Palestinian Injured In Paris Explosion

PARIS — A 33-year-old Palestinian was seriously injured today when an explosion wrecked his Paris apartment.

The victim was Mahmoud El Hamchari, the chief representative here of the Palestine Liberation Organization, a radical anti-Israel group.

The blast demolished the apartment in southern Paris, tearing a large hole in the ceiling and undermining the floor.

Mr. Hamchari was rushed to a hospital.

Palestinian sources here blamed Zionist groups for the explosion and recalled that two armed Israelis were arrested near the apartment earlier this week.

Police investigators searched the rubble in an attempt to identify the type of explosive used.

Earlier, police spokesmen said that they were investigating the possibility that the blast might have been caused by the explosion of a package Mr. Hamchari might have received.

SABBATH SERVICES: The Catholic and Episcopal Bishops of the Rhode Island Diocese will share the pulpit at the annual Sabbath services conducted by the Men's Club of Temple Beth Israel on Friday, December 15, at 8 p.m. Both Bishop Louis E. Gelineau, left, of the Catholic Diocese of R.I., and Bishop Frederick H. Belden, right, of the Episcopal Diocese, assumed their positions recently. The services will be conducted by Rabbi Jacob Handler of Temple Beth Israel, and Cantor Karl S. Kritz. Members of the Men's Club who will participate in the services are Charles Bojar, Aaron Bromson, Bernard Labush, Norman Miller, Albert Ross and Ira Stone. Samuel Tippe, president of the temple, and Carl Lefkowitz, president of the Men's Club, will welcome the congregation. Peter K. Rosedale, program chairman, will introduce the Bishops.

4 Israeli Jews Arrested As Spies For Syria

TEL AVIV — Four Israeli Jews have been accused of being members of a Syrian espionage and sabotage ring operating in Israel, it was announced here Sunday. The suspects were among 21 people who were rounded up by the police last week.

The case, which has shocked Israel, is the first in the nation's history in which "Sabras," or native Israelis, united out of ideological motives to serve a hostile state. There have been cases of Israeli Jews' spying or defecting to an enemy, but they were individuals who were invariably described as social misfits, mentally unbalanced persons or planted agents.

Chief Superintendent Sason Nuriel, head of the police Special Duties Branch in northern Israel, said that further arrests were likely.

In the nineteen-twenties, when Britain governed Palestine, Jewish members of the Palestine Communist party bombed Jewish targets during Arab political disturbances that were organized by the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem.

Four Are Called Leftists

The four suspects were described as leftists representing a fringe movement known as Matzpen, a tiny Jewish Trotskyite splinter group that supports the Palestinian Arabs.

They reportedly defected from Matzpen, which they considered too moderate, and formed the Revolutionary Communist Union. That group has issued a publication called the Red Front.

The splinter group was said to have been made up of fewer than 15 members, some of whom, it now appears, were agents of the Shin Bet, the Israeli security service.

Superintendent Nuriel said that the over-all coordinator of the operation was a man called Habib Kahawaji, who was based in Damascus, and that the organizer in Israel was Daoud Turki, an Arab Communist who recruited the agents and organized them in cells.

He said that the ring had planned attacks on Israeli targets and had been organizing an intelligence-gathering service for the Syrians.

The police officer said that two of the Jewish suspects had been sent to Syria where they were instructed in the use of explosives and weapons. They also were suspected of having given the Syrians military information, he said.

Reported Syrian-Trained

While the two were not officially identified, they were said to be Ehud Adiv, 25 years old, a student at Haifa University, and David Vered, a teacher at a vocational school in Kfar Saba.

Mr. Adiv was reportedly born in Gan Shmuel, in a left-wing kibbutz and served with a paratroop unit in Jerusalem during the 1967 war. He was said to have served in sensitive border areas where he would have had access to considerable military information.

The other Jewish prisoners were said to be Yehzekel Cohen, 30, who was born in Iraq and worked as a night clerk in Tel Aviv hotels, and David Kupfer, 28, a construction worker in Bat Yam. Mr. Kupfer, authorities said, was the only one of the four with a prison record for theft and burglary.

"We are all to blame," an editorial in the newspaper Maariv said. The paper said the situation resulted from a general failure to appreciate sufficiently "in the first generation of national redemption" the need to continue Zionist indoctrination for those who were born in a Jewish country and did not have to struggle for it.

Conn. Sephardic Jews Follow Different Customs In Foods

NEW HAVEN — There are eight Jewish families here who eat rice on Passover but who nevertheless consider themselves Orthodox Jews. There are Sephardi Jews from Syria.

They differ from Ashkenazi Jews not only in their dietary practices but also in their belief that it is an honor to name children after living, rather than for dead, relatives, and in their pronunciation of Hebrew.

The eight families recently moved to New Haven from Brooklyn, where more than 20,000 Syrian Jews have created a close-knit community and where their synagogues were packed every Friday evening and Saturday.

Following Saturday morning services, families and friends gather for a Maza, which is similar to an Ashkenazi kiddish, except that instead of the familiar herring, gefilte fish and cholent, the "Syrians" serve platters of mushrooms, pickled cauliflower and turnips, green peppers, meat pastries and a meat slab which looks like a miniature pizza (sans cheese).

Syrian Jews, centuries long residents of the Middle East, have adopted the culinary practices of the region and the foods they eat can be found in the homes of the Syrian Arabs and other Middle East peoples.

Males are dominant in the Syrian Jewish community and at meals they are served first. In New Haven, most of the men are businessmen, and the birth of a son means continuation of the business.

Marriages, in the larger Syrian Jewish community of Brooklyn, as in most "Syrian" communities, are from within the community and generally the male is well-established in business.

Establish Commission To Fight Hostility

LONG BEACH, L.I. — The establishment of a commission of educators, scholars and rabbis to combat "indifference and hostility" toward Israel and Judaism among leftist Jewish students has been announced here.

Dr. Maurice Sage, the newly elected president of the Religious Zionists of America, said in an interview that Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, a leader of American Orthodox Judaism, would serve as chairman of the new commission.

Five hundred delegates, in addition to electing Dr. Sage, a lay leader, also elected Rabbi Rackman as chairman of the Religious Zionists board of governors. The Zionist group ended its biennial convention at the Lido Beach Hotel.

Dr. Sage, who is president of Sage Laboratories, Inc.,

manufacturers of pharmaceutical products, said a major task of the new commission, whose members are to be announced in the near future, would be to "develop lines of communication with Jewish youth on the campus" and to work in cooperation with other groups.

Modern Relevance Noted
The new commission, he said, will publish literature on the compatibility of Judaism with modern life and its relevance to social justice — a principle which youth today cherishes.

In addition, Dr. Sage said, the commission will seek to "stem the increase in anti-Semitism and strident anti-Israel propaganda on campuses."

"When a Jewish student cries for the liberation of Palestine from the Israeli conquerors," Dr. Sage said, he strengthens every hate-monger.

Considering Ferry From Eilat To Aqaba

TEL AVIV — Israeli authorities are reported to be giving favorable consideration to a proposal to establish a foreign flag ferry service between Eilat and the neighboring Jordanian port of Aqaba. Sources close to the Ministry of Tourism disclosed that the proposal was made by a foreign airline. Israeli authorities have no objection to the plan, the sources noted, but say its realization is up to Jordanian authorities. The Israelis regard the proposed ferry services as merely an addition to the open bridges policy between Jordan and Israel.

Strict Interpretation Necessary

The changed scenery and headlines make it clear that it is that time of the year again when those who take seriously the First Amendment strictures against the establishment of religion by government once more must do battle to preserve that American concept.

While a federal judge in New Jersey has ruled that Jewish children may not be forced to participate in a high school Christmas pageant — as they have been in the past under threat of losing class credits — he refused to ban the annual presentation on the grounds that there was no proof an injunction would "still the unrest" in the community. While this may be seen as half a victory, there are many communities throughout the country where the fight has been given up and where practices objectionable to Jews and other non-Christians continue in defiance of other court rulings.

Compromises that permit some observance of Hanukah — "the Jewish Christmas" — in schools are viewed by many as potentially dangerous in that they show ignorance of the principles involved. It is not "equal time" which civil libertarians are concerned about but the danger inherent in giving religious practice of any kind a foothold, and ultimately providing sanction to the majority's endeavors to establish its own religious order over our schools and other public institutions.

Some Jewish fundamentalist religious groups are strongly in favor of state aid for parochial schools, do not object to reintroducing prayer in the public schools, but are disturbed by the manifestations of Christmas imposed upon Jewish children in public schools without recognizing that the issues are basically no different. The strict interpretation of the First Amendment which most Jewish organizations support still remains our best protection.

Accident Information Checklist

Let's say you become involved in one of the automobile accidents that will mar these most treacherous weeks of the year. In 1972 alone, around 55,000 Americans will have died and another 5 million will have been injured in 23 million auto accidents costing $17 billion.

If you are in an accident, do you know that, even though the policeman or state trooper is taking voluminous notes on the who-when-where-why-and-how, you should be making your own notes on the circumstances, too?

You should — because your own rundown could be a vitally important doublecheck of the facts if there is any legal or court action later. You'll need a record of the facts as you perceive them to make your own reports to the state motor vehicle department and your insurance company. And you may find it difficult to get a copy of the policeman's notes to support your claims.

Are you also aware that you should write down the name, badge number, station number and jurisdiction of the policeman who comes to the scene of an accident?

That you should not only get the name, address, phone number, and facts about the driver's license, registration and insurance coverage from the driver of the other car but also a range of information from the occupants of the other car?

That you should find out who is the insurance policy holder for the other car (if it's someone other than the driver), information on weather conditions, prevailing traffic regulations, condition of the street or road, a host of other subjects which you probably have never even thought about?

Many insurance companies and state police departments are now making available copies of accident report forms and checklists of information to help you gather the right facts at the time of an accident in which you may be involved.

* Ask your insurance agent for a copy of the accident report form you would be required to fill out in the event of an accident involving you and your car.

* Study this form and keep it handy in your automobile glove compartment.

* But in case a form of this sort is not available to you for some reason, below is a checklist which represents a composite I've put together of several different forms.

POLICYHOLDER AND DRIVER: Name, policy number; if married, name of husband or wife; home address, phone, business address, phone; occupation, employed by; driver's name, address, phone, license number, years of driving experience, age, relation to policyholder; who authorized him to drive; name of occupants of policyholder's car.

POLICYHOLDER'S AUTOMOBILE: Make, year, body type, model; state license number, motor number, serial number, name of holder of auto loan, if any; name of owner if other than policyholder; address; telephone; car garaged at.

DETAILS OF ACCIDENT: Date, time, place, city, state; purpose for which car was being used; was driver on errand for owner; where car may be seen during day;

Boycotts and Rallies

By BERYL SEGAL

"In those days there was no king in Israel; everyone did what was good in his own eyes."

Such is the familiar refrain in the Book of Judges. There was no king. There was no deciding voice in the land. There was no authoritative body in the community, a body to be consulted, obeyed, respected.

Everyone did what was good in his own eyes. Some people do it now in our own days.

Now when someone does what he feels is beautiful, or cute, or proper in his private life, we have no right to tell that man or woman to conform to the standards of a communal norm. We may not like the cut of the hair, or the shape of the clothing, or the style of life a man or a woman prefers. But it is none of anybody's business to dictate to him or her, or even to express our displeasure.

What we do claim is the right, even a duty, is to put a stop to the whims of anybody in affairs of common interest.

When the actions of any man or woman brings embarrassment or shame and even pain to the whole community, then it seems to me right and proper to say to these people:

"Who are you to speak for us? Is the name of the Jewish Community of America so disregarded in matters that concern us all? Is there no king in Israel?"

The Jewish Federation of the United States is the body that was invested with the authority to speak for us in all matters involving the honor or the interests of the whole community. No personal ambitions, no craving for publicity, no desires to please or to spite anybody can be allowed in matters of vital interest to the whole community.

The Jewish community of America is now engaged in a controversy with the Soviet Union. Rightly or wrongly, we demand certain things denied to the Jews in the USSR. These demands are extremely sensitive. Only through diplomatic negotiations can we hope for an amelioration of the lot of Jews in that country. The Jewish community demands:

1. Religious freedom.
2. Cultural freedom.
3. Freedom to emigrate.

The Russian Jews do not ask for job opportunities; in that respect they are on an equal footing with all the rest of the population.

The Russian Jews do not complain of living restrictions; they can live anywhere they want to in the Soviet Union.

The Russian Jews do not ask for our help financially; they need no help. What we are concerned with are these three demands, as enumerated above.

But these demands must be made by the entire Jewish Community to be effective. This is one of the cases in which too many cooks might spoil the broth.

It is, therefore, regrettable that with the united effort of the Jewish organizations in America on behalf of the Jews in the USSR, there are certain groups who prefer to make Sabbaths on their own.

We are told of two Jewish organizations in California who boycott the Pepsi Cola Company for selling its goods in Russia. Nothing is more irresponsible, more ridiculous than that boycott. It accomplishes nothing and makes us ridiculous in the eyes of the world.

The United States is selling to the USSR billions of dollars worth of wheat. Are you going to boycott the wheat industry? Stop eating bread?

The United States is sending scientific and cultural exchanges to the USSR. What are you going to boycott in this case? Stop using scientific advances? Stop listening to concerts, attending ballet, refuse to hear lectures?

We wish there were more cultural exchanges, more trade, greater diffusion of knowledge between the United States and the Soviet Union. Are we going to boycott the United States for speeding up the trade and the exchanges with the Soviet Union?

On the local scene we have a similar group doing their thing independently of, and therefore contrary to the interests of, the community. The Students Struggle for Soviet Jewry in Rhode Island has seen fit to demonstrate against the Soviet Union during the visit of the Moscow Circus at the Providence Civic Center. We are told by the newspapers that about fifty people were marching back and forth at the entrance to the Civic Center, bearing signs denouncing the Soviet Union and calling out the usual slogans such as "Let My People Go," and "Save Soviet Jewry," and the like. But we learn from the president of that organization that:

"... fellow Jews in Rhode Island remain emotionally unmoved."

And the writer of the letter to the editor of the Journal Bulletin asks:

"When was the last time a large Soviet Jewish rally was held in Rhode Island?"

"When was the last time you saw a program about Soviet Jews?"

"When was the last time any letter writing campaigns or fund raising events were held in Rhode Island?"

And it doesn't occur to the writer of the letter that perhaps the rallies and the programs and the fund raising for Soviet Jewry are superfluous, and this is the reason why we remain "emotionally unmoved."

You save someone from a raging fire, a devastating calamity, an impending doom. Soviet Jewry is not facing any of these dangers. There is no need for demonstrations, boycotts, and placard waving.

The time has come for diplomatic intervention on behalf of Soviet Jews, and rallies and programs will be of no avail.

There is a king in Israel. There are responsible Jewish organizations to deal with such matters. No need for everyone to do what is good in his eyes.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

When he made his debut 10 years ago as a soloist with the New York Philharmonic, 16-year-old Andre Watts was described by Leonard Bernstein as "not just another great young pianist, but one of those special giants." Bernstein was asked for his current opinion of Watts, in connection with an article commemorating the 10th anniversary of that debut.

"The best I can give you today," said Bernstein, "is that Andre Watts no more needs a quote from me now than I need one from him."

Jacqueline Susann's Once Is Not Enough and Philip Roth's The Great American Novel are Literary Guild selections for May ... Mike Petit, counsel to the House Select Committee on Crime, is issuing a new report on crime in the schools ... The 100th birthday party of Adolph Zukor, chairman emeritus of Paramount Pictures, will be held at the Beverly Hilton Hotel on January 7.

The Marquis Francois d'Aulan, young head of the Piper Heidsieck dynasty, is here to promote the company's new Florens-Louis champagne. The day after he arrived, he appeared on a morning television program showing viewers how to make French scrambled eggs. "I never thought that the first time I broke eggs in public, it would be on American television," he said. "I was afraid the shells wouldn't crack."

His wife confided at the Pierre's La Foret they only drink champagne when in company, at public functions or at dinners. "We never drink alcohol when we're alone," said the Marquise. "We prefer milk — or water."

Britain's entry into the Common Market will be celebrated by a festival in Brussels in October. Called Europalia, and sponsored by Britain and Belgium, it will cost about a million dollars to stage ... Mike Efthimiou, the maitre d' at Sirocco, also appears onstage with the waiters who are featured in the Greek dancing. He repeatedly lifts them on his wrists and tosses them in the air.

Asked if he had any special training that combined choreography with the restaurant business, he replied: "Yes — weight-lifting."

At a benefit dinner of the City Bicentennial Corporation recently, Deputy Mayor Edward Hamilton told of Stanislaw Tretczynski, president of the UN General Assembly, being asked: "After pure communism has been effected, and the state has withered away, will the people still have money?" ... Tretczynski replied: "Some will — and some won't."

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

We're back on Defense again in today's hand. It concerns itself with going up with a King second hand, in other words, second hand high. Only one pair did this and set the hand. The others failed to figure the hand out for there is a very good reason why one should do just that, play second hand high in this hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Saul Breslow were East and West, Defenders, all vulnerable, South Dealer with this bidding:

2♦	P	3NT	End

The bidding was quite normal, North's Two Club bid being the Stayman asking bid, of course. South's opening bid and rebid should have given a really sharp East just the clues he needed to make the killing defensive play. Unfortunately, too many players are too automatic and wouldn't dream of making the play necessary to defeat this contract yet if you follow the logic involved you will agree that they probably should have, would you?

West had a perfectly normal lead of the Spade Jack. This is automatic, a three card sequence with an entry is the only lead with West's hand and everyone did lead the same. Declarer ducked in both hands while East should encourage a continuation with the 8. West did continue, Dummy's King winning that trick. East should unblock the Queen but in this case it makes no difference.

Now comes the key to the whole hand. To make enough tricks the Club suit has to be set up so a small one is led from Dummy and I watched as every East quickly and without even considering the problem, played low. All but one. This is what happened then: West had to win with the Ace and had now used his only entry to cash the Spades. True, another Spade lead will remove the Ace and make the rest of them good but there is no way West can get in to cash them now.

On the first Club lead had East hopped up with the King and set up those Spades, West would still have the Club Ace for the vital entry to make those extra Spade tricks. How should East know that he must go up with that King? Really very easy, it's the only chance. On the bidding, South having made a limit bid, West must have one high card in addition to the Spade Jack already shown. Looking at the Dummy confirms that. It's not in Spades and the Hearts will have to take care of themselves. If Declarer happens to have the Ace and Queen of Clubs he will finesse against East's King anyhow so playing it in that case won't lose anything but if it is West who has that Ace, not playing it will absolutely destroy the defense and it is West who does have that one key card. The Heart Ace would not be enough to set the hand it has to be the Club and the only way to use it properly is as stated.

As soon as the first Spade trick was won by West, East should be trying to figure how best to get the most tricks out of the hand. He should, by the process of elimination, finally end with the right solution because if it doesn't work out by going up with that King of Clubs, it usually won't cost anything to try for the King would be a lost soul anyhow.

Moral: Although in Bridge there are many so-called rules and sayings, care and thought will tell one that everyone of them may be disregarded sometime. That does not mean to flaunt these things and do as you please for usually they are right. But not always.

BAR MITZVAH: Peter Harris Chafetz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chafetz of 55 Peabody Drive, Warwick, became Bar Mitzvah on December 9, at Temple Beth Israel. A Kiddush in his honor was held at the temple, followed by a reception at his home.

Guests attended from Ohio, New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, as well as Rhode Island.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. William Lipsey of Cranston, and Mrs. Norman Gottlieb of Jackson Heights, New York.

Dublin's Irish House recently, he peered at an antique clock on the wall, and was startled because at that moment the timepiece stopped. Crime Investigations

There are many interesting characters answering questions and refusing to answer questions in Senate committee investigations. But no one can ever hope to match the good old Tammany man, Sheriff McQuade, during the Seabury investigations, which threw Mayor Jimmy Walker out of office.

McQuade's salary was $9,000 a year, and Judge Seabury's investigation found that McQuade had banked $350,000 in the three years preceding the investigation. McQuade was asked to explain how he secured this vast amount of money. This is how he explained it (the official record):

"I need $1,000. I borrow it from say, John Brown. Then John Brown wants his money back, so I go to say, John Smith, and borrow $1,000 from him and pay John Brown. I borrow another $1,000 from say, Bill Jones, to pay John Smith.

"In this way, by borrowing from Tom, Dick and Harry, I keep paying back Smith, Brown and Jones, and all the time I have in my possession these thousands which I borrowed from Tom, Dick and Harry and that's how I get the money.

"If I am short, I have a tin box at home with money, and I also take from that tin box and make deposits, and that's how I come to have so much money in the deposits, taking it out of the tin box."

McQuade was reelected the following year.

The Lawyers Got A Break

It was more or less an unwritten law. The magistrates in New York always gave the lawyers a break. When the magistrate knew that he had to dismiss a complaint for lack of evidence, he always allowed the lawyer to make a speech defending freedom, using a few ideas from his bar examination papers, plus a closing quotation from De Tocqueville, always De Tocqueville (a Frenchman who recorded some of the most incisive observations of the American way of life).

So the police would swoop down on a gambling den after they had been tipped off. These gambling dens were usually set up in temporary quarters, in the back of a stable or in an empty factory loft. The manager of the gambling den would be tipped off, too, usually by the same one who had tipped off the police. (Both sides paid him.)

Thus, when the police hammered down the door, all the money had been taken off the tables and the gambling equipment and paraphernalia had been stashed away. And there they were, 60 people standing shoulder to shoulder, and just looking at each other.

In Magistrate's Court the police had to admit that the young lawyer took over and the magistrate gave him a break. The lawyer would blossom out with a big speech about the right of peaceful assembly. Then came the quotation from De Tocqueville, followed by the magistrate's crisp order, "Case dismissed."

Then the 60 people carried the successful lawyer out on their shoulders, and for the next 10 years each of them spoke of the brilliant defense that had electrified the court and swept the magistrate off his feet.

TO SPEAK: Rabbi William G. Braude of Temple Beth El will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Hug Ivri on Sunday, December 17, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Resnik at 85 Dartmouth Street, Pawtucket, at 8 p.m.

His subject will be "One Year as Guest Professor at The Hebrew University."

Algerian Synagogue To Be Razed For Road

PARIS — Workers in the Jewish cemetery of Oran, Algeria, have begun exhuming bodies in the century old Jewish burial place which is to be razed on Algerian government orders for a highway linking Oran to Algiers.

Former Algerian Jews now in France are financing the exhumation as the local authorities were planning simply to destroy the graves and bury the bodies in a communal grave. Several former Oranese chief rabbis are buried in the cemetery.

In a gesture of "appeasement," the Algerian government has decided to remove a local mosque from the city's main synagogue building. The mosque took over the building which housed one of the country's oldest and best known synagogues two years ago. Under a recent government ruling a local social and cultural club will be housed in the building.

Eye-witness reports from Oran say that workers have already started removing prayer stands, carpets and objects of worship from the building and the entire removal is due to be completed within a fortnight.

Two Dual Funds For Income

Q: I am interested in the income shares of dual funds. For an individual needing maximum return in his investment, would this be a wise choice? H.D.

A: Of the seven dual funds at least two are currently attractive on the basis of yield and share price for the investor seeking a maximum safe return. Both issues are trading on the New York Stock Exchange; in fact only one of the duals, Putnam Duofund, is not listed on the Big Board. American DualVest is now priced at a discount from redemption price of $15. These preferred or income shares are due to be redeemed in June 1979. In the most recent 12-month period $1.04 was paid out in dividends for a 7.7% current return.

The second suggested fund, Income & Capital Shares, is trading close to its par value of $10. In view of the 81 cents distributed to income shareholders a yield of 8% is currently available; redemption here is not until the end of March 1982. In each instance the dividend distributions are well in excess of the minimum amount required.

The possibility that asset value could drop to such an extent that the income shares would be redeemed at less than the stated price exists, although it is remote. Asset value over and above redemption price for the above two funds is $0.95 per dollar in American and $1.52 for Income and Capital.

Q: Where can I get some general information, such as facts and figures, on the mutual fund industry? S.C.

A: The Investment Company Institute, 1775 K Street, Washington, D.C. 20006, publishes a Fact Book each spring detailing industry trends and statistics. As a clearinghouse, the institute provides information for individuals and professionals about all aspects of the industry. In addition other educational pamphlets are printed by the ICI. The most recent fact book, reported that in 1971, 10.9 million individual mutual fund accounts were outstanding with assets totaling $55 billion.

Rising Occupancy Boosts Hotel Earnings

Q: I have been given conflicting advice on what to do with my shares of Hyatt Corporation (OTC). Which should I do, hold or sell? L.H.

A: In my opinion shares should be held. Not only are earnings expected to grow by about a 20% rate over the next few years but an upward adjustment in the multiple is possible. Approximately 50% of earnings are derived from the hotel business, the remainder from a hotel service operation, a hospital chain, motels and a 27% interest in a Florida land company.

Hyatt's concentration is in the luxury hotel field, a relatively stable area. The company operates 25 hotels with 8,000 rooms and another 15 with 8,000 rooms are under construction or planned. Occupancy levels are up substantially over the 1971 rate and at least two of the company's hotels are operating at near capacity. Dilution from conversion of long-term debt would be immaterial because of interest savings.

Q: I have wondered for some time why Chesebrough-Pond's (NYSE) stock doesn't split. I bought it at 21 plus and it is now about 87; it could split four ways. Lately Standard Oil of New Jersey hasn't been listed at all on the New York Stock Exchange. Is this a mistake or is it off the market? M.D.

A: Jersey Standard is still trading actively, but under its new title, Exxon. The decision to change the corporate name was made in order to avoid confusion with the three other Standard Oil companies. At the same time the company's retail gasoline units dropped their various brand names to adopt the Exxon

Premier Meir Refuses Return To '67 Borders

JERUSALEM — Israel's Supreme Court has ruled that Western-style dates may be inscribed on Jewish tombstones. Burial societies had objected that dates such as November 30, 1972, were determined by the birth of Jesus and did not agree with Jewish custom. The Hebrew calendar says this year is 5733. A letter presented to the court from the Sephardic Chief Rabbi, Ovadia Yosef, agreed with the protest. "With all due respect to his opinion," said one of the judges, "the rabbi has dated his letter 1972."

The case was brought to court by a resident of Tel Aviv who said that a burial society had refused to put the year 1966 on his father's tombstone. The court noted that Gregorian dates were used throughout most people's lives, starting with birth certificates, and so might be used to mark deaths.

Court Allows Use Of Western Dates

NEW YORK — Premier Golda Meir of Israel, in an interview appearing in Time magazine, said that President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt could "open the Suez Canal any time of day or night," but she warned that Israel could not accept Mr. Sadat's demand that Israel return to her pre-1967 borders as a precondition.

Mrs. Meir said that when Mr. Sadat suggested a Suez Canal agreement, in February, 1971, "we immediately agreed to negotiate the partial Suez agreement. "Israel is prepared," she continued, "to pull back a bit to a certain line, which naturally will be the final line."

"We can come to an agreement with our Arab neighbors if the principle is accepted that the 1967 borders will not be restored."

The Israeli Premier also said in the interview that the peace formula previously proposed by the United States Secretary of State, William P. Rogers, for an Israeli pullback from the Suez Canal "has been put out of the way, and if it is not revived, it will be all right."

FREE TO LEAVE
UNITED NATIONS — An Iraqi diplomat has said Jews were free to leave Iraq whenever they wanted to, and that Israel's anger at Iraqi policy was based on Zionism's refusal to admit that some Iraqi Jews did not want to leave.

acronym. Chesebrough last split in 1964, when the shares were trading at about 60. At that time a 3-for-1 split brought the price back to the 20 level. Now trading almost 30 points higher than before the 1964 distribution, the stock is certainly a split candidate. If and when directors propose a split, I would not anticipate an exchange greater than three shares for one.

Burroughs Ups Its Share Of EDP Market

Q: Recently a brokerage firm advised clients against further purchase of Burroughs Corporation (NYSE) and the stock reacted temporarily. I hold 700 shares. Are you in agreement with the sell advice or would you suggest holding? A.D.

A: The brokerage report on Burroughs did not suggest sale of this office equipment issue; rather, the analyst withdrew his buy advice on it. The change in recommendation was based on the stock's rich price/earnings multiple, an increase in the proportion of computers that are leased rather than sold outright and a general market pall over the entire group.

In the third quarter pre-tax net rose 20% year to year on a 17% gain in revenues. Full-year earnings should reach $4.50-$4.60 despite a 26 cent-a-share charge resulting from the settlement of a suit brought by TWA. If Burroughs attains the 15%-17% rate of revenue growth anticipated by management, earnings for 1973 in the $5.60 area appear attainable. At current price, shares are trading at about 38 times the 1973 profit projection. This figure is at the high end of the stock's historic P/E range and exceeds the multiples accorded most other issues in the industry. For this reason shares are apt to be sensitive to any adverse news. However, the premium accorded the shares is partially justified by Burroughs' increasing penetration of the computer market. Management has recently stated that 35% of new orders are for replacement of competitive computer installations, while the company loses about 5% to others.

Although a gradual increase in the ratio of rental revenues to outright sales is usually regarded as bearish, Burroughs' cash flow is sufficient to finance the higher level of rentals. Furthermore, rental business generates a very visible source of future earnings, particularly since about half Burroughs lease contracts are written for five years. With management committed to widening the pre-tax profit margin from the present 14% level to 20% and earnings expected to continue their growth pattern, shares should be retained.

Acupuncture 'Expert' Fails In Israel

TEL AVIV — An American doctor who claimed to be an expert in acupuncture and presented credentials from the People's Republic of China and Hong Kong to prove his claim, left Israel last week after picking up his final paycheck from Rambam Hospital in Haifa.

Attempts by Dr. Michael Sentar to introduce acupuncture into Israeli medicine as a means of anesthetizing patients was declared a failure by the hospital. Dr. Sentar applied acupuncture in 10 cases but the technique worked in only one case, the hospital reported.

Rambam Hospital, after consulting with the Health Ministry, offered the doctor a chance to prove his technique with the possibility of employment if he was successful. Dr. Sentar, departing for France, said at the airport, "I don't know what happened to me in Israel."

READY TO SIGN MEXICO CITY — The government of Mexico has officially announced that it is ready to support and sign any international agreement against air piracy of planes to Arab states of Cuba. President Luis Echeverria Alvarez, Foreign Minister Emilio Rabasa and Minister of Interior Mario Moya Palencia and other government officials have expressed hope that the international community will finally reach an agreement against terrorism and skyjacking.

Either Trinity Company Gives Enjoyable Evening

Two companies are alternating performances of Lady Audley's Secret — a musical comedy — at Trinity Square. One was reviewed here recently, with Kate Young playing the young woman who bewitched old Sir Michael into marrying her.

The other company is presenting an equally delightful but different version, partly taking its tone from Lady Audley as portrayed by Barbara Orson. Mrs. Orson's is a deliciously villainous lady, with overtones of Carmen and with a more Gothic effect: the comedy is lighter and more a burlesque of the period, the lady and innocent victim when Kate Young plays her; the comedy is more realistic and more sinister as Barbara Orson plays her.

The company supporting Mrs. Orson is excellent, and in some respects superior to that supporting Miss Young. In particular, Leta Anderson as the stepdaughter and Robert J. Colonna as the blackguard bring a vivacity and sureness to their roles that pick up scenes which in retrospect, were not quite as amusing as they could have been. Miss Anderson's hoop-skirt business and a wheelchair chase scene are among the bonuses of the second company's presentation. Other members of that version are Georgia Neu as Phoebe; David C. Jones as Sir Michael; Richard Kavanaugh as Captain Audley; George Martin as George Talboys; Thomas R. Mason as the chairboy; and James Eichelberger, Steven Arthur Wragg, Eric Jensen, Margo Skinner, Barbara Jean and Allison Argo. A five-firemen scene — well done and very funny — is played by the same actors in both versions.

Both companies play as if they'd been working together much longer than they can have been. Both are enchantingly costumed by Sunny Warner, who dresses the Orson cast in striped silks and the Young cast in softer solid colors. (Everyone is costumed in variations of red, white, and/or blue, and thus matches the very pretty set, which uses only those colors except for a greensward upon which Sir Michael's tenants toss flower petals.) Word Baker has done a fine directing job, allowing the difference in his casts to dictate the weight and flow of each production. A satisfactory evening of entertainment, as the ads so often say about a production that doesn't deliver, may be had in viewing either company.

REJECTS CRITICISM

JERUSALEM — Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren has rejected criticism by the Lubavitcher Rebbe, Menachem Schneerson, of his decision in the Langer case and said that he would send the Hasidic leader a copy of his ruling. A spokesman for Rabbi Goren also rejected the Rebbe's implication that his election as Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi had been conditional on his resolving the Langer case in a manner satisfactory to the Israeli government. "This was never the case," the spokesman said. The Lubavitcher Rebbe charged that Rabbi Goren's ruling "undermined the whole structure of rabbinical law."

IMMIGRATION DOWN
JERUSALEM — In the period January-May 1972, American and Canadian immigration to Israel was 2,100 as compared with 2,170 in the previous year.

Israel, South Vietnam Reestablish Relations

JERUSALEM — Israel and South Vietnam formally announced that they reestablished diplomatic relations.

The text of the agreement was officially published here by the Foreign Ministry.

The announcement said: "With a view to promoting friendly relations and cooperation in the economic, technological and cultural spheres between Israel and the Republic of Vietnam, the two governments resolve to establish forthwith diplomatic relations between the two countries on the ambassadorial level."

Israel, whose seat of Government is in Jerusalem, has declared the city her capital, but many countries do not acknowledge this.

The United States, Britain and France, among others, maintain their embassies in Tel Aviv, though more than a dozen African and Latin-American countries and the Netherlands have their missions in Jerusalem.

It was announced that South Vietnam would set up its embassy in Jerusalem.

Jew Turns Down Visa Because Of USSR Tax

MOSCOW — A Jew with whom Senator Hubert H. Humphrey talked during his visit here said last week that he would reject an exit visa to Israel offered by the Soviet authorities.

The Jew, Viktor Perelman, a journalist, said his reason was a demand by the authorities for 17,000 rubles ($20,000) as compensation for his state-financed higher education.

In an open letter to the Minister of the Interior, Nikolai A. Shchelokov, Mr. Perelman said the tax was beyond his means and represented "a disguised form of refusal to let me emigrate."

The Senator was understood to have telephoned Mr. Perelman and told him that he had discussed the emigration issue with Soviet officials. The journalist, who has a wife and child, lost his job with Literaturnaya Gazeta, the Writers Union weekly, after applying to leave.

TO ATTACK SHIPPING

TEL AVIV — Reliable sources said here that Arab terrorists have decided to try to attack Israeli shipping. The targets selected, according to the sources, are Israeli vessels docking in Mediterranean ports and tankers plowing the waves of the Red Sea. The terrorists are known to have strong links to the Southern Yemeni regime and may attempt to use Southern Yemeni territory in their attempt to hit the Israeli tankers, the sources said.

Israeli-Bedouin-Jew Married in Haifa

HAIFA — The love story between a Bedouin Israeli Army captain and a Jewish girl soldier from a well known family in Haifa recently ended in a "civil marriage" in the presence of a lawyer. The parents of the couple blessed their children and showered them with presents.

The officer, Capt. el-Heib, belongs to a soldiering family. Several of his brothers are officers in the Israeli Army and the Border Police. They number among their friends Moshe Dayan, the Minister of Defense.

During his military service Capt. el-Heil became acquainted with a Jewish girl soldier. The friendly relations between the two slowly developed into love. They determined to marry despite the expected difficulties.

The difficulties, however, proved less unsurmountable than they had anticipated. At first, the girl's parents objected to the match. When they realized, however, that her decision was irrevocable, they gave their consent.

The captain's family did not oppose the match. "You love her, marry her," they said.

DENY REPORT

JERUSALEM — A Foreign Ministry source denied a report that the United States government had hinted to Israel that it would like to see fewer Israeli VIP's visiting the US because they present security problems. According to a story sent from Washington by the correspondent for Yediot Achronot, the Nixon administration was "fed up" with providing massive security for frequent Israeli visitors. The correspondent wrote that Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir had been protected by 46 Secret Service men during his recent visit to the US.
