Children's Service To Discuss Era Of New Jewish Family

"The Jewish Family: A New Era" will be the topic of a panel discussion to be presented at the 43rd Annual Meeting of the Jewish Family & Children's Service. The meeting will be held on Monday, October 16, at 8 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center. Panelists are Dr. Eliot B. Barron, consultant psychiatrist to the agency; Sigmund J. Hellmann, executive director of the JCC, and Paul L. Segal, executive director of the Jewish Family & Children's Service.

Mrs. Bertram M. Brown is chairman of the meeting and Mrs.

Cyril L. Berkelhammer and Mrs. Richard E. Loebenberg are hospitality cochairmen.

Alvin W. Pansey will be installed for his third term as president of the board of directors of the agency, according to the announcement of S. Samuel Kesteman, chairman of the nominating committee.

Other officers of the board are Ralph P. Semonoff, first vice president; Harris N. Rosen, second vice president; Lawrence H. Hopfenberg, treasurer; Mrs. Walter J. Nelson, secretary; and Norman G. Orodener, legal counsel.

Educator Nyquist To Investigate Fuentes' Fitness For Office

NEW YORK — The counsel to the State Education Department said last week that the State Education Commissioner, Ewald B. Nyquist, would act on a request, which is expected to be submitted shortly, that he look into Luis Fuentes' fitness to hold a state certificate as a school superintendent.

Mr. Fuentes, who was appointed superintendent of Community School District I on the Lower East Side last July, has been accused by Jewish and Italian groups of making anti-Semitic remarks and other derogatory statements about ethnic groups while serving as a principal in the former Ocean district in Brooklyn.

Oliveri to Make Request

At a news conference last week at the Commodore Hotel, Assemblyman Antonio G. Oliveri, Democrat of Manhattan, said he would ask Mr. Nyquist to review Mr. Fuentes' fitness to hold state certification, a requirement for the district post. Also present at the news conference were officials of the New York Chapter of the American Jewish Committee and the Italian-American Coalition.

Robert D. Stone, the State Education Department's counsel, said later, in response to an inquiry, that the commissioner would look into the matter if Mr. Nyquist is "presented with a request to annul Mr. Fuentes' certificate."

Mr. Stone said that "moral character was relevant to the continued possession" of a state certificate or professional license. He added that he could recall no previous instance where a challenge to moral fitness had involved allegations of racism and bigotry.

Mr. Oliveri is the lawyer for Mrs. Antoinette DiMauro, a member of the District I board who is critical of Mr. Fuentes' appointment.

Bomb Explodes In Supermarket In Jerusalem, Injuring Three

JERUSALEM — A bomb exploded among racks of wine and whisky bottles in Jerusalem's largest supermarket last week, sending shards of broken glass in every direction. It was the first serious terrorist incident here in two years.

Although the store was filled with dense, pre-Sabbath crowds of shoppers, only three persons were injured slightly by the flying glass.

Policemen immediately surrounded the large, modern store and combed the neighborhood for suspects. By the evening, a total of 134 persons, many of them Arab workers from a nearby construction site, had been detained for questioning.

A police spokesman said that he assumed the bomb had been planted by Arab terrorists, but

Arab Foreign Ministers Object United States Tightens Restrictions On Arabs

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Arab foreign ministers said here that they would retaliate against countries taking measures against Arab nationals simply because they are Arabs.

The foreign ministers announced after a heavily guarded meeting here that "the Arab states will take the necessary steps to counter these actions on the basis of reciprocity, should these measures continue and be affirmed."

The United States, according to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, is trying to identify Arabs residing in the country who the Government believes are potential troublemakers. The United States also is intensively screening travelers from Arab nations.

Other countries tightening restrictions on the travel of Arab nationals include West Germany, which has expelled some Arabs, barred others from entering and banned some Arab organizations.

N.Y. Group Under Surveillance
Employees of the Arab

Information Center in New York have reported recently that Federal agents have kept them under surveillance.

The Arab foreign ministers' statement carefully avoided mentioning any country by name or inference. The ministers said that they "deplored any arbitrary and discriminatory measure directed exclusively against these nationals and citizens."

The Arab foreign ministers attending the General Assembly meet here often. Their private meetings are held in conference rooms, with United Nations security forces guarding the doors. Federal agents and New York City policemen — both of whom escort the Arab ministers to and from the United Nations — are usually nearby.

Syrian Not Mentioned

The statement today did not mention the case of a Syrian diplomat, whose visa, granted October 2, to enter the United States to attend the current General Assembly session was recently revoked in Rome.

The diplomat, Dia-Allah el-Fattal, had previously served his Government in this country — in Washington and at the United Nations.

United States officials deny that the withdrawal of the Syrian diplomat's visa had anything to do with the arrest in Syria of an American military attache, Maj. Robert H. Barrett, who was stationed at the United States Embassy in Amman, Jordan. The Major is scheduled to be formally charged in Syria with espionage, a crime punishable by death.

The case of Mr. El-Fattal raised questions here as to whether the United States was violating the "headquarters agreement" between it and the United Nations.

The agreement says in part: "The Federal, state or local authorities of the United States shall not impose any impediments to transit to or from the headquarters district" of United Nations officials, diplomats, journalists and certain other invited individuals.

A United Nations spokesman said that he knew of no restrictions on persons coming to the United Nations. But others here say that the United States has barred persons from coming in to the country to go to the United Nations. Such a practice is not normal but it is not unique either, it was said, and it is believed that the practice has not been challenged.

Arabs Vow Revenge Against West Germany

CAIRO — The Presidents of Egypt, Libya and Syria have announced that the three countries would retaliate against West German citizens for the "arbitrary and inhuman measures" taken against Arab nationals by West German authorities.

The decision by Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt, Muammar el-Qaddafi of Libya and Hafez al-Assad of Syria at the close of a two-day meeting here was announced by the secretariat of the Federation of Arab Republics, which is made up of the three countries. There was no elaboration.

was unable to say whether it was the work of any particular group.

Two years ago last month 13 persons were injured in the bombing of a restaurant and bakery here.

Last week's attack was the second on the supermarket, called Supersol, which is on a major intersection in downtown Jerusalem directly across from a large hotel. The first explosion ripped through the store on February 21, 1969, killing two persons.

Since then, elaborate security precautions have been taken at the store. A clerk posted at the door regularly inspects the purses and shopping bags of every shopper, and security guards are posted elsewhere in the market.

Elections For Chief Rabbi To Take Place This Sunday

TEL AVIV — Chief rabbis for Israel's two religious communities are to be elected this Sunday, and after nominations closed in Jerusalem it appeared that candidates backed by the Government were certain to be chosen.

The rabbis, one for the Ashkenazic, or Western, community and the other for the Sephardic, or Oriental Jews, are to be named by an electoral college of 150 rabbis and laymen.

Election of the candidates supported by Premier Golda Meir's Government, it is believed, would avert a threatened conflict between the religious establishment and the state.

After nominations closed, with candidates requiring at least 25 signatures of electoral-college members, Rabbi Shlomo Goren, the contender for the Ashkenazic post, had 104, and his opponent, the incumbent rabbi, Isser Y. Unterman, had 31.

The incumbent Sephardic Chief Rabbi, Yitzhak Nissim, had 98 signatures, and the man trying to unseat him, Rabbi Yosef Ovadia, the Sephardic Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv, had 40.

The balloting on Sunday will be secret, and surprises are considered possible, but the show of strength by Rabbi Goren and Rabbi Nissim seemed to assure their victories. In the last elections, in 1964, Rabbi Unterman beat Rabbi Goren by three votes.

The chief rabbis preside over the Supreme Rabbinical Council and Supreme Rabbinical Court, which interpret religious law. In matters of personal status — marriage and divorce — the parliament has given the two rabbis exclusive authority and their rulings are binding.

Mrs. Meir has pressed strongly for the election of Rabbi Goren, who is considered a liberal in the religious establishment, which is controlled by Orthodox Jews. She has indicated that unless he is elected it might become necessary to limit the rabbinate's power over nonreligious Jews in matters of personal status.

Asks Readers To Send Letters About USSR 'Diploma Tax'

All of us have heard or read tragic stories of children kidnapped from their homes and held hostage. A ransom note is sent to distraught parents informing them that for X amount of money their child will be set free unharmed. A new kind of kidnapping, ransom and hostage situation is now taking place in the Soviet Union. Any educated Jew — and this includes even high school graduates — must pay a new exit fee before being permitted to leave Russia. This "diploma tax" ranges between $5,000 and $30,000 per person. Can you imagine the predicament of a young couple eager to leave the Soviet Union facing the blackmailing demand of $25,000. This outrageous demand is tantamount to establishing a slavery status for our brothers in the Soviet Union.

We dare not be silent! We dare not say "I'm tired already of demonstrating and expressing protest. And who knows whether it does any good, anyhow?"

If such a thought occurs to you, think of the many thousands of Russian Jews, think of them as individual men, women and children, think of their hopes, their yearnings and their dreams.

And there is indeed something that you can do! I implore every reader of this page to write letters or send telegrams expressing their indignation and requesting that every human effort should be exended to rescind this cruel and immoral edit. These communications should be addressed to: Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin, 1125 16th Street, Washington, D.C. 20036. Also to the White House, to the State Department and to our senators and congressmen in Washington.

Please do not neglect doing this! After you yourself have done this, organize any club or organization to which you belong — Jewish or nonsectarian — and have them help in deluging our nation's capital with letters and telegrams.

Our sages have taught that this mitzvah of Pidyon Shvuyim — redemption of hostages — takes precedence over all other mitzvot of the Torah.

RABBI SAUL LEEMAN
Chairman
R.I. Conference
on Soviet Jewry

P.S. Reports are reaching us about individual cases. For instance, Mark and Svetlana Garfinkel of Minsk who both hold M.D. degrees have been asked to pay $26,000 as an exit fee for themselves and their two children, Gena and Boris. Moshe Shmulian, an engineer from Riga, and his wife Dina who holds Ph.D. and M.D. degrees, have been asked to pay $40,000 for themselves and Mrs. Shmulian's mother. They are among many others we already know of who are faced with similar demands.

Rabbi Baruch Korff Writes Of Rabbi Rosen's Career

Twenty-five years ago Dr. Abram L. Sachar, National Director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, met Rabbi Nathan Rosen, my good friend, schoolmate and colleague. The Rabbi had just returned from overseas service as a U.S. army chaplain. Dr. Sachar persuaded him to join the Hillel family.

Before enlisting in the Chaplaincy Corps, Rabbi Rosen held several outstanding Rabbinical positions. His first, that of spiritual leader of the synagogues of Savannah, Georgia. From there he was called to become Rabbi of the largest conservative congregation in Brooklyn — Temple Petach Tikvah.

Rabbi Rosen, a graduate of Columbia University, is the holder of two Smichas — advanced Rabbinical degrees. One, granted by the Rabbinical College of New Haven and the other by the Isaac Elchanen Seminary of Yeshiva University of New York.

In February 1947 Dr. Sachar introduced Rabbi Rosen as the Founding Director at a campus Reception tendered by Brown University and attended by President Henry Wriston and other dignitaries. He expressed his confidence that under Rabbi Rosen's leadership Hillel would flourish. And so it did.

The first Hillel quarters were housed in one room in historic Frobels Hall. The very same room now is the Director's office. Today Hillel occupies the entire building.

How this came about is a story in itself. In 1950 Henry Hassenfeld, one of the moving spirits responsible for bringing Hillel to Brown University, volunteered to help acquire a Hillel House. He joined Rabbi Rosen and a real estate agent in a search for a suitable building "near the campus." The search proved fruitless. Rabbi Rosen then jestingly remarked to the agent, "when Frobels Hall becomes available, let me know."

About 15 years later Rabbi Rosen received a call from the agent informing him that Frobels Hall was for sale. The Rabbi immediately alerted Joseph Ress, who that very evening met in Mr. Ress's home with him and Merrill Hassenfeld and arranged for the purchase. Rabbi Rosen then met with a small group of community leaders. Among them were Max Grant, Joseph Ress, Samuel Rosen, Merrill Hassenfeld, Alexander Rumpel and Mrs. Philip Dorenbaum, and the necessary funds for the purchase of Frobels Hall was provided. Samuel Rapaport Jr. contributed the additional funds for the restoration and conversion of Frobels Hall into the Samuel Rapaport Jr. Hillel (Continued on page 6)

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

A Leadership Luncheon

By BERYL SEGAL

My wife came home from a Leadership Luncheon held recently at the home of the Merrill L. Hassenfelds, and said:

"The future of the Jewish people, and of Israel in particular, is secure as long as there is such eagerness to work among the young women."

She was referring to the gathering of older women, not-so-young women and younger women assembled in the magnificent gardens of the Hassenfelds, to learn of the needs of the Jewish Federation and to map the techniques of a campaign for the coming year in Rhode Island.

To me it was very significant. I read again the story of the General Jewish Committee, now the Federation of Rhode Island, and discovered that it was the late Henry Hassenfeld, while he was president of GJC, who insisted on creating an independent Women's Division, with its own set of officers, by-laws and methods of campaigning.

Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, Young Women's Division, Campaign Event

Some of the women at the gathering may still have remembered the days of tea parties, coffee hours and M-Days, the Telethons and the ringing of doorbells in Jewish homes, calling the women of the households to "Mobilize for Mercy."

The job was not an easy one. Women were not used to the idea of giving independently of their husbands. Oh, the Jewish woman gave to local charities, to National Women's organizations, to favorite educational projects. But to give to the tune of hundreds of thousands of dollars, for that a program of education was needed.

And that program of education was provided by the Women's Division of the Federation, then the GJC. Women were not to tag along on the giving of their husbands but to have the duty and, yes, the privilege of giving on their own.

They seem to have succeeded. And it came about not by proclamations and revolutions of the Women's Liberation type. Far from it. No war was declared between husband and wife. It was a natural assertion of the role of women in the community and the understanding of the needs of the times. These needs have to be met by both men and women, and how else can one take part in fulfilling these urgent responsibilities if not by committing oneself?

The badge of Jewishness today is social responsibility. Of the three pillars on which our world rests, according to our Rabbis, the one that supports our world is Doing Acts of Kindness. In that we all share. The other two, the study of Torah and the worship of God, are unfortunately the prerogative of the few. Our homes are devoid of any vestige of Jewishness. For better or for worse, our homes are like the homes of every American. We do not get up in the morning to study the Torah, and do not return in the evening to study some more. Most of us worship God once a week or twice a year. Certainly not enough to sustain us.

Consumer Scorecard

On Christmas Eve, 1970, the Wall Street Journal noted that after two years in the White House President Nixon's proposals for "stiffened consumer protection laws have either failed to live up to expectations or have never materialized."

Now we are nearing Christmas 1972, and soon Nixon will have been four years in the White House. What's the full scorecard?

At last, one major and potentially great piece of consumer protection legislation is going on our statute books — a law to create an independent Federal commission with broad powers to establish mandatory safety standards for consumer products.

This is the sole piece of legislation that could turn out to be of prime significance to you and me, as consumers.

But even on this one, there was a fight until the last minute between those in Congress who wanted to make the commission an independent agency and the Nixon administration. (The Nixon administration favored the bill's aims, but it and spokesmen for business wanted the Food and

And yet we are Jews. With us the question is not "Who is a Jew?" but what is one to do in order to be a Jew? Let the government of Israel decide who is a Jew; for us the problem is what is a Jew to do? What is expected of a Jew?

The answer seems to be To Help Others, to Suffer when Other People Suffer, and to Alleviate their Suffering.

Here is what Moshe Krystal writes in his article entitled "Who is a Good Jew in America?"

"The question is very actual today in America. I do not believe that one can be called 'a good Jew' if he does not help others."

"A 'Good Jew' is one who helps with his own life to strengthen Jewish existence and to secure the future of the Jewish people."

How does one help secure the existence of his people?

By saving Jewish lives in parts of the world where they are in danger.

By providing a safe place for them, preferably in Israel.

By supporting schools for Jewish children.

By seeing to it that our elderly men and women have a comfortable home, a well appointed home, with all the necessary medical and physical equipment.

By being on the alert that Jewish name and honor are not besmirched. By acting honorably wherever they are and whatever they do.

By helping in the dozens of commitments of the Federations of the country in the effort to maintain a well balanced Jewish community.

In all this the Women's Division is an equal partner with the men, having a share in all the activities of the Federation of Rhode Island.

All this was demonstrated at the gathering of the women of Rhode Island in preparation for the 1972 campaign.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Drug Administration to have the standard-making authority.)

In 1970, a special commission had urged the creation of an independent agency after a two-year study and estimates that 20 million injuries and 30,000 deaths resulted each year from the use of products in and around the home. Another business-sponsored study had attributed one-fourth of all household accidents to faulty design of manufactured products.

The new independent commission will have power to prohibit the sale of products that cannot be made reasonably safe by mandatory standards and to ban the sale of products that are inherently unsafe. It will be able to order manufacturers to recall unsafe products and to replace them or rebate the purchase price. It will be able to inspect manufacturing operations, subpoena records, conduct compliance tests.

There are stiff criminal penalties in the law for willful violators of safety standards and moderate civil penalties too for "knowing" violations.

No doubt about it. This law is PROGRESS. What else?

JCC To Celebrate Veterans Day With Two Trips, Disney Movie

The Veterans Day holiday will be celebrated by three special programs for children of all ages at the Jewish Community Center.

The Center is offering a two day overnight trip to New York City for senior high school boys and girls in grades 10 to 12 on Sunday and Monday, October 22 and 23. The travelers will go by train to New York and will take a boat ride to Staten Island and the Statue of Liberty, and will visit Chinatown, Greenwich Village and a dozen additional points of interest in the city.

Registration is limited to the first 30 Center members who apply.

Junior high school boys and girls will travel to Plymouth, Massachusetts, on Monday, October 23, leaving the Center at 9 a.m. and returning at 6 p.m. Enrollment will be open to 7th, 8th and 9th grade students who are Center members.

Elementary school age boys and girls will be offered "The Festival of Folk Heroes," a full length Disney film feature, at the Center on Monday, October 23, from 3 to 4 p.m.

Admission is open only to boys and girls in grades 1 to 6. Pre-school children will not be admitted. Film tickets are now available at the Center office.

All regular Monday classes and groups for elementary school age boys and girls will be suspended at the Center on Monday, October 23. The elementary gamerooms will be open from 1 to 5 p.m.

Moses Brown Book Fair Features Music, Chess, Athletic Events

Rock music, a glee club concert, a chess tournament, faculty-student athletic events, varsity sports and competition highlight Moses Brown School's three day Fall Festival, a Book Fair and Homecoming weekend rolled into one.

The annual Book Fair, sponsored by the Parents' Council, opened on October 12 in the school field house. A student-faculty touch football game was held at the field house on October 12 and a chess tournament followed that evening.

The Book Fair will continue on Friday, October 13, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. with a rock concert by David Derbyshire and his band at the field house from 7 to 9 p.m. On Saturday, October 14, the Fair will be open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. coinciding with the school's Homecoming Day. Highlighting the Saturday morning activities will be a concert by the Lambrequins, Lincoln School's choir, at 11:15 o'clock.

More than 1,000 new books in all classifications for young and old readers will be on display. Decorations for the Fair are by Mrs. Lawrence Gordon and her committee. Paperbacks and record albums will be sold under the direction of Mrs. Harris Rosen and Mrs. Melvin Alperin, and will be available on a cash and carry basis. Other books may be ordered with delivery assured in late November.

Booths will include fall plants and flowers, Mrs. Thomas Rouillard and Mrs. Michael Carley; coffee, cider and doughnuts, Mrs. Kenneth Steingold; Parents' Council, Mrs. N. Everett Picchione; arts and handicrafts show and sale, Mrs. Sheldon Summer. Proceeds from the Fair will go toward books and audio-visual equipment for the lower, middle and upper school libraries.

Book Fair chairmen are Mrs. Burton Samors and Mrs. J. William Pinkos. Other committee members include Mrs. Wilson Utter, prizes; Mrs. Richard Godfrey; Mrs. Benjamin Harris, setting up booths; Mrs. Howard Hall, billing; Mrs. Herbert Rosen, Mrs. Herbert Kolsky, cashiers; Mrs. Robert Fischer and Mrs. Sheldon Summer, special events; Mrs. Peter Farago and Mrs. Allan Fine, orders; Mrs. Peter Mott, transportation; Mrs. George Yan, Mrs. Stanley Goldstein, Mrs. Joseph Chazan, liaison with other schools; and Mrs. S. Frederick Slafsky, publicity.

Senator Pell To Speak At Community Center

U.S. Senator Claiborne Pell will appear to discuss his views on campaign issues on Wednesday, October 18, at 8 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center.

Senator Pell will be opposed for his Senate seat by John H. Chafee, former Governor of Rhode Island and former Secretary of the Navy, who spoke at the Center on September 24.

This will be the final program in the Rhode Island Focus series. Dr. Edward Beiser will serve as moderator.

House. It is located in the heart of the campus and is used by Hillel students, faculty, B'nai B'rith lodges and chapters and the R.I. Bureau of Jewish Education. To help Hillel carry out its varied program of cultural, social and religious activities, the G.J.C. now the JFRI jointly with National B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, through the years, has subsidized Hillel.

The Dinner-Tribute to Rabbi Rosen on Tuesday, Oct. 24 marks his 25 years of service not alone to Hillel at Brown and the other colleges he serves, but to many worthy Rhode Island institutions and organizations. He was a member of the Providence Human Relations Commission, Chairman of the Zionist District, Associate Grand Chaplain of Masons and President of R.I. Board of Rabbis.

Among the beneficiaries of Rabbi Rosen's efforts is the Providence Hebrew Day School. For many years he waged a one-man, personal campaign of acceptance of the Providence Hebrew Day School on the part of the Rhode Island community.

When the old Day School building on Waterman St. was condemned, following the tragic fire of a school building in Chicago, the Board of Directors of the Day School was about to purchase land in the slum area of South Providence. The principal of the school, Rabbi Egozi, desperately called upon Rabbi Rosen. He rushed to the meeting and succeeded in convincing the Board members of the vital importance of locating on the East Side. He persuaded them to venture the purchase of a parcel of land on Elm Grove Ave. adjacent to the Brown Football stadium at ten times the cost of the South Providence land.

The neighbors, fearing the presence of a school near their property, drew up a petition of objection. Rabbi Rosen appeared before the Zoning Board and won approval for the new building.

At the ceremonies of the laying of the cornerstone the Rabbi predicted that the graduates of the new Providence Hebrew Day School would readily be admitted even to the most selective colleges. His prediction has been fully realized. In fact, many of the Providence Hebrew Day School alumni have also been admitted to Brown and have been active in Hillel.

In his 1969 Baccalaureate address at Rhode Island College, Rabbi Rosen's theme was "change." And, indeed, during the past 25 years he has witnessed many changes in students' attitudes. It is particularly true of Jewish students' identification with their Jewish heritage.

For instance, in his early years at Brown, when daily chapel in Sayles Hall was compulsory, Rabbi Rosen, as Jewish college chaplain, often was the chapel speaker. Members of a Jewish fraternity were "embarrassed" by the Rabbi's quoting a passage in Hebrew. Today there is quite a change! Dr. Jacob Neusner, the distinguished Professor of Judaic studies, reports nearly 300 Jewish and non-Jewish students enrolled in Judaic studies. Rabbi Rosen, in fact, currently is teaching a University Independent Study credit course in Yiddish language and literature. Moreover, his Hillel conversational Hebrew class, for which the students do not even get credit, is oversubscribed.

On the eve of his retirement at the end of this academic year and marking his 25th anniversary as Founding Hillel Director, campus and community friends will observe the occasion in Andrews Hall. Participating in the program will be Dr. Merton P. Stoltz, the University Provost, representing President Hornig who will be away attending the National Conference of University Presidents. Greetings will be extended by Dr. Alfred Jospe, International Hillel Director and Dr. Joseph Kaufman, President of Rhode Island College will give the address.

Greetings also will be brought from the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, Hillel's benefactor since its inception, as well as from B'nai B'rith through Mrs. Philip Dorenbaum, past president of District #1. Rabbi William Kloner of New York will bring greetings from Hillel alumni and students.

In a letter to the University Chaplain Baldwin, Dr. Sachar, Chancellor and President Emeritus of Brandeis University writes,

"I noted with mixed emotions the plans for a testimonial to mark the retirement of Rabbi Nathan Rosen. After all it was only yesterday that I brought Nathan into the Hillel program and here he is already making plans to take on Emeritus status. Yet he has a great deal to show for the intervening period. Those who work with young people on the college campuses have an unusual opportunity to influence generations of young people. Nathan deepened the opportunity because of the personality and sense of commitment that he brought to his service.

"I gladly accept Honorary Chairmanship for the affair. I shall be thinking of Nathan and his dear wife and the extraordinarily productive role that they have played ever since they became part of the Brown University campus."

It is good to know that Rabbi and Mrs. Rosen intend to remain in Providence and to help the causes and organizations dear to their hearts.

It's easy to say we have all the appliances we'll ever need. And all the electricity we'll ever need to run them. Easy for the "haves". But how about the "have-nots"?

Today, urban renewal and redevelopment programs are bringing new hope to thousands of New England families. And with it new standards of living. This means more of the little everyday conveniences most of us take for granted. More refrigerators. More ranges. More washers and dryers. All requiring more electricity. That's why we're working now to provide the kind of generating facilities that will best meet these growing demands and still satisfy our common environmental concerns. It can mean a better way of living. For all of us.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

ROGER E. SPEAR

A Look At The Market

Q: I have read many opinions that the market will reach 1000 this year or next. In your calculated opinion what do you see ahead for the stock market? V.R.

A: The market — as measured by the Dow Industrial Average — has struggled for some time to push through the upper 900s into the much touted 1000 area. While conditions appear ripe at this time for the final leap, any number of unexpected events could forestall the move. However, favoring a breakthrough is the long-term base in the Dow average between the 910-980 region. Technical analysts see this as providing a firm platform for an upmove. Fundamentalists cite the healthy business climate. The recent acceleration of the growth rate in factory inventories signifies a more bullish outlook by businessmen. Further, machine tool companies have reported sharp increases in orders — long considered a leading indicator of an upsurging economy. Although allowances must be made for possible nearby corrections, the outlook for the market is favorable.

With this in view, the shorter-term investor may well consider the advantages of cyclical rather than growth stocks at this time. The latter have been bid up over a period of years and are sporting P/E multiples that discount growth several years out. On the other hand, cyclical stocks have been largely ignored and carry multiples in the 10-to-20 area. Cyclical, the backbone of American industry, include such groups as: aerospace, chemicals, steels, automobiles, machinery, machine tools, rails and construction materials, etc. All the basic suppliers whose financial prosperity moves in direct relation to the economic cycles of the country.

An interesting issue within this category, Monsanto Chem. (NYSE) is benefiting from the strengthening business cycle. Full-year earnings could reach $3.40 a share — a 30% gain year to year — for an indicated earnings multiple of 16x. The prospects of continued profit improvement in 1973 are good and better-than-average performance is probable.

Young Stock For Youthful Investor

Q: I am 13 years old and interested in investing $500 in stocks. Later I hope to add more to this. I would like a stock to hold about five years and would appreciate your suggestions. M.S.

A: Johnson Products (ASE), a comparatively young company, seems to be an appropriate choice for a youthful investor. Shares of this black-run company were first offered publicly in December 1969, although the company was founded in 1954. A complete line of hair-care products designed for use by blacks, as well as a new line of cosmetics, are manufactured by Johnson.

Sales have moved ahead steadily since the mid-Sixties and earnings, until fiscal 1971, kept pace. Increased marketing and manufacturing costs, plus administrative expenses cut earnings to 90c a share from $1.00 in fiscal 1970. However, for the first nine months of fiscal 1972 (ended August), earnings were ahead 43% and sales were up 18%. Full-year profit should approximate $1.25 a share. Future potential is enhanced by the anticipated introduction of more cosmetic lines, possible entry into African markets and expanded plant capacity.

Q: As a retired Sears, Roebuck (NYSE) employee, I have accumulated several hundred shares of Sears stock at an average cost of $25 a share. I am liable for capital gains tax of about $40 per share if I sell now. Eventually I will have to switch these shares for greater income. Should I sell half this year and half next year to spread the tax liability? L.B.

A: Certainly, spreading your tax liability over two or more years is a sensible approach to your problem. However, I would strongly recommend that you consult a tax specialist prior to taking any action. With all the facts concerning your exact financial situation before him, a tax man could then give you expert guidance on the extent of the tax liability you would incur by selling either part or all of your shares.

Teacher Requests Instruction

Q: I am a retired teacher who could use a few lessons on investing. I hold 862 shares of Mass. Investors Trust from which I take all distributions plus 555 shares of Fidelity Capital. I have never cashed $2,500 of savings bonds bought during World War II; is this sensible? At the present time I do not need extra funds. Could you give me some badly needed advice. M.C.

A: Since you do not need additional income I see no reason to cash in or exchange your bonds which are approaching their third and final extension. If your financial situation changes, however, I would advise exchanging the Series E for Series H bonds. The advantage being that the income tax liability on the accrual interest may then be postponed until the new bonds mature or are sold. At this point interest accruals on your bonds have approximately doubled their value.

Mass. Investors Trust, one of the largest in the industry with assets exceeding $2 billion, has only an average performance record. Some 29% of the fund's portfolio is invested in ten blue chips with 69% in a diversified list of common stocks. While this fund is conservative, has a low expense ratio and a measure of downside protection, growth is apt to parallel that of the market as a whole. Therefore you might prefer to move to the faster paced, but slightly more speculative, Mass. Investors Growth Fund.

Fidelity Capital, although not in the billion-dollar class, is a large fund with assets over $600 million. Portfolio emphasis is on industry groups rather than on individual stocks. The leisure, airline and aluminum groups constitute more than one-quarter of the fund's portfolio which is primarily composed of common stocks. Expenses have accounted for a very modest percentage of assets. Performance has been above average over the past 12 months and in the last 10-year period. Hold.

Eximbank Reports Loan Of $13 Million To El Al

WASHINGTON — The Export-Import Bank said it had authorized a loan of more than $13-million to El Al Israel Airlines for the purchase of a Boeing 747 jet aircraft. The total cost of the plane and related spare parts and services is $30.5-million.

The Eximbank's loan of $13,725,045 will finance 45 percent of the United States cost of the plane. Other sources, not designated, also will finance 45 percent of the cost and El Al will make a cash payment of 10 percent of the United States costs.

The aircraft, scheduled for delivery in May, 1973, represents the third 747 purchased by El Al with Eximbank financial assistance.

Red China Declares War Is Sometimes Necessary

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — China told the General Assembly Tuesday that the people of the world "must not be deluded by certain temporary and superficial phenomena of detente at the present time and develop a false sense of security."

In a tough, uncompromising statement, Chiao Kuan-hua, China's Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs, did not lay down any bold new Chinese position with regard to international affairs. But he did make his country's most militant declaration since China's entry into the United Nations almost a year ago.

"People condemn war and consider it a barbarous way of settling disputes among mankind," he said. "But we are soberly aware that war is inevitable so long as society is divided into classes and the exploitation of man by man still exists."

"There are two categories of war, just and unjust. We support just wars and oppose unjust wars. If a Socialist still wants to be a Socialist, he should not oppose wars indiscriminately."

Mr. Chiao, who is China's chief delegate to the General Assembly, was delivering his policy speech in the annual general debate that opens each Assembly session. The Assembly hall, which has often been half-empty since the start of the general debate on September 25, was well-filled for his address, although for security reasons the number of public spectators is being severely restricted.

When "imperialism, colonialism and neocolonialism" are still using force to commit aggression against "a majority of the countries of the world," Mr. Chiao asserted, it is a "betrayal to the people of the world to advocate non-use of force in international relations indiscriminately, without regard to conditions and in an absolute way."

Turning to the Middle East and referring to the expulsion by Egypt of her Soviet military advisors, Mr. Chiao said that "the heroic Arab people" would not allow others "to ride on their backs and lord it over them for long."

Israel Accused of Aggression

"Do not believe the sensational nonsense deliberately spread by a superpower that no counterattack should be made against Israel's armed aggression for that would spark a world war," he declared. "That is meant to scare people. It has been borne out repeatedly by the history of the 20 years since World War II."

"We believe that, so long as they strengthen their unity and persevere in their struggle, the Arab countries subjected to aggression are fully capable of recovering their sacred territories and the injured Palestinian people regaining their national rights."

The Chinese representative told the Assembly that the present situation of "no war, no peace" in the Middle East had been created by the "two superpowers" for their respective interests, asserting that they were using Arab territories and sovereignty "to strike political deals."

Charging that the United States was openly supporting "Israeli Zionism," Mr. Chiao said that the other "superpower" claimed to support and assist the Arab people in their struggle.

"It has indeed sold them no small amount of weapons," the Chinese delegate said. "But, strangely, the weapons supplied are not allowed to be used. Is this not asking people to buy scrap iron? Moreover, it demands privileges and bases, and even attempts to subvert their government."

"What kind of 'friend' is this? It is more dangerous than an open enemy."

In his speech, Mr. Chiao did not say that his country would provide any specific arms or other aid to the Arab states, stating only, as China customarily does here, "the Chinese people will always stand together with the Arab and Palestinian peoples in their just struggle against aggression."

With regard to terrorism, Mr. Chiao took a step closer to the Western position than China had ever previously done at the United Nations.

"The Chinese Government has always opposed assassination and hijacking of individuals as a means of waging political struggles and is also opposed to terrorist acts by individuals or a handful of people divorced from the masses, because they are harmful to the development of the cause of national liberation and people's revolution," he declared.

"Massacres" Charged

"But we strongly condemn Israel for the recent barbarous aggression and massacres it has committed against Lebanon, Syria and other Arab countries on the pretext of the 'Munich incident.'"

Discussing disarmament, Mr. Chiao asserted that "the most urgent question today is the withdrawal of foreign armed forces, rather than the reduction of armaments."

Daia Of Argentina Worried About Jewish Image, Press

BUENOS AIRES — Many important Jewish leaders have "gravely offended" the community and the "Jewish image," the annual convention of Daia, the representative organization of Argentine Jewry, was told here.

Professor Lazaro Schallman, who made this allegation urged the 200 delegates from 21 cities to establish a "court of honor" to sit in judgement on "trespassers" and protect the community.

Dr. Sion Cohen Imach, Daia's president, hinted at the need to control Jewish press. He did not feel it should publish some news which, although true, might harm the image of Jewry and Jewish interests.

This is not the first time that Daia has advocated some kind of control over the Jewish press in Argentina. Delegates were much concerned at reports of continued anti-Semitic incidents and the dissemination of anti-Semitic material, activities to which the Argentine Government is opposed.

SOVIET AIRLIFT

TEL AVIV — Western intelligence sources indicate that the new Soviet airlift to Syria includes the sophisticated ground-to-air missiles of the SAM-3 type which were installed earlier in the Suez Canal zone and to guard other vulnerable targets in Egypt. Israeli sources said that the airlift was one way Moscow had of indicating to Egypt that Russia has other friends in the Arab world.

A better way to clean carpets?

OF COURSE THERE IS!

Yes, for years "scrubwomen" used scrub brush, soap. Her replacement, so called "shampoo" machines used motor driven scrub brush, shampoo. Both only "surface cleaned," didn't remove dirt from deep in carpet fibres. Brushes caused extra wear, matted carpet pile, changed texture, left subsurface dirt in carpet. Carpet was only half clean.

STEAM WAY TM

THE ULTIMATE IN CARPET CLEANING

Steam-Way's revolutionary new deep clean extraction method doesn't use harsh brushes. Flashed steam goes deep into carpet to dislodge embedded dirt. Vacuum picks up dirt solution, transfers it to storage tank. Cleans from bottom up, not top down. Steam-Way makes your carpets the "Cleanest Clean You've Ever Seen."

A Strange Tale

The Lost Israeli Halftrack Among The Lebanese Terrorists

TEL AVIV — For Lt. Shaul's neighbors, the Day of Atonement had just finished, and preparations were underway to break the Fast. The streets of Holon (near Tel Aviv) were once again alive with people and cars, and tables were being set with food and drink. However, in one apartment, there was great deal of activity — in a short time they were expecting an important guest, Minister of Defense Moshe Dayan.

The Minister met with Lt. Shaul to hear from him the extraordinary circumstances surrounding his return from Lebanon after action against terrorist bases there.

Lt. Shaul had come from Iraq to Israel in 1951 at the age of 7 with his father and mother. He is the eldest son, having two younger brothers and two sisters. A couple of days preceding the attack on the terrorist bases, he was called into Reserves and told his mother he would be back before the Day of Atonement, explaining that he was just going "on a short trip with friends."

On Saturday, September 16, at 4:20 a.m., Lt. Shaul and eight soldiers crossed the Lebanese border on an Israeli halftrack. Twelve hours later found Shaul near the Lebanese village of Juwaya. They had two terrorists captured during the first half day's firing. Suddenly, mortar fire was directed their way and Shaul ordered the driver to back up and wait for the attack to subside. "When the firing stopped, we started to move, but we could not see any other Israeli vehicles or soldiers around. It took a few minutes to realize that we were on our own — one Israeli half-track with nine Israeli soldiers on enemy ground."

The driver stopped the half-track, the soldiers looked at one another, no one said a word. Shaul tried his two-way radio but did not receive any reply. Suddenly, a soldier shouted that there was a terrorist on the right side. Lt. Shaul, who speaks fluent Arabic, shouted to the Arab, "hands up," and asked him to come over. A few minutes later, this terrorist joined the other two on the running board.

They continued on their way, but as they approached the next village their faces became deathly white — in front of them was a Lebanese halftrack, behind it an armored jeep and further on, two Lebanese tanks. "I was near enough to look into the eyes of the Lebanese officer in the half-track. I jumped and ran towards him. When I got close enough, I shouted to them in Arabic. "Hands up and surrender," Shaul said. They did so and so did the driver of the Lebanese jeep. The six joined the terrorists on the Israeli halftrack.

When the Israelis passed the next village they spotted an American TV cameraman who told them where they could find the rest of their forces.

"My driver shouted that he was short of gas. I asked one of the Lebanese the location of the nearest gas station. He told me to continue straight on," Lt. Shaul continued. In the next village they saw the station but a Lebanese army jeep was at that moment being filled. "We stopped next to the first pump, and suddenly, from a coffee house next to the station, ten Lebanese soldiers appeared with their rifles, and, at that split second, I took advantage of their surprise. They threw their rifles on the ground. Two of my soldiers collected them and asked them to join their friends on the halftrack. We then gassed up.

"I ordered my Lebanese driver to let me know in advance when we would meet with terrorists or arrive at Lebanese outposts. After a few minutes, he told me that behind the next curve was a Lebanese outpost. I stopped my convoy, ordered one of the Lebanese soldiers to go and see the commander in charge, and to let him know that we had prisoners in case he should try to stop us. He returned and told me that the officer agreed to let us pass. When we approached the outpost, I noticed that the soldiers were lying behind a stone barrier pointing their guns towards us. I jumped from the halftrack and shouted, "Who is in charge here?"

"A Lebanese captain stood up, came towards me holding a two-way radio in his hand. I asked him to get in touch with all the Lebanese outposts to allow us free passage. Then, changing the frequency to ours, for the first time during three and a half hours, I contacted my superiors, told them what had happened to us and our position."

Lt. Shaul received orders on how to rejoin his forces. He decided to appropriate the two-way radio, but the Lebanese officer would not let him. Shaul said to the officer, "If you won't let me have it, I'll take you with it."

All along, Lt. Shaul promised the Lebanese soldiers that if they behaved themselves, he would release them at the border and send them back to their families. And this he did.

Shaul's Lebanese prisoners received "red carpet treatment" when they crossed the border into Israel. Food was supplied to them, cigarettes, drinks, they could wash themselves, and then, Shaul put them on one of the Lebanese jeeps, shook their hands and bid them farewell, promising to meet them again when there was peace.

While Shaul was telling his story, Minister of Defense Dayan more than once could not control his laughter, and the end remarked to those present, "Did you ever hear of such a story in the modern history of war?"

W. Germany Announces Ban On Two Terrorist Groups

BONN — West Germany announced last week that it had banned two Palestinian organizations because they had threatened violence here.

The prohibition on the General Union of Palestinian Students, with 800 listed members, and the General Union of Palestinian Workers, with 1,000 members, was disclosed by Interior Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher.

It was one of a series of increasingly severe measures taken to control Arabs residing here since the raid in Munich by eight Arab terrorists on September 5 that led to the killing of 11 members of the Israeli Olympic team.

The Interior Minister disclosed that "well under 100 Arabs" had been expelled from West Germany since then on suspicion of links with Palestinian terrorists, and that 1,990 Arab travelers had been turned back at border-crossing points for lack of proper papers or on suspicion of unacceptable connections.

There are 50,000 legally registered Arabs living and working in West Germany. It is believed that 10,000 more live in the country without having registered.

Among those expelled in the last four weeks was Abdullah Hassan Yums el-Frangi, the 30-year-old chief of the Palestinian Student Union, who was one of eight Arabs taken into custody and deported September 27.

According to unconfirmed West German police reports, there were raids on dormitories of Arab

Jailed Soviet Immigrants Ask Special Recognition

TEL AVIV — Jewish immigrants who served time in Soviet jails for alleged Zionist activities demanded last week that the Israeli government and the Jewish Agency extend them official recognition for the time they spent in prison. Leaders of the Prisoners of Zion Association charged at a press conference that the Finance Ministry, so far, has blocked recognition of their imprisonment as "service as soldiers on the second front." They said they would appeal to the World Zionist Executive for support.

The Association presently numbers about 350 members and has another 150 applicants. It plans to hold its first annual convention here this week. Rabbi Mordechai Chen, chairman, said that many of the members were arrested in the midst of their studies and are now finding it difficult to finance their children's high school and university education in Israel.

He charged that Kupat Holim, the national sick fund, has refused treatment to former prisoners who contracted chronic illnesses in Soviet jails. The only positive step taken so far was Histadrut's decision to apply five years' imprisonment served by some of the emigres toward their seniority in wage calculation, Rabbi Chen said.

Israeli Troops May Police 'Fatahland'

TEL AVIV — Israeli sources reported that Israeli troops might have to be used to police "Fatahland," the southern portion of Lebanon on Israel's border, because of Lebanese government "inactivity" against the terrorist groups in that section.

The sources said Israel could not accept indefinitely the weakness of the Lebanese government and its resulting inactivity against terrorists in "Fatahland."

According to the source, since the Six-Day War, 64 Israelis have been killed and 274 injured along the Lebanese-Israeli border.

students in half a dozen cities, which ended with a number of temporary arrests.

The Interior Minister of Hesse, Hans Heinz Bielefeld, said that his state police had found five radio devices in the Arab's dwelling in Langen, near Frankfurt, that had been rebuilt to serve as bomb detonators.

Mr. Bielefeld also said that the Palestinian terrorists who assaulted the Israeli quarters at the Olympic Village had tried to telephone Mr. Frangi's apartment on the day of the Munich attack.

The Hessian minister said detectives had turned up material in the apartment indicating that Mr. Frangi had helped plan Arab actions against the Israeli and Lebanese embassies in Bonn. The expelled Palestinian was also said to have worked for the office of the Arab League in Bonn, which has quasi-diplomatic status.

In announcing the ban on Palestinian organizations, Mr. Genscher took pains to describe West Germany's recent "generous" treatment of Arabs, particularly Palestinians. He said that the Government had given scholarship money to "hundreds" of Palestinian students after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Mr. Genscher said the prohibition was justified by the discovery of material showing that the two organizations had determined to act conspiratorially in West Germany and "to use violent means."

N.Y. Postal Service Intercepts Two Bombs Concealed in Letter

NEW YORK — The Postal Service said this week that two letter bombs of a type that killed an official at the Israeli Embassy in London last month had been found here.

One of the bombs had been mailed to Hadassah, the American Women's Zionist organization, and the other to a private citizen whose name was not disclosed.

The announcement of the discoveries came at the same time that reports of the interception of similar letters were made by postal authorities in Rhodesia. All of the letters, here and abroad, reportedly bore Malaysian postmarks.

The Postal Service urged anyone receiving mail from unknown senders, particularly from Malaysia, to exercise caution and to refrain from opening suspicious-looking envelopes.

Letter from Amsterdam
On September 19, a letter postmarked in Amsterdam exploded in the Israeli Embassy in London, killing Dr. Ami Shachori, an agricultural expert.

In the next few days, similar devices addressed to Israeli officials and mailed from the Netherlands were intercepted in New York, London, Montreal, Jerusalem, Ottawa, Brussels and Paris.

No further injuries were reported, nor was any arrest made in connection with the death of Dr. Shachori.

One of the envelopes intercepted in London carried a note from Black September, the Arab terrorist organization. The organization has claimed responsibility for the attack that resulted in the deaths of 11 members of the Israeli team during the summer Olympic contests in Munich two weeks earlier.

Reports this week from Rhodesia described one of the intercepted envelopes as being 6 inches by 3 inches and containing a spring-loaded device connected to a detonator and thin strip of plastic explosive activated when the envelope was opened.

The two letters discovered by Rhodesian authorities brought the total found there this week to three. All were addressed to individuals in Bulawayo, about 25 miles from Salisbury, the capital.

One to Mother of Athlete
All three were posted in Penang, Malaysia. One of them was addressed to the mother of John Orkin, a Jewish weight-lifter from the Rhodesian Olympic team. Mrs. Orkin's letter was sent to her in care of the Central African Zionist Organization.

The two letters found most recently were addressed to Colin Raizon, a 20-year-old law student at Capetown University, and to Alex McMeeking, who was not further identified.

Mr. Raizon's letter bore the return address, "Ezekiel Meyer, Penang, Malaysia," and the McMeeking letter had the return address, "Mrs. Fatima Yakur, 780 Main, Penang, Malaysia."

The Rhodesian police have employed television and radio to warn people to submit all suspected mail for inspection.

Postal authorities said that one of the letters sent here was found at the offices of Hadassah and that the other was found yesterday.

In both cases, the authorities said the envelopes were opened but failed to explode. The letters have been taken for examination by the Postal Service.

Commando Leader Promises Continuance Of Terrorism

BEIRUT — An important Palestinian commando leader told a cheering audience of Arabs last week that Terrorist actions against Israel were "going to continue all over the world."

"We will continue what we began in Munich" said Shafik al-Hout, the head of the office of the Palestine Liberation Organization here.

The crowd of several hundred people gathered in a rundown movie theatre in a heavily Moslem district of this city burst into applause and cheers.

Mr. Hout was referring to the killing during the Olympic Games of 11 Israeli athletes. The Black September organization of Palestinians has claimed responsibility for the raid on the Olympic Village.

The crowd he spoke to was honoring the memory of President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt on the second anniversary of his death.

This was one of many meetings here of admirers of Mr. Nasser. The streets have been filled with pictures of Mr. Nasser and banners with his sayings.

Mr. Hout, a one-time high school biology teacher who is considered a radical in the Palestinian commando movement, rejected the charge that the killing of the athletes was "terror against innocents."

"No 11 Israelis are worth more than the lives of one of the women and children that the Israeli bombers have killed in our camps," Mr. Hout said.

He scoffed at the qualifications of Secretary of State William P. Rogers of the United States to "talk of terror."

Other sectors of the Palestinian commando leadership, including Yasir Arafat, the chief of Al Fatah and chairman of the overall group, the Palestine Liberation Organization, were meeting with conservative Lebanese politicians in an attempt to reduce pressures here for greater military control over commando activities.

Mr. Arafat met last week with former President Camille Chamoun, a leader of the Maronite Christians who are about equal in number to Moslems here and who are generally much less happy than the Moslems about Palestinian activities here and the attacks that Israel has launched against commando positions in Lebanon.

Dinitz Or Gazit Eyed As U.S. Ambassador

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The next Israeli Ambassador to the United States, according to diplomatic sources in Washington, is likely to be either Simcha Dinitz, political secretary to Premier Golda Meir, or Mordechai Gazit, director general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry. With the present Ambassador, Yitzhak Rabin, expected to leave Washington early next year, the sources noted that Dinitz is Mrs. Meir's chief aide and political adviser, while Gazit was former Minister of the Israeli Embassy in Washington.

Ambassador Rabin, who has served in Washington since February, 1970, is expected to go home to become active in politics. His wife, Lea, said, "He's going to turn up his sleeves and struggle in the fall of 1973. He wants to be in the Cabinet."

MARZOUK CHARGED

PARIS — Rene Marzouk, 25-year-old Tunisian Jew, a member of the "Marxist Circle," one of four underground opposition groups operating against the government, has been charged with Zionist espionage and spreading Zionist propaganda.

Sometimes locating a key honor is absolutely a guess. Often, something either in the bidding or the play that has already gone on will help an alert Declarer or Defender. Today's hand depended on capturing the Trump Queen, many Declarers failing to do so. They either decided that because West had been the only bidder he would have that honor or else after seeing one Trump already be played they felt that the Queen would now drop. When neither happened and they went down they were under the impression that they were unlucky. That is not true, they failed to utilize the information that was given them. They might have been right but the odds were against it.

Mrs. Wilson Kovar and Mrs. Ray Anderson were North and South, East-West were vulnerable, North Dealer with this bidding:

N	E	S	W
1♦	P	1♦	2♥
2♣	P	2NT	3♥
4♠	End

The contract with all of its bidding was perfectly normal and because it was, every Declarer had the same chance to listen to it and after certain cards were played, to draw definite inferences. Many just did that same old thing, they thoughtlessly pitched out cards. Every West made a vulnerable overcall at the Two level and then, when they had the chance, bid again even higher. Their holding certainly did justify this bold action for they could almost count eight sure tricks in their own hand if Hearts were Trump. West was looking at this hand and then announced to all that he held a hand that good.

But North and South held the balance of high cards plus a fine fit in a higher Major so with their 25 high card points and 4-4 fit in Spades, game in Spades was the usual contract, every West leading the Club King continuing with the Ace and a third Club to be ruffed by East when East echoed to show a doubleton. East returned a low Heart won by Declarer's Ace and at this point every Declarer could see that he had every trick provided he could find the Trump Queen.

After East had ruffed there were now only four Trumps out so some Declarers felt sure now that the suit would break and the Queen drop. Others thought that because West had bid so strongly he would have to hold that same Queen. Both failed to happen so those who followed that they went down, either of them. The successful declarers thought like this: On the third Club play East had shown out which gave West four Clubs. Meanwhile, West had bid Hearts vulnerable both at two and also at the three level. Surely no even a foolhardy soul would dare do that without at least six Hearts. That shows me at least ten cards now so all West can have in the other two suits are three cards. True, two of them could be the Queen and another Spade but the odds are greatly against it. Therefore, I will assume that East is more likely to have that Queen.

While acting under that assumption it cost careful Declarers nothing at all to play over to the Trump King in Dummy just in case West happened to have a singleton Trump Queen. This is a type of safety play for it has everything to gain and nothing to lose. If now West still has that Trump Queen, and as I said, there is a vague possibility of that, the good players will lose to it with a shrug feeling that if they have the same situation come up again and again, they will be right most of the time. When the finesse worked and West showed out on the second lead of Trumps the hand could be claimed.

Moral: Each hand has room for only thirteen cards. When a certain definite portion of them have been ascertained the rest can be figured quite well by anyone who uses odds or percentages to work in his favor. This makes guesses much better than even chances.

RIC To Be Site Of NETC Meeting

The New England Theatre Conference (NETC) will hold three days of workshops, panels, lectures, performances and social events Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, October 13, 14, and 15. All activities will be held at Rhode Island College and will include a Sunday morning tour and discussion at Trinity Square Repertory's newly renovated Majestic Theatre.

Included in the conference are discussions and workshops on professional, community and educational theater. Special panel discussion will consider theater funding, technical developments, new plays, the regional theater movement in the United States, children's theater, improvisational techniques, and other subjects of interest.

The Friday night kickoff will include the performance of a new script and a welcoming address by Adrian Hall, Trinity's director; a conference address by John Houseman, and a Saturday evening cocktail party followed by a performance of Trinity's School for Wives.

Further information may be obtained by calling RIC at 831-6600, extension 271.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO? If Kaske had been McGraw, he would have sent Tiant to the pitching mound in the very first game, meeting Lolic head-on, conceding nothing. The "McGraw" in mention being John McGraw of the Giants, also known as "Muggsy" and also "The Little Napoleon." Without question, John McGraw was one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of baseball managers. He once said, "Don't wait until tomorrow, it might rain." And it was his policy to go with the very best he had and win today, first. His tremendously successful record with the New York Giants attests to his genius at a baseball helm. His accomplishments in handling players gives evidence of his winning psychology that infected his teams. With McGraw, a player was a star; away from him, just ordinary.

ONE OUT OF TWO: In the three game playoff series between Boston and Detroit, the setup became a "one out of two" situation for the Tigers when Kasko didn't open with his best. Why send your best pitcher against their best? Why use Tiant when the Tigers were going to start their star Lolic? Manager Billy Martin apparently didn't theorize that way. Of course, he maybe had better moundsmen to back up his decision in following games. But, as McGraw said, "It might rain tomorrow." And, as Detroit won, Martin proved his judgment right.

CONCEDE NOTHING: In other games, even checkers and chess tournaments, it has been a policy by some managers to send a second-rater against a top-rater, thereby getting the superstar out of the way; actually conceding a victory; acknowledging weakness. Maybe it's strategy — but — is it the right kind? And, if it is, why not just give up on the game when the opposition uses its star performer? And if it is the policy to go against the star with a lesser performer all the time, maybe that "star" isn't the performer that he appears to be. Not if he isn't called upon to face the toughest opposition. If the Red Sox had won, Eddie Kasko would have been a managerial genius. However, his strategy would have been — and was — different than that used in a World Series where the best goes against the best. I lean heavily on the John McGraw theory that is similar to a slogan used by some politicians. "Concede nothing, claim everything and demand a recount!" Maybe with that spirit the Red Sox might have had a chance to get into another World Series, eh?

A SOUTHPAW — HUMBUG: Once when the late Ed "Hunk" Jordan was managing a baseball team at old Kinsley Park, his players were having difficulty hitting a left-handed pitcher. "Huh," said "Hunk" in ridicule, "There never was a left-hander I couldn't hit." After Jordan had stomped up and down the dugout belittling southpaws, a player down in the corner remarked, "Why doesn't he bat himself?" "Hunk" overheard the remark, turned and questioned, "Who said that?" No one answered. "All right," said Jordan, "If you refuse to answer, I'll show you." And with that, and his managerial ability, he substituted himself for one of his players in the batting order.

HE SHOWED THEM: Remarks on the bench concerned the possibility that the manager might be tempting injury by being hit with a pitched ball. "Hunk" had been out of actual play for a number of years. What did he do? He hit a single, called for a baserunner and came sputtering back to the dugout with a jumbled flow of words including, "I told you there never was a left-hander I couldn't hit! Now let's see you do it." They did. Was it the example that infused them with a "concede nothing, claim everything" spirit? Even the mighty oak can be felled by a

ORGANIZATION NEWS

DINNER MEETING
A special dinner meeting for the Pace Setters Division of the 1972 campaign of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island will be held next Monday, October 16, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Grossman of 70 Harwich Road, in Has. The lecture will be held on Sunday, October 22, at 8 p.m.

Guest speaker at the dinner will be Morris Levinson of New York, business leader and a national campaign chairman of the United Jewish Appeal.

DESSERT HOUR
A dessert hour on behalf of the 1972 campaign of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island will be held by the Warwick Women's Division on Tuesday, October 17, at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Milton Pierce of 26 Wildrose Court, Warwick.

Campaign co-chairmen of the Warwick Women's Division are Mrs. Sidney Goldstein, Mrs. Marvin Granoff, Mrs. Pierce and Mrs. Jordan Tanenbaum.

TO PRESENT PLAY
The Thrysus Club of Cranston High School East will present You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown in the school auditorium on Friday and Saturday, October 20 and 21, at 8 p.m., and on Sunday, October 22, at 3 p.m.

Reservations may be made by calling the school or tickets may be purchased at the door.

RECEIVES AWARD
Max L. Grant of Providence, an honorary member of the Rhode Island Writers' Guild, was named Rhode Island Author of the Year by the group. His award was accepted by his daughter, Mrs. Alfred H. Joslin.

This award is given in conjunction with the Guild's observance of R.I. Authors' Week from October 15 through October 21. A certificate of appreciation was also presented to Governor Frank Licht by the Guild.

Miss Ruth Eddy of Providence is chairman of the R.I. Authors' Week observance. Committee members are Mrs. Josephine Bacchari of North Providence and Donald Boisvert of Foster. Mort Simons of Providence is Guild awards chairman.

ON SIGMUND FREUD
Rabbi Earl A. Grollman, D.D. of Beth El Temple Center, Belmont, Massachusetts, will lecture on "Sigmund Freud and the Psychology of You" as part of the adult education series at Congregation B'nai Israel in Woonsocket. The lecture will be held on Sunday, October 22, at 8 p.m.

Rabbi Grollman, lecturer an author, who was born in Baltimore, Maryland, was graduated from the University of Cincinnati and was ordained at Hebrew Union College in 1950 with the degree of Master of Hebrew Letters.

He has done graduate work a Boston University School of Theology and School of Legal Medicine and he received an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree from Portia Law School. He became rabbi at Beth El Temple Center in 1951.

NEW DATE FOR SAHL
The appearance of Mort Sahl, political and social satirist, at the Temple Sinai author-lecture series, has been changed to Sunday, December 3, at 8 p.m.

Mr. Sahl, who was originally to appear on Sunday, November 26, made the change because of a conflicting commitment to tape an ABC television special that weekend in Hollywood.

Irving Sigal, chairman of the series, said the other speakers will appear as scheduled. Joseph P. Lash, Pulitzer prize-winning author of Eleanor and Franklin, will speak on Sunday, October 29, and syndicated Washington columnist Jack Anderson, also a Pulitzer prize winner, will speak on Sunday, December 17.

NAMED PRESIDENT
Rabbi Jacob Handler of Temple Beth Israel has been named president of the Rhode Island Board of Rabbis to succeed Rabbi Saul Leeman of Temple Beth Torah.

Rabbi Leslie Y. Gutterman of Temple Beth El was named treasurer, and Rabbi Bernard Rotman of Temple Beth Am is secretary.

The R.I. Board of Rabbis includes the rabbis from about 15 orthodox, conservative and reform congregations in Rhode Island and nearby Massachusetts.

Charcoal Steaks

I have begun to wonder about my fellow man. It seems that we are going primitive again. The other afternoon I flew, in a beautifully clear afternoon, back to my home base of Charlotte and found a thick blue haze over the city.

Then I realized what was going on below. It was Saturday afternoon and the outdoor chefs were at it again.

We've spent centuries getting cooking inside, removing the smoke from the ceiling, finally coming up with electric cooking, and now experimenting with all kinds of quick, painless indoor cooking. But all of a sudden there is the great urge to go outside again.

Everyone has an outdoor grill. I have done some research on this, and I find the food usually is unsatisfactory. First of all, it tastes a bit like the lighter, or "starter" as they call it.

One friend tells me that you sprinkle charcoal flavoring on top of the meat to give it an additional taste of charcoal. That would be charcoal over charcoal. He added that he likes to use a "tenderizer."

"One other thing," the friend told me, "Cooking outside entertains the kids."

Red Kerosene

On Houston Street, between Cannon and Columbia Streets, in New York, was a big wide street called Union Market. The farmers from Queens and Long Island came every Saturday from April to Thanksgiving with potatoes, tomatoes, corn, peas and beans. The boys in the neighborhood would help them and we were all paid off in produce for the two or three hours' work Saturday afternoon.

At the foot of Grand Street at the East River was Hecker's Flour Mill and Arbutle Coffee. Across the river was a place called Greenpoint and the big sugar refineries. Boats of sugar cane came from Puerto Rico and Cuba to these refineries. The wheat came to Hecker's through the Erie Canal, Hudson River and East River.

There was no gaslight until around 1900. Everybody cooked and did his homework and reading by kerosene. There were dozens of kerosene peddlers driving around the city in small wagons. The folks came out to the street in answer to his cry, to fill their containers with kerosene at the rate of eight cents a gallon.

The legend is that one of these Italian kerosene peddlers dropped his red bandana kerchief into his barrel of kerosene and after a while he noticed that the kerosene had turned a light red. To waste that barrel of kerosene would have meant a whole week's wages for him. So he took a chance and sold it.

When the people remarked about the red color he said that it was a new process invented by the Standard Oil Company to make the kerosene burn longer and brighter, and for that he charged an extra cent. Within a few weeks the red kerosene became very popular and you couldn't give that other stuff away.

Clergymen Block Steps Of United States Mission

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — About 40 clergymen, primarily Jewish, blocked the steps of the United States Mission to the United Nations last week to protest "the intolerable persecution of Soviet Jews and the ransom recently imposed on those seeking to emigrate" from Russia.

The half-hour noontime demonstration at the mission, at First Avenue and 45th Street, was timed to coincide with a speech to the General Assembly by Andrei A. Gromyko, the Soviet Foreign Minister.

About 600 persons attended another noon rally on the same issues at Dag Hammarskjold Plaza. Some of the singing, chanting participants in the rally eventually moved two blocks down

First Avenue to watch the clergymen, who had tied themselves together with a link chain.

A number of speakers demanded that the United States break off trade talks with Russia, which are now going on in Washington, unless the Soviet Union dropped its recently imposed emigration fees of $5,000 to $30,000.

A Dream Demands Struggle

He spent 10 years in a land of oppression. His crime? He wanted to live with his people - the people of Israel. Once released from prison, he again applied for a visa to Israel. This time it was granted. He is only one of 50,000 immigrants who have sacrificed and struggled to get to Israel this year. Two-thirds of them are distressed immigrants. Most are destitute. The price of a dream is high. The people of Israel are paying a high price to preserve their dream. They are the most heavily taxed people in the world: nearly 80% of their hard-earned tax revenue goes to defense. The price of their dream drains their resources. They cannot help these immigrants. That is our job: our traditional job of saving lives. While Israel battles to defend herself, we must provide for the sick and the aged. We must help build the 15,000 housing units the immigrants will need. Here at home we have added the urgent needs of our elderly to the 26 agencies seeking Federation support. We must meet our obligations to fellow Jews in distress here at home and all over the world. DIG DEEPER - Give MORE THAN EVER BEFORE. We must maintain the quality of life they have so justly earned.

Long-Range Power Denied

Russia Delivers New Bomber To Egypt Just Before Ouster

WASHINGTON — Shortly before President Anwar el-Sadat ordered Russian pilots and military advisers to leave his country, Government analysts say, a swing-wing fighter-bomber never before seen outside the Soviet Union was delivered to Egypt.

The deliveries, recently confirmed by American reconnaissance satellites, would appear to contradict the commonly held conviction in the West that a Soviet failure to give Egypt better attack aircraft and missiles was a principal factor behind the expulsion, in July.

But some Pentagon and State Department analysts believe that the new plane actually served to heighten Egyptian disillusion with the Russians.

The new aircraft is known under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization code name as Fitter-B. It is a swing-wing Sukhoi 7, which the Egyptians have had in large numbers for several years.

MIG-23 Missile
"And that was the rub, it seems to us," an analyst said. "The Egyptians wanted an advanced fighter-bomber and thought they had Russian promises to get some. But what was delivered is barely better than the Sukhoi 7, except that the swing-wings allow it to take off from a shorter field."

Well-placed officials say Egypt is believed to have urgently sought two very advanced weapons:

●The MIG-23 fighter-bomber, not to be confused with the reconnaissance-fighter plane known as the Foxbat and now identified in the intelligence community as the MIG-25. The MIG-23, the analysts say, is the closest Soviet plane to the American F-4 Phantom fighter-bomber, the principal plane in the Israeli Air Force. It has not yet been placed in operational Soviet squadrons.

●A surface-to-surface missile with a 450-mile range known by the NATO code name Scaleboard. This mobile solid-fuel weapon is believed to be normally armed with a nuclear warhead. Most Scaleboards in the Soviet inventory are deployed along the Chinese-Soviet border.

The Russians reportedly refused to provide either weapon but instead mounted an airlift in May, June and early July that brought in crated swing-wing Sukhois. They also provided the Egyptians with a handful of additional TU-16 bombers armed with air-to-surface missiles called Kelts, well-placed Pentagon and State Department sources said.

Article by Sadat

But the weapons do not appreciably improve Egyptian military capability against Israeli military positions in the Sinai Peninsula, occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, or against Israeli cities, they added.

President Sadat made clear the importance of long-range weapons in his thinking in an article appearing in the October issue of the quarterly magazine Foreign Affairs. The article was apparently written before the order expelling the Russians.

"There is no alternative to the creation of a credible deterrent to the Israeli forces on which the United States Administration lavishes most 'generously' its most sophisticated weapons," Mr. Sadat wrote. "Egypt here faces an embargo imposed by the West. In fact she also faces a partial embargo imposed by the East."

"The Soviet Union," he said, "declines to provide us with the weapons which would constitute this credible deterrent."

Most analysts believe the Soviet Union would not consider providing a weapon such as the Scaleboard, even without nuclear warheads, because it needs all it produces and because it did not want to provide Egypt with a long-range weapon that could be used to set off another war with Israel.

A Possible Dilemma
Similar reasons are believed to lie behind the Soviet refusal to supply the MIG-23, whose speed, payload capacity and relatively long range might have made air strikes deep inside Israel a possibility.

As some American planners see it, neither the missile nor the MIG-23 would have changed the balance of power, but either one

Tighten Security For Orchestra

CARACAS — Tightened security measures were ordered here during the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra's scheduled appearance. The orchestra, which gave two performances under the direction of Zubin Mehta, was heavily guarded by police and military units, particularly the concert attended by Venezuela's President, Rafael Caldera and his wife.

The Philharmonic will appear in Pittsburgh October 9.

Orchestra members said that at no time after the Munich massacre occurred on September 5, when the orchestra was in Brazil, was any consideration given to cancellation of the tour.

used in a moment of desperation might have started a new war that could suddenly have enveloped the 15,000 to 20,000 Soviet military men formerly in Egypt and presented Moscow with the prospect of sitting by and allowing another humiliating Arab defeat or interceding with heavy reinforcements and opening the possibility of a confrontation with United States forces in the eastern Mediterranean.

The Russians first developed the swing-wing version of the Sukhoi 7 in 1967. When it is taking off, the wings are fully extended to provide increased lift and enable the plane to leave from a short runway; when the plane gains speed, the wings are swept back along the fuselage for reduced drag.

But experts point out that the Russians thought the plane offered so little improved performance over the regular Sukhoi 7 that they deployed only two operational squadrons of the modified plane.

It is believed that the Russians provided Egypt with eight to 16 of these planes. Even after the expulsion order, officials say, some Soviet pilots stayed behind briefly to train Egyptian airmen to fly them.

Officials said that the Soviet Union has continued a "modest flow" of spare parts and replacement weapons to Cairo. This was interpreted as an effort to prevent a total breach of military relations, presumably in hopes that either President Sadat or a successor would invite the Russians back to play a major role again in assisting the armed forces.

Meanwhile, planners note, Egypt is seeking alternate sources of military supply and experts in Western Europe.

As possible evidence that Egypt is not thinking of resorting to force soon in its dispute with Israel, analysts point out that she is discharging 20,000 to 30,000 conscripts who have been on duty for five years, since the 1967 war. "They still have a considerable army," one official said. "But you hardly let that many men out of service when you think there's any immediate prospect of another war."

CRITICIZE PROCEDURE
LONDON — The annual report issued by Amnesty International criticized "the review procedure in regard to long term Arab detainees" in Israel, but noted that the overall number of administrative detainees has dropped.

El Al Crew Receives Anonymous Threats

LONDON — Police threw a tight security net around Heathrow Airport last week following anonymous threats to murder two El Al crew members and reports from Interpol that the Arab terrorist, Leila Khaled, was flying to London from the Continent. The threat to the crewmen was reported by the Israel Embassy here.

Police went to the Europa Hotel in Grosvenor Square where the El Al crew was staying. Their plane was scheduled to leave for Tel Aviv. The whereabouts of Miss Khaled, who tried unsuccessfully to hijack an El Al jet in Sept., 1970, was the subject of police reports from various countries. Interpol officials warned Danish authorities that she might be in Denmark or Sweden with a group of Palestinian terrorists possibly planning another hijack. Swedish police refused to comment. A spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization claimed she was in Beirut.

Eban Says Germany Acted Correctly

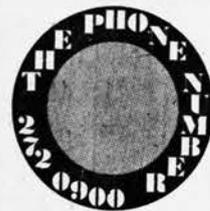

WASHINGTON — Israel's Foreign Minister Abba Eban said that the West German government acted correctly in its handling of the Palestinian terrorists who killed 11 Israeli athletes on September 5. Speaking on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation", Eban said that although he was not satisfied with the results, the basic decision of the West German government was correct.

He denied speculation that Israel will conduct anti-terrorist activities on foreign soil, noting that Israel was not in a position to do so and that it respected the sovereignty of other nations. Eban proposed that countries end commercial air traffic with those nations that aid and harbor terrorists.

DONATES $1 MILLION
TEL AVIV — The German Red Cross has donated $1 million to the families of the Israeli athletes murdered in Munich. The funds were channeled through the Magen David Adom headquarters here. Dr. Joseph, chairman of the Magen David Adom, said that the Japanese Red Cross has sent $770,000 for the families of the 10 Israelis killed and the 40 Israelis wounded at the Lod massacre last May. Part of the Japanese donation also will be used for general activities and humanitarian purposes.

Israeli Police Arrest Kahane For Alleged Arms Smuggling

JERUSALEM — Rabbi Meir Kahane, the controversial head of the Jewish Defense League, was arrested by the Israeli police last Sunday in an alleged plot to smuggle arms out of the country for use in a campaign against Arab terrorists abroad.

The arrest of the rabbi, who has become a celebrated figure here in recent weeks, came as a surprise, since the plot was first reported some three weeks ago.

Several other persons have been detained, but no formal charges yet have been lodged against any of them. Rabbi Kahane was picked up at 7:30 A.M. at his home in Jerusalem and taken to a detention center near Tel Aviv.

Trip to U.S. Planned

Israeli law provides for 48 hours of administrative detention before formal charges are required, although this period may be extended by court order.

The arrest of the rabbi may have been prompted by publicly announced plans to leave Israel last Monday for a two-month trip to the United States.

In a recent interview, Rabbi Kahane predicted that he would not be allowed to leave Israel on schedule. "The Israeli Government has launched a multifaceted campaign to outlaw me and the Jewish Defense League," he said. "They're not going to let me go."

Tactics Dominate News

The arrest seems certain to increase the controversy that has developed around the rabbi and his followers in recent weeks. His radical tactics have dominated the newspapers and television here and have been discussed in several recent Cabinet sessions.

After an initial period of hesitation, the Government seems to have decided to crack down on Rabbi Kahane and prosecute him for any role he might have played in the arms-smuggling.

Police sources said that there was evidence that the rabbi had had possession of detonators for the grenades in an arms shipment confiscated at the Tel Aviv airport September 14. Since the detonators are explosive devices, this charge alone, if proved, could bring Rabbi Kahane up to seven years in prison.

While the Jewish Defense League has said it devised the plan to smuggle arms overseas for a counterterrorism campaign against Arab guerrillas, Rabbi Kahane has denied any personal involvement.

New York Court Order

His legal situation is complicated by a 1971 Federal court order in New York directing him to refrain from public statements on arms during a suspended five-year prison sentence. It is not clear, however, whether this order applies to his activities outside the United States.

The rabbi, who is married and has four children, moved to Israel 14 months ago and established a league headquarters to settle here permanently and has applied for Israeli citizenship.

Largely ignored at first, the rabbi has attracted attention in recent weeks by a campaign to extend Jewish settlements in the occupied Arab territories and attempts to stage a mock trial of Sheik Mohammed Ali Jaabari, the Mayor of Hebron, on the West Bank of the Jordan River, on the ground of his having played a role in a massacre of Jews in that city.

His tactics have been denounced by leading members of the Israeli Government and by many political leaders, including members of the right-wing Opposition.

Barred From Territories

Several weeks ago, the Government took the first in a series of steps that the rabbi says are part of a campaign to harass him and the members of his organization.

The military government on the West Bank, which was seized during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, ordered Rabbi Kahane and 20 league members to stay out of the occupied territories for one year, apparently at the request of Defense Minister Moshe Dayan.

More recently, the police have searched the homes of several of leading members of the league, which says it has 900 to 1,000 dues-paying members in Israel and 10,000 more in the United States. The Government has also frustrated the rabbi's plans to stage a mock trial of Sheik Jaabari.

The arms-smuggling plot, first disclosed by the Defense League in a news conference on September 19, catapulted Rabbi Kahane into the center of the controversy here over how Israel should cope with the rising tide of Arab terrorism that began with the killing of 11 members of the Israeli Olympic team in Munich, West Germany, last month.

Rabbi Kahane has been in the forefront of those arguing that Israel should meet force with force and adopt the terrorists' tactics. Despite the widespread frustration here about the terrorism, Mr. Kahane has found little support for his position.

Private Campaign Opposed

Even such right-wing figures as

Ezer Weizman, the former head of the Israeli Air Force who is now Secretary General of the Opposition Herut party, have argued that any antiterrorist campaign must be conducted by the Government's own security forces and not private groups.

The public attention given the league was greatly increased two weeks ago with the arrest of Amihai Paglin, a key strategist in the underground in the closing years of British rule in Palestine, in connection with the antiterrorist campaign.

The police have charged that Mr. Paglin, now owner of an oven-manufacturing plant, packed the illegal shipment of pistols, machine guns and grenades in a metal container at his plant. The shipment was discovered at the Tel Aviv airport shortly before it was to be airfreighted abroad. Mr. Paglin, who is something of a folk hero here, is still being detained, although no formal charges have been filed against him.

"We've gotten a million dollars worth of publicity out of this thing," Rabbi Kahane told a reporter who visited him at his Jerusalem headquarters. "The Government has made a big mistake by going after us this way. It has made us seem like a big, important organization, which we're not yet."

The rabbi announced plans last week to seek election to parliament.

Arab Self Respect Brought Break With Russia

BY MAJ. GEN. CHAIM HERZOG

JERUSALEM — With the passing of Egypt's President Nasser, Premier Kosygin's hasty visit to Cairo, which outlasted the normal requirements of protocol, indicated Russian apprehension as to relations with Egypt.

This apprehension was fully vindicated in Soviet eyes by the arrest of Ali Sabry and his pro-Soviet collaborators. This Russian mistrust of President Sadat and his aides was encouraged by a Russian failure to evaluate correctly the balance of power in Egypt, attributing to elements critical of Sadat, exaggerated influence. Russian attitudes which, in fact, questioned Egyptian sovereignty in Egypt, cut deeply into Egyptian sensitivity.

Following the Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation in May, 1971, between the Soviet Union and Egypt, the Russians began to make the supply of arms to the Egyptian Army conditional on Egyptian military plans being made available to the Russians. Russian classified areas such as in Wadi Notrun where the MIG-23 fighter bomber plane was stationed, were closed to Egyptian officers. When Israeli Phantom planes were shot down, all the wreckage was gathered by Russian advisers and shipped to Moscow. Egyptian officers were not allowed to examine the material. The Egyptians gradually realized that their country was no more than a proving ground for the Russians.

The Russians did not realize that an empire can be run either by occupation and force of arms such as in the case of Czechoslovakia, or by trained imperial civil service which understands the people who are being ruled. It is one thing to decide on a pro-Arab policy in the Kremlin. It is another to translate it into human day-to-day terms on the ground.

The attractive Russian policy became in Egypt an ugly Russian.

Furthermore, to the atmosphere of mistrust which gradually developed and which was fanned by the gauche, ill-mannered, awkward behavior of the Russians toward their Egyptian counterparts in which their disdain for Egyptian military prowess and technical ability was not concealed, was added the implications of a debate which took place in the Central Committee of the Syrian Communist party in 1969 in which the whole Palestinian question was debated. The conclusions of the debate were that there is no such thing as an Arab nation, that Arab unity is not a main purpose of the Communists — their main purpose is socialism — and that they did not favor a military solution of the Arab-Israeli problem because it could lead to a Soviet-American confrontation.

The committee was of the opinion that the call to destroy Israel was not a wise one, not only for tactical reasons but also as a matter of principle, because Israel is a reality. These conclusions were adopted by the Soviet Communist party. Mohammed Hassanein Heykal questioned the wisdom of having wasted so many years without examining this problem in depth with the Russians before becoming so heavily involved with them and dependent on them. For they were, after all, negating one of the main tenets of the Arab struggle — the destruction of Israel.

I would say that perhaps the major factor in the break as far as the Arabs were concerned was one of the preservation of Arab self-respect. Mr. Heykal, editor of Al

Jordan Says Israel's Ills May Offer Hope For Peace

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The Foreign Minister of Jordan told the General Assembly last week that there were signs of internal weakness in Israel that offered hope for peace in the Middle East.

Salah Abu Zeid, the Foreign Minister, said that Israel had been experiencing a steady increase in emigration of skilled Westerners to the countries from which they had come.

At the same time, Mr. Abu Zeid said that there was in Israel a restlessness caused by the "second-class" status of Eastern-born Jews compared to the European-born Israelis.

The Jordanian said that there was an "outspoken realization among Israelis" that an injustice had been done to Palestinians. He also said that there were strikes and demonstrations against racial discrimination in Israel.

"These and other signs of inner discontent are troubling the Israeli leadership," Mr. Abu Zeid said. "But they are giving encouragement to the rest of the world, or at least part of it, that a new world can emerge in the Middle East."

Warns of Disaster

Mr. Abu Zeid spoke in the Assembly's general debate, which takes place shortly after the opening of the General Assembly session and during which each country has the opportunity to give its views on the international scene. The debate is in its second week.

Mr. Abu Zeid warned that unless Israel changed her course, disastrous results would follow.

"What is to become of Israel?" he said. "Is she to go on from conquest to conquest, fulfilling at last the Zionist dream of a land extending from the Nile to the Euphrates?"

The Jordanian said that a hopeful course would be for Israel to accept the November 22, 1967, resolution of the UN Security Council, which calls for Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories, termination of belligerency, acknowledgment of the territorial integrity and independence of every state in the area and their right to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries.

Israel's position has been that her differences with Arabs must be settled by direct negotiations and that she should not be required to give up any territories as a precondition to such negotiations.

"Shattering Family Separations"

Mr. Abu Zeid said that the occupation of the West Bank of the Jordan River had resulted in "one of the most massive and shattering family separations that history has known." He said that the temporary visits to next of kin on the West Bank allowed by Israel "merely serves to highlight the magnitude of this human tragedy."

On Jerusalem, the Jordanian said that no discussion on the Middle East crisis could be "in the strongest terms on the fate and future of Jerusalem, a city hallowed by hundreds of millions of believers — Moslems, Christians and Jews all over the world."

He said: "The Israeli claim to an exclusive hold on this great historic city and the systematic efforts since the occupation to transform its unique identity are not only a violation of its sanctity but also a deep wound inflicted upon the conscience of humanity."

An Israeli spokesman at the United Nations, commenting on the speech, said that Mr. Abu Zeid's "acrimonious statement has again demonstrated that public polemics cannot contribute to the search for understanding between the parties to the Middle East conflict and that quiet, reticent dialogue is the only way toward peaceful agreement."

As did most speakers in the day's debate, Mr. Abu Zeid condemned international terrorism.

"Jordan is opposed to violence whatever its source of methods," he said. "Jordan is ready to participate effectively in any international measures to protect innocent civilians against violence."

"At the same time Jordan and I am sure, all peoples of the world support the right of an occupied people, every occupied people to effectively resist occupation and colonialism."

Of all the Arab countries at this Assembly session, Jordan has been the most forthright in speaking against terrorism, and the only one favoring the addition of terrorism to the agenda as an item of discussion.

RABBI FASTS

WAYNE, N.J. — Rabbi Israel S. Dresner, president of the New Jersey region of the American Jewish Congress has entered his tenth day of fasting to protest the Soviet government's head tax on Russian Jews applying for exit visas and the American military participation in Vietnam.

On New Basis

Egypt, Soviet Union Work
Toward Improved Relations

CAIRO — Egypt and the Soviet Union have started to work toward improved relations on a new basis, without any Soviet military presence on Egyptian soil but with friendly cooperation in economic and other fields.

This, according to informed diplomats, is the meaning of the announcement that Premier Aziz Sidky will go to Moscow October 16 for the first high-level talks between the two Governments since President Anwar el-Sadat announced the abrupt ouster of 20,000 Soviet pilots, missile crews and advisers July 18.

The President's decision came after a secret meeting here between Mr. Sadat and President Hafez al-Assad of Syria, who came to Cairo straight from an equally secret visit to Moscow.

Political sources affirmed that Mr. Assad played the role of an active mediator between Moscow and Cairo.

The sources stressed that whatever form the friendlier climate between Egypt and the Soviet Union might take, there would be no going back on Egypt's decision that there must be no Soviet military presence on Egyptian territory.

About 300 Advisers Remain
About 300 Soviet military instructors are all that is left of this presence. Soviet warships continue to use Egyptian naval facilities in Alexandria, Mersa Matruh and Port Said.

The Egyptian Government had hoped all along that the Soviet Union would be willing to accept relations on this new basis. Political opinion has been that it would be disastrous for Egypt if the ouster of the Soviet military men led to a complete break with Moscow.

But until General Assad brought back what is believed here to have been Soviet assurance, Egyptian officials could not be sure of Soviet intentions.

Only last week President Sadat declared that he was waiting for an answer to a personal letter he had sent to Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Soviet party leader. The Egyptian President added, in a speech, that he had "never breathed as freely as this summer" after the end of the Soviet military presence.

Spare Parts Needed
It is expected here that one of Premier Sidky's first tasks in Moscow is to obtain assurances that the Kremlin will continue to provide spare parts and replacements for the Soviet weapons now in Egypt. Egypt remains heavily dependent on such supplies since practically all her military equipment is from the Soviet bloc.

He is certain to discuss the future of the large development projects that are being conducted here with Soviet financial and technical assistance. Questions of trade, which is heavy in both directions, also are thought to be high on the list of topics.

As foreign specialists here see it, Mr. Sidky's bargaining power will be considerable since the Soviet Union must be anxious to protect its large investment in Egypt.

Many diplomats here are convinced that restoration of normal Soviet-Egyptian relations has been speeded significantly by VANCOUVER, B.C., (JTA) — David Barrett, a 42-year-old former social worker, won a stunning victory here to become the new Premier of British Columbia. He is the first Jew in Canadian history to become a provincial premier.

Running on the New Democratic Party ticket, Barrett copped the election by a majority of 10,000 votes over his opponent

Israel's raids into Lebanon and her air attacks inside Syria in the aftermath of the killing of Israeli Olympic athletes at Munich.

Friendship Seen Essential
Soviet and East-bloc diplomats all over the Middle East are reported to have invoked these events as proof that the friendship and support of the Soviet Union remains essential to Israel's neighbors.

The Syrian President's successful mediation between Cairo and Moscow is taken as an indication that he and President Sadat have been able to retain a relationship of trust despite their divergent policies toward the Soviet Union. When Mr. Sadat announced the ouster of the Russian's, General Assad said immediately that he would not follow suit. Some Syrian officials voiced bitter criticism of the Egyptian action.

Egypt's Government-run newspapers and radio ignored reports of a Soviet military build-

Report Commandos Agree
To Pull Out Of Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon — One of the surviving Palestinian commandos involved in the killing of Israeli Olympic athletes at Munich was identified here as a close collaborator of a military hero of Al Fatah, a guerrilla movement.

A Fatah source at the Sabra Street Palestinian refugee camp here said that a commando held in West Germany after being wounded in the Munich shooting, who has been identified as Mohammed Mahmoud es Saffadi, was a guerrilla fighter in Jordan with Abu Iyad, the Fatah military commander who was killed by Jordanian army forces in July, 1971.

The death of Abu Iyad, whose real name was Salah Khalef, is said to have inspired the formation of the Black September organization, a group evidently drawn from Fatah members who vowed to avenge his death.

The name of the extremist group comes from the defeat suffered by Palestinian guerrilla groups in Jordan at the hands of King Hussein's army in September, 1970. This defeat, and subsequent pursuit of the Palestinians, drove the guerrillas out of Jordan, eliminating that country as a base of operations against Israel.

Pullout Plan Reported
Fearful of a similar confrontation with the Lebanese Army now, following Israel's sweep through southern Lebanon two weeks ago, the Palestinian commandos have agreed to withdraw from all parts of the border area that Israel attacked with tanks and jets, killing scores of villagers. The withdrawal was announced at a news conference this week by Kamel Nasser, an official spokesman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

After a series of meetings with Lebanese political leaders, the Palestinian Liberation Organization, headed by Yasir Arafat and representing a wide spectrum of commando groups, has agreed to keep its men out of villages in southern Lebanon and up in Syria until the day of President Assad's arrival here, when they became front-page news.

Egypt's Minister of Culture and Information, Dr. Abdel Kader Hatem, left for Moscow last week to attend a festival on Egyptian culture. Although his trip had been tentatively planned for a long time, it became certain only last week.

VOA RAPPED
WASHINGTON — Rep. Claude Pepper (D. Fla.) has accused the Voice of America of devoting too little time to the plight of Soviet Jews in its weekly Russian-language program beamed to the USSR. "It is ridiculous and insulting to everyone who is concerned about the plight of Soviet Jewry to produce only one ten-minute program in Yiddish," the Congressman said in a letter to Frank Shakespeare, administrator of the US Information Agency.

reduce forces in the area called the Arkoub, on the slopes of Mount Hermon.

The commando force in Lebanon has been estimated at 3,000 armed men. The decision to halt operations from Lebanon that could provoke new Israeli attacks, and even occupation of southern Lebanon, was expected to put many guerrillas on a reserve footing.

Sadat Explains

Would Have Accepted Settlement
If Russia Had Supplied Arms

BEIRUT, Lebanon — President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt said in an interview published here that he "would have accepted a peaceful settlement" in the Middle East if the Soviet Union had delivered advanced armament to counter Israeli power.

Without a large supply of Soviet MIG-23 fighter-bombers capable of "striking in depth" against Israel, Mr. Sadat told the influential Arab weekly Al Hawadess, "a peaceful settlement, as desired by the Russians, meant surrender to American and Israeli terms."

"This I will never accept," Mr. Sadat reportedly told his interviewer, Salim Louzi, the publisher and editor of Al Hawadess.

Cites Lebanon Raid
"If I had a fighter-bomber, I would not have allowed Israel to commit its aggression in southern Lebanon" several weeks ago, the publication quoted Mr. Sadat as saying.

Israeli armored columns and jet aircraft struck into southern Lebanon in a search-and-destroy mission against Palestinian commandos on September 16. No military action was taken against Israel by any Arab country, despite an outpouring of "solidarity" messages to Lebanon. Two hundred people were reported killed or wounded in Lebanon in the raid.

In the view of many Arab analysts, the failure of the Arab armed forces and particularly the large Egyptian force, to respond to the Israeli attack had reduced Cairo's influence in the Arab world to perhaps the lowest point since the death of President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Soviet Star Seen on Rise
Three months after Mr. Sadat's expulsion of most of the 20,000 Soviet advisers in Egypt, the image of the Russians as the only real protectors of the Arabs against Israel is on the rise. The well-publicized Soviet airlift

Syria Moving Up Armaments
To Israeli Border Territory

SURMAN, Israeli-Occupied Syria — From the Israeli outpost overlooking the shattered ruins of this former Syrian village, the flat, brown plain stretches north and east to Damascus, some 40 miles away.

It is a bucolic, seemingly peaceful scene, with small flocks of black goats grazing just beyond the high wire fence that marks the cease-fire line between Israeli-held territory and Syria. But every few hundred yards, the flat line of the terrain is interrupted by the turret of a Syrian tank or the square, concrete roof of a Syrian pillbox.

Some of the Syrian positions are overgrown with grass and appear to have been in place a long time, but the black dirt around many others is fresh.

"They began moving up the night of Munich, even before the fate of the hostages was known," an Israeli officer in the outpost said. "We could see the lights of the convoys at night and hear the engines of the tanks as they maneuvered into place."

The reinforcement that began with the shooting on September 5 of 11 Israeli athletes at the Olympics in Munich intensified, according to the Israelis, after their planes bombed guerrilla bases in Syria and Lebanon on September 8.

The Syrians' fear of reprisal was further heightened a week later when Israeli forces conducted a two-day sweep through the guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon. Presumably afraid that Syria would be next, the Damascus Government declared a state of emergency, which is still in effect.

The Syrians' fear of reprisal was further heightened a week later when Israeli forces conducted a two-day sweep through the guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon. Presumably afraid that Syria would be next, the Damascus Government declared a state of emergency, which is still in effect.

The failure of the United States to make any gesture of response to Mr. Sadat's dismissal of the Russians — a move that the United States had been pressing for — has made Mr. Sadat seem, to many Arabs, a leader adrift in search of a solution.

The Egyptian leadership has decided to send Premier Aziz Sidky to Moscow October 15, to try to mend Soviet-Egyptian relations. This is seen in part as a result of pressure by Syria and Iraq, the two Arab nations now closest to Moscow, to restore a political and military front against Israel that was weakened by Cairo's ouster of the Russians.

The punishing Israeli strike against Lebanon and the threat of a blow against Syria have heightened this sense of the need to turn to Moscow.

Sadat Discusses Ouster
In the Hawadess interview, Mr. Sadat said that the Soviet Union and the United States had reached a "non-confrontation" agreement in May during President Nixon's visit to Moscow and that that had made the presence of Soviet advisers in Egypt undesirable.

The expulsion may have been violent, but it was necessary, he was quoted as saying. Referring to the Soviet Union, he said "Our friend must wake up and realize that I am entering a battle in which he is listed on my side, but is not really so."

"The Americans contacted me recently," Mr. Sadat said, and related that he had said: "I'm ready to talk with you, but not via those through whom you are fighting us. I am not ready for direct negotiations with Israel."

Send a Herald each week to your son in the service.

Now, after four weeks of reinforcement, according to reliable Israeli military sources, the Syrians have greatly bolstered their strength along the front line by adding armor brigades to the infantry divisions that manned the positions before.

Hundreds of tanks have been drawn into position along the 60-mile cease-fire line, according to sources here, in addition to scores of heavy guns.

Several tanks and heavy guns could be seen from this outpost and perhaps a dozen more were spotted in a drive north along the security road that runs parallel to the cease-fire fence.

A heavy concentration of tanks, according to the Israelis, is on the lower slopes of Mount Hermon, northeast of the deserted city of El Quneitra, where more than 20 tanks was said to be dug in, their muzzles pointed west.

Despite all the heavy weapons drawn up against them, the Israeli soldiers in the forward outposts seem unconcerned. Several were dozing in the sun on top of their bunkers. The only source of tension in one heavily fortified position was a football game that was sending up clouds of dust from the courtyard.

Like their commanders, the soldiers seem to have concluded that the Syrian build-up is a defensive one that contains no threat of immediate action. "I know they are there, but there is no point in losing sleep about it," one soldier said. "I can't believe they would attack us."

Despite a series of public alarms sounded by Syria, there was no evidence of a corresponding Israeli build-up on this side of the line. A drive along the entire length of the Golan heights, from Mount Hermon down to the Jordan border, revealed no unusual activity.

There are Israeli military installations all over the Golan heights, and tanks and halftracks can be seen moving on the roads that connect them, but there was no sign of the massed armor and infantry that would be required for the sort of strike the Syrians fear.

Although there has been no fighting between the two armies, Israeli officers here say that Palestinian guerrillas based in Syria have stepped up their attacks since the Munich killings.

"Almost every night they drop a few mortar shells across," the operations officer in one outpost said. "It's more harassment than a serious effort. They seem to want to do something, but not so much that would bring a big response from us."

The noisiest night in recent weeks was on September 16, the first day of the Israeli strike into Lebanon. In an apparent effort to show support for their comrades, the guerrillas fired nearly 100 shells across the cease-fire line, according to the Israelis.

"They all fell outside the settlements, and there were no injuries," one officer said. "I think they were trying to miss."

Another guerrilla defense technique, according to the Israelis, is to fire their mortars from behind the United Nations observation posts along the cease-fire line. The posts, small white buildings with "U.N." painted in large black letters on the sides and roofs, are manned 24 hours a day by the soldiers of the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization.

The Treasure Chest

Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities
By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Hello, my friends, here's what we have for you this week.

Remember The Guide to Extra Earning Power about which I recently advised that you could get a free copy of upon request? I've just received a letter from its publisher telling me it isn't so, that mail copies are $1.00 each. How come then I got a free copy when I wrote anonymously for it, which is the way I verify anything I don't know about personally? At any rate, I've written him and I'll let you know the results.

You can get a free copy of a fascinating publication called No-Loads Have a Helluva Head Start, showing how profitable investing in no-load mutual funds can be (funds that charge no sales commissions). From The Hirsch Organization, 6 Deer Trail, Old Tappan, New Jersey 07675. Mention my name when writing for it — this publication usually sells for $1.00. And don't pass this up just because the stock market is down and doesn't look good. Knowledgeable investors know that it's at times like these that big profits are often made. For whenever the stock market has come down it's always come back up again.

In line with the purpose of The Treasure Chest to apprise you of outstanding opportunities, I feel obliged to tell you the following, albeit somewhat different from my usual reporting:

A few months ago I wrote to the now Republican challenger to Claiborne Pell's Senate seat to ask him how, in light of his past views, he could support our present Vietnam policy. He replied that he was proud to be part of an administration that had so reduced our role in that war during its three and a half years in office.

I replied asking how he could possibly claim pride in "our reduction" when that administration had promised to end our role in it and now has more ships and planes involved in it than ever before while conducting the most massive bombardment in history. He didn't answer.

This is not meant to knock Mr. Chafee. He's in a difficult position. I think he's a good man. But we in Rhode Island are presently represented in the Senate by two of the most outstanding men in the country. Respected. Dedicated. Honorable. The phrase 'Pastore and Pell' from R.I. not only enhances our state but our nation.

On November 4th we have an opportunity to keep that line intact. By voting for Senator Claiborne Pell, a man who has worked so hard and done so much for us.

So rarely in life is there a chance to do good for country, state and conscience all at the same time. I will cast my vote proudly.

NO EXTRADITION

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government wants to put Meyer Lansky on trial for tax evasion and contempt of court but apparently will not press Israel to extradite the 70-year-old reputed gangland boss.

Israel Philharmonic Travels Under Tightened Security

WASHINGTON — The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra has begun a 20-concert tour of the United States under security conditions tightened since the murders of Israeli athletes at the Olympic Games in Munich, West Germany.

"I have been followed since a month ago now," Zubin Mehta, the conductor, said of the security men.

Did he feel personally upset? "No, not at all," said Mr. Mehta, who also is music director of the Los Angeles Symphony.

A highlight of the tour was a concert last Sunday at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in celebration of Israel's 25th anniversary. The center's 2,750-seat concert hall was sold out well in advance, and the Israeli Embassy invited about 1,000 people to a black-tie reception at the center following the concert.

Senator McGovern Invited

Among the public figures who accepted invitations were Senator George McGovern the Democratic Presidential nominee, and his wife; Secretary of State William P. Rogers and his wife, and Henry A. Kissinger, national security adviser to President Nixon.

The orchestra arrived here after concerts in Dallas, where 60 uniformed officers had ringed the hall, and Houston, where Mr. Mehta said even members of the Houston Orchestra had been unable to gain admission.

Had any similar group ever traveled under such tight security? "Possibly the Leningrad Orchestra when it came here at the time of the Cuban missile crisis," the 36-year-old Mr. Mehta said.

"One advantage is that I don't have to shake hands with 200 people; I do a concert and I am whisked away. But in Rio I insisted on meeting with some students who had been standing around for hours waiting to see me. Then I would find the security men coming around for autographs, too."

The orchestra gave 15 concerts in Latin America. It was in Brazil when word came about the tragedy in Munich.

The musicians have grown accustomed to the unusual security measures, Mr. Mehta said, and as a cooperative step have adopted some of their own. Thus, some members are assigned to check the group's bags at airports and others to check hotel rooms.

After Washington the orchestra will play 16 concerts in the Northeast and as far west as Michigan and Illinois. It also has dates in Canada and England.
