'Zionist Plot' Story To Discredit Prague Traced To Last Spring, Says Wiesenthal

VIENNA — The Jewish Documentation Center here asserted this week that efforts to discredit the liberal Prague leadership by linking it to a "Zionist plot" could be traced back to last spring.

Reports from Germany and Poland noted that such allegations were being injected into the present Czechoslovak situation.

Early in May, according to Simon Wiesenthal, who heads the documentation center, leaflets made their appearance in Prague warning against a takeover by Zionists. The leaflets, he said, singled out as the man to watch Prof. Eduard Goldstuecker, vice rector of Charles University, an outspoken liberal who is of Jewish parentage.

It was never established who printed and distributed the leaflets, but, according to Mr. Wiesenthal, it was believed in Prague at the time that they originated with supporters of the ousted President Antonin Novotny.

A week later an altogether different, indirect implication of Israel was attempted. A number of Jewish and non-Jewish figures in Prague received letters posted in Vienna. The letters, on stationery of the Jewish Documentation Center, were ostensibly signed by Mr. Wiesenthal. They expressed deep satisfaction with the liberalization, saying it was good for the Jews and for Israel. Mr. Wiesenthal said the letter was a clumsy fake.

In the view of Mr. Wiesenthal, whose investigations into the whereabouts of war criminals led to the capture and execution of Adolph Eichmann, anti-Zionism is meant to play on the latent anti-Semitism in Eastern Europe.

Yet, he noted, only 14,000 Jews remain among Czechoslovakia's 14 million people, and 4,000 practice their religion. They have remained, he added, because of their strong bonds with their country.

Prof. Goldstuecker is the single Jew in the clandestine party leadership, to which he was elected after the invasion.

Denounces Charges Of Zionist Involvement

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Arthur J. Goldberg, former chief United States representative to the United Nations, this week denounced Polish and East German charges that Zionists were behind the Czechoslovak reform movement.

"To revive in Eastern Europe anti-Semitism — and that has been going on for some time now — is a shameful act, one that carries the portent of greater danger," he said. "It is a reminder of a horrible era we all remember."

Mr. Goldberg spoke at a news conference called to announce his election as the 14th president of the American Jewish Committee, which was founded in 1906 to protect the lives and rights of Jews.

He replaces Morris B. Abram, who will become president of Brandeis University next month, and is now a partner with the former Supreme Court Justice in the firm of Paul, Weiss, Goldberg, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison.

Mr. Goldberg shied away from questions that sought to compare what he called "the attempted rape of Czechoslovakia" with the United States intervention in Vietnam, but he was willing to link the Russian action with recent developments in the Middle East.

"The lesson of this to the Middle East states is that to greatly depend on Russia has great danger," he said. Recent reports from the United Arab Republic have told of increased Egyptian discomfort over Soviet presence there.

The former Supreme Court Justice denied that he was seeking to run for office — "nobody has asked me," he explained with a grin — but he appeared to miss the limelight when he told of how he had sat "glued" before his television set during the United Nations Security Council debates on Czechoslovakia.

"I was ready to get into uniform and plunge in again," he said, adding that "I've been quite pleased, of course, with the work of George Ball," the current United States representative.

Shipping Company Brings Charges Against Crewmen

HAIFA — Maritime Fruit Carriers Ltd., an Israeli shipping company, has brought charges against a group of crewmen from its motorship Avocadore who, they say, staged an illegal strike aboard the vessel in European waters last month. The company named a seaman, Moshe Levy, as the ringleader in its request to the Haifa police superintendent to open criminal proceedings against the men.

A special committee investigated the episode which resulted in an unscheduled call by the Avocadore at Dover, England, and delayed the discharge of her banana cargo at Bremerhaven, West Germany. The committee sent its findings to the State Attorney. Levy said he would appeal the findings to the high court.

RABIN TO JOIN DAYAN

NEW YORK — Gen. Yitzhak Rabin, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, will join Israel Defense Minister Gen. Moshe Dayan in appearances at the annual conference of the National United Jewish Appeal at the New York Hilton, to be held Dec. 12-15. Both will address banquets. Mr. Rabin will speak Dec. 12 and Dayan on Dec. 14.

ASSIST ISRAELIS

BONN — The "Adenauer - Ben Gurion Action Foundation," a new group named for the late Chancellor of the West German Federal Republic and the former Prime Minister of Israel, has collected $7,625 for the purpose of assisting young Israelis studying in this country and to erect a special youth center in Jerusalem.

Suggests Advocates Of Arab Cause Press Arguments In United States

BEIRUT, Lebanon — An Arab editor has suggested that advocates of the Arab cause against Israel can score a "breakthrough" in public opinion in the United States.

Clovis Maksoud, former representative of the Arab League in India and now an associate editor of the influential Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, said at a news conference that "contrary to the belief of many, American opinion is not impervious to Arab arguments."

Mr. Maksoud, who has just returned from a visit to the United States, listed five obstacles in America that Arabs would have to overcome in gaining support for their position and five areas of public opinion that would be penetrable by Arabs if they employed "dynamic understanding."

He said that an essential part of the Israeli and Zionist success in the United States had been an awareness of and participation in the problems of the United States. He added that Arabs should be aware that "Americans will be interested in Arab problems only when those problems can be understood in American terms."

Mr. Maksoud said that obstacles to Arab communication with Americans included:

- The strength of the Zionist movement which, he asserted, influences 70 per cent of the Jewish vote.

- Arguments of what he called the "tough school" of U.S. foreign policy, which regards South Vietnam and Israel as "dependable pockets," while viewing sympathy for the Arabs as "Un-American and pro-Soviet."

- "Fear of Arab unity" and the belief that the Middle East would be "safer" if Arabs maintained their "contradictions."

- Exploitation by Israel of the western "guilt complex" about persecution of the Jews. Israel, he said, takes the position that she represents all Jews, and can "absolve the West" if the West "does not ask what Israel is doing in the Mideast."

But, Mr. Maksoud continued, Arab thinking could make an impression on American public opinion because of a desire in the United States for coexistence with the Soviet Union, even despite the current crisis in Czechoslovakia.

"The efforts of Israel to restore the logic of the cold war and to project the Arab-Israeli conflict into its frame can be countered if Arab diplomacy is more dynamic and better coordinated," Mr. Maksoud said.

Other factors making communication possible, Mr. Maksoud said, include racial and class tensions in the United States, "which provide us with natural allies among those who want justice; Negroes, 29 million poor students and other young people, and the intelligentsia."

In conclusion, Mr. Maksoud said that most Arab diplomatic and official missions in the United States were "indolent and routine in their assessment of American opinion" and too absorbed with protocol to participate in the concerns and the intellectual life of the United States.

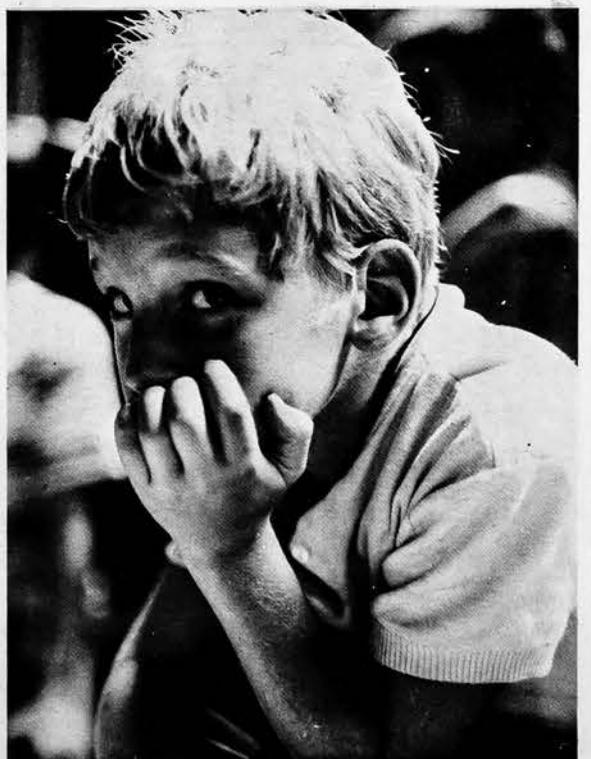

"Until we learn that the United States is of interest to us," he added, "Americans will not find us interesting."

Arthur J. Goldberg Heads AJ Committee

NEW YORK Arthur J. Goldberg, former Secretary of Labor, Supreme Court Justice, and U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, on Tuesday became the 14th president of the American Jewish Committee.

Mr. Goldberg was elected at a special meeting of the agency's board of governors, held at its national headquarters here. He succeeds Morris B. Abram, president since 1964, who will take office as president of Brandeis University. Mr. Abram was elected an honorary president of the A.J.C.

In accepting the presidency of the Committee, Mr. Goldberg said through this post he sought to fulfill his "responsibility in my role as a member of the Jewish community." He added: "In a sense this is an all-embracing role since my concern for justice, for peace, for enlightenment, for morality all stem from the heritage of which I am the heir."

BECOMES ARCHIVIST Jewish history at Yeshiva
NEW YORK — Dr. Hyman B. University, has been named the Grinstein, professor of American first archivist at the university.

TO BE HONORED: Leonard Nimoy, co-star of the TV series, "Star Trek," and alumnus of the New England B'nai B'rith Youth Organization, will be honored at the First Annual Youth Covenant Breakfast which will be sponsored on Sunday morning, Sept. 8, at the Longwood Towers in Brookline, Mass., by the New England B'BYO. Mrs. Steven Wasser of Pawtucket, vice-chairman of the B'BYO board, has announced that the breakfast will be open to the presidents of the AZA and BBG lodges and chapter and their B'BYO chairmen and officers and members of the New England B'BYO board.

Mr. Nimoy, while a member of the B'BYO, took part in a number of shows that were presented by the agency. He was also active in productions in the Elizabeth Peabody Playhouse in the West End; attended the drama school at Boston College and later took additional training at the Pasadena Playhouse.

Courtship, Marriage, the Family

Suicide: A Cry For Help

Once every minute, someone in the United States tries to kill himself. Sixty or seventy times each day these attempts succeed. Many of these suicides could have been averted if suicidal behavior is recognized and properly treated. The question arises: How can we recognize the potentially suicidal person? What are some pre-suicidal warning signs?

Suicide ranks among the first 10 causes of adult deaths in the United States. Among college students, soldiers, and young people between the ages 15-24, suicide is the third ranking cause of death. Furthermore, it is estimated that 15 per cent of teenage home accidents, as well as automobile accidents, are "associated with a suicidal intent."

Men commit suicide more often than women. This trend starts in the early 20's with marked increases in the 50's and 60's. Women, however, attempt suicide more often than men.

For both sexes, the widowed, divorced, and separated have a high suicide rate. Suicide attempts, however, are most likely to be made by single people.

People attempt self-destruction for various reasons and in various ways. Reasons most often given are: (1) ill health; (2) marital difficulties; (3) financial problems; and (4) depression.

The most frequent methods of committing suicide are, in order: (1) firearms and explosives; (2) poisoning; and (3) hanging and strangulation.

Sometimes, the reason behind a suicide attempt is to change the behavior of another, usually a loved one. Other reasons may be to strike back at someone or to communicate some "message" to another person. The person attempting the suicide does not really want to die. Unfortunately, however, something may go awry with his plans for being rescued. Hence, what was meant to be only a suicide attempt becomes a suicidal death.

Over 80 per cent of suicidal persons give advance warning. Typical presuicidal statements are: "My family would be better off without me;" "I won't be around much longer for you to put up with me;" "I don't want to be a burden;" "I am tired of life. I can't stand it any longer. I want to die."

Though most unhappy people who make such remarks do not later commit suicide, it is a serious mistake to take these statements lightly. Most people who have committed suicide made similar remarks before their final self-destructive act.

Other presuicidal warning signs are: withdrawal from social contacts, loss of interest in hobbies, chronic sleeplessness, fatigue, loss of sexual desire, hypochondriacal preoccupation, feelings of hopelessness, and depression.

Serious chronic illness, especially in older persons, loss of job or decisive economic reverses, and recent loss of a loved one are other crises which may precipitate a suicide attempt.

Making a will, getting affairs in order, and similar activities, if accompanied by suicidal talk and depression, are additional warning signals of possible suicide.

Expert help is indicated for anyone who has attempted suicide. Improvement following a suicide attempt does not mean that the suicidal risk is over. Actually, most suicides occur within three months following the beginning of "improvement."

Suicide leaves behind a wake of tragedy. It seldom involves the victim alone. Heavy burden is often placed on the family. "Perhaps the most serious burden on those left behind is that they may identify with the victim and become preoccupied with the fear that they too may resort to suicide if life becomes very difficult."

Retrospective studies of cases of committed suicides show that these persons usually went through a period during which they revealed their self-destructive intentions. They threatened to commit suicide, or talked about suicide, or made recent suicide attempts, or showed marked personality changes. Living persons manifesting such behavior are potential suicides.

Announce Arab Prisoners Released In Judea, Samaria

TEL AVIV — The Defense Ministry announced recently that more than 1,500 Arab prisoners and detainees had been released from prisons in Judea and Samaria in the occupied West Bank and in the Gaza Strip during the past 10 months. The announcement added that 953 Arabs remained in the prisons.

A Ministry spokesman said that half of those now in Judean and Samaritan prisons were serving sentences. The others are being held pending investigations or on administrative detention orders. Among these released, 160 were either acquitted or freed after investigation. Some 500 completed administrative detentions and 650 either served their prison terms or paid fines, while 57 prisoners received pardons, the Ministry said.

Demand Retrial Of Franz Murer

TEL AVIV — Representatives of the surviving Jews of Vilna, attending a world meeting of Vilna Jews here, have demanded the re-trial of Franz Murer, the Nazi wartime Gauleiter of the Vilna Ghetto whose first trial in Austria in 1963 ended with an acquittal.

Murer was tried in Graz on charges that he murdered 17 Jews, but is considered to have been responsible for the destruction of all the Jews of Vilna. The meeting here brought together some 3,000 Vilna Jews from all parts of the free world to discuss matters of mutual interest. Vilna, once a center of Jewish learning, now has only a tiny remnant of its former Jewish community.

On keeping up with the Dow-Jones

Regardless of security values, some shareholders are confused by a fluctuating market. Using market averages as the sole basis for decisions to buy or sell can be, like keeping up with the Joneses, a costly and frustrating business.

Wise investors regard well selected common stocks as good long-term investments (and good inflation hedges). Market conditions change, of course, and new economic trends develop. Any investment program requires supervision. But it should be expert supervision — based on knowledge of the facts, and sound judgement.

To provide investors with up-to-date facts about companies and industries, G. H. Walker maintains research facilities right in Providence, supplemented by extensive facilities in New York and St. Louis.

Experienced in evaluating financial information, G.H. Walker security analysts can review a portfolio objectively, with skill and understanding. ROGER E. SPEAR

Utility Preferreds Produce High Yield

Q: I have considerable stock, but because I am to retire shortly I have been switching to income issues. One company I would like to know about is Allegheny & Western. Is this good for income? — H.S.

A: Yes, the $6 annual dividend is guaranteed under a contract in perpetuity, originally drawn up in 1899. Allegheny leases 68.5 miles of connecting track to Baltimore & Ohio, which is in turn 90% owned by Chesapeake & Ohio. A merger is pending between the latter rail and Norfolk & Western.

Because Allegheny's capitalization is limited, transactions with shares are infrequent, and the spread between bid and ask prices is wide. Unless shares can be bought at a price yielding over 6%, I would not recommend purchase.

Recently there have been signs that market interest may be swinging back to the utilities. For that reason I feel that you would be well advised to consider any of the preferred issues of Phila. Elec. Each of the four classes yields 6% or slightly better and is a high-grade holding.

Q: Enclosed is a list of our 9-year-old daughter's holdings. With the $300 we have now, should we continue to diversify or concentrate on a single issue? — S.H.

A: Although your daughter has 10 separate holdings, four are in health care and four are in utilities and related fields. Thus, although you have a large number of companies to follow, you have not achieved the diversity she needs. In order to minimize her risk in these two principal areas, I would suggest sale of Amer. Cyanamid and Cons. Edison.

With available funds you could add to any one of her other holdings and/or spread out into another industry. At this time, I feel that the defensive characteristics of the food packagers make them attractive. In particular, I like Kellogg Co. with an annual record of earnings improvement stretching back 16 years.

Sharp Price Move Puzzles Novice

Q: Until recently I have bought only mutual funds because they seemed more secure. Are my three funds sound? I am now considering investing in specific issues. Why did Varian jump 5 points one day late in May? — W.R.

A: Many new investors share your uncertainties, but confidence in your own judgment will grow as you add to your knowledge.

Your three funds are aimed at growth and quite suitable for a young person such as you. Dreyfus has a good record in this respect and invest, a new "go-go" fund, has performed well. Supervised Investors Growth was formed in 1966 and has shown satisfactory improvement since.

As to your final question, the rise in Varian shares followed announcement of a new plating process. A low-cost method of plating "any solid surface with any metal, alloy or nonmetallic substance at mass production rates" could add significantly to future earnings. Conversely, a recent price drop in the shares was recorded following Varian's estimate of lower fiscal 1968 earnings. Over-reaction to news reports is typical in a market characterized by heavy speculative participation.

Q: I have over 300% profit in Asamera Oil and Products Research and Chem. A friend says I should sell and not be greedy. I think good prospects make them worth holding. What do you think? — J.C.

A: I agree that a basically sound issue with a good outlook warrants retention despite the size of profit available. Asamera has appeal because of its Indonesian oil concession held in conjunction with Allied Chemical and two other firms. Estimated oil reserves in this field have been placed at 10 million barrels.

Products Research has split its shares frequently. Earnings are moving up rapidly and in the first half of fiscal 1968 showed a 32% gain. New product development, plant expansion and acquisitions are responsible for the accelerated earnings.

Both companies have prospects for continued growth and should be held.

Merger Attractive

For Younger Investors

Q: What's happened to Commercial Credit? I own 100 shares in my retirement fund. Should I sell this and build up my Gen. Motors and Jersey Standard? — C. McC. Jr.

A: For retired people needing income I recommend switching from Commercial Credit to any one of my recent income-producing selections or to one or more of their own stocks which provide a substantial yield. In a period of market uncertainty there are usually some good yields to be found among income stocks.

Commercial Credit had a poor first quarter this year; and if it were to try to remain independent, annual earnings might — or might not — equal the $2.41 a share reported for 1967. Last year the company entered the computer-leasing field when enthusiasm for this kind of an operation was running high. It would seem that a merger with Control Data could benefit both partners. But there is no assurance of any immediate dividend from Control Data, which has not distributed stock since 1964 and has never paid a cash dividend. Any of my younger readers might do well to accept the merger terms if stockholders confirmed same on Aug. 15 and no adverse factors intervene.

Q: Last May I bought 100 International Rectifier at 21 1/2. The stock seems to have gone into a slump. Does it have future potential? — M.M., R.M.

A: I think it does, and I advised my readers once before to hold this stock although it could be another year before the expected turnaround makes a better market for the shares. Despite the likelihood of improved earnings for the fourth fiscal quarter ended June 30, the company expects to show a deficit for the year. Factors supporting a turnaround include aggressive expansion into pharmaceuticals and medical electronics — areas generally expected to show better than average growth; a pickup in sales of IR's original product lines in semiconductors, and continued progress in overseas operations. Patience is the keyword in this situation.

ZOA President Calls For Return To Israel Of Hijacked Plane

NEW YORK — A noted Zionist leader last Saturday said the U.S. should not permit the Soviet Union to use the Middle East as a diversion so that the world would not give its full attention to events in Czechoslovakia.

Jacques Torczyner, president of the Zionist Organization of America, also told more than 100 leaders and officers of the ZOA from throughout the U.S. gathered for the national executive committee meeting, that unless Algeria returns the El Al Israel Airline plane and its Israeli crew and Israeli passengers, "we may enter a period of lawlessness and hijacking all over the globe which may end in a world catastrophe."

The president of the ZOA, which has a national membership of 100,000 said, "We are appalled by the act of banditry committed by the Palestinian terrorists and abetted by the actions of the Algerian Government."

Calling for the unconditional return of the crew, passengers and plane to Israel, Torczyner said that "although the U.S. does not have diplomatic relations with Algeria, our government can use its influence with other nations who do have them and who do possess major international airlines to see that the plane is released."

Commenting on the crisis in Czechoslovakia, Torczyner said: "In 1956, the Soviet Union used the conflict in the Middle East to obfuscate the events in Hungary where it repressed the revolution most ruthlessly. We should not permit the Soviet Union to use the Middle East as a diversionary field of operations in order that the world should not give its full attention to the events in Czechoslovakia."

The ZOA president added that if the U.S. could prevent a Soviet diversion in the Middle East, the present status quo could remain and bring about a closer day-by-day relationship between the Arab population of the occupied territories and the Israelis. He stressed that it was this cooperation which could bring about a basis for a final settlement.

Torczyner also lashed out at U.S. Middle East policy in trying to renew diplomatic relations with Egypt under what he said were "terms and conditions which are not compatible with the pride and power of a great nation like ours."

"It becomes more urgent than ever," he added, "for Israel to receive the Phantom jets from the U.S. as the military imbalance in the Middle East works only to the detriment of Israel."

In other matters, Torczyner called for the merger of the World Zionist Organization and the World Jewish Congress. He said, "There is no reason whatsoever to keep two separate organizations and staffs when it is clear that the Zionist movement will have to go more in the direction of work in the Diaspora and also in public relations activities wherever possible."

As another reason for the merger, he cited the adoption of the Jerusalem program, including the defense of Jewish rights, by the recent World Zionist Congress.

Million Dollar Exhibit Sent To South Africa

BUENOS AIRES — The largest Israeli exhibit ever to go overseas was due here aboard the motorship Mandarinore. The display, valued at $1 million, weighs 2,000 tons and will cover 8,000 square meters of floorspace at the world trade fair that opens in Buenos Aires on Oct. 5.

Adin Talbar, deputy director of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, who saw the ship off in Israel, said the exhibit was the most comprehensive that Israel ever sent abroad. It contains samples of virtually everything made in Israel, from heavy machinery to jewelry and high fashions. It will be set up at the Argentinian fair near an Israel tourist pavilion containing a restaurant, an Israeli supermarket and displays of coins and stamps, Talbar said.

ALMOGI APPOINTED
JERUSALEM — The Knesset last week approved the appointment of Joseph Almogi as the new Minister of Labor and Almogi was duly sworn in. He succeeds Gen. Yigal Allon, who was elevated to the rank of Deputy Prime Minister.

Give Children To Father Holding He Can Better Bring Them Up As Jews

NEWARK, N.J. — A divorced Jewish father has won custody of his two children through a Superior Court ruling which upheld his contention that he could better raise them as Jews in New Jersey than could his divorced wife who moved with them to a small Idaho town where they were the only Jews.

The ruling was made in May by Judge William Considine, who withheld the names of the parents. It was brought out during the hearing that both parents had sought to raise the two children as Jews.

After the divorce the mother was awarded the custody of the children, as is the usual procedure. But when she married a Protestant and went to live with him in the Idaho town, the father sued for custody in the New Jersey court.

Judge Considine noted, in his ruling, that there are only two synagogues in Idaho, the nearest one 300 miles from the town, and that only 500 of Idaho's 692,000 residents are Jews. The father, he stressed, lives in northern New Jersey where "temples, Hebrew schools and extra-religious facilities abound." The jurist held that the Idaho environment could undermine the faith of the two Jewish children.

Judge Considine, a Catholic, noted also that while religion is not by itself a decisive factor in custody situations, it is important, particularly when it is related to the legally expressed wishes of the parents. On that basis, he ordered the children returned to their father with whom, he ruled, they would have a better chance of continuing to be Jews.

OPEN REGISTRATION

Milton Dubinsky, chairman of the school board of Temple Emanu El, has announced that registration for the Weekday department of the religious school will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 4 and 5, from 3 to 5 p.m., and on Sunday, Sept. 8 from 10 a.m. to noon.

Additional information may be obtained from Dr. Aaron Klein, director of the religious school.

AMSTERDAM — American Jewish industrialist Joseph Foster, owner of the Foster Grant Chemical Works in Breda, The Netherlands, has contributed $25,000 to the small Jewish congregation in Breda toward construction of a new synagogue. Christian groups have already collected about $3,000 for this purpose.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 30, 1968

In The Year 2000

With the crises in Czechoslovakia, in Vietnam, in Biafra, and in various other places, with the Republican Convention over and the Democrat Convention just about over and the future of the United States under consideration, with the inner city riots which have already taken place and those which may be ready to take place anywhere in the United States at any time, with the automobile deaths which mount day after day, and with all the other horrible events which occur so that reading any daily newspaper page is practically like reading obituary page after obituary page, it seems wrong somehow to find anything amusing.

But after reading about the fact that a spleen transplant may be able to help hemophilia patients, the science-fiction writer should be able to have himself a field day.

All that comes to mind is the year 2000 in which Mr. X, our villain, is a 28-year-old Rock Hudson type of character, with a heart that belonged to 15 year old Miss A, a spleen which was the property at one time of 83 year old Mrs. B, one kidney which at one time was part of 25 year old Mr. C, and one kidney which was part of the system of an eight-year-old orang-utan, is trying to bring about the accidental appearing death of 40-year-old Mr. D, so that he can have another heart transplant for himself because he had had a heart murmur since he had been a child and the heart he had received from Miss A is even worse.

Meanwhile, our hero, Mr. D (he's the one who's living on borrowed time) with a spleen from a six-month old chimpanzee and a liver from 12-year-old Mrs. E, (she married young), has never revealed that his heart which is beating beautifully, actually is a transplant when he was a child from criminal master mind, Mr. F.

Anyone can see possibilities in a situation like that. And if you include our heroine, Miss F, who has a hip bone transplanted from the most beautiful TV star of the century, Madame G, well . . . what more do you need for a thrilling story.

Science is wonderful, and instead of progressing as it did at one time in fits and starts which took years to accomplish only a little, it is leaping ahead under full steam. We have always been for progress, and as the Red Queen says in Alice Through the Looking Glass, you have to run very fast just to remain in one place, but it does seem sad to think that at some time in the near future we may not even be able to call our inner organs our own.

HARRY GOLDEN Only in America

Public School 20

The Jewish immigrants who came to America at first knew nothing about baseball, football or straight pool. For a whole generation their sport was talk.

The principal of Public School 20, on New York's Lower East Side, Dr. I. Edwin Goldwasser, kept the classroom open until midnight so the immigrant would have a place to argue. These nighttime music and drama circles, Talmudists, Zionists, Single Taxers, Socialists, Democrats, Republicans and Tammany Hallniks invested the school with an intellectual ferment which carried over into the next day.

Built in the 1880s, Public School 20 has closed its doors on its last graduating class. Because it represented something more than a physical plant, a new Public School 20, named in honor of the old, opened its double doors a few blocks east on Essex Street last year.

In the brand new Public School 20 is a 20-by-10-foot mosaic titled the "Wall of Our Forebears." Parading by, all cut from mosaics, are the likenesses of Paul Muni, George Gershwin, Edward G. Robinson, Senator Jacob Javits, Irving Caesar (the lyricist who wrote "Swanee" and "Tea for Two") and many many others. Immodestly let me note, I bring up in the rear.

Jacob Javits I remember as a lonely fellow, a bookworm, much like I was. Edward G. Robinson was a good student, more loquacious than Javits. It was Robinson, not Javits, who was the politician. He was on the debating team, he organized the theatricals, collecting pennies for shows that cost a dollar or two to stage — a real Chamber of Commerce type.

Lunchtimes came when we kids in the classroom heard the cry of the hot chick-pea vendor calling "Haysa arbus!" We'd spend our penny on chick peas which were heated over a galvanized stove which resembled a dresser drawer. Sometimes we'd go across the street to the candy store we called "Cheap Haber's." A penny would buy two sticks of licorice or eight squares of butterscotch or ten marbles.

When a new immigrant boy who knew no English enrolled, we taught him four-letter words and instructed him to answer the teacher's "Good morning" with

Back To School And Some Statistics

By Beryl Segal

Next week you are sending your child back to school. Hebrew school will also begin at about the same time. While all the children of school age will occupy their desks at the public or private schools, not all the Jewish children will do so at Hebrew school. It is estimated that about a million Jewish children, ages 3 to 17, which is the considered school age, will stay out of Hebrew school.

But first let me tell you where the figures come from and who compiled them and came to this sad conclusion.

The Hebrew schools in the United States are all united in the Jewish Education Committee. The Jewish Education Committee publishes a Journal in which problems of education are considered. The committee maintains Bureaus of Jewish Education in various cities, including the Providence Bureau, and the committee advises and supervises Jewish education in the United States.

The Jewish Education Committee also publishes from time to time surveys and statistics on the state of Jewish Education in the country.

The latest of such surveys is the one to which I refer, and it is, unfortunately, not a happy one.

About ten years ago the Jewish Education Committee, disturbed the American Jewish Community by such statements as:

1. Jewish Education is like a river which is a mile wide and an inch deep. By that the committee meant to say that our children could go to school five or six years without even getting their feet wet. There is no depth in what the school teaches, and the school fails to involve the child in the ocean of Jewish learning and the complexities of Jewish life.

2. Jewish schools are a place where the ignorant tries to teach the ignorant. By this they meant that the Sunday School, the most popular place where the Jewish child gets his education and information about the business of being a Jew, is mostly staffed by people who have no idea of their subject, and no love for the traditions of the Jew, and have no inkling of the grandeur of Jewish scholarship.

Since then many things have happened. The Sunday School, while still tolerated, is in great disrepute among people who take Jewish learning seriously. No Rabbi, no teacher, no educator will stand up for the Sunday School today. In the Conservative schools all children must go to week-day classes, two or three times a week. In the Reform schools some principals urge the parents to send the children to the week-day plus the Sunday school. The week-day classes are still voluntary, but they are growing in number and in importance among the parents.

Now we have the latest statistics on the Jewish schools in the United States, and they are not very encouraging.

Six percent less children attended Hebrew School last year than in previous years. They did not even go to Sunday school. They did not even prepare for their Bar-Mitzvah. The whole discussion about the importance of Jewish learning did not reach their parents.

Only ten percent of the children attending Hebrew school continue their studies in High School. They quit just when they should have begun.

Of the 60,000 children attending Hebrew Day schools, where the subjects are integrated, close to 45,000 are in New York City. Only 15,000 are in the rest of the cities in the United States. Now the population of New York City and its suburbs comprises only 44 percent of the Jews of America. This means that 45 percent of the population has 75 percent of the Day School pupils. It also means that while the number of Day School pupils has increased, the number of Day Schools is at a standstill in America.

But the one thing which is sad in the whole maze of statistics is the fact that OVER ONE MILLION JEWISH CHILDREN IN THE UNITED STATES WILL NEVER SEE THE INSIDE OF A JEWISH SCHOOL.

This million boys and girls will grow up, go to college, learn a profession, get married, bring up children, and they will be told to build a home among Jews. What will this "Jewish Home" mean to them?

God only knows.

makes investments, he can lose $1 million in five minutes."

The neglect in this area emerges as even more tragic against the claim of Lewis F. Presnal, Industrial Director of the NCA, that an estimated 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 alcoholic workers could be successfully treated. In some cases, companies with special programs for alcoholics report rehabilitation rates of 50 to 75 per cent. According to another estimate, at least 35 per cent of the economic losses due to on-the-job alcoholism could be recovered by effective programs for employees — for instance, those drawn up by the NCA. Translated into national terms, this would mean savings of well over $1 billion a year.

But the dismal fact is, in the words of Presnal, that "we're still only scratching the surface." And by doing so pitifully little, we are continuing to pay an astronomical bill both in dollars and in wrecked human lives.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

On-The-Job Alcoholism

On-the-job alcoholism has now soared to a $4 billion annual hangover, double the $2 billion estimated cost of only five years ago and equal to a loss of $16 million to business and industry each working day.

This is the latest estimate of New York's non-profit National Council on Alcoholism. Specifically:

At least 3,000,000 U.S. workers now suffer from alcoholism — 5.3 per cent of all workers in business, industry and civilian government. This number compares to 2,000,000 workers five years ago.

The $4 billion figure covers absenteeism, tardiness, sick leave, other fringe benefits, wasted time, other forms of inefficiency, accidents, wasted material and the loss of trained manpower. The absenteeism rate for alcoholics is three times as great as for the non-alcoholic worker — with the typical alcoholic worker losing a full month of working days each year.

Even more serious is the problem of "on-the-job" absenteeism, where an employe may waste a couple of hours each morning recovering from a hangover, or a couple of hours sleeping off a many-martini lunch in a movie house, or fidgeting away precious time in the late afternoon waiting for the big drinking hours to arrive.

Out of every 20 top corporation executives, one may be an alcoholic. Considering today's executive pay scales, the cost of the loss in executive time is beyond calculation.

The vast majority of alcoholic employes in the U.S. today are in the 35-55 age group, the key productive years. As a result, alcoholism now ranks as our fourth most serious national health problem, after heart-artery disease, mental illness and cancer.

Yet, despite all these grim statistics, industry still is doing little to alleviate its monumental hangover. Of Fortune Magazine's top 100 U.S. corporations, only 38 have or are now planning any program to help alcoholic employes. Among corporations of all sizes, only an estimated 300 have or are now developing such a program. Since 1944, no more than 300,000-400,000 alcoholic workers have been reached with any kind of help.

Even in companies with active alcoholic rehabilitation program, few face the costly problem of the alcoholic company president or vice president or sales manager. Yet, as Dum's Review recently pointed out, "when you have a hidden problem drinker who signs contracts or

Today's hand is another that "stumped the experts" but it shouldn't have. The opposition had provided enough information to show Declarer what the best line of play ought to be. Not that following that line would insure success but it has at least an even chance of working. Playing as they did was practically certain to fail.

No one was vulnerable, West the dealer with this bidding:

W	N	E	S
1H	P	P	Dble
2C	P	P	2S
P	3S	P	4S

The vulnerability was immaterial but the fact that West was the dealer and had bid first should have made all the difference in the world. His opening the bidding first hand should have located all of the 13 outstanding points had the various declarers paid attention to what was going on around them. Too few of them do.

At any rate, after West's bid and East's Pass South was confronted with a problem. He had to reopen the bidding or "Balance", as the saying goes. Sometimes one will reopen the bidding with a relatively weak hand but South's hand was by no means weak. North would have bid the Spades had not West bid again but when West now bid Clubs North felt he did not have enough to bid freely, not with a partner who had balanced. Had South Doubled directly over a bid by East North would have cheerfully shown his Spades.

The situation changed when South bid again for now he showed a bigger hand. North's Passes had shown nothing but he certainly had more than nothing, especially in Spades. So he now raised and when South heard that he went on to game. Most of the pairs got there, none of them were able to make it yet it is "cold" if played right. West in all cases played three rounds of Hearts, Declarer ruffing the third with East following. This showed that East had started with three and that West had could not have had more than five. The ace of Clubs had to be lost so to make the hand Declarer could not afford to lose any Diamonds. Nevertheless, all of them did. They either took the Diamond finesse which lost or tried to drop the Queen which also did not happen so they all went down. Every one of them took the attitude that the hand couldn't be made yet it most certainly not only could but should. Why?

Remember that key card, the Diamond Queen. That is the card that has to be reckoned with. After drawing Trumps, most of the Declarers simply took the Diamond finesse which had to lose. Plain arithmetic will show that if West has an opening bid one of his cards has to be that Queen. The finesse can't win. As for dropping a doubleton Queen, it might happen but there is a much better chance.

South had a very important spot card, the Diamond 9. Without it one of the aforementioned plays would have had to be tried but with it there is something else. They key opposing card now becomes the 10 and the hope is that East has it. What must be done is this: South must play the Jack and if West, marked with the Queen, does not cover, let it ride. If that happens, fine, it will win. But West should cover. Now go up with the Ace and play a Diamond back. Now the problem is to either drop that doubleton Queen or finesse against the 10. The finesse in this case has an even chance of winning, dropping the Queen less. For while drawing Trumps Declarer should have also noticed the fact that West had shown up with but one Spade so he probably had three Diamonds. No one did it right.

Moral: Remember there are only 40 high card points in the deck. The opening bidder usually will have at least 12 or 13. When your combined assets total 27 should you know where the outstanding high cards are? 'Nuf said.

ON THE WAY to the Dell for the final service of the summer

Summer Comes To An End

The pictures on these pages were taken at the final service in the Dell, and as the children were preparing for a contest — Dress-As-Your-Favorite-Counselor, on their last day at camp for this year.

Last Friday was the last day of camp at the Jewish Community Center's Camp Centerland in Hope, Rhode Island. To the children it undoubtedly brought thoughts of going back to school, to the camp counselors and general staff thoughts of the two weeks vacation they probably were going to take, : all-in-all it heralded the beginning of the end of summer which lasts for all too short a time around here anyway.

According to Shai Tadmor, camp director for the first time (and the last, since he is leaving to return to Israel in September to stay), this is the 20th anniversary of Camp Centerland which was started in 1948. Camp Centerland, this year, was made up of four divisions: Junior, Intermediate, Pioneers and Camp Adventure for teen-agers. For pre-school children there is Camp Small Fry which meets at the Center building, and visits the camp site occasionally.

CHARLIE BROWN, senior counselor, and some of the campers, at services

"And who are you imitating?" we asked Donna Goldman. The answer: "Don Solomon, of course!"

The camp started with a site in Warwick, moved on later to Lincoln, and has been in Hope now for more than 15 years. According to Dr. Benjamin Carp, executive director of the Center, the camping committee has met to discuss program and facilities of the camp, and "It has higher aspirations. The members are hopeful very soon to find a new facility" which will be capable of serving other community purposes, also. They are hoping for a facility where they can continue developing more aspects, such as pioneering groups, work groups, older age groups, family groups, etc.

At present the program of the camp is focused on upgrading the skills of the campers: 60 campers received Red Cross Achievement cards and 50 were awarded cards indicating progress in swimming. The staff has been interested in including Jewish content in the camp program. One summer project was the erection of a path to the City of Abraham.

The camp is a place for the approximately 220 different boys and girls who attended during July and August, to get acquainted with nature, and see whatever nature reveals, according to Mr. Tadmor. "It is not just a place to play regular games," he continued but to learn conversation. . .to give the youngsters a chance to see that a leaf is not just green. . .a chance to pick up a rock and see what lies under it. . .to see that a frog can be handled. . .to learn how to cook a meal utilizing nature."

Kiesinger's Stand On Statute Unknown

BONN — A spokesman for the Ministry of Justice said here last week that he did not know whether or not West German Chancellor Kurt George Kiesinger supports the statute of limitations which will bar the prosecution of war criminals for murder when it goes into effect at the end of next year.

At a meeting with William Wexler, national president of B'nai B'rith, five months ago, Kiesinger had promised to do all that he could to nullify the statute.

There has been considerable sentiment expressed inside and outside of West Germany for a postponement of the statute, if not its outright abolition, to prevent war criminals from escaping justice. But most members of the Bundestag, West German's lower house, apparently want to see the statute go into effect on schedule.

A majority of the Christian Democratic Party, the party of Kiesinger, recently went on record in favor of the statute. The Free Democratic Party is unanimously in favor; and among the Social Democrats, a majority is opposed to the statute.

Israel's Foreign Assistance Program Reaches Africa, Asia, Latin America

JERUSALEM — In northwestern Iran a team of Israeli experts is helping the Teheran Government rebuild a vast area devastated by an earthquake.

In Singapore, Israeli Army officers are training the cadre of the embryonic armed forces of that tiny nation.

In Nepal, the Congo and Uganda, parachutists tumble out of planes, exercising training they received at an Israeli parachute school.

In Ethiopia, Israeli-trained secret policemen protect visiting dignitaries, including in 1963, President General Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic, whose plane set down that year on a runway at Addis Ababa built by an Israeli concern.

In the Ivory Coast, Togo, Cameroon, Malawi, Niger, Dahomey, Liberia, Costa Rica and a score of other African and Latin-American countries, Israelis are organizing and training paramilitary youth movements designed along the lines of their own army's youth corps.

The varied projects are part of the Israeli foreign assistance program, which is now operating in 70 countries. There are Israeli experts working in — or students visiting Israel from — almost every country in Africa, Asia and Latin-America that is underdeveloped or that gained its independence recently.

Last month the Israeli Foreign Ministry Division of International Cooperation celebrated its 10th anniversary, and Foreign Minister Abba Eban described the dimensions of its operations as amazing.

Working on a budget that is minuscule compared with the aid allocations of larger nations, the division has brought 10,500 people from underdeveloped countries to Israel, and has sent 2,500 technicians abroad during the last decade to conduct training programs and institute pilot projects.

The figures are all the more impressive when it is remembered that the projects were set into motion while Israel was burdened with enormous development problems of her own.

In some years, the Israeli budget for foreign aid has been as low as $10-million, compared with the more than $2-billion that the United States distributes abroad annually.

The Israeli projects are as varied as they are widespread. The experts abroad teach agricultural techniques and public health, help build hotels, highways and airports, establish civil-service systems and demonstrate how to harness solar energy.

In some cases, their advice is eminently practical, such as in the half-dozen African countries where national lotteries have been instituted with Israeli assistance.

The least discussed projects, with few exceptions, are the military training and assistance programs.

The exceptions are those that have been disclosed previously by the governments on the receiving end. It is known, for instance, that the Israelis are training the army and air force in Uganda and that they have trained the parachutists of the Congo. In fact, Joseph D. Mobutu, the President of the former Belgian colony, earned his wings in Israel.

The Israelis also acknowledge that they are training the newly independent Singaporeans, but until only a year ago the Singapore Government tried to conceal the identity of the advisers by describing them as Mexicans, presumably to forestall criticism from neighboring Malaysia and Indonesia, which have larger Moslem populations.

The Israelis also admit that they have trained the police and security forces of Ethiopia — as a result, many Ethiopian officers speak Hebrew and at least one is said to have a command of Yiddish — and that they have established air force academies in Ghana and Uganda.

In all, the Israeli Defense Ministry acknowledges having "assistance projects" in 25 countries, half of which are in Africa. There almost surely are others they prefer not to disclose.

Despite her small size, Israel has also sent arms abroad on occasion. She supplied India with a substantial quantity of Israeli-manufactured 120-mm. mortars during the Indian-Chinese confrontation in 1962, and was reported to have provided similar weapons to Ghana, Nigeria and Uganda in the late nineteen-fifties.

She provided Burma with a quantity of World War II Spitfire fighters in 1953 and more recently has supplied Mystere jet fighters to at least one — unidentified — African country.

Both the military and civilian aspects of the activity abroad have provoked a series of Arab accusations about Israel's motive. A number of Arab leaders have denounced the programs as neocolonialist and neocolonialist, and some have charged Israel with supporting the anti-Moslem factions in various internal struggles in the

60 Arab Students Spend Day At Israel Medical Center

JERUSALEM — Sixty Arab students from universities in Cairo, Damascus, Beirut, Amman and other Arab cities who spent a day recently at Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center here as guests of the Hadassah Medical Organization, applauded vigorously when the vision of health aid to the entire region in a peaceful Middle East was laid before them.

The young men and women, whose parents lived on the West Bank which is presently under Israeli jurisdiction, showed keen interest as the Deputy Director General of the Hadassah Medical Organization, Dr. Jack Karpas, told them that the hospital served Arabs and Jews alike, and that Hadassah would like nothing better than to expand the services to serve all who needed them throughout the Middle East. Their response was warm to this and the vision of a peaceful region he laid before them.

The students had come to Israel from the surrounding Arab countries under the plan initiated by Israel to enable them to visit their families. When they crossed the Allenby Bridge over the Jordan River, the entire group was asked whether they wanted to see Israel institutions. Sixty of them asked to be shown the Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center and they were taken there.

Hostel Dedicates Wing As 'Harmony House'

JERUSALEM — A popular hostel here built and maintained by the Women's Division of the American Jewish Congress dedicated a new 132-bed wing this week as a "harmony house" to advance understanding among Arab and Jewish youth of Israel.

Mrs. Charles Snitow of Scarsdale, N.Y., president of the American Jewish Congress women's group, told a distinguished group of Israelis headed by Chief Justice Shimon Agranat and Mayor Teddy Kollek:

"Over the past 14 years, the Louise Waterman Wise Youth Hostel has served as a kind of 'United Nations of Youth,' bringing together young people of Israel with youth from 75 countries around the world.

"The opening of this new wing, named for the late Chaim Krongold, former chairman of the hostel's board of trustees, marks the beginning of a new program for the hostel.

"We hope to make of it a test tube for Arab-Jewish unity, a meeting ground and training center at which tomorrow's citizens of Israel — Arab and Jewish — may come to understand each other and forge bonds of friendship and fellowship for the future."

Plans are under way to train 30 to 40 Arab youth leaders at the hostel in a three-month training course beginning next October, according to David Frishman, director of the hostel. A group of Arab youth leaders from East Jerusalem paid a visit to the hostel last year, he recalled, adding: "The conversations were friendly and encouraging."

Knesset Considers Censorship Law

JERUSALEM — The Knesset gave its final reading last week to the Cabinet Law which, among other things, imposes strict censorship on deliberations of the Cabinet on matters concerning defense, security or anything else the Cabinet may define as secret.

Under the law, journalists and publishers may be prosecuted if they print news in violation of the decree. The formula finally incorporated into the law represented a compromise between the Cabinet's first draft, which would have made all Cabinet deliberations secret unless publication was specifically authorized, and a demand by the journalists and publishers associations that the law cover only military subjects.

The Cabinet Law will become part of what is known as Israel's "little constitution." Israel has no written constitution. The country is governed under a series of basic laws passed one-by-one over the years.

These laws govern the election of the Knesset, the President and other legislative and executive bodies. The new Cabinet Law will not change the basic formula under which the Prime Minister is chosen by the President after consultation with the various parties. The Cabinet assumes office after receiving a vote of confidence by the Knesset.

Munich Court Drops Charges Against Paper

BONN — A Munich district court announced that it has dropped charges against the right-wing neo-Nazi newspaper Deutsche National and Soldaten Zeitung for publishing a picture of Adolf Hitler on July 20, 1967, in violation of the law prohibiting the public display of Nazi symbols.

The court said the case fell under an amnesty granted in connection with a new, less stringent law.

He was a member of the Jewish War Veterans and past commander of the Lt. Leon Bloom Post, and of the United Veterans Council of Rhode Island. He was active in many civic and charitable organizations.

Besides his wife and mother, he is survived by two sons, David Bazar and Kenneth Bazar; a daughter, Mrs. Bernard Bush; a brother, Col. Clarence M. Bazar, and a sister, Mrs. Sidney Altman, all of Cranston.

SAMUEL FAIN

Funeral services for Samuel, 81, of 50 Palm Street, Hartford, Conn., formerly of Providence, who died Tuesday, were held the following day at the Weinstein Mortuary in Hartford. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Born in Providence, a son of the late David and Sarah (Feinberg) Fain, he moved to Hartford 29 years ago. He was educated in the Providence schools.

Mr. Fain was a member of the Beth Shalom Synagogue in Hartford, the Golden Age Club of the Jewish Community Center and other charitable organizations in Hartford.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Belle (Elovitz) Fain; three sons, Joel M. of Bethesda, Md., Arthur E. of West Hartford, Conn., and Edmund A. Fain of Newington, Conn.; three brothers, Jack Fain, Irving I. Fain and Archie Fain, all of Providence; five sisters, Mrs. Jean Kauffman, of Dallas, Texas, Mrs. Rebecca Sandler of Worcester, Mass., Mrs. Lester Emers and Mrs. Leo Rosen, both of Providence, and Mrs. Daniel Jacobs of Pawtucket, and seven grandchildren.

them. For this mischief, invariably we had our mouths washed out with soap. One Jewish mother complained about the practice. What annoyed her was that soap was made with pig fat, it wasn't kosher. She furnished the teacher with Kosher Sapolio for the next incident and said, "Wash away."

Public School 20 is more than a repository for the names of successful sons sprung from the sidewalks of the Lower East Side. Public School 20 represents one of the most visionary experiments in the history of human relationships, the making of an immigrant population into a citizen body politic.

The teachers in Public School 20 not only taught American history but shared it. The first students to cross its threshold were German, then came the Irish, then the Jews, the Italians and the Poles.

Each group took away something and each group left something there. The present-day students of Public School 20, mostly Negroes and Puerto Ricans, will one day write a similar story.

Hello Again!

Sports News By Warren Walden

HE ISN'T - IS - There's nothing rusty about "Rusty." That's evident when you see him almost flying around Taunton Greyhound Track. "Rusty" is the rabbit that provides the tense, exciting moment responsible for the cry that will never lose its thrill, "Here Comes Rusty!" And why is he called "Rusty?" I dunno. They're looking it up and if you'll stay tuned, I'll have the answer if an answer there is. Anihoo, you makes your selection and you buys your ticket and then you waits for the mechanical sound of "Rusty" starting on the rail beside the track and you waits for the announcer to say, "Here comes Rusty!" And then the greatest greyhounds in the world burst from the starting box and there isn't a dull demi-semi-quaver of a second until the winner chases the mechanical hare across the finish line.

GREATEST! No question about it. When you look the list over and see that an Irish Import, Wexford Fantasy, is on it and when you see the names of D.Q. Williams' "High Flotation" and John Orkney's "Cora Coker" and Henrietta Furmanik's "Frisky Squire" and Chuck Rink's "Short Buster" and Otto Mamino's "Orene McCoy" and others and others - well - you know that there are no greater greyhounds running in select greyhound circles.

ALSO THE GREATEST - Then you look and you see the name of the G.M. and read Joseph M. Linsey and you are assured that nothing but the best will be offered at "America's Blue Ribbon" Track because you know that Joseph M. will have nothing but the best. Class all the way. Everything the man does just has to be the best. Sometime take a ride up Waltham way and take a look at the Joseph M. Linsey Athletic Center at Brandeis University and you'll agree all the way. So, it is now said that "all roads lead to Taunton Track" and it can be added that when Mr. Linsey is answering telephones with each hand and ear and at the same time checking his closed-circuit TV-set to make sure that everything is operating smoothly and at the same time acting the part of a genial host greeting people with a smile - you'll realize the tremendous capacity possessed by this unusual fellow.

TEN YEARS! - The door opened one day last week and I walked Georgie Araujo who was one of the greatest little boxers ever to draw on a padded mitten. George is now employed in New York City as a Recreation Director and Youth Counselor. He plans on entering New York University this Fall for social studies that will equip him as either a teacher or social worker.

Naturally the conversation drifted to boxing and George revealed that he hasn't been near a boxing ring since 1958 which is ten years ago. Doesn't seem possible. "I don't even know who the champions are," he said. "Boxing is all right. It teaches respect for self and the other fellow. Leo Hunt's programs were the best."

Mr. Araujo is still painting and had an exhibit in New York a while back. He concentrates on semi-abstract efforts and, when not painting, uses whatever spare time he has reading and "cultivating his mind." He looks in good shape despite the fact that he tips the beam at 150 which is more than the 132 lbs, his best fighting weight back there in his boxing days.

ETC. ETC. ETCETERA - Barry O'Neill, gentlemanly boxer from Cranston, trained with Bob Foster at Grossingers where boxing preparations are now held in the Ski Shop area and not at the airport where they were held before, according to that man of much information, Joe Celletti. Barry may accompany Foster on a trip to England. . . . George Mitsmenn, Loew's Theatre impresario, is excited about a new football picture coming soon and about the Green Bay Packers. "It's the best one ever," says George. . . . A couple of former local baseball players look in the "pink" and remember Lefty Davis, a first baseman and pitcher? - And Billy Kirk who played every position well? - And if you can't say something good, don't say it! - And - CARRY ON!

NEW RED ROLE?

LONDON - The London Observer reported from Moscow that Soviet Russia is looking for a political solution of the Middle East conflict and is working in concert with the more moderate Arab leadership to bring Israel around to accepting a solution that will insure its safety in return for a troop withdrawal from occupied areas and other measures.

Israel's Foreign Aid Reaches 70 Countries

Sudan, Ethiopia, Somali and Chad. Shimon Amir, the director of the Israeli program, scoffs at this.

"We have no such grand design," he said in an interview. "Our foreign assistance program grew out of a desire for the sort of normal foreign relations we have never been able to have with the Arab states. For us it has been a way to leapfrog the wall of Arab hostility and establish normal international relations."

In some cases, the Israeli assistance has been carried out covertly. Singapore is one example. The project in Iran, which is the largest Israeli currently has under way, has also been shielded as much as possible from publicity.

There about 300 Israeli, including dependents, living and working in the Kazvin region of Iran, advising in the reconstruction of scores of villages that were destroyed by an earthquake.

The Israelis are engaged in a gigantic water-development project that will irrigate 100,000 acres, and comprehensive plans for dozens of new towns.

Since Iran is a Moslem country, the Israeli presence is a sensitive issue, but both nations seem to regard it as worthwhile.

Iran is important to Israel both as a link with the Moslem world and as a source of oil. Before the Arab-Israeli war last year, Iran provided nearly all of Israel's fuel supply. Since then, Israel has continued to buy Iranian oil but has pumped a supplementary supply from the captured Egyptians wells in the Sinai Peninsula.

The Iranians have overcome Arab objections to the Israeli's presence simply by denying that they are there.

Israel also conducts an agricultural development program in India that is unofficial, if not actually covert.

The two countries have no diplomatic relations, and India consistently votes against Israel in the United Nations.

The Israelis make no secret of how they measure the success of their foreign aid programs. When Mr. Amir was asked what the yardstick was, he reached into the top drawer of his desk in the Foreign Ministry and extracted a dogeared listing of the votes on the United Nations resolutions dealing with the Middle East.

"Take a look at the vote on the Yugoslav resolution in July of last year," he said. "That was very much an anti-Israel resolution. Of 30 African countries voting, 18 either opposed it or abstained. Twelve voted for it. Among the Latin-American countries, every one opposed it except Cuba."

"We find our friends usually vote with us, or at least abstain," Mr. Amir said, "and many of those friends are friends we first made through our assistance projects."

Despite some setbacks, the Israelis are satisfied with their program and the results that it has produced. As Aharon Remez, the first director of the program, observed in an article commemorating its 10th anniversary, "It has served Israel's political purposes well."

NPD INCREASES DENIED

BONN - A member of the West German Parliament denied a charge by the Soviet Army paper, Red Star, that membership in the neo-Nazi National Democratic Party had increased in the West German Army in the past year. In his answer to the Soviet charge, Social Democratic Deputy Hans Iven said that such memberships had not increased in either of the past two years. The Red Star had claimed that NPD members in the West German Army had increased from 700 to 900.

Cubby Broccoli, who made a fortune co-producing the James Bond films in London, is moving his operations back to Hollywood. . . . Cary Grant rented a suite at the Hotel Warwick here.

Sen. McGovern has a basketball court set up for his five children in the backyard of their Chevy Chase home. The equipment came from their former next-door neighbors, the Hubert Humphreys. . . . When the Humphreys moved from Chevy Chase they disposed of many items. The McGoverns bought the basketball equipment from them.

Deborah Kerr is on her way to Wichita to co-star with Burt Lancaster in the film being directed there by Joan Frankenhelmer. . . . Charlton Heston, who starred in "Planet of the Apes," will star in the sequel, "Planet of the Men". . . . Joe DiMaggio gave up smoking. It helps him cure his ulcers. . . . Derek Golby, who directed "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern," has taken over the direction of "Her First Roman," the Richard Kiley-Leslie Uggams show.

Satchel Paige, who was signed by the Braves this week, came into the big league in 1948. That was when Cleveland's Bill Veck asked his star pitcher, Bob Feller, how he'd feel if the club signed Paige. "Great," said Feller, referring to their post-season tours. "I've pitched against Paige one month a year for 12 years." . . . Paige helped them win the pennant that year.

After 4 1/2 years as head of the USIS in Vietnam, Barry Zorthian will come home to teach at Tufts University's Fletcher School of Diplomacy. . . . Mayor Lindsay and Parks Commissioner Heckscher will appear at the Yiddish Theater Music Festival in Central Park, Aug. 20. . . . Joe Levine explained why he opened "The Graduate" in Tokyo first; the Japanese won't distribute a foreign-made film unless it has its premiere there. Saves face and grosses.

John O'Neill, whose sports holdings include the Harlem Globetrotters, the Oakland soccer club and the Miami Dolphins football team, was at Shor's the other day. He revealed that the Dolphins haven't suffered, knock wood, a single injury in training camp, since substituting jogging for calisthenics. It may spread to the other clubs.

"Fiddler on the Roof" broke Baltimore's all-time record last week, grossing $100,500. . . . Rod McKuen's poetry book, "Lonesome Cities," will have his cover photo taken by Frank Sinatra. . . . When a thunderstorm over the Stony Brook Festival recently drove Jan Peerce and his audience into the non-air conditioned college gym, Peerce had them all remove their jackets and ties. . . . Twenty minutes after Sen. McGovern declared for the presidency, he was practically incommunicado; Secret Service men arrived and changed his phone number. BARNEY GLAZER

In Hollywood

"Funny Girl" producer Ray Stark purposely previewed the filmed version in Milwaukee and Dallas, two tough movie towns where the ethnic background is not similar to the film story, which is basically Jewish.

Dianna Ross and The Supremes open at the Coconut Grove on the High Holidays but you can bet your dancing boots that Sammy Davis Jr. won't attend. . . The Funk and Wagnalls Standard College Dictionary includes "kike" and "jew down" but makes it clear that both are offensive terms.

Sidney Miller, producer of the new Donald O'Connor late-night show, will never forget the Chanukah party given by B'nai B'rith for orphans at Vista del Mar. The youngsters' faces lit up when they received a traveling bag with their name inscribed. Said Miller, "It seemed to give the youngsters hope that each would soon travel to a permanent home."

Barney Balaban, Paramount's beloved board member, refused to accept his retirement payments when his annuity became effective on his 50th birthday. The executive told his life insurance agent, "I'm sorry but I'm not ready for retirement. Set the date ahead another five years." Since then, Balaban has changed the commencement date frequently. Now 80, he still continues to delay his retirement age as a matter for future reflection.

Jack Benny started to walk into Walter O'Malley's private box at Chavez Ravine but Police Captain "Tiny" Carter stopped him. Orders were orders and Jack had not been okehed for entry. This despite the fact that Carter knows Benny both personally and as a celebrity. Finally, O'Malley came out and gave his approval. Through it all, Benny never once tried to push his weight around.

Did you know that Tony Curtis' former father-in-law was a former Luftwaffe pilot? I wonder how he used to explain it all to this nice Jewish boy and I now wonder if it had anything to do with Tony's divorce.

George Jessel introduced George Stevens, director of "The Greatest Story Ever Told," as "the man who made the life of our Saviour." What George really meant was "the life of the Saviour." At least, I haven't been advised that Jessel has converted to Christianity.

During a recent testimonial for a studio executive, Jessel praised Hal Kemp, who at the time was booking stars for many NBC-TV shows. The Toastmaster praised Kemp as if he were an intimate or first-cousin but following the event George whispered to me, "He never once offered me a job at NBC."

Did you know that the Wagnerian Festival in the German city of Bayreuth each summer flies Israel's flag alongside the flags of other nations? And that there is still a handful of Jewish merchants in Wagner's favorite city, their children receiving religious instruction from a rabbi who journeys there from Nuremberg?

I'll never forget how Billy Wilder finally persuaded an uncooperative dog in "Irma la Douce" to lap up a bowl of champagne. He filled the bowl with chicken soup. . . Nor will I easily cast off the pleasures of watching Jack Kruschen, a nice Jewish boy, portray Christmas Morgan in "The Unsinkable Molly Brown."

As Sophie Tucker once told Betty Hutton, "Long after you young convertibles have run out of gas, we old trucks will still be delivering."

LIBRARY NAMED
TEL AVIV — The new central library building at Tel Aviv University was dedicated in the name of the Mexican philanthropist, Elias Sourasky, who was on hand for the ceremonies. Present also was Pinhas Sapir, Minister Without Portfolio and secretary-general of the Israel Labor Party, Dr. George S. Wise, president of the university, and several hundred faculty members and guests. The four-story library will eventually contain a half million books and facilities for 1,000 students.

Ask Lindsay To Seek Adoption Of Federal Food Stamp Plan

NEW YORK — A national Jewish organization asked New York City Mayor John Lindsay recently to seek city adoption of the Federal food stamp plan both for the city's general poor population and particularly for its Jewish poor, it was learned recently. The request was made to the Mayor by the National Jewish Commission on Law and Public Affairs (COLPA), an organization formed to assist Orthodox Jews in areas of public policy.

Harvey Schwartz, chairman of COLPA's newly-formed committee on social welfare, declared in the letter that many needy Orthodox Jewish families were ineligible for the present surplus food distribution program administered by the city. Under existing law, a city may have either program but not both.

Such families, he said in the letter "would be able to benefit under the liberalized eligibility standards of the food stamp plan." He pointed out also that the types of food distributed in the city's surplus food program were limited and often of a type forbidden to observant Jews. In contrast, he noted, the variety of foods available under the food stamp plan was virtually unlimited. Users of Federal food stamps may apply them to purchase of standard packaged foods in any grocery.

In most of them a wide variety of rabbinically-certified kosher products is available, and "thus, full participation in the program's benefits, denied to Orthodox Jews by the present surplus food program, would be available to them under the food stamp plan," Schwartz said. He noted also that the food surplus plan provides for food distribution only once a month and only at a local food surplus depot, whereas the food stamp program, "because of absence of these restrictive limitations, would be a far simpler and less demeaning method of providing food aid to needy families."

Economic Conference Announces Investment

JERUSALEM — The world economic conference of Jewish financiers and industrialists, convened here by Prime Minister Levi Eshkol last April, has resulted so far in joint economic projects representing investments of about $50 million, it was announced here last week. It was also announced that Deputy Finance Minister Zvi Dinstein has been put in charge of follow-up operations arising from the conference.

Forty-six projects are now in preparation or in the first stages of implementation, an increase of 14 since the economic conference closed. Among these are a half-million dollar investment by Alden Rugs, of Atlanta, Ga. in an Israeli firm that will manufacture plush carpets; a $900,000 investment by Baxter International, of Chicago for the manufacture of blood preserving systems for export; and a $700,000 investment in the expansion of a local furniture company which will be underwritten by the Empire State Chair Co. of New York, Bentwood of Canada and Zuckerman of Vienna.

Time To Spare
By GERALD ANDREWS - Retirement Adviser

Education is for you
Time was when a man who had passed the 65 mark in life considered his school days were over. Not any more.

Increasing numbers of people in every age group, including ours, are studying something, whether the subject be technical or nontechnical, artistic, literary or just plain practical.

They're doing it in all sorts of ways: in college as part of the student body; at home by correspondence, recordings or TV; in school through government sponsored programs and community adult schools; at courses offered by the different Y's, the Salvation Army and other groups.

Senior citizens make use of all these facilities. And then there are the senior centers and clubs which hold classes tailored to the needs of their members. Often retirement homes and colonies provide their own educational programs and instruction.

Why all this accelerated cerebral activity? Well, one reason seems fairly obvious: so many new developments are taking place in the world that what we've learned quickly becomes dated. We simply have to brush up our knowledge to keep even reasonably well informed.

This applies to seniors as much as anyone. Most of us now have a third of our lives still ahead of us when we retire. Whether or not we enjoy this time often depends on how well we have prepared for it and on whether we continue to learn about ourselves and the world around us, rather than settle for a life of "bingo and gossip."

"The evening of life," wrote Joseph Joubert, a 19th century French essayist, "brings its own lamp." We might add that, to shine brightly in this latter half of the 20th century, the lamp must be primed with knowledge.

So it seems appropriate to mention that Harvest Years magazine, beginning in June, is running a series of articles called "A Time for Learning." They explore the question of education as it relates to the senior citizen and come up with some interesting answers.

If you're like to know more about these articles, write for information to Harvest Years Publishing Company, 104 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016

HONEY BALLS (Teiglech)

1 lb Honey
1 glass Water, 8 oz
2 c Sugar
4 Eggs, beaten
1 T Shortening, melted
1/4 t Salt
1 1/2 c Flour, all purpose
1/4 t Ginger

In large pot, combine honey, water and sugar and cook until it begins to boil. Lower heat. Blend shortening, salt and flour - add eggs and mix until it forms a dough. Knead on floured surface (if too soft to handle, add more flour).
With palm of hand, roll dough into long, thin rope-like lengths about 1/2" to 3/4" in diameter, stretching the dough as you roll it. When you reach a workable length, start at one end, make a small knot and cut. Continue knotting and cutting until all dough is used, and you have a mass of little individual knots. Place all these knots, or teiglech, into the pot of honey and cook over low heat for at least 25 minutes, tightly covered. When teiglech are golden brown, remove pot from heat. Combine ginger with 1 cup boiling water and pour this over the teiglech. Stir with wooden spoon. Remove teiglech. Roll in ground nuts or coconut, if desired.

VANILLA CHIFFON PIE

Approx. 72 calories per serving
9" Pie Plate
375 degree - 5 minutes
Serves 8

Crust:

1/2 c Graham Cracker Crumbs (7 crackers)
1 t Sugar
1 T Butter or Margarine
Grease side and bottom of pan - grease the sides heavier. Mix crumbs and sugar together and press into pan. Bake. Cool and fill with following:
1 env. plain gelatin
1/4 c Water
3 Eggs, separated
2 1/4 t low-calorie Sweetener
1 c Skim Milk
1 t Vanilla
1/2 c dried Skim Milk
1/2 c ice Water
1 T Lemon Juice
1 t Vanilla

Soften gelatin in 1/4 cup cold water and set aside. Beat yolks with sweetener in upper part of double boiler. Place over hot water, add 1 cup milk gradually, beating constantly. Cook, stirring, until slightly thickened. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Remove from heat and add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Chill until partially set.

Beat whites until stiff peaks form. Beat the dried skim milk with the ice water, lemon juice and vanilla until stiff. Fold this, with the egg whites, into the gelatin mixture. Turn into baked crust. Refrigerate.

Variation: To make EGG NOG CHIFFON PIE substitute 1 teaspoon rum extract for vanilla in gelatin mixture. Sprinkle nutmeg over top.
Vanilla Chiffon Pie may be topped with low-calorie Whipped Topping and a sprinkling of grated or shaved unsweetened chocolate.

FLUDEN

8x8 pan, greased
350 degree oven
1 1/4 hours

Dough:

4 c sifted Flour, all purpose
2 t Baking Powder
1 c Sugar

1/2 c Oil
2 Eggs, well beaten
1/3 c Water, approx.

Filling:

1 c Sugar, mixed with
1 t Cinnamon
1 c finely ground Walnuts
2/3 c Strawberry or Pineapple Jam

1 c shredded Coconut
3 med. Apples, peeled and thinly sliced

1/2 c Raisins

Sift flour, baking powder and sugar in a bowl. Add oil, eggs and enough water to make soft dough.

Str only until ingredients are blended. Divide dough into 5 pieces - 4 pieces of equal size - the 5th, about 1/3 larger than the others. Roll the large piece into a 12 1/2" square and line the pan, pressing the dough smoothly against bottom and sides and extending slightly over the rim.

Sprinkle 1/5th of sugar-cinnamon mixture and 1/2 the nuts evenly over the bottom.

Roll out another piece of dough into 8x8 square. Place over the first layer and spread with 1/2 the jam and 1/2 the coconut plus another 1/5th of cinnamon-sugar mix. Roll out third piece of dough into 8x8 square and place over second layer. Cover with apples and raisins and another 1/5th of sugar-cinnamon.

Roll out 4th piece of dough into 8x8 square and place over apple layer - spread with remaining nuts, jam, coconut and another 1/5th of sugar-cinnamon mix.

Roll out last piece of dough into 8 1/2 x 8 1/2 square. Place over top, pressing edges of this layer and overlap from bottom layer, firmly together. Sprinkle with remaining sugar-cinnamon mix. Bake until rich brown. Cool in pan and cut into squares.
