Institute Of Jewish Studies To Open At Emanu-El Wednesday

Rabbi Arnold Wolf, director and Jewish chaplain at Yale University, will be the first speaker in a series of five lectures to be presented by the Institute of Jewish Studies for Adults at Temple Emanu-El, entitled "Insights." The first lecture will be held at the temple on Wednesday, November 1, at 8 p.m. Rabbi Wolf will speak on "The Rise and Fall of the Synagogue."

"The Changing Jewish Family" will be the title of Dr. Mervin F. Verbit's lecture on Wednesday, November 8. Dr. Verbit is professor of sociology at Brooklyn College.

Dr. Ruth Waxman, managing editor of Judaism Magazine, will speak on "The Women's Role in the Synagogue and in Jewish Life" on Wednesday, November 15.

Dr. Seymour Siegel, professor of theology at the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York City, will speak on "Is There a Jewish Point of View on Politics?" on Wednesday, November 29.

"Judaism and the Sexual Revolution" will be the title of the final lecture by Rabbi David Feldman on Wednesday, December 6. Rabbi Feldman is at Bay Ridge Jewish Center in Brooklyn, New York. All lectures begin at 8 p.m.

Dr. and Mrs. Ralph S. Levitt are chairmen of this year's institute. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Mercin Bolusky and Mrs. Harvey Blau, sponsors and patrons; Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Eisenberg, tickets; Mr. and Mrs. Alan Hurwitz, printing; Mr. and Mrs. William Melzer, publicity; Mrs. Robert McGarry, secretary; and Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen and Rabbi Joel H. Zaiman, advisors.

Bring Suit To End UJA Tax Exemption

WASHINGTON — A financial consultant, two Protestant ministers, three professors and a Washington State legislator filed suit this week in Federal District Court asking the Internal Revenue Service to end the tax-exempt status of the United Jewish Appeal and the United Israel Appeal.

Abdeen M. Jabara, a Detroit lawyer who filed the suit, said at a news conference that the tax-exempt status of the two organizations was "unique" and that they were only "conduits" for funds sent to Israel.

The suit alleges that:
●The two agencies "are not organized and operated for charitable and educational purposes but substantially for politically and ideological ones," contrary to Internal Revenue Service regulations.

●They do not retain control over the funds they collect, as required by the I.R.S.

●The tax-exempt status violates the equal protection clauses in the constitution.

●Funds given to the agencies contribute to racial discrimination contrary to the Civil Rights Act of 1963.

●The United Jewish Appeal, the United Israel Appeal, the Jewish Agency in Jerusalem and the World Zionist Organization all are agencies of the state of Israel and gifts to them represent contributions to a foreign Government, in violation of I.R.S. restrictions.

The suit asks that a three-judge panel be set up and for injunctions against the Secretary of the Treasury and the Internal Revenue Commissioner to end the tax-free status.

It also asks the court to "collect all sums now due and owing the Government of the United States, plus damages and interest since the first year said exemption was accorded..."

Nineteen Jewish Families Allowed To Leave USSR Without Fee Payment

MOSCOW — Nineteen Jewish families in Moscow were unexpectedly given permission last week to emigrate to Israel without paying the heavy exit visa fees that Soviet authorities have required of emigrants since mid-August.

Six of the families had been told only 48 hours earlier that they would have to pay a total of 160,000 rubles ($195,000) in fees, based on their levels of education, to obtain the exit visas for which they had otherwise qualified.

The move appeared to be timed to coincide with the White House announcement of a trade agreement with the Soviet Union and was presumably intended to mollify Congressional opposition to the trade package.

Viewed as Exception

Seventy-two Senators have sponsored a resolution asserting they would block a trade package with Moscow unless the Kremlin rescinded the heavy exit-visa fees.

Jewish activists, on the basis of conversations with officials in the Soviet visa office, interpreted the move as an exception rather than evidence that the Kremlin had decided to drop the exit fees altogether.

They said that when members of the 19 families were summoned to the Visa and Foreign Registration Office, they were told they had to leave the Soviet Union by October 28, or else they would have to pay the fees.

When some asked whether another Moscow Jew who had paid 14,000 rubles for an exit visa only four days before would get his money back, they were told, "No, and he will not be the last one to pay," according to the Jewish informants.

American officials were known to be privately encouraged by the gesture. "At least it shows that there is some element of review somewhere along the line, some cognizance of outside pressures," one diplomat said.

But, noting that none of the 19 families included the most active members in the Jewish emigration movement or even the 100 families in the Moscow area who have been waiting the longest, he added, "Of course, it would have been more realistic to involve some of the more active individuals, those who have been raising the protest."

Some of the most prominent activists were holding a news conference with foreign correspondents complaining that pressures on the Jewish visa applicants were increasing at the time the new permissions were being granted.

A spokesman for the activists noted that those approved were almost entirely recent applicants and insisted that their own complaints of harassment of long-time applicants were still valid.

Prof. Alexandr Lerner, former head of a cybernetics institute until his dismissal in December after his application for emigration to Israel, said that military officers had visited his home 10 times in the last week to deliver warnings that unless he obtained work within two weeks he would be prosecuted as a "parasite" or non-productive member of society, subject to a jail sentence of compulsory labor.

Others Tell of Warnings

Others said that similar warnings were given to Prof. Alexandr Va Voronel, a 41-year-old physicist. In all, they said, police officers had visited 22 Jewish families recently with intimidating questions on the subject of work.

As a practical matter, they said, it is virtually impossible for them to get work because their work books carry notations that they have been dismissed from their regular jobs because of applications to go to Israel. A few intellectuals have nonetheless managed to obtain work as watchmen, upholsterers or laborers in bakeries or theaters.

Dr. Lerner, who at 59 is 10 months from pensionable age and recently underwent abdominal surgery and must face another operation, said he had refused to take manual labor. He said when he complained about the pressures on him to a precinct police captain, he was told not to worry about getting a job.

Viktor Jolsky, a 42-year-old engineer and physicist, and Roman Rutman, a 38-year-old mathematician, said they and others had been taken to jails outside Moscow for 10 days during President Nixon's visit last May.

Others asserted that young Moscow Jews were arrested, harassed and some beaten when the police tried to disperse crowds outside the Moscow synagogue during recent Jewish holidays.

Russian Weekly Denounces McGovern Stand On Fees

MOSCOW — For the second time this month a mass-circulation weekly has denounced Senator George McGovern for linking the Soviet emigration tax to the prospects of United States-Soviet trade.

Adopting a derisive tone unusual in the Soviet press toward American Presidential candidates, the weekly Za Rubezhom (Abroad) said: "How can the Presidential candidate of such a huge country, with all its tremendous problems, possibly have time to worry about emigration rules for Soviet citizens, including Jews. Could this possibly be the key plank, actually little more than a splinter, on which the Democratic candidate expects to woo voters?"

The publication, a weekly review of the foreign press with a circulation of a million, was reacting to Mr. McGovern's statement that he would vote in favor of a Senate move to withhold tariff concessions until the Soviet Union had abolished its high exit tax, which mainly affects Jewish emigrants to Israel.

The attack on the Senator was the latest in a series of Soviet press statements contending that the Government had the right to levy emigration duties.

POLICE CLASH
BRUSSELS — The Mayor of Brussels disavowed the action of police in the borough of St. Josse who clashed with Jewish demonstrators and arrested David Susskind, president of the Coordinating Committee of Jewish Organizations in Belgium. According to eye-witness reports, police charged the demonstrators without provocation, shouting, "dirty Jew" and "get the hell out of here to Israel." The demonstrators were members of Jewish youth organizations protesting the Soviet treatment of Jews. One girl reportedly suffered a broken leg in the clash.

New Blood Too Late

Just as Israel has never satisfactorily solved the riddle of who is a Jew, so it has never come to grips with defining the precise relationship between religion and the state. Thus the recent election of its two chief rabbis had as much political as religious meaning. The actual powers of the rabbinates are defined by law as embracing all matters concerning the personal status of Jewish Israelis, but their prestige and authority are largely determined by the personalities of the office holders.

Over the years their prestige has been corroded. Most Israelis are non-practicing Jews. No clear-cut answers have been found to the problems treated by modern statehood and mass immigration, and the chief rabbis themselves have been too hidebound to rise above the stringent tenets laid down in another age. Both of the outgoing chief rabbis, Yehuda Unterman, aged 86, and Itzak Nissim, aged 74, had tended to turn their backs on the liberal mood of the 1970s. Nor did they face up to the real suffering caused by the strict application of marriage and conversion laws which had been designed to protect a Kingdom of Judah from Ba'al worship or to prevent assimilation in medieval Polish ghettos. Today a mixed couple from Russia or America, or a Cohen (that is, a descendant of a priestly family) wishing to marry a divorcee, can fly to Cyprus for a Gretna Green-type ceremony, but they still condemn their children and their children's children to a dubious marriage status.

Anomalies have multiplied, and critics on both sides have found plenty of ammunition with which to keep the government and the religious establishment under permanent siege. Those seeking to separate religion from the state have threatened the coalition of the Labour Party and the National Religious Party (NRP) by trying to introduce civil marriage for people who are pronounced unmarriageable by the rabbis. At the other end of the scale the ultra-orthodox have taken advantage of the rabbinates' indecisiveness by provoking demonstrations and even riots over such issues as transport on the Sabbath and the performance of post-mortems.

The Labour Party has long wanted to see new blood injected into the chief rabbinates, but in the end it agreed with the NRP on two compromise candidates. The Ashkenazi was the chief rabbi of Tel Aviv, aged 56, who had proved a dynamic newsmaker as chief army chaplain, though irreproachably Orthodox and a celebrated scholar, he is in close touch with the world as it is. The Sephardi candidate backed by the two parties was the incumbent chief rabbi, Itzak Nissim, who was thought to have the support of the oriental community. The surprise of the election was his defeat by the highly popular Sephardi chief rabbi of Tel Aviv, Ovadia Yosef, who is only 51. Now the Israelis and world Jewry are looking to the new men to restore the once legendary spiritual authority of the rabbis of Israel.

But in one respect the changes may have come too late. The independent liberals, who are also in the government coalition, have refused to waive their demand for civil marriages, and the Knesset will have to tackle the issue when it reconvenes. The left-wing Mapam, another coalition partner, is committed to support the measure. The NRP is equally committed to walk out of the coalition if the measure is passed. This is quite possible if the Labour Party vote splits. If Labour wants to salvage its alliance with the NRP, which has hitherto been a constant factor in Israeli politics, the government will have to call an early election. Such an election will argely be fought on the inflammable religious issue, and the new chief rabbis will have come on to the scene to late to avert what nobody wants.

RIC Student Body President Asks Approval Of Bond Issue

As President of the Rhode Island College student body I wish to address the people of the state of Rhode Island regarding a matter that is most important to the students of RIC.

As citizens of the state you will be presented with a question of extreme importance on the November ballot. During the general election you will be asked to speak your approval or disapproval on a bond issue which seeks to provide badly needed service facilities at three state institutions. We, at

Rhode Island College, are particularly concerned about this bond issue because we are one of those three institutions affected by that question.

We will be asking you to vote to provide us with a new classroom building and with a facility for the maintenance department of the College, so the building they presently occupy can be put to better use as an academic center. This new building is important to us and to you. We want our teach-

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

The Faith of My Father

By BERYL SEGAL

My father signed his name as Aaron Yitzhok ben Reb Tzvi Hersh Halevi, Shub. He omitted the family name of Segal because it was given by a secular power, the government of Russia, and added Shub which is the Hebrew for his profession. Shub stands for the two words Shochet and Bodek, the slaughterer of fowl and cattle and the explorer of the inner organs of cattle so as to pronounce them Kosher, or fit for Jewish consumption.

Shochet and Bodek were the chief occupations of my father in the little town on the Ukraine before the Nazis came. My father was also the Mohel, who performed the act of circumcision on the male children born during his lifetime, and the Sofer, the Scribe of the Scrolls of the Torah in town. Besides these, he was also the Baal Tfilah, the reader and chanter of prayers in the shul, and he chanted the Sidrah, the weekly portion of the Torah, on Sabbaths and on Mondays and Thursdays.

People brought to my father their Mezuzahs from their doors so he could "look them over" and make corrections in the writings, and they asked him to "fix" their Tefillin periodically.

With all these professions my father managed to feed his family, to buy clothes and shoes for them and to make the Sabbaths as was proper.

The Sabbaths were the days for which my father worked all the weekdays of the year and for which the whole family longed to return every seventh day of the week.

Sabbaths were days of complete rest for the family, and even the air we breathed in the house, as in the homes of every Jew in the Shtetl, had an extra ingredient in it.

On Fridays my father would sit at the table and chant the Sidrah of the week, twice from the text of the Torah and once from the Targum, the Aramaic translation of scriptures. With this reading the Sabbath was introduced to the house. Clothing was changed. The table was covered with a white tablecloth. Dark bread disappeared from the kitchen and the smell of freshly baked Hallah would fill the house. The Sabbath meals were veritable banquets, Seudoth, with wine and light and songs, the Zemiroth of Sabbath.

And so were the Holidays and Festivals which came in their season. Passover, and especially the two nights of the Seder, was filled with songs and lights and spring was in the air. The Days of Awe, the High Holidays, brought a serious mood to the house. Succos had a sadness about it. One could feel the passing of summer and the coming of fall.

And as the calendar changed its months, so did the atmosphere of my father's household change. The pulse of the year was beating in our house.

But summer or winter, fall or spring, the book was never far away from the reach of my father. At meals, between the changing of the dishes, my father would immediately open the book at his right hand and look into it. On Sabbaths, even before he took his Sabbath nap, my father would "listen" to his sons recite the lessons of the week.

With all that I never heard the name of God discussed in my father's house. God existed. God knew the thoughts of every one of his creatures. All that we did, we did for Him. But we did not discuss God, still less question Him.

Torah, study and Mitzvos, the performance of God's will, were like air and food and water in the life of my father, as in the life of every Jew in our little town.

Now, why am I talking about my father?

Because of a series of lectures by Rabbi Arthur Green, given under the auspices of the Bureau of Jewish Education at Hillel House at Brown University.

Rabbi Green is a gifted young man. He is a Boki, versed in Rabbinic literature and in Jewish Philosophic thought from the oldest era to modern times. He is a brilliant speaker, and his speaking brilliance is only complemented by his sincerity and honesty.

But by his excursions in the byways and highways of classical and modern Jewish writings he comes to the same conclusions, it seems to me, about Jewishness as my father and his fathers before him did. He starts out to prove by various means that daylight is indeed goodlight, something that my father knew all along. He did not intellectualize about his Jewishness, but lived it because his father and generations before him lived that way and found it good.

After all is said and done Rabbi Green asserts that the Sabbath is one day he would not change with anybody, that Pesach is the delight of his life, and that he feels more comfortable with his Jewishness. What then is the difference between my father and his generation and Rabbi Green and his Havurah!

I will try to answer with the mmidrash Rabbi Green quoted during his very first discussion:

"Raba said:
 'All that Ezekiel (the Prophet) saw, Isaiah (the Prophet) saw.

'What was Ezekiel like? Like a countryman who saw the king.

'What was Isaiah like? Like a city man who saw the king.'

My father and Rabbi Green. The countryman and the searching sophisticated twentieth century man.

By various ways they both arrived at the same destination.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Your Money's Worth

By Sylvia Porter

How Do You Use Credit Cards?

Do you have at least three credit cards, most of them good only at a particular store or chain of stores?

Do you use at least one of these cards regularly?

Do you think of your card or cards primarily as a source of credit, and in only a secondary way as a convenience?

Do you write more checks than you used to, despite your use of the cards too?

Do you have a basic, nagging fear that credit cards make it too easy for you to buy things you do not really want or cannot honestly afford?

Do you, as a result of this basic fear, tend to think of your cards as an evil — a necessary evil, but still an evil — and not as a good thing?

If you answered yes to every one of these probing questions, you are typical of today's credit-card user, according to the first comprehensive study ever made of "Credit Card Use in the U.S.," soon to be published by the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research ($4, paperback).

"Few Americans tend to think of credit cards as a good thing, whether they use them or not," says Dr. Lewis Mandell, who directed the ISR study. "Fully 75 per cent of all respondents said that credit cards made it too easy to buy things."

Now check where you, a credit card owner, fit in the wide range of users analyzed.

* If you have a higher than average income and higher than average education, you're more likely to be a card user than those with lower incomes and educations. "Income is the major determinant of credit-card use," Mandell concludes.

* If you are a young family and have children, you are more likely to use cards than other groups and more likely to incur debt on your cards than other groups. "Another determinant of credit-card use is related to the age of the family head."

Eban Says Israel Does Not Need JDL

NEW YORK — Israel Foreign Minister Abba Eban last week assailed the Jewish Defense League. "We don't need JDL people coming into Israel to interfere with a good relation growing, for example, between Israelis and the Arabs in Hebron," he said before viewers of the NBC-TV's "The Today Show."

Eban made this remark in response to a question posed by the program's moderator, Frank McGee, concerning the detainment in Israel of Rabbi Meir Kahane, leader of the JDL, on charges of allegedly shipping arms abroad to conduct terrorist activities. Eban refused to comment on the Kahane case but "... on the movement itself, our position is that we really do not need these organizations coming from abroad to tell us how to live with each other or with our Arab population."

In response to other questions from both McGee and Pauline Frederick, an NBC correspondent,

Dinner-Tribute To Rabbi Rosen Held In Andrews Hall At Brown

Three hundred guests attended the Dinner-Tribute to Rabbi Nathan N. Rosen, founding director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation and the Jewish chaplain of Brown University, on the occasion of Hillel's 15th anniversary and Rabbi Rosen's retirement at the end of the academic year.

At the dinner, held on October 24, greetings were brought by Provost Merton P. Stoltz for the university; Father Howard O'Shea for the university chaplains; Max Alperin, president of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, for the Jewish community; Mrs. Philip Dorenbaum, past president of District #1, B'nai B'rith chapters, and Rabbi William Koner, Hillel president in 1948, for the alumni. Dr. Joseph Kauffman, president of Rhode Island College, and Dr. Alfred Jospe, International Hillel director, were the principal speakers.

Rabbi Rosen, a graduate of Columbia University, holds two smichas, one from Isaac Elchanen Seminary of Yeshiva University, and the other from the Rabbinical College of New Haven. He is a former member of the Providence Human Relations Commission, and associate grand chaplain of the Masonic Order of Rhode Island, and a past president of the Rhode Island Board of Rabbis.

Eban reiterated Israel's right to retaliate for terrorist actions, and called upon all nations to act against terrorist groups. Eban called the terrorist movement an "urgent obstacle" that needed to be removed "in order to create the basic atmosphere in which peaceful discussion can go forward."

Eban also hit the United Nations for being "wedded to the technique of public debate and rhetoric" and said that it's not "the most congenial arena in which private conciliation can go forward."

Letter-Bombs Found

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Explosive devices sent by mail critically injured an Arab postman and a secretary here, and other letter-bombs exploded or were intercepted in Algeria, Libya and Egypt.

Four of the letters were addressed to representatives of Palestinian organizations and persons suspected of cooperation with them. Arab commentators blamed Israel for the mailings.

Abu Khalil, an official in Algeria of the over-all guerrilla group, the Liberation Organization, was hospitalized with slight injuries after a parcel bomb exploded in his hands.

In Amsterdam, the Netherlands, an Arab was detained at Schiphol Airport after customs agents found unaddressed letter-bombs, hand grenades, explosives, detonating equipment and pistols in his luggage.

Dutch officials said that the man, a 33-year-old Jordanian with an Algerian diplomatic passport, was traveling to Latin America. They would not identify him, although he was said to be on the staff of an Algerian Embassy in South America.

The material he was carrying was confiscated, but he was released by a magistrate after testifying that he did not know the contents of a suitcase he had been asked to carry.

Mrs. Meir's Remarks

The incidents in the Arab world occurred as newspapers published reports from Western news agencies of statements by Premier Golda Meir in Israel that have been interpreted, as suggesting that Israel might be retaliating in secrecy against Arab terrorists for mail-bombing incidents.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

As we have mentioned before, many hands are a battle between the Defense and the Offense. With perfect defense some hands cannot be made but not always do the defenders do right. In today's hand, some of the Defenders did give the Declarers a bit of help but when the Declarers were on their own uost of them failed to make the hand. Had they planned their play correctly, they could have made the hand no matter how the Defense went. They couldn't wait to do something that could have been done anytime. If they went after the right suit and then timed their play correctly the hand couldn't be set.

Mrs. Matthew Marcello and Mrs. Bernard Weiner were North and South, no one vulnerable, East Dealer with this bidding:

|---|----|---|----|
| E | S  | W | N  |

Despite the fact that the North-South hands had but 23 high card points between them almost every pair reached game. South did have an opening bid and if I held the North hand I would certainly also go to game. In the old Culbertson system North would have held a three trick hand, also considered a good opening bid. So that saying, "An opening Bid facing an opening bid must reach game." would hold true here.

West's opening lead was automatic, the Spade Queen, East winning the Ace. This now made Declarer's King good, of course, and he could ruff his last Spade in Dummy, at his leisure. I say that because the timing of that ruff is going to become the key to making this hand if the Defenders do nothing to help. Some Easts felt the Diamond suit in Dummy was a threat to be stilled so led a Club at trick two to try to remove the Ace in Dummy as an entry. They succeeded in that but lost a Club trick in the process. That Club lead guaranteed South the contract when he ducked the trick and West had to play the King to force the Ace.

The best defense by East is to return the Trump Queen at trick two. When that was done most of the Declarers won it, drew another round of Trumps, then couldn't wait to ruff their losing Spade. Then they had to play the Clubs themselves and when they had to lose two Club tricks no matter how they played them, they went down. How should they have proceeded after that Trump return at trick two?

The crux is when to ruff that Spade. It can wait until the proper time. Mrs. Weiner realized this and also saw that she could attack the Clubs herself to try to make the fulfilling trick or go after the Diamonds. The Clubs were a guess and even might in the wrong place, as they are but the Diamonds just have to break 4-2. If they do and the entries are conserved correctly the hand will be made.

At trick three a second high Trump was played leaving East with the high one but this Declarer was in no hurry to take that Spade ruff, that would be done in due time. Instead, and unlike the many who went down because they did ruff that Spade too soon, she started on the Diamonds, ruffing the third, not caring whether it was overruffed for it would have to be with the high Trump. West showed out but did not ruff. Now was the time to use that Spade ruff to enable Declarer to get over to Dummy to play a fourth Diamond setting up the fifth for a discard. She ruffed that and now used the Club Ace for the last entry to Dummy to cash that now good fifth Diamond and pitch one of her Clubs on it. Again it did not matter if East ruffed it, the Club would be discarded anyhow.

So the hand can be made with even best defense if the timing is right. Most of the Declarers did not foresee this and couldn't wait to ruff that third Spade.

Moral: Certain things that happen will still have to happen much later. Foresee these and think ahead enough to do them when it will do the most good.

TO SPEAK: Dr. Arieh L. Plotkin, lecturer and authority on Middle Eastern affairs, will be the guest speaker at the special dinner of campaign leaders in Woonsocket for the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island on Sunday, October 29 at 6 p.m. at Ciro's Restaurant. The dinner meeting will launch the Woonsocket phase of the annual JFRI campaign. Bentley Tobin is chairman of the Woonsocket area division.

Dr. Plotkin, a native of Germany, moved to Israel with his family in 1935. A graduate of Hebrew University in Jerusalem, he was the first citizen of Israel to be admitted to Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. He received his master's and Ph.D. degrees from Princeton.

He joined the Haganah in 1937 as a teenager and served as an officer in the Intelligence Corps of the Israel Defense Forces.

Booby Trapped Letter To Nixon Intercepted At Israeli PO

TEL AVIV — Booby-trapped letters addressed to President Nixon and two members of his Cabinet have been intercepted by Israeli postal workers.

A police spokesman said that the letter-bombs were similar to those mailed from Amsterdam, the Netherlands, last month by the Arab guerrilla organization known as Black September to Jews in various countries. One letter-bomb killed an official in the Israeli Embassy in London.

In addition to Mr. Nixon, the letters were addressed to Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

The letters were discovered in Qiryat Shemona, a town two miles from the Lebanese border. This caused speculation here that an Arab guerrilla had crossed the border to mail the letters.

The letter to Mr. Nixon, found in a mailbox at the post office was in an ordinary airmail envelope with a red border and carried the proper Israeli postage and an airmail sticker.

It aroused the postmaster's suspicious as it bore no return address and was stiff and thick. Mail-sorters later found two more letters in a sack brought from a mailbox in a bus terminal.

In another development, the Foreign Ministry, in Jerusalem, asked the Israeli Embassy in the Netherlands to inquire about the sudden release in Amsterdam of an Arab whose luggage was said to contain letter-bombs, explosives, revolvers and ammunition reportedly being taken from Damascus, Syria, to Caracas, Venezuela. Israeli officials expressed dismay that the Dutch had let the man go quickly.

MAKES APPEAL

LONDON — An appeal that British Jews should not take the law into their own hands to counter terrorist action was made by Maurice Edelman, MP and chairman of the external affairs committee of the Anglo-Jewish Association.

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

IT IS AND IT WAS: It is now time for devoting sports interest to football, basketball, hockey and other games of the season. It was the greatest of all World Series and it's difficult to stop discussing it despite the thud of the shoe against the pigskin. It was John McGraw and Connie Mack all over again, twisted a little because Dick Williams, emulating McGraw, was piloting the American League instead of the National. It was the fiery, fighting, coniving, dominant Williams in the McGraw role of old and the kind, considerate, likeable Sparky Anderson playing the part of the lovable Cornelius McGillicuddy. It was a World Series that had everything. If someone had written a script especially for suspense and excitement, it would have fallen short of the real thing.

KING BASEBALL: It was a World Series that proved baseball to be the "King of American Sports." It was a complete sellout day after day and it was a spectacle that lured millions and millions to radio and television sets. The entire picture with the spotlight always on the razor-sharp competition instead of the trimmings made the football super-bowl seem ordinary. It was a World Series that brought back the so-called "inside game" with bunts and steals featuring the excitement as well as the home run. It was a Series of strategy, brain over brawn; of quick reflexes, of special plays in execution. It was great!

OLDEST IN THE USA: Baseball's infection, stirred by the World Series, started tongues wagging about the Tim O'Neil Amateur Leagues. Tom Johnson, who has devoted hours of time and energy keeping the leagues going, writes that six teams completed the 1972 season in the Tim O'Neil Rhode Island Amateur League. They were Cranston Oil, Pawtucket, Woonsocket, North Attleboro, Randolph and Easton Huskies. Easton won the championship playoffs from Woonsocket, 3 games to 1. Says Tom, "At present the League is trying to recruit men to help with the promotion. I've done it for four years but the job is pretty big for one man. But, come what may, the Tim O'Neil League will be ready for 1973 and will still be the oldest such league in the U.S. in terms of continuous service." Good work, Tom! You deserve a medal.

NOT ALLOWED: Both Louis Marino, who managed the Federal Jrs. back there, and Wallace McAllister, one of three athletic brothers who were with the Universals, Powhatans and Brunswicks, discussed the play that caught Johnny Bench napping when he thought he was going to be intentionally walked. It wouldn't have been allowed by Tim O'Neil, Czar superb of the sandlots. Tim never allowed the "hidden ball" play either. He was a strong advocate of teaching the game of life through baseball. "Those plays teach deceit," he said. McAllister was a catcher, his brother Tom also worked behind the play and brother Bill played second base. His tales of baseball and football are many and interesting.

"CLEARTONE:" Anyone who follows the R.I. Reds of hockey will know that "Cleartone" refers to Jack Cleary, he of the famed "One Minute" announcements over the amplifying system at R.I. Auditorium. Jack going into retirement? Never! He may relinquish his hold on the announcing job, a post he has held for a number of years, but it will be difficult to keep him away from the action. He's almost as much to hockey as the ice. It was Danny Norton who named John "Jack" Cleary "Cleartone." And it was Warren Walden (me) — who spread the name to fame while broadcasting hockey games throughout the country. Cleary is a member of the R.I. Reds Hall of Fame and rightly so; the sound system, which Jack owned, should probably be installed in some Fall of Fame, too. Great fellow, "Cleartone." Stay with us Jack.

AT R.I. AUD.: The old place is still alive. Maybe a little heartbroken with so much attention being focused on the Civic Center. But R.I. Auditorium will offer Roller Derby Competition on November 4. And, tickets for the first eight games at the Civic Arena are being sold at 1111 North Main Street, Providence. Also, season hockey tickets are being distributed there. Not much room left here for football. A little for Basketball, especially for congrats to Andy Geiger and Brown U. for appointing Arnie Berman, who has a list of honors a mile long, as freshman basketball coach. — CARRY ON!

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: Grove Press, which brought out Clifford Irving's book, What Really Happened, will publish the author's account of his life in prison. Irving, who is serving a 2½-year sentence for conspiracy and fraud, was recently visited at Allenwood Prison Camp, Pennsylvania, by Joe Liss of the publishing house.

Irving told Liss: "In the end this situation is the essence of tragedy, comedy and absurdity. The great redeeming feature here is my fellow prisoners; they are beautiful and have helped me over some of the rough hurdles." The perpetrator of one of the greatest literary hoaxes said: "There is a certain etiquette in prison; you never ask someone directly what they are in for, you find out from someone else."

His biggest complaint was "time there is just impossible. They say after the first months it accelerates, which means a numbness sets in — the camp becomes the universe. Being in is not the punishment; it's not being out that pains."

Liza Minnelli, who attended the St. Regis Maisonette opening of her sister Lorna Luft, said: "The nicest thing about success is that it gives you the right to say no to a lot of things. I never do anything for the sake of doing it . . . I'm going to keep all my reviews, so that when I'm old and doddering, I can look at them and say — hopefully: "See how marvelous I was."

Appellate Judge Aaron Steuer, son of Max S. Steuer, the late noted trial lawyer, recently welcomed new attorneys to the bar: "I know this is a momentous day for you, because 50 years ago I had the same experience. But I find I cannot remember the name of the learned judge who addressed the class on that occasion, not what it was he talked about."

Steuer recalled: "We regarded wearing the hair below the collar as the peculiar province of poets and musicians, not to be countenanced in members of a sterner profession. However, as the chic method of wearing the hair became less of a problem and more of a memory, we adopted an attitude of tolerance."

Producer Alexander H. Cohen says if his 6 Rms Riv Vu is a hit he will not display the "Sold Out at This Performance" sign. Ticket buyers will see instead "No Vacancies at This Performance"

Mayor Lindsay received the first copy of The Fun City Girls screenplay by Ruth Harris, based on her new novel of the same name. The author will offer Lindsay the starring role in the movie, which concerns three single girls who kidnap a young and handsome Mayor of New York.

The hero is not Lindsay, although the book is dedicated to him.

Miriam Hopkins, the actress who died recently, once went to a nightclub with a famous author. When the club's cameraman asked permission to photograph them, the author waved him away. Miss Hopkins advised her escort: "Whenever you're out with an actress, let her be the one to say no to a photographer."

The night she opened in Jezebel Donald Ogden Stewart was so positive it would be a flop that he bet a friend a case of champagne the play would not run two weeks. Word of the bet reached Miss Hopkins, and when Stewart came to her dressing room to congratulate her, she berated him. He apologized, but the actress continued her tirade.

This exasperated Stewart so much that at a knock on the door, Stewart told the star: "Here's the man with the champagne."

Valachi Papers. During the Rome filming the actor requested permission for two days' leave to return home to vote in the elections in Sicily. Italian law requires each citizen to vote in his home town. Director Terence Young did not grant the permission.

The next day Leontini — who had been incensed at the refusal — gratefully told Young that the plane had crashed into the mountains near Palermo Airport the night before, with no survivors . . . Leontini's voice is used for the Marlon Brando character in the dubbing of the Italian version of The Godfather.

Jordan Christopher will replace Brian Murray in Sleuth on November 7 . . . Late next year trans-continental buses plan to show silent films of Chaplin, Keaton, and Laurel and Hardy . . . Pablo Casals will be 96 on December 29, and in honor of the occasion.

Puerto Rican industrialist Rafael Ramos Cobian will host a party for the famed cellist. Ninety-six celebrated guests from the arts will pay homage at Cobian's estate in Dorado Beach.

ASKS BOYCOTT
MONTREAL — The B'nai B'rith of Canada urged the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) currently meeting in London, to adopt a convention sponsored by the U.S. and Canada that would impose a boycott on any country harboring or otherwise supporting terrorists. Sydney Maislin, president of the Canadian B'nai B'rith, called on

Canada's Foreign Minister for a renewed effort to secure positive action by the ICAO on the measure. The U.S.-Canadian draft calls for the airline boycotts "against countries that offer sanctuary to hijackers; fail to return pirated aircraft, passengers and crew; and do not either punish the criminals or send them back to the country where the flight originated."

Combine Efforts To Provide New Service For Golden Agers

Staff members of the Jewish Community Center and the Jewish Family & Children's Service have combined their efforts to provide a new service for senior citizens at the Jewish Community Center.

Staff members of the family service agency will be available at the Center each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at the time that the Center's senior adult groups usually meet. Senior adults with problems, questions or situations in which they would like to consult with a social worker may now do so in complete privacy with or without prior appointments, at the times mentioned above.

Supervising the new programs are Paul L. Segal, MSW, executive director of the Jewish Family & Children's Service, and Mrs. Abe Lippman, senior adult activities director at the Center. Mr. Segal has assigned Esther Miller, Ruth Silverman and Florence Sломowitz from his staff to work directly with this program.

More information on the program may be obtained by calling Mrs. Lippman at the Center.

MORTGAGE FUND

NEW YORK — Histadrut is planning to establish a $25 million mortgage fund for the financing of 5,000 housing units for young Israeli couples, according to Yehoshua Lavy, Histadrut treasurer. Dr. Sol Stein, president of the American-based Foundation, proposed participation in this venture by American donors.

Four years ago, many of us never dreamed we'd be supporting President Nixon in 1972.

Two things have happened. The Democrats have nominated George McGovern for President—a man who deeply worries us. And President Nixon, since assuming office, has pleasantly surprised and impressed us with his performance. We like his open-door policy to China... his determination to maintain a militarily strong America, especially in such troubled areas as the Mideast... his program of aid to Israel (more than all previous Presidents combined)... his strong opposition to a quota system in any shape, manner or form... and much, much more.

Because we like what President Nixon has done—and are disturbed by what Senator McGovern proposes to do—we have formed the Concerned Citizens for the Re-election of the President. Many of our members are either Democrats or Independents. Consider what a few have to say:

"For all of my adult life I have been an enrolled Democrat and have consistently voted for the candidates of the Democratic party. This year I feel committed as an American and a Jew to assist in the re-election of President Richard Nixon.

"After my recent meeting with the President, I am more convinced than ever that he alone offers the best hope for a continued constructive relationship with the Soviet Union that all Americans applaud. Furthermore, the President's fulfillment of his promises of support for Israel leads me to believe that he is a man to be trusted by all of us. I know President Nixon is personally dealing with the Soviet leaders to effect an end to the onerous exit tax placed on Jewish emigrants and I believe that he will be successful. As an American and as a Jew, I wholeheartedly support the President's re-election."

Abraham Hershkovitz,
Bronx, N.Y.

"Even though I am a registered Democrat, I feel the only honest thing that I can do is to put my home and my country before my political party.

"As a Jew with a lifetime background of proven work for my people wherever they are, I cannot forget for one moment how much good President Nixon has done for our people and the people of the State of Israel. His most recent show of courage was the veto the United States cast against the Arab motion to censure Israel in the Security Council of the United Nations."

"I pledge my support to help re-elect President Nixon. No one has ever deserved it more."

Louis Boyar,
Los Angeles, California

"Although a lifelong Democrat, I now support the re-election of President Nixon. The President's philosophy of government calls for constructive change without endangering our basic institutions; progress without disruption and a pursuit of justice which recognizes the freedom of all. The record of the present Administration in establishing meaningful contacts with the superpowers, Russia and China, had immeasurably increased the possibilities for a period of peaceful co-existence. The record of his Administration in extending military and economic aid to Israel has been outstanding—$1.2 billion—surpassing the record of all previous administrations combined.

"Because of this Administration's successful record in foreign policy, especially in the Middle East, its achievements on the domestic front, and its prospects for molding a strong and vibrant society, I urge that President Nixon be re-elected."

Rabbi Seymour Siegel,
New York, New York

"I've had the pleasure of meeting recently with President Richard Nixon as I have on other important occasions. In addition to the President, I have also met with many other members of his Administration. I have found the President readily accessible and sympathetic to our views on Israel and Soviet Jewry just to mention two important issues. I have found implicit faith in him; I trust him completely. He has been a man of his word and I will do everything in my power to re-elect him."

Dr. William A. Wexler,
Savannah, Georgia

"As a lifelong Democrat, I am very happy to endorse the re-election of President Nixon. His achievements in domestic and foreign affairs make him one of the greatest Presidents in the history of our country. He is a recognized world leader who has contributed greatly to detente in the world.

"The President told me recently of his abiding commitment to Israel and stated he would never impose a settlement on Israel."

Samuel Rothberg,
Peoria, Illinois

"My name is David Luchins. I am a young Democrat, 24 years old. During the seven months of the Democratic primaries I served on Senator Hubert Humphrey's National Campaign staff as coordinator of his effort in the Jewish community.

"Many of the young people who worked with me for Humphrey's nomination are now supporting the President's re-election. As Americans, as Democrats, or as Jews, we cannot support the candidacy of Senator George McGovern.

"When I attended the Democratic National Convention, I saw for myself that delegates were selected on a quota basis. I believe this is profoundly un-American. President Nixon has declared himself against quotas of all kinds and has taken effective steps to prevent the imposition of quotas in government and private industry."

David Luchins,
Albany, New York

The Concerned Citizens campaign needs your support. We urge you to join with us in pledging your support and voting for the re-election of President Nixon.

ANGELA THORNTON as the wife and Paul Benedict as the husband in Act II of Pinter's "Old Times," now playing at Trinity Square.

'Old Times,' Easiest Pinter Play To Follow, Most Conventional

Harold Pinter's latest play, Old Times, is also the easiest to follow, and the most conventional in terms of coherence, necessity, laugh lines, and characters. Its three personae are a husband (Paul Benedict), his wife (Angela Thornton), and her friend from long ago (Geraldine Arthur). They are a talented, attractive company, and their ensemble playing makes this the outstanding Pinter that Trinity Square Repertory company has produced.

Relationships and times mingle and separate in the encounter of the three. When the play opens, the husband is curious about what seems to have been his wife's only friend; when it ends, they have all remembered much that may not have happened, but their memories have a satisfying probability. Along with the memories go nostalgic snatches of song from the late thirties and early forties.

The possibilities are fluid and various; this is one of the few plays (with this cast) that I would like to see several times in order to pick up the nuances and shifts that a single performance cannot contain. The dialogue, in today's theater, is incredible; every syllable could be heard, and what was supposed to be British speech was just that, with no jarring wrong inflections or emphases.

The set was clean, uncluttered, and even beautiful in its simplicity. The costumes were precisely right for the characters. Mr. Benedict has sometimes in the past emphasized an eccentric appearance, but here he is rather memorable visually for the expressive, enormous dark eyes looking out of a tired white face and brushed tair; the actresses, both Englishwomen, are a pleasant contrast to each other.

Jacques Cartier, former artistic director of the Hartford Stage Company, directed this second performance of Trinity's season; Eugene Lee designed the sets; and Roger Morgan designed the lighting. The only mistake of the production is including in the program a quotation from the London opening of Old Times, when one critic wrote that the play "was a short piece needlessly passed off as a full length production with the aid of a late start and a long interval." Trinity started about 22 minutes late, instead of its usual 10 to 15 minute opening-night delay; and the play ends earlier than most. But not a line could be cut, nothing is padded, and Pinter's pauses hold magnificently. Even if Pinter is not one's cup of tea, this is an entertaining evening.

AT LOGGERHEADS

JERUSALEM — Mayor Teddy Kollek is at loggerheads with his deputy, ultra-Orthodox Rabbi Menahem Porush over comments made about religious zealots in the Meah Shearim quarter of this city. Rabbi Porush took exception to Mayor Kollek's remarks after thousands of religious youths rioted here appealing for the release of two Orthodox students who are being held on charges of fire-bombing the "Eros" sex boutique in Tel Aviv. Denying that he ever advocated burning down the Meah Shearim area, Mayor Kollek stated that he did, however, say "that those persons who interfered with the police and municipal workers should have their bones broken."

Discusses Nixon, McGovern Stands On Middle East

This year, for the first time, the question of support for Israel has been made an election issue by the Republican Party. What had been a bipartisan issue above politics has been exploited by Nixon supporters in an attempt to win Jewish votes. George McGovern rejects this course. On August 14 he declared in a public statement:

"Americans of all political beliefs support Societ Jewry's struggle to be free as they support the people of Israel in their struggle to build a life of dignity and security for themselves and their children. I would therefore urge my Republican opponent and his advisers to place these concerns above partisanship in the 1972 campaign.

"The heroism of Soviet Jewry and the security of the State of Israel are not partisan issues."

At the same time, an intensive effort has been launched to distort and demean McGovern's record of Jewish concern. The security of Israel and Jews throughout the world demands that the facts be made clear.

Not only has Richard Nixon fallen far short of George McGovern in his support for Israel and the Jewish people, but he has often worked against their vital interests.

In his first term as a member of the House in 1948, Richard Nixon supported legislation that prevented thousands of Jews from entering the United States after the Nazi holocaust. And as Vice-President, Nixon became chief apologist for the policy of John Foster Dulles that threatened the very existence of Israel.

Immediately upon entering Congress in January 1957, McGovern was among the 74 Democratic Representatives who called on the Eisenhower-Nixon Administration to obtain commitments from Egypt to keep the Suez Canal and the Strait of Tiran open to navigation before Israel withdrew from Sinai following the '56 war. And in his first Congressional roll call vote, McGovern voted against the Eisenhower Doctrine in the Middle East because he felt deep concern that U.S. arms sent to Arab states would be used to destroy Israel. He spoke on the House floor, stating: "As a nation that has played a key role in the creation of the State of Israel, the only real democracy in the Middle East, America may be ill-advised in strengthening the hand of those Arab chieftains who insist that they will not rest until Israel is destroyed..."

As President, Richard Nixon placed a moratorium on the delivery of desperately needed Phantom jets to Israel. Only after an enormous Soviet military build-up in Egypt did he lift the ban early in 1972 — an election year. Furthermore, Nixon did nothing to contest the build-up even though it was in violation of a U.S.-sponsored cease-fire agreement.

As Senator, George McGovern played a key role in Congressional efforts to reverse Nixon's arms ban against Israel. He condemned "the Administration decision to withhold the sale of the jets Israel has requested" and urged the President to sell Israel "the aircraft so urgently needed for her defense."

Richard Nixon's Secretary of State, William Rogers, has called for Israeli withdrawal from virtually all the occupied areas. The "Rogers Plan" also proposes joint Israeli-Jordanian rule of Jerusalem and gives Arab refugees the right to choose between repatriation in Israel or resettlement elsewhere. As Secretary Rogers announced at a Washington news conference on Aug. 11, 1972, this plan remains U.S. policy in the Middle East.

Senator McGovern has publicly opposed every feature of the Rogers Plan. He has fought "all pressure upon Israel to withdraw prematurely and unconditionally." He has insisted that "there can be no peace until the Arab states agree to new and recognized boundary lines capable of deterring any further aggression." He has urged that Jerusalem remain unified under Israeli administration, and that the U.S. move its embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem. He has maintained that "the only way to achieve lasting peace in the Middle East is through direct negotiations without preconditions... Neither the U.S. the UN nor the USSR should be permitted to impose a settlement which is not acceptable to the Israeli people." And he has declared that "Israel was created as a Jewish state... it cannot accept a large hostile population in its midst."

Richard Nixon's Ambassadors to the UN joined the Arab-Soviet bloc five times in condemning Israel for rebuffing Arab terrorists and for rebuilding a unified Jerusalem. On five other UN votes condemning Israel, the best the U.S. could do was abstain. Only after the tragedy at the Olympic Games did our Ambassador, for the first time, invoke the veto in support of Israel.

Senator McGovern has called on the U.S. to "support Israel's basic peace proposals in the arenas of diplomacy, including the UN." He has urged that the U.S. sale of weapons to Israel "should not be made contingent on American diplomatic demands." And he has charged Egypt and Lebanon with sharing responsibility for the tragedy at the Olympic Games, declaring that the world community must "ostracize and punish" any nation that gives haven to Arab terrorists.

The Nixon Administration has repeatedly sought to tie American aid to Israel with appropriations for Vietnam.

Senator McGovern has consistently distinguished between the evil war in Indochina and the just cause of Israel. Warning against the growth of isolationism, he has declared: "We cannot permit our revulsion against the war in Indochina to distort our judgment about America's responsibilities elsewhere in the world."

Richard Nixon has never spoken out publicly on the plight of the 3 million Jews in the USSR. At a time of crisis for Soviet Jewry, he is proposing to grant the Kremlin most favored nation status in its trade dealings with our

Praises Senator Pell For Aid To Many Aspects Of Education

Everyone is familiar with Senator Pell's 15-month successful struggle to aid college students and the institutions they attend. Everyone also knows that students who need them can obtain Pell grants to help pay tuition costs.

What everyone may not know, however, is that Rhode Island's junior Senator successfully piloted through Congress an Education Amendment Act in 1970 providing $36 billion geared to elementary and secondary education.

Pell has concentrated on many aspects of education. He initiated and supported acts providing educational opportunities for the handicapped, and he managed the Emergency School Aid and Quality in Education Act. He also succeeded in including high school equivalency and high school education in the adult basic education program through the Adult Education Act, also in 1970.

Incidentally, it was Pell who sponsored legislation providing a loan service of captioned films for the deaf. His amendment of a bill concerned with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare provides the loan service of educational media for the deaf.

Letter Leads To Clothing For Israel

In your issue of Sept. 29th last there was a letter in your column written by a man by the name of Mr. Charlie Garber, asking for clothing to be sent to Brulia Artel, Hecholut, 45. Haifa, Israel explaining they need clothing. I meant to keep that particular letter to show it to the women's club of the Martha's Vineyard Hebrew Center. However, I explained the situation to them, and we have as a result mailed out two separate parcels of clothing. I gather the clothing together, and the women's club will undertake the expense of mailing. As you may well know packing is quite difficult, but if we as a group can be of help everyone is willing.

I would like that particular letter that you had printed, so please be good enough to mail it on to me.

I subscribe to your wonderful little journal.

Could you also mention if Brulia Artel is a man's name or the name of the home country.

George McGovern has helped lead the Senate fight for funds and political support in behalf of Soviet Jews since 1963. He has condemned the huge ransom charges imposed by the Soviet Union on Jews seeking to emigrate and called on the President to withhold trade concessions to the USSR until the Soviets abandon their slave-tax, and cease their arming of Arab terrorists.

There are, I believe, many considerations which, as Americans, call for our support of George McGovern. In addition, I believe the records and actions of the candidates on Jewish concerns demand that we, as Jews, make no mistake about which candidate is indeed our ally — George McGovern.

I have tried to discuss some positions of the candidates which pertain directly to the security of Israel and plight of Soviet Jews. I urge all Jews to get the complete facts about the records of the candidates. Recently, I have come across an excellent 34 page booklet entitled: "McGovern and Nixon: Israel and Soviet Jewry." ### Uncle Emil's Surprise

Old Uncle Emil was a cheap-skate, but everybody knew that he was property poor.

He was always negotiating about his taxes and now and then he had to sell one of his lots in order to keep his other properties in a solvent condition.

This disturbed his heirs very much, although Uncle Emil had no family himself. His heirs were the three children of his older sister, long since deceased. There were two nephews and a niece, all of them married with families of their own.

And all of them struggling; one of his nephews was a post office clerk, the other a barber and the husband of the niece was a nagler in a fur shop, the fellow who nails the stretched-out skins preparatory to cutting them into garments.

Uncle Emil died and the executor, his mortgage-banker, immediately took over his two remaining properties, one a "taxpayer" in the Bronx and the other a 14-family tenement in a Harlem slum.

These were to be liquidated, all the obligations paid off and what was left to be distributed among the three heirs of Uncle Emil.

The two nephews and the niece were gathered in the apartment which Uncle Emil had maintained for himself in his Harlem tenement and the executor said that the furnishings were not entailed and so the heirs could decide among themselves how they were to be divided.

The nephews were disappointed, of course. The best estimate from the banker was that after everything was liquidated there might be something in the neighborhood of $1,000 for each of the heirs.

But the wives of the two nephews made their selections from Uncle Emil's effects.

The niece refused to join in any arguments over the junk, and all she wanted, she said, was Uncle Emil's picture which stood on the dresser in an old fashioned gilt frame, a picture Uncle Emil had taken in 1907 when he arrived in America from Bessarabia.

The nephews of course told the niece she could have the picture and the banker took receipts for everything and duly recorded the allocation of the property.

On the way home, Bella, the niece, noticed that the cardboard backing on the old frame was loose and as she tried to put it back in place, $1,000 bills started to fall out.

Bella rushed home and counted $181,000.

A government tax man told me this true story about Bella's wisdom and honesty.

She brought the picture and the $181,000 to him and said, "How much of this may I keep for myself?"

Casualty Lists

The Jews were the first people in history to publish casualty lists.

The Spartan women told their husbands, "Come back with your shield or on it." But in accordance with religious law, a Jew was buried the day after he was killed. Law forced the humanitarian impulse. The Jews told his survivors.

There are casualties daily along the Suez Canal, on the road-building gangs in the Sinai, and on the West Bank of the Jordan. Five to 10 Israeli soldiers lose their lives

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. White of Hollywood, Florida, formerly of Providence, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Linda Ellen White, to Jonathan Kanter of Miami, Florida. Rabbi David Shapiro officiated at the ceremony which was held at the Hillcrest Country Club in Hollywood. A reception at the club followed. Attendants in the wedding party included Miss Shari White, sister of the bride, and Gary and Michael White, brothers of the bride.

Following a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico, Mr. and Mrs. Kanter took up their residence in Tampa, Florida, where Mrs. Kanter is a junior at the University of South Florida. Mr. Kanter, a veteran of Vietnam, is a senior at the university where he is majoring in linguistics and Russian.

Mrs. Kanter is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman H. Sohn, former residents of Providence, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter White of Springfield, Massachusetts.

Hopes For Inclusion Of Class In Yiddish At Day School

It was with great fervor and the utmost of interest that I read Mr. Segal's column of October 20th on the revival of the Yiddish language. How ironic it was that this article should appear at this time, because, totally unbeknown to Mr. Segal, I have tried to get our own Hebrew Day School to initiate a class in Yiddish. There happen to be a great many children, my own son included, who are students at the Day School, and who have expressed an ardent desire to learn to speak Yiddish. They requested that a class be taught as part of the daily routine at the school. I was deeply moved to know that there are youngsters in our midst anxious to gain the knowledge of an almost forgotten language in their generation — our own beautiful "mamaloshen." And what more appropriate place can there be than the Yeshiva that teaches these same children the concepts of Jewish life and seeks to influence them to live in accordance with these precepts.

Although I have repeatedly emphasized my desire to see the fruition of such a class, neither my efforts nor the efforts of the students have been able to produce any practical results. At first I was told that there was no known textbook available. So my own youngster found a most complete textbook that is current and readily available. The next obstacle that was presented to me was the possible unavailability of a suitable teacher. Surely, Mr. Segal himself, who taught Yiddish for 25 years, could comply with the most rigid demands for a suitable teacher of Yiddish. And I am certain that there are others in our very own community who have taught school for many years and have a thorough knowledge of the language and would be capable (one such person already indicated a desire to teach the course).

At long last, after pressure was brought to bear by the students themselves, a notice was sent home announcing the possibility of a Yiddish language class to be taught, if you please, after school, on Fridays, for one hour. What an unfortunate solution! Obviously the children have no desire to remain in school after regular school hours. And equally obvious is the impossibility of competently teaching a foreign language in one hour a week. What a beautiful part of their heritage they are lacking without the knowledge of their mother tongue. The warmth and the humor that cannot be translated in another language. The wisdom expressed so well that loses everything in any attempt to translate. What a wonderful thing that our children want to learn. Let us not lose the opportunity to teach.

I can only hope that the powers that be realize how derelict they would be in their duty and responsibility if they abandon the efforts of these youngsters. Their generation is our only hope for the endurance of Jewish life and the survival of the Yiddish language.

I sincerely regret that it is necessary to use a public forum such as the Jewish Herald to add further support to the wishes of the students involved.

As a parent, and as a Cantor in our community, I am certainly pleased and very proud of the curriculum and growth of the Providence Hebrew Day School, and firmly believe that a class in Yiddish, as has been instituted on so many college campuses in our country, would be one more positive step forward for our Providence Hebrew Day School.

Mrs. Richard L. Weiner

Miss Bernice Ellen Gerstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Gerstein of Fourth Street, was married on Saturday, October 21, to Richard Lyle Weiner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Weiner of Memorial Road. Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen and Cantor Ivan E. Perlman officiated at the 7 p.m. ceremony which was held at Temple Eamnu-El. A reception followed in the temple meeting house.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a princess style gown of ivory silk organza designed with a jewel necklien, long full ruffled sleeves and a full skirt which circled to chapel length. A matching ivory silk organza bridal hat held a silk illusion veil. Mrs. Albert Taubman served as matron of honor for her sister, and Mrs. Jed Cohen was the bridesmaid.

Michael Weiner, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Arthur Gerstein, brother of the bride; David Weiner, brother of the bridegroom, Phillip Lopatin and Charles Suraski.

Following a wedding trip to St. Thomas and San Juan, Puerto Rico, the couple will make their residence in Providence.

Students Argue With USSR Officials

PRINCETON, N.J. — A crowd of about 140 Princeton University students argued heatedly for half an hour last week with two Soviet officials to protest the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Vitaly S. Smirnov, the United Nations Ambassador from Byelorussia, and Aleksandr T. Korotkevich, the chairman of the Supreme Soviet Education Committee, were met by the demonstrators as they arrived for a seminar as part of a two-day appearance at the university's Woodrow Wilson School for Public and International Affairs.

The two officials were greeted by loud hissing and derisive laughter as they answered charges of discriminatory immigration policies and religious repression.

The demonstrators, who were responding to an appeal from the campus Hillel Foundation, posed specific cases of alleged maltreatment of Jewish citizens seeking permission to emigrate from Russia, but the Soviet officials refused to respond to the particular examples.

each week and three times as many are wounded. Each day the newspapers carry the stories of the soldiers who are buried.

The Israeli casualty list differs from ours. The list of American casualties is printed usually on page two and includes only name, rank and serial number.

In Israel the death of a soldier is front-page news. Nothing is left to conjecture. For example: "Private David Twerik, a 35-year-old reservist from Jerusalem, was killed at half past nine on Tuesday evening in a mortar and bazooka attack from across the Jordan in the Manrasa Bridge area."

Another: "Lt. Yoram Shanam, 23, of Haifa, who was killed Tuesday morning near Kuneitra, was laid to rest yesterday at the Kiryat Shaul Military Cemetery. Shanam had given a lift to a soldier going on leave when their vehicle set off a booby trap on the road. Shanam was a student of mechanical engineering at the Technion and was serving in the reserves. He was recently married."

What immediately struck me was that the Israelis describe battle fatalities much as we Americans describe highway casualties.

I think we concentrate on the details of a traffic victim's life because we understand it could happen to any of us. It is harder for us to relate to men who died in a Far Eastern jungle thousands of miles away. If we start filling in the way these men lived, it will set us to wondering why they died.

Interest Mounting For Bank Stocks

Q: My original purchase of 200 Union Commerce Bank has, through splits, increased to 600 shares in the holding company Union Commerce Corporation.

Now that the shares are listed on the New York Stock Exchange and have greater marketability, should I sell or hold on for possible appreciation? D.C.

A: Bank stocks, particularly the regionals, continue to outperform the market; and for good reason. Earnings have been in a generally rising trend since 1962. In the last decade, regional banks have recorded an average annual growth rate of 15% versus an average of 7.5% for the components of the Standard & Poor's 500 Stock Average. The current uptrend in the prime rate indicates that the spread between interest paid to depositors and the interest received on loans should be adequate to foster continued profit growth through 1973. Additional stimulus should be derived from an expanding economy and the concurrent surge expected for loan demand. US Treasury borrowings alone are projected at $30 billion in fiscal 1972-73. Given a moderately expansionary Federal Reserve policy on money supply and no government imposed ceiling on loan rates, bank earnings growth should continue to outpace that of other industries.

As a result of the generally bullish sentiment toward industry, investors have reevaluated the group with the result that price-earnings multiples in many instances have returned to levels reached in the late Sixties. Union Commerce has joined ranks with a growing number of banks which have elected to become holding companies. Now the leading international bank in its service area, Union eventually plans to diversify into a full financial service company. Despite a two-year, 200% increase in share price, Union is currently trading at 12X projected 1972 results. This is somewhat below the multiples accorded many other regional banks. At the first half earnings were up 14% year to year and assets, deposits, loan and capital funds at record levels. Shares should be held.

Preferred or Preference, Are They Different?

Q: Could you please explain the difference between preferred and preference stock? L.E.

A: This distinction is largely a matter of semantics. Preferred stock is that class of stock which has preference over the common. Preference stock, on the other hand, may include guaranteed, preferred or class "A" stock. It is implied, usually in relation to dividends and/or bankruptcy, that these shareholders are offered advantages not given to common shareholders.

In order to ascertain the peculiar properties of a particular preferred or preference stock the terms of the contract under which it was issued must be studied. For example, Champion International offers a $5.50 cumulative preferred and a $1.20 convertible cumulative preference stock. The former has preference over the latter, which in turn precedes the common, as to dividend payments. A similar treatment is accorded the shareholders in case of bankruptcy. The higher yielding straight preferred carries a BBB rating versus a BB rating for the convertible preference shares. The difference in rating reflects the senior standing of the $5.50 preferred rather than the difference in its title.

Q: We hold 100 shares of Norfolk & Western (NYSE) purchased at $138. We would appreciate your opinion on selling or holding on longer. F.F.

Q: I purchased Norfolk & Western years ago at $98. Should

I buy another 100 shares now? B.D.

A: Shares have moderate appreciation potential but are primarily attractive for their generous 7.3% return. Despite the bankruptcy of Erie-Lackawana, one of the companies held by N&W's Dereco subsidiary, the dividend appears secure since the parent is not obligated to meet Erie's debts. However, tax benefits from the subsidiary's operating losses do accrue to Norfolk.

Earnings projections of $9.00 a share are predicated on a rising traffic level, additional freight rate relief, investment tax credits and continued cost cutting. With this in view, F.F. would be wise to continue holding. Unless you — B.D. — are interested primarily in income I would sit tight.

Bethlehem Could Forge Ahead

Q: In order for me to break even on my holdings of Bethlehem Steel (NYSE) it would have to go to $50. Do you think it ever will? S.M.

A: The quickening pace of the economy should begin to filter through from heavy construction to the steel industry later this year. Because third-quarter volume was still sluggish, particularly for structural and plate steel, above-average demand is looked for in the next several quarters. About 45% of Bethlehem's revenues come from these heavy steel products; 65% from light steel lines such as: bars, sheets, pipes, tinplate, etc.

Hurricane Agnes caused some $10 million in flooding damage for Bethlehem. Half the 15c-a-share loss was absorbed in the second quarter, the remainder was taken in the third. Despite this, last-half earnings should compare favorably with year earlier figures. Full-year results could surpass the $3.14 reported in 1971 by a good margin. No price increases to cover wage hikes granted in August are projected before early 1973. A new plant in Indiana will reduce production costs and should increase the company's share of the market. Factors favoring recovery are numerous and compelling, although I would not anticipate a return to your purchase level.

Chafee Outlines Proposals Concerning Mid East

GRADUATES: Miss Anita Chernick was graduated from Arthur Angelo's School of Hair Design on October 20.

A dinner dance was held at Club 400 in Warwick for the October class of 1972.

Miss Chernick, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Chernick of Eldridge Street, Cranston, is a graduate of Cranston High School East.

Former Governor John H. Chafee yesterday said the United States must never attempt to impose a Middle East solution, must keep Israel strong to maintain a balance-of-power and should work for direct negotiations between the parties. He sharply criticized proposals to cut the U.S. Sixth Fleet Strength. Such a reckless plan would prohibit the U.S. from keeping two carriers constantly in the Mediterranean as we have done for the past 20 years, according to Mr. Chafee. It would also greatly reduce the number of escort vessels, he said.

Mr. Chafee said that President Nixon's trip to Moscow "paved the way for better U.S.-Soviet relations, so urgent to insure world peace. But vital issues which concern either nation cannot be ignored in the bargaining process," the Republican senatorial candidate continued. "Detente does not and cannot mean the submergence of genuine issues of concern to either the United States or the Soviet Union."

Mr. Chafee, in a major position paper outlining his proposals concerning Israel and the Middle East, terrorism and Soviet Jews, said the new Soviet exit fee on Jewish emigration is "reminiscent of the tribute demanded by Roman emperors from their own enslaved peoples."

"The tax," according to Mr. Chafee, "requiring emigrants to repay the costs of their education, is aimed primarily at Soviet Jews."

He voiced support for the Jackson amendment.

In regard to stopping terrorism, he said, "in the unthinkable event that international action fails," he would support action by the United States to levy severe economic sanctions on nations aiding terrorists.

Quoting Governor Chafee, "While the guns of the Middle East are virtually silent today, there can be no excuse for world complacency about the grave threat which still imperils Israel and our hopes for a permanent peace in the area."

"Despite Egypt's apparent expulsion of Soviet military technicians, there are more recent signs of a rapprochement, there has been no diminishing of the flow of Soviet arms to other Arab nations; a Soviet fleet maintains its presence in the Mediterranean; the war-like posturing of the Soviet Union and its Arab allies continues — and the threat of a speak that could kindle a third world war lingers on. The Middle East is still an area of dangerous cold war confrontation.

"Until the parties to the dispute, Israel and the Arab states, can be brought to the bargaining table and the parties themselves through direct negotiations resolve the issues of secure borders for Israel, the fate of Israeli and Palestinian refugees, and full recognition of the nationhood and integrity of the State of Israel, a lasting peace is an impossible dream."

"In my view, the first goal of everyone desiring peace must be to achieve direct negotiations between the parties, both to establish the basis for a permanent settlement and to remove the cold war implications of the Middle East crisis."

"But equally urgent, equally demanding firm action, are the threats to peace and humanity itself represented by the bloody acts of terrorists and the callous and cruel Soviet treatment of Soviet Jewry."

"Both terrorism and Soviet anti-Semitism add fuel to the smoldering fire which at any moment could burst forth into a raging holocaust."

"Neither Israel, nor any civilized nation, can or should tolerate international gangsterism which affects not only Israelis but other innocent victims. The Black September murderers of Munich, who ruthlessly killed 11 members of the Olympic team; the professional killers who, at the instigation of Palestinian terrorists, staged the infamous massacre at Israel's Lydda Airport last May. The 'mad bombers' who strike through the mails; the abductors of diplomats; the insane hijackers of civilian aircraft — all these are a stain on all humanity, which decent men must not endure."

Because the Arab warlords, even with the massive help of Soviet aircraft and missiles, suffered humiliation at the hands of tiny Israel in the Israeli-Arab conflicts of 1948 and 1967, they have substituted the sponsorship of terrorism both along Israel's borders and against Israeli citizens throughout the world, in an effort to goad Israel into rash actions or bring her to her knees.

Perhaps it is the same frustration, because Israel has blocked Russian expansionist aims in the Middle East, that has caused the Soviet Union to be a patron of terrorism and to levy the unconscionable exit fee on its own citizens seeking to emigrate, primarily aimed at Soviet Jews. Again, I think humanity must respond.

"Israel, through its military strength and moral strength as a strong and viable democracy, has deterred both Soviet and Arab expansionism and tipped the scale of the balance of power contest to our present advantage."

"It must be permitted to survive in a stable and peaceful Middle East, but Israel cannot accomplish this alone. Her interests are ours — and, thus, the United States must stand behind her in seeking peace. "With these thoughts in mind, I want to offer my proposals today for policies which I believe can meet the objectives I have outlined."

"We must stand by Israel in our common cause — lasting peace."

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

- * If you live in the suburbs, it's probable that you are an active credit card user, while "families living in central cities or rural areas are least likely to use such cards."
- * If you use your cards to buy clothing more than any other category of goods, you're typical. On both bank and store credit cards, clothing is the most frequent type of purchase.
- * And if you're in any income group below the very top, you use your card to obtain credit, and this is the most important use you make of the card. You see your card as another instrument for taking on installment debt and you treat your card debt like an installment loan — paying a little each month, generally the minimum allowable monthly payment.
- * But if you're in the highest income group, you use your card as a convenience — and whatever debt you incur on the card, you attempt to pay off as quickly as you can.
- * And no matter what your special group, you write more checks than families who do not use cards.

Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities
 By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Hello, my friends, here's what we have for you this week.

First, in answer to a letter from a dentist's father, yes, I agree with you. I've personally met only one dentist in my life I'd rather have not. (One of those who professed to be able to do just about everything, and did most of it wrong). And dental complaint review committees haven't shown me they're worth much. But dentistry as a whole has more than its share of outstanding practitioners. Such as my family dentist. And my periodontist too. And my orthodontist brother-in-law.

Speaking of outstanding professional men, noted psychiatrist Dr. Frank Jones, recently addressed a Providence woman's group on "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex." Guaranteed to hold any audience, I hear.

By the way, anybody looking for a job who's knowledgeable about or interested in advertising sales work? Call 438-3050.

To anyone who sent for "The Guide to Extra Earning Power," my apologies. The publisher informs me that copies cannot be obtained free. (Apparently the free copy I received in checking it out, was an accident.) Sorry about that. I'll make it up to you right now:

Ever hear of The Capitalist Reporter? It's a monthly newspaper, filled with stories on how to strike it rich, likely the most avidly read publication of its kind. You can get the latest issue of it free by writing the Subscription Department, the Capitalist Reporter, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10011.

And speaking of publications designed to make you money, if you've ever dabbled in the stock market, or thought of doing it, read the current issue of "Investment Sources & Ideas." This comes out only semi-annually and contains numerous fascinating articles by well know financial advisor and analysts plus a comprehensive guide to over 700 different business and investment services. You can get it free from Select Information Exchange.

And if you're a businessman, you should find this worthwhile — "Business & Government 'Insider' Newsletter." For your free copy write to the publisher of this newsletter, Mr. Ed Brown. The address is 2315 Broadway, New York, New York 10024.

That's all for now, my friends. But wait until you see what we have for you next week!

ANNOUNCE APPOINTMENT: The appointment of Kenneth Logowitz, The Outlet Company president, to head up the corporate gifts division of the 1973 Heart Fund campaign, has been announced by Leonard E. Johnson, general chairman.

Mr. Logowitz said he intends to mount a total Heart Fund campaign throughout the corporate community with the aim of underscoring the point that heart disease is above all an ailment of businessmen.

Mr. Logowitz has devoted much of his time to public service projects. He is active as a divisional chairman for the Greater Providence Chamber of Commerce and has assisted in fund raising for many community causes. He is a member of the President's Council of American Management Association, trustee of The Miriam Hospital and Turks Head Club.
