchlight parades, another legend read: "Torches burning; for the time being only human dignity was trampled on; for the time being, people were only beaten and discriminated against."

In contrast with the unveiling of a monument last year at the neighboring Birkenau death camp, which drew Jewish delegations from many nations, the only foreign Jew present today was a Mexican citizen wearing a skullcap. He said he had been born in Poland.

The only Polish Jews in the small crowd were half a dozen representatives of the Jewish Cultural Association, including a past president, Grzegorz Smolar. They laid a wreath.

Mr. Smolar was recently dismissed as editor of the Yiddish-language newspaper Folksstimme, expelled from the Communist party and removed from his post in the Soviet-Polish Friendship Society.

The Jewish Cultural Association and its discussion group have recently been officially attacked and accused of having inspired the leaders of student demonstrations last month.

During the delegation's visit to the pavilion, a tape recorder played fragments of Bach, Shostakovich and a Yiddish lullaby popular as an anti-Nazi song during the war.

At the entrance stood a rough granite slab inscribed with a verse from the fourth chapter of Genesis: "And the Lord said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother?"

At the exit a similar slab was inscribed: "And He said, What hast thou done? The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto Me from the ground."

Economic Ties Between Rumania, Israel Thrive

WASHINGTON — Rumania and Israel are about to conclude a civil air agreement providing for regular flights between Bucharest and Tel Aviv. And an Israeli trade exhibition is scheduled to open in the Rumanian capital next month.

Thus, the economic ties between Israel and a European Communist regime are thriving at a time when Poland, one of the Communist nations, is giving evidence of rising anti-Semitism in the Government's attempt to suppress student unrest.

Western diplomatic analysts credit the Rumanians with a success in having maintained and extended their ties with Israel, which has been criticized by the rest of the nations of the Warsaw Pact, the defense alliance of the Communist nations.

The Rumanian press, along with the official press of other Communist regimes, has ignored anti-Zionist slurs that have been made by the Polish authorities.

Along among the Warsaw Pact allies, Rumania did not sever diplomatic relations with Israel after the Arab-Israeli war last June. Instead of denouncing Israel as an aggressor and supplying military aid to the Arab nations that fought in the war, Rumania sought new economic, technical and cultural ties with Israel.

At the same time that the deputy foreign ministers of the Warsaw Pact nations were meeting last December to coordinate their military aid efforts for the Arabs, the Rumanian Minister of Foreign Trade, Gheorghe Cloara, was in Tel Aviv at the head of a high-level trade delegation. Bucharest boycotted the Warsaw Pact meetings.

Western analysts believe that the Rumanians, with their lone stand, have fulfilled the following purposes:

▲ They have given a pointed reminder to the Soviet Union and the European Communist nations of Rumania's independent foreign policy.

▲ They have avoided criticism from more liberal Communist spokesmen who denounce anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union and elsewhere.

▲ They have developed a mutually beneficial trade relationship.

Rumania and Israel last year agreed to double the volume of goods exchanged during 1968. About $14-million in goods were traded between the two countries last year. There is to be a further 10 per cent increase next year, and 15 per cent more in 1970, the last year of the three-year agreement.

The two countries also are cooperating on the development of food and chemical industries in Rumania, with Israel supplying up to 50 per cent of the capital, as well as the technical skills.

'Phaedra' Opens At Trinity Square Theatre

The sixth and final production of the 1967-68 season for the Trinity Square Repertory Company opened last night at the Trinity Square Playhouse. Racine's "Phaedra" was presented in a new English version by Robert Lowell.

Trinity's production, under the direction of Adrian Hall, will feature music by Richard Cumming, sets designed by Eugene Lee, lights by Roger Morgan and costumes by John Lehmyer.

The cast, composed of members of the resident acting company, will feature Katherine Helmond as Phaedra; James Gallery, Peter Gerety, Ed Hall, Dorrie Kavanaugh, Richard Kneeland, Marguerite H. Lenert and Terrence Turner.

"Phaedra" will continue at the Playhouse for four weeks only, through May 18. Performance times are Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at 8 p.m.; Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m., and a Saturday matinee at 2:30 p.m.

Jews In Spanish Africa Enjoy Religious Freedom

CEUTA — The ancient Jewish communities at the mouth of the Mediterranean, their roots predating in some cases the Spanish Inquisition of 1492, are enjoying remarkable influence and prosperity amid complete religious freedom.

This was illustrated recently, as Passover drew to a close, by Salomon Benhamu Roffe, a businessman and the vice-president of the Jewish community in this Spanish enclave in Morocco. He seemed surprised when a visitor inquired about religious liberty in Ceuta.

"Why," he said, "the Jews of Ceuta have been free from time immemorial. We have always been a part of Ceuta."

Both Mr. Roffe and Menahem Gabizon, his cousin and a lawyer who serves as the secretary of the Jewish community, agreed that the Jews in the Spanish North African enclave of Ceuta and in Melilla, 300 miles to the east, have long enjoyed even more freedom than the Jewish communities on the mainland have had since the enactment of the religious liberty law last year.

When thousands of Sephardic Jews — those of Spanish or Portuguese origin — fled Spain at the time of the Inquisition they were scattered along the shores of the western Mediterranean, from Morocco to Genoa. Modern scholars place their number at close to 250,000.

But some Sephardic families moved to Ceuta and Melilla. In time, others from Morocco, Malta, Genoa, the Ottoman Empire and Greece settled in the two ports.

Now, there are 600 Jews in Ceuta, of a population of 75,000 and 3,000 Jews in Melilla, where the population is 100,000. Together, the communities account for more than half of the Jewish population of Spanish-controlled areas. About 2,000 Jews inhabit the Spanish mainland.

As Mr. Roffe emphasized, the Jews in Ceuta and Melilla are integrated socially and economically with the predominantly Roman Catholic Spanish population and the small Moslem and Hindu communities.

Strictly Orthodox, the Jews of Ceuta are collecting funds to erect a synagogue to replace two old ones. The Community also maintains a Hebrew school for its youngsters and the Spanish Government pays the salaries of the teachers.

Sixteen miles from Ceuta, across the Strait of Gibraltar, is the British crown colony of Gibraltar, where Sephardic Jews have likewise risen to prominence and prosperity.

Although there are only 600 Jews — virtually all Sephardic — among 25,000 Gibraltarians, the colony's elected Chief Minister, Sir Joshua Hassan, is a Jew. The Ministers of Finance and Tourism are also Jews.

As Sir Joshua remarked in a recent conversation, "I do not believe that it has ever occurred to anyone here to vote for me and my party because I am Jewish or to vote against me for the same reason."

In Tangiers, on the Atlantic Coast, a special situation affects the Jews as it does elsewhere in Morocco.

Although the Moroccan Government has prevented anti-Jewish incidents at the time of the Arab-Israeli war last June, and ever since, the tendency of Tangier and other Moroccan Jews has been to leave the country. Emigration is officially banned, but numerous special arrangements approved by the Rabat Government have shrunk the Jewish communities to 30,000 from 250,000 10 years ago.

In the meantime, Tangier and other Moroccan Jews — many of them in leading business and professional positions — enjoy all religious and civic freedoms.

Warsaw Ghetto Observances Held In New York Sunday

NEW YORK — The Hebrew prayer for the dead — El Mole Rahamim (God, Full of Mercy) — and partisan songs of the Jewish underground were chanted last Sunday in observance of the 25th anniversary of the Warsaw ghetto uprising and the death of six million Jews in Nazi concentration camps.

In one service 2,000 persons stood silently in the grand ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel as Cantor Paul Zimel of Beth Israel Temple in Brooklyn, solemnly chanted, "Ani Ma'amim" (I believe). One of the 13 articles of faith written by the 12th-century Jewish religious philosopher, Maimonides, the prayer was recited daily by prisoners in the German death camps.

In the background on a temporary stage, several children of survivors of the camps lighted six candles in memory of the six million who died.

In nooks of a makeshift wall of simulated brick, symbolizing the barricaded wall of the Warsaw ghetto, were several hundred yiskor, or memory lamps with lighted candles, also in tribute to those who died.

Many bore the tattooed marks of such notorious camps as Buchenwald, Auschwitz, Treblinka and Bergen-Belsen. Overhead were signs that urged the participants not to forget.

The signs hung over two large black draperies that served as an entrance to what represented the gas chambers of the death camps.

In hushed terms, Benjamin Meed, an officer of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising Committee a survivor of the Warsaw ghetto, said that the 25th anniversary "does not merely serve to evoke memories, but will always serve as a reminder that a certain part of ourselves shall always remain empty."

It was on April 19, 1943, the eve of Passover, that the remnants of the Jews who had been herded into the ghetto with few weapons rose in rebellion and until May 6 withstood overwhelming Nazi forces. The ghetto was demolished, and only a handful of the 40,000 who fought there escaped. At one point the ghetto housed about 500,000 Jews, but most had been sent to death camps.

At Hunter College another audience of 2,000 people filled every seat for the observance held by the Jewish Labor Committee, the Workmen's Circle and the United Hebrew Trades.

Here, poetry and dramatic readings recalled the uprising. Combined choruses sang the songs of the partisans who fought in the underground against the Nazis.

One of these songs, sung during the ghetto uprising, was "Never Say You Are Going the Last Way."

Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn, spoke at ceremonies in the Biltmore Hotel. He asserted that the experience of the Warsaw ghetto "will continue as it does today, to demonstrate the will of the Jewish people to survive, to champion the cause of humanity even, and especially, in humanity's darkest hour."

At Manhattan Center, an observance was held by the Committee to Commemorate the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising. Councilman Theodore S. Weiss, Democrat of Manhattan, who lost several members of his family during the Nazi terror, scored what he described as a reawakening of anti-Semitism in Poland.

B'nai B'rith Women Ask Starting Of Peace Negotiations In Vietnam

WASHINGTON — The leadership of B'nai B'rith Women called last week for a "more vigorous effort" to get peace negotiations started in Vietnam.

A strongly worded resolution, adopted by 600 delegates from various parts of the country, attending the organization's triennial convention at the Shoreham Hotel, declared that the United States' commitment in Vietnam "must not overshadow our fundamental commitment to our nation, its inhabitants and our national welfare."

In its first official position on the Vietnam issue, the organization, which has 140,000 members, expressed concern that "further escalation is in prospect, with the danger of World War III ever present."

Mrs. Arthur G. Rosenbluth of Hewlett, L.I., the outgoing president of the group, said that the resolution also conveyed the delegates' concern that domestic problems were being overshadowed by the Vietnam war.

"How can we have peace in Vietnam without peace in our cities?" the resolution asked.

Accompanying resolutions urged a high priority to poverty problems and urban crises.

The delegates said they were "mindful that North Vietnam remains intransigent." They said that they were "sympathetic with the problems of President Johnson, who stated clearly and early in the Vietnam conflict that 'we do not seek a wider war.'"

However, the delegates declared that some of the assumptions on which the United States' involvement was initially based "seems no longer valid." They contended that increasing involvement made the hostilities "an American war, not a South Vietnamese war."

The resolution cautioned that the United States' effort in behalf of the South Vietnamese "is compromised in the light of the fading Thieu-Ky Government," and that the "Domino theory which implies the loss of Southeast Asia to Communist domination if the United States does not attain victory in South Vietnam is increasingly open to question."

Fears Mount In United States Of Wave Of Polish Anti-Semitism

NEW YORK — As Jews in the United States and elsewhere celebrated last week the 25th anniversary of the Warsaw ghetto uprising, fears were mounting in this country that a new wave of anti-Semitism once more endangered Polish Jews.

Reports reaching Jewish organizations, Polish emigres and others here suggest that the anti-Semitic campaign in Poland has created a climate of fear among many Polish Jews.

Wladyslaw Gomulka, the Polish Communist leader, appears to have become alarmed by the excesses of the campaign, which evidently is directed at least partly at him. He and some of his close colleagues have sought to damp it down.

But some sources say they see indications that Mr. Gomulka has lost control of the situation and that persons both within and outside the party are determined to step up the attack on Jews to further their own political and ideological ends.

Analysts of Polish affairs here said the anti-Semitic campaign apparently began as a long-planned move in an intra-party power struggle waged by Maj. Gen. Mieczyslaw Moczar, the Minister of the Interior.

However, they said the theme had been enthusiastically picked up and elaborated upon by anti-Semitic groups in Poland — Boleslaw Piaseski's pro-Communist, Catholic Pax movement and the leaders of the nominally middle-class Democratic party, a political group with some representation in the Assembly.

So far, there is no evidence that the Polish man in the street has joined in the officially instigated denunciations of Jews. In fact, there are signs that many Poles reject the campaign.

However, some analysts here warn that if the movement continues to gain force it could eventually tap the deep well-springs of traditional Polish anti-Semitism and — in the words of one Polish emigre — could even lead to "outbursts of physical savagery."

So far there has not been any report of physical violence against Jews. The campaign has relied on denunciations in the press and communications positions, and suppression of literary or artistic expression that offers support or sympathy for Jews.

In most cases the public pronouncements do not even mention the word Jew, and officials have repeatedly denied that anti-Semitism is involved. Instead, they have used such terms as Zionists, alien forces, foreign elements, non-Polish persons or persons known for their national nihilism — all frequently used euphemisms for Jews.

However, even such indirect methods are reported to have created fear in the Polish Jewish community.

A recent report from the Paris office of the American Jewish Committee said, "the purges of Jews on all levels of cultural life and Government departments is assuming such proportions that every Jew in Poland is practically in a state of panic and insecurity, at least economically, if not yet physically."

Anti-Semitism is nothing new to Poland. Jews have experienced abuse, persecution and outright physical attack off and on since they settled there in the 10th century.

For many centuries the peasants were the predominant element in the Polish population and there was no indigenous middle-class. The Jews supplied the country with craftsmen, middlemen, innkeepers and a small group of rich merchants.

They seem to have been protected by the kings, but hated and abused by some of the clergy, townspeople and the great mass of peasantry. The nobility generally despised them but also protected and employed them as middlemen.

Despite all this, Polish Jews developed a flourishing cultural and religious life. When Poland regained her independence after World War I, the Jewish community there was one of the largest and most vital in the world.

Then came the German march into Poland and the Nazi occupation. In 1939 there were about 3.3 million Jews in Poland. There were 50,000 to 70,000 left when Poland was liberated in 1945. Many Jews who had fled were repatriated, but soon there was a reverse flow of Jews emigrating, primarily to the United States and Israel.

Today there are believed to be only 20,000 to 30,000 Jews left in a total Polish population of about 33 million. Most of them are old people, widows, invalids and others who for one reason or another did not want to abandon their homeland. A report by the American Jewish Committee estimates that 59 per cent of the Jews now in Poland are 40 years old or over.

In addition, there are an estimated 10,000 to 15,000 people who do not regard themselves as Jewish but who have Jewish ancestors or are married to Jews, and thus are regarded as tinged with Jewishness. Mr. Gomulka's wife, Sofia, is Jewish.

There was little overt anti-Semitism in Poland for the first 10 years after the war. The memory of Nazi atrocities was still too strong. Perhaps even more important, many members of the Government and party leaders in the Stalinist era were Jewish.

These men belonged to the so-called Muscovite group — Jews who fled from Poland to the Soviet Union during the war and remained there until liberation. Stalin saw to it that these Soviet-trained Jewish Communists were installed in key positions in the post-war Polish regime.

In 1956, when Poland's rigid Stalinist Government gave way to the nominally liberal Gomulka regime, many Jews were among the first to turn away from the old line. The Stalinists, casting about for some weapon with which to defend themselves, resorted to anti-Semitic slurs. But this backfired, gaining more sympathy for the Jews and the new Gomulka line.

Until recently, many Jews remained in high positions in the Government and the party. Guided by what one Pole has called "the ideology of fear," they swung with the prevailing wind. As Mr. Gomulka's promise of liberal reform has faded, many have swung back toward the harsh line.

According to Jewish emigre sources, the current "anti-Zionist" campaign appears to have been carefully planned by General Moczar as part of the struggle for succession to Mr. Gomulka now going on inside the party.

Ben-Gurion Considers World Tour For Aliyah

LONDON — David Ben-Gurion, the former Israeli Prime Minister, is considering undertaking a world tour to attract Western Jews to settle in Israel.

This was revealed in an interview here by Colonel Avraham Tsivion, director of the Midrasha, the Negev college founded four years ago at Sde Boker by Mr. Ben-Gurion.

Colonel Tsivion told a JCNS reporter that Mr. Ben-Gurion was now busy putting the final touches to his book on the history of the Jews.

He was also preparing another book which would contain all his original letters written to Paula 50 years ago, when he joined the Jewish Legion under General Allenby.

Despite all this activity, Colonel Tsivion said, the former Premier might come to England and the United States, and perhaps to other countries with large Jewish populations, to encourage emigration.

Challenge Israel's Participation In Conference On Human Rights

TEHERAN, Iran — The Arabs and their allies this week challenged Israel's participation in the International Conference on Human Rights because of their charges that she has violated those rights in occupied Arab territories.

Israel, Adib Daoudi of Syria declared, "launched aggression against three member states" and "carried out a policy of terror and persecution" against the inhabitants of the occupied areas.

Mehdi Masud of Pakistan declared that his delegation did not recognize the presence of "the Tel Aviv authorities," who he said showed no intention of acceding to humanity's demands regarding human rights.

Judge Zean Zeltner of Israel rejected the charges with the "utmost contempt." As recently as last June, he said, the Damascus radio called for the "slaughter of the Jews" and showed Syria's true face.

When Mustafa Medani of the Sudan cited "atrocities" in the occupied territories, the Israeli spokesman asked: "How many Sudanese Negroes have been slaughtered in the Southern Sudan in the last few years, 100,000, 200,000, half a million?"

The vehement exchanges were begun by Viktor Chikvadze of the Soviet Union, who protested that the issuance of invitations to the conference was discriminatory. This, he said, has resulted in the exclusion of Communist China and East Germany and the inclusion of the "so-called" Republic of South Vietnam and South Korea.

The sharpness of the exchanges surprised Iranian and other diplomats who had attended to hear a discussion on ways to better the human condition through the United Nations program for human rights.

"What has this got to do with human rights?" an Iranian woman asked her escort.

Roy Wilkins, the chief United States delegate, tried unsuccessfully to guide the morning meeting back to the matter at hand. The General Assembly determined participation in the conference, he said, and only the General Assembly can change it.

Mr. Wilkins, the executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, declared that it was unhelpful "to enter into prolonged political discussions of this matter and the conference should proceed to its business."

But it was not until afternoon that the delegation began regular business, in this case the general debate on progress made in the field of human rights since the adoption of the Universal Declaration on Human Rights 20 years ago.

Even the debate toward evening showed signs of becoming a political free-for-all.

The Ukraine's delegate launched a violent attack on the rightist National Democratic party in West Germany, which he said was bent on conquest, revenge and racism.

45.2% Vote For Labor Shown In Israeli Poll

JERUSALEM — Israel's new Labor Party (combining the former Mapai, Achdut Avoda and Rafi Parties) would command only 45.2 per cent of the total vote in an immediate general election, according to a poll conducted last month by Public Opinion Research of Israel Ltd., Rafael E. Gill, director.

The Labor Party's prospects of achieving an over-all majority would improve if Mapam were to join, bringing with it the 7.6 per cent of the total vote indicated in its favor by the poll. In the last election the Mapai, Achdut Avoda and Rafi vote combined totalled 44.1 per cent. The Mapam vote was 7.1 per cent.

Voting intentions as far as the other parties are concerned have changed little since the general election of 1965; Gahal (alliance of Herut and the Liberals), 20.5 per cent (21.3 per cent in 1965); Mafdal (Mizrachi and Hapoel Hamizrachi); 8.1 per cent (8.9 per cent); Aguda and Poale Aguda, 5.5 per cent (5.1 per cent); Independent Liberals, 2.1 per cent (3.8 per cent); Ha'Olam Hazei, 1.2 per cent (1.2 per cent); Communists, 4.4 per cent (3.4 per cent); others, 5.4 per cent (5.1 per cent).

Boston Temple Given To Negro Community For Cultural Use

BOSTON — A temple and a school that once served as a center for Conservative Judaism in Boston have been sold for $1 to the Negro community for use as a cultural facility.

The temple, formerly housing the Congregation Mishkan Tefila, and the school were appraised at $1,125,000 by the combined Jewish philanthropies. They were sold to the Elma Lewis School of Fine Arts. The property is situated in the Roxbury district, a slum area of the city.

Miss Lewis, a Negro drama and arts teacher for 15 years, said the proposed drama and arts center would be the first of its kind in the nation. She also said that the Boston Museum of Fine Arts would set up an art gallery with a Negro curator at the center. The gallery is expected to be opened in the fall with an exhibition of the work of Negro artists.

In addition, Miss Lewis said, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will provide free pop concerts in the summer in nearby Franklin Park, a city facility.

By the fall of 1969, Miss Lewis said, the school will house temporarily an integrated public school, the first of three experimental state-supported schools authorized by legislation passed last fall. With state financing, the school will be operated by representatives of the Negro community instead of the Boston School Committee.

ISRAELI ACCUSES POLAND

TEL AVIV — Israel's Information Minister, Israel Galili, accused Poland of turning the remnants of the Jewish people into scapegoats to serve the interest of her regime.

Mr. Galili said that a speech by Deputy Culture Minister Kasimierz Rusinek at a Warsaw Ghetto memorial last week evoked tones "sweet to the ears of the Nazis." The Polish official accused Western Jewish leaders of having cared for their investments more than the Jews in Auschwitz.

Nasser Says Liberation Of Occupied Territory Primary Task Of Arabs

CAIRO — President Gamal Abdel Nasser declared last week that the liberation of the territories occupied by Israel was the primary task of the Egyptian people.

Addressing tens of thousands of people in Mansura, a city in the Nile Delta, the President summoned the United Arab Republic to a rough road to victory "watered with blood and sweat."

The speech was the first of a series that President Nasser will make to win support for his program of March 30 for sweeping political reforms. The country will vote on the program in a referendum on May 2.

Referring to counter-revolutionary forces opposing the March 30 program and his 16-year-old revolution, President Nasser warned that the Government had the ability to strike at these forces and to liquidate counterrevolution wherever it appeared.
