Find Many Explosive Devices Sent To Israeli Officials

NEW YORK — Explosive devices concealed in envelopes and mailed from Amsterdam to Israeli officials were discovered this week in at least six cities abroad, and it was disclosed that they had also been found here.

Three of the envelopes, addressed to officials of the Israeli Mission to the United Nations, were found by United States Customs employes at the General Post Office on Eighth Avenue at 31st Street.

Others were found in Jerusalem, Montreal, Ottawa, Geneva, and Brussels. In London, where one such bomb exploded Tuesday and killed an official at the Israeli Embassy, the total of discovered bombs rose to eight. Two of the devices had been intercepted in Paris on Tuesday.

Reacting to the incidents, Deputy Premier Yigal Allon of Israel told a luncheon of the Foreign Press Association in Jerusalem: "No one will expect us to sit idly when terrorist operations are on the increase."

One of the envelopes intercepted in London carried a note from Black September, the Arab terrorist organization that claimed responsibility for the attack that resulted in the deaths of 11 members of the Israeli Olympic team in Munich.

In all the number of devices reported since Tuesday was 26, including the one that exploded in London.

The incidents prompted increasing concern, warnings to the public, tightened precautions and Israeli statements arguing retribution.

In Washington, the State Department said that it had alerted the postal service to use of the mails for terrorist activities. The department's spokesman, Charles W. Bray 3rd, said: "We have instructed a number of our diplomatic posts to tighten their security measures with respect to our own diplomats abroad."

The letter-size envelopes intercepted here were addressed to Yosef Tekoah, Israel's chief representative at the United Nations and Jacob Barmore and Uri Gordon, members of the mission.

Looking for Narcotics

The envelopes aroused suspicion in one of three men assigned by the Bureau of Customs to the General Post Office to check envelopes and packages suspected of containing obscene material or narcotics.

The unidentified man alerted the Postal Inspection Service, which in turn summoned the bomb section of the Police Department, which removed them in a woven-steel strongbox to Rodman's Neck in the Bronx. Shortly after 5 P.M., about seven hours after the discovery, the police reported that one explosive device had been successfully dismantled. The two other envelopes were stored for later study.

The unidentified man, assigned to the Import Compliance Unit, which is empowered by law to open mail, made his discovery late Tuesday afternoon. He opened the envelope, saw cardboard wrapping and some wires, replaced the contents and went on with his work.

Subsequently he discovered two similar envelopes. All three were

First Woman Rabbi Delivers Yom Kippur Sermon In New York

NEW YORK — The first woman ordained to the rabbinate in this country preached her first High Holy Day sermon this week and called on her congregation to face the coming national elections and other current issues as individuals and not as a Jewish community.

Rabbi Sally J. Priesand, 25-year-old assistant spiritual leader of the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue, preaching her first Yom Kippur sermon in the main sanctuary, asserted:

"Let everyone know that we choose as individuals and that our choice will be based on all issues of the campaign and not just on one issue."

Yom Kippur, the 24-hour period of fasting and self-evaluation that is the most solemn day of the Jewish calendar, ended Monday night at sundown, concluding a 10-day High Holy Day period that began last week with Rosh Hoshanah, the start of the Jewish New Year.

Rabbi Priesand was ordained on June 3 from the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, Reform Judaism's seminary. She now serves as assistant to the Rev. Dr. Edward E. Klein, senior rabbi of Stephen Wise synagogue.

Economic Issue Cited

Wearing the traditional white robe with the symbolic tallis, Rabbi Priesand declared that the choice of American Jews when they vote "will reflect either our support of an income-redistribution policy or our opposition to any type of government-guaranteed income."

Listing a number of choices with which Jewish voters will be confronted, Rabbi Priesand said: "It will represent our belief that transportation is another tool to accomplish desegregation or our rejection of the idea that busing could contribute to the establishment of racial balance in our schools."

Further, Rabbi Priesand said, "it will make clear our desire for an immediate and complete withdrawal from Vietnam or our refusal to accept terms which would supposedly dishonor this country."

"And," she said, "because we know that both the Republican party and the Democratic party are sympathetic to Israel and to Soviet Jewry, our choice will not be made solely on what is good for Israel or what is good for Soviet Jewry, but rather on what is good for America."

In another sermon, Rabbi Louis Bernstein, spiritual leader of the Young Israel of Windsor Park, 67-45 215th Street, Bayside, Queens, hailed the United States delegation to the United Nations for its veto in the Security Council of a resolution that would have censured Israel for its raids "in Lebanon and Syria without at the same time condemning the acts of terrorism in Munich and elsewhere."

Rabbi Bernstein said the United States displayed "great courage" in not permitting the United Nations to become a "platform from which are promoted the political aims of groups whose very essence is inimical to the spirit of freedom, of justice, and of righteousness."

Preaching before Congregation Shearith Israel, at Central Park West and 70th Street, the Rev. Dr. Louis C. Gerstein called on the Jewish community to intensify its efforts in behalf of Soviet Jews who wanted to "find a new life in Israel" and to give moral and spiritual support to Israel.

Premier Meir Warns That Israel Must Strike At Terrorists

JERUSALEM — Premier Golda Meir has warned that Israel "has no choice but to strike at the terrorist organizations wherever we can."

Speaking in a somber, serious tone as she opened an extraordinary parliamentary debate on the slaying of 11 members of the Israeli Olympic team in Munich, West Germany, Mrs. Meir noted that the Arab guerrilla organizations had altered their techniques to include attacks on Israelis abroad.

She said: "We must deploy ourselves for this warfare even more than we have done up till now — methodically, in knowledge and resolution, with everything required for this far-flung and dangerous front line."

Government sources declined to amplify this point, which some newsmen interpreted as a threat that Israeli security agents might begin to hunt Arab terrorists in Europe and elsewhere. The guerrilla organization Black September claimed responsibility for the attack on the Israelis in Munich.

Mrs. Meir seemed to leave her point deliberately vague, promising only that Israel would pursue the war against the commandos "with all the zeal, self-dedication and skill our people are capable of."

Other speakers in the four-hour debate were more explicit. Menahem Begin, leader of the right-wing Herut party, called for an all-out war against the guerrillas here and abroad by whatever means necessary. He and other speakers also called for passage of a new law imposing a mandatory death sentence on terrorists who kill Israelis.

Capital punishment has been imposed only once in Israel, when the convicted Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann was executed in 1962. Israeli law provides for death sentences in cases of treason and war crimes, but with the exception of Eichmann the prosecution has not sought it.

In her review of the Munich development, Mrs. Meir maintained that at no point had the West German Government asked Israel to accede to the Terrorists' demands that Israel release 200 Arab guerrillas held in prison here.

Mrs. Meir said two Israeli security agents had flown to Munich to assist the German authorities in a last-minute effort to free the Israelis being held captive.

One of the men, Mrs. Meir noted, had broadcast a final and unsuccessful appeal to the guerrillas — in Arabic — to lay down their arms and release their prisoners in exchange for their own freedom.

The Premier stressed that no Israeli representatives had been involved in negotiations with the Arabs nor the planning of the unsuccessful effort to free the hostages at the airport. All of this, she said, was conceived and carried out by the German authorities.

The two Israeli representatives who were rushed to Munich were described as "a senior official in the security services" and his assistant. Although no further identification was available, it was

 LONDON — Jewish sources in the Soviet Union confirmed that a 50-year-old Wilna Jew, Ilia Moisevich Serebreny, was murdered in his home. According to the sources, robbery appears to have been the sole motive. Serebreny had applied for a visa to go to Israel and the robbers may have been after the money he had saved for the trip, the sources said.

The restaurant owner harked back to an era when wagers were made in betting parlors rather than over the telephone. He claimed acquaintance with some of the more colorful figures active during Prohibition in Rhode Island and would, on occasion, describe with relish the days when the former Narragansett Hotel was a gathering spot for politicians and Rhode Island's "sporting crowd."

Mr. Winkler appeared to operate his restaurant in a relaxed, casual manner. But he shuttled frequently between the dining room and the kitchen, keeping a close eye on the food and the quality of service by his all male crew of waiters, some of whom have worked at the steak house for many years. ## OUTBREAK OF TERRORISM

TEL AVIV — Israeli circles are taking a grave view of the resurgence of terrorist activity along the Syrian line in the upper Golan Heights. They say this could not happen without the direct knowledge and assistance of the Syrian Army. Military sources disclosed that an Israeli tank was damaged when it struck a land mine planted by infiltrators from the Syrian lines in the Buqaata region of the northern Golan Heights. There were no casualties. A search of the area disclosed large quantities of mines and explosives planted by what must have been a fairly large party of terrorists who managed to cross the cease-fire line in a section known to be closely controlled by the Syrian Army.

After The Shootings

Israel's Reactions To Munich Horror

TEL AVIV — The official week of mourning for the 11 Israelis slain in Munich has come to a close, but it seems clear that the impact of the shootings and Israel's retributive air strikes will be felt here and throughout the Middle East for a long time, according to a New York Times article by Terence Smith. A new element of tension has been injected into the area, just at a time when many people here were coming to believe that some sort of de facto accommodation between Israel and the Arabs might be possible.

"We had slipped into a subdued period in the wake of the Russian withdrawal from Egypt," said one Foreign Ministry official in Jerusalem. "It looked as though both sides were going to benefit, at least temporarily, from the benign neglect of the big powers. All sorts of things seemed possible."

Now that mood is shattered, and with it the expectations it fostered, in the view of officials and foreign diplomats here.

As a result of the slaying of the members of the Olympic team and its aftermath, the Israeli attitude toward compromise with the Arabs has hardened significantly. The prospect of serious negotiations, slim as it may have been before, now seems eliminated for the foreseeable future. Even the talk of a formal working arrangement with Jordan concerning the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River has receded, at least temporarily, in the face of the bitterness stirred by the developments in Munich.

Hawks Gain Strength

Within Israel, the shootings have strengthened the hand of the so-called hawks in the running debate over how and whether to deal with the Arabs. There has long been an argument between those who believe that Israel should crush the guerrilla movement first and negotiate with the Arab countries later, and those who would have it the other way around.

In periods such as this, the argument all but ceases. The voices of the doves — those who believe Israel should take the initiative with the Arab countries first and make compromises for peace — are drowned out by the cries for retribution.

The demands for revenge in the wake of the Munich attack, for which the guerrilla organization Black September claimed responsibility, are taking two forms. One is a call for an all-out, continuous war against the terrorist organizations on their own grounds with their own tactics.

Carried to the extreme, this could mean selected assassination of prominent guerrillas in Europe as well as other counter terror tactics. It is not yet clear whether the Government is ready to go that far, but there are many people, such as Menahem Begin, leader of the right-wing Opposition Herut party, urging such a course.

Death Penalty Demanded

The second demand is for the imposition of the death penalty for terrorists who kill Israelis. Capital punishment has been imposed here only once, in the case of Adolf Eichmann, the Nazi war criminal who was executed in 1962, although it exists on the books for cases of treason and war crimes.

Several of the Opposition parties have in recent days submitted bills in parliament specifically extending it to terrorists, and public sentiment seems to be with them. In an apparent reflection of that sentiment, a military tribunal last week sentenced an Arab saboteur to death, even though the prosecution had sought life imprisonment.

In the Israeli view, the terrorists in Munich accomplished two objectives with their shootings. They provided a much-needed boost to Arab morale, and more important, they succeeded in focusing world attention on their cause. Defined in those terms, the operation could be considered a success.

Major Benefits Seen

But the feeling here is that in the long term, the developments in Munich will serve Israel's cause more than that of the guerrillas. At the price of 11 lives, world opinion seems finally to have been aroused to the dangers posed by the Arab terrorists.

"The guerrillas are no longer strictly an Israeli problem," a Government official observed, "and now we have some real hope of getting concrete assistance from other countries."

In addition, the slayings provided an opportunity for the Israeli Air Force to carry out the sort of wide-ranging raids against commando bases in Syria and Lebanon that military planners here have long thought necessary. One of the strikes — against El Hameh, a camp just outside Damascus Syria — is said to have flattened the principal headquarters of Al Fatah, the chief guerrilla organization.

A second objective of the raids was to warn the Syrian and Lebanese Governments that it would be in their best interests to take steps to curtail guerrilla activity originating from their territory, just as King Hussein of Jordan did in September, 1970. If they do so, even partly, the feeling here is that the athletes and coaches shot down in Munich will not have died in vain.

TO FOUND MOSHAV

JERUSALEM — A new moshav collective settlement will be founded this year in the southern section of the occupied Golan Heights the Jewish National Fund reported. The JNF said the structure has been completed and that it expects the first settlers to move in before the end of this year. The land agency added it had prepared 200 dunams of the 400 dunams to be made available to settlers as a first stage. The initial prospective settlers are members of the Bnei Akiva religious movement.

Federation and Kehillah

By BERYL SEGAL

At the Annual Meeting of the Jewish Federation of Rhode Island, held at the Community Center, the president Max Alperin, in his acceptance speech, remarked that the Federation is in many respects like the Kehillah of old.

Since the president did not elaborate on it, and since many who were there were young people who do not remember the Kehillah controversy that rocked the land at that time, I want to tell something about the Kehillah in America, particularly in New York.

The Kehillah is an old Jewish institution. There was hardly a Jewish city of some size without a Kehillah. In some countries it had the power to assign and collect taxes for the government. In all of them it had supervision over Jewish schools for children. It had the duties of supporting Synagogues and establishing new ones wherever they were needed. The Kehillah certainly supervised laws of Kashruth and other internal Jewish affairs.

In 1908 a Kehillah, modeled after the old Kehilloth of European cities, was established in New York. The moving force in the work of the Kehillah was the late Dr. Judah Magnes, a Reform Rabbi and the first President of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Dr. Magnes travelled widely in Europe and upon his return became the spokesman for a Kehillah in America. The entire Kehillah movement in America is associated with the name of Dr. Judah Magnes.

The Jewish community of New York was at that time sharply divided between German Jews and East European immigrants. The German Jews were the rich and the contributors to all Jewish charities. The Immigrants from East Europe were newcomers to the country and in most cases were the recipients of charity. They were also divided as to place of habitation, Uptown and Downtown. But most of all there was a division between employer and employee. The German Jew, of course, was the owner and manager of shops and factories in which the East European Jew was employed. There was a division of language, literally and figuratively. There were many painful experiences because of that division.

The Kehillah, then, was to advance and to coordinate Jewish life in New York City and throughout the country. In particular the Kehillah was to arbitrate in Labor disputes, and to prevent Jews from becoming criminals and delinquents, due to poverty among the immigrants.

Above all the Kehillah was to become the advocate for the Jew wherever and whenever the cause of the Jews was to be pleaded and their honor defended.

Here is the program, in part, of the New York Kehillah:

1. To sponsor and supervise Jewish education. For this purpose a Bureau of Jewish Education was established with Dr. Samson Benderly, a pioneer and modernizer, as the director. This organization exists to this day in the form of the Jewish Education Committee.

2. Arbitration of Jewish Industrial Affairs. For this purpose the Kehillah established a Bureau of Industry, consisting of representatives from Labor and Management, and many a strike was either avoided or settled.

3. Maintenance of an Employment Bureau for new immigrants and for the handicapped.

4. Coordination of the various philanthropic, educational and religious activities in the city. This organization is in existence to this day.

5. Prevent "mushroom" synagogues in New York City. These were synagogues that were opened in dance halls or empty stores for the holidays.

6. To organize a Vaad Hakashruth to regulate the sale and consumption of Kosher meats.

7. To collect information about Jewish life in America. The Jewish Historical Societies are an outgrowth of this early attempt to collect and preserve items of historical significance, such as the Jewish Historical Association of Rhode Island.

And many more regulations that were designed to strengthen and normalize Jewish life.

Voices were heard in other cities for a Kehillah. In Providence the chief proponent of a Kehillah was Ida Silverman, who is now a resident of Israel.

The Kehillah in New York lived to be Bar Mitzvah. On the thirteenth year, in 1922, the Kehillah was closed, for reasons that are too numerous and complicated for us to go into. But it still lives in the Federations in every city of consequence in America.

And this is what Max Alperin meant when he stated that the Federation which he heads is not unlike the Kehillah. The Federation retains the primary principle of the Kehillah, and that is that Jewish life must be organized, coordinated, supervised and directed.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Student Loan Logjam: An Outrage

An outrage bordering on scandal is the chaos which has surrounded the Federal-state guaranteed student loan program this past summer.

So disorganized is the situation even at this very late date that in some states nearly two-thirds of the students who must have the guaranteed loans to go to college still have not obtained them — and some may not get the money for months.

This student loan logjam, in fact, could well be one key factor behind the high number of vacancies in many colleges from coast to coast. And the tragedy may be that uncounted numbers of students from middle-income families who should and want to go to college this year may have scrapped their plans altogether.

To suggest the totals which are involved, an enormous 300,000 student loan applications have been backed up while Washington bureaucrats have been sifting, sorting and generally failing miserably to fulfill their stated functions.

What happened?

First, Congress earlier this year enacted a batch of amendments to the guaranteed student loan program — which had expired in 1971 — switching the authority for determining the amount a student could get each year from the lenders of the money to the educational institution the student was attending. Congress also boosted the maximum loan amount from $1,500 a year to a new high of $2,500 a year.

Next, on July 1, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare issued its own set of regulations which, in effect, sharply reduced the numbers of students eligible for the loans — in bold contradiction to the intent of Congress when it voted the amendments.

Specifically, the department INSTANTLY disqualified hundreds of thousands of students for loans by slapping on a strict "needs" test — requiring, among other things, students' families in the $15,000 and under income brackets to count such liquid assets as the equity in their homes and life insurance policies toward the amounts they were expected to contribute toward the education of their children.

Finally, to end the confusion and start the money flowing, Congress passed emergency legislation late last month. Under this, most of the new amendments have been

ORGANIZATION NEWS

TO HOLD MEETING

The Mother's Association of Temple Beth David-Anshei Kovno will hold their first meeting on Tuesday, September 26, at 8 p.m. at the temple. Mrs. Harold Winkelman is president. Mrs. Charles Ross, entertainment chairman, has arranged for a Party Line demonstration following the business meeting.

SCOTCH DOUBLES

The New Associates, an organization for young Jewish couples in Rhode Island, will sponsor a Scotch Doubles Bowling Night on Saturday, October 7, at 8:30 p.m. at Lang's Bowlarama.

The group plans a Gin with Gin Tournament in November and a Hanukkah cocktail party in December.

Further information on the bowling night may be obtained by calling Gloria or Jim Ferolito at 943-1227.

Membership in the New Associates, an organization sponsored by Temple Beth Torah, is open to all Jewish couples in their 20s and 30s who reside in the Rhode Island area.

PLAN DANCE

The Business and Professional Singles Group of the Hartford Jewish Community Center will hold their first dance of the season on Sunday, September 24, from 7 to 11 p.m., at the Center on 335 Bloomfield Avenue, West Hartford, Connecticut. Dancing will be to the music of Art DuBrow's orchestra. A sherry hour will be held from 7 to 8 p.m.

Information may be obtained by calling Miss Evelyn Browdy at 203 232-7582.

CONSIDER FEASIBILITY

The Rhode Island Society for Autistic Children, Inc., unanimously voted, at a meeting held September 15, to look into the feasibility of instituting a class action suit against the State of Rhode Island to force the state to meet its obligations in regard to educating autistic children and children with related emotional disorders such as childhood schizophrenia, etc.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS

Mrs. Robert Rosenfield, Eastern Area co-chairman of Pioneer Women, will install the officers of the Pioneer Women of Providence, Club One at their first meeting of the season to be held on Wednesday, September 27, at 12 noon at the Colonial Hilton Inn in Cranston.

Officers to be installed are Mrs. Maurice Schwartz, chairman of the presidium; Mrs. Abraham Grebstein, Mrs. Samuel Solkoff, Mrs. Hyman B. Stone and Mrs. Albert Sokolow, vice presidents and members of the presidium; Mrs. Sidney Backman, treasurer; Mrs. Henry Helfand, auditor; Mrs. Samuel Goldman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Benjamin Levin and Mrs. Harry Uffer, financial secretaries; Mrs. Louis Salk and Mrs. Samuel Tarsky, mailing secretaries; Mrs. Max Sherman, recording secretary, and Mrs. Morris Ackerman, assistant recording secretary.

SIMCHAS TORAH RALLY

A community-wide Simchas Torah Rally for Soviet Jewry will be held on Sunday evening, October 1, at 8:30 p.m. in Brookline, Massachusetts. The assembly point is Congregation Kehillath Israel at 384 Harvard Street in Brookline.

The march and rally is sponsored by the Soviet Jewry Committee of the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Boston.

CANDIDATES TO SPEAK

The Democratic and Republican candidates for Governor and United States Senator will speak at succeeding Sunday morning breakfasts sponsored by the Temple Sinai Protherhood.

Senator Claiborne Pell, the Democratic incumbent, will be the initial speaker on Sunday, September 24, followed by his Republican opponent, former Governor and former Secretary of the Navy John H. Chafee, on Sunday, October 1.

The gubernatorial candidates will appear on the following two Sundays. Republican Herbert F. DeSimone, former State Attorney-General and former assistant U.S. Transportation Secretary, is scheduled to speak on Sunday, October 8. Mayor Philip W. Noel of Warwick, Democratic candidate for Governor, will speak on October 15.

Stanley F. Turco, program chairman of the Brotherhood, is in charge of the arrangements. The breakfasts will start at 9 a.m.

Wives and teen-age children of Brotherhood members are invited to attend the programs.

ISRAELIS PROTEST

TEL AVIV — Several hundred protesters demonstrated in Tel Aviv's Dizengoff Square against what their leaders called the government's preoccupation with Soviet Jews to the detriment of the needs of earlier settled Oriental Jews.

Garden Clubs Join For Flower Show

"The Spirit of 1772," a standard flower show, will be held at the John Brown House, Rhode Island Historical Society at 52 Power Street on Wednesday and Thursday, October 4 and 5. The Dirt Gardeners and Emanu-El Garden Clubs have joined to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the R.I. Historical Society as well as the 200th anniversary of the burning of the Gaspee.

Mrs. Clarke Freeman, Jr., president of the Dirt Gardeners, and Mrs. Samuel Gerstein, president of the Emanu-El Garden Club, have appointed Mrs. Edwin Drew and Mrs. Sydney Schaffer as general chairmen of the show. Co-chairmen are Mrs. Herbert Wells, Jr., and Mrs. Gerstein.

Individual flower arrangements will reflect Colonial themes, and there will be special exhibits of curios and memorabilia prior to 1840. Costumed hostesses will greet the public from 1 to 4 p.m. on October 4, and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on October 5. Proceeds will go toward maintenance of the grounds at the Martin Luther King School and Hope High School.

Writes 'Open Letter' To Nations Of World

You had a say of mourning. You expressed your shock and indignation. You stood solemnly in a minute of silence. You held dramatic memorials. You gave us your deepest sympathy as we mourned the eleven Israeli athletes murdered in Munich by Arab terrorists. It is truly a pity that they are not here today to hear your beautiful eulogies. It is too bad that they failed to hear the Secretary of the United Nations condemn the Arab terrorists. It is a shame that they died remembering only the numerous UN resolutions condemning not Arab terrorism, but the Jewish State.

But as they lie dead in their coffins perhaps they wonder if their young lives might not have been sacrificed had you taken some action before their deaths, not uttered empty words after it. Because, remember, it was you who allowed the terrorists to exist. It was your silence that encouraged them. It was your daily condemnations of Israel for taking action against the Arab gangs, that gave them their strength.

And now, you shed crocodile tears over our dead but it was you who dug their grave. Yes, you, who decried every action the Jewish State took to stop the Arab murderers. You, who joined together in that tower of Babel, which you so gracefully call the United Nations, to ask for "restraint" when it concerned Israel, and yet remained silent when Jewish blood was spilt.

Well maybe it's time you hear this: We are fed up! We are sick to our hearts at the flow of our blood all over the world. We are tired of saying Kaddish for our brothers who die. We are sick of watching young Jews killed and their blood being spilled like water over foreign soils. We have had enough. So in the day when you hear the Jewish State has avenged the blood of her people, you can take your sympathy and your pity and all your beautiful eulogies and give them to the Arabs, because we have decided to live.

FOUND GUILTY

GAZA, Northern Sinai — A former local commander of the "Al Fatah" Arab terrorist organization was found guilty of murder by a military court here. Abdul Hamid Schachada, 27, murdered two local inhabitants in early 1971, suspected of "collaboration" with the Israeli authorities.

OPPOSES PARADE
JERUSALEM — Moshe Dayan, Defense Minister, and Michael Hazani, the Minister of Social Welfare, opposed proposals for a military parade in Jerusalem during Israel's 25th Independence Day celebrations on May 7 next year but they were overruled by the majority of the Cabinet.

Mr. Dayan said that it was inadvisable to revive this show of strength during the cease-fire. But his colleagues felt the expenditure involved to be worthwhile because of the celebration of Israel's 25th anniversary and because many of the new immigrants would be seeing the celebrations for the first time.

New Products Provide Gradual Growth

Q: What effect do you think G.D. Searle's (NYSE) new CU-7 device for birth control will have on earnings? L.W.

A: A new drug application will be filed on this copper intrauterine contraceptive device along with applications for Norpace and Depsipsin, drugs for treatment of cardiac arrhythmias and peptic ulcer. If FDA approval is granted, earnings will not be materially boosted before 1974. More important to future earnings increments, however, is a pending Food Additive Petition to the FDA for an artificial sweetener. This product, which leaves no bitter aftertaste, is significant because of the greater breadth of its potential market particularly in view of the negative findings on cyclamates and saccharin.

In recent years, Searle has allocated an increasing percentage of its sales dollar — 12% last year — to research and development efforts. With one of the largest ratios of R&D expenditures in the industry, Searle has established a leading position in oral contraceptives and hypertension drugs. First half sales scored an impressive 20% gain. Phil earnings moved ahead 15% to $1.38 a share. Full year profits of $3.00 a share are possible for an earnings multiple of 36x, about average for the industry.

Q: Please give me your opinion of the Oppenheimer Fund, B.L.

A: This open-end load fund has as its primary objective maximum capital growth, which it has achieved with fairly consistent success. In the decade through June,

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

The most interesting hands to hold, discuss or write about, naturally, are Slams. Yet many of the same key plays necessary to make the Slam are also found in games or even part scores. Today's hand involved a guess provided the Defenders were given sufficient warning that the guess was forthcoming. If so, and they were alert, they would give no clue to the Declarer and leave him to fend for himself. It then became an even chance that he would go wrong.

Mrs. Allen Markoff was Declarer, North Dealer, no one vulnerable with this bidding:

N	E	S	W
1♠	P	1♠	P
3♦	P	4NT	P
5♥	P	6♣	End

The bidding was perfectly normal. Of course, there were some players who opened one No Trump and others who play artificial systems who opened with a strong, forcing artificial Club bid. These had little trouble also getting to the Slam. Almost every pair reached it. The problem was to make it if West on lead, did not help out by playing his Heart Ace. That lead, of course, automatically gave Declarer his twelfth trick.

Some people are under the impression that they should always lead their Ace against a Slam. This is not true. More times than not the lead of an Ace will not be as good as some other lead. I don't mean to say never lead that Ace but you should have a good reason to do so.

The other lead made by more of the Wests was the Diamond Queen, top of a three card honor sequence. I feel that on the above bidding that is a preferable lead. With that lead Declarer now has to guess how to play the Hearts himself, provided, of course, that when he does lead toward the Dummy's King, Jack, West again does not help by either going up with his Ace or hesitating and then playing low. The latter would, of course, by a dead giveaway as to the location of that key card.

I watched as most of the Declarers won the Diamond lead and then proceeded to cash out all of their high cards until they had told any good Defenders exactly what their distribution was and what their problem was. By this time any good West would already have made his mind up that whenever Declarer finally did lead toward Dummy he was going to play low without a flicker. Now Declarer is on an absolute guess. True, he might go right but then again he might not. But certainly give him no help.

How then can we give ourselves a better chance? My way would be to play to the Heart in Dummy right off the bat at trick two. Now I defy even the best of the Defenders to duck quickly and easily. They have no idea now how many cards Declarer has in each suit for he gave them no time and count. He could easily have twelve sure tricks and be trying to steal one by leading a singleton to that Dummy. That would make thirteen, an overtrick and no one likes to give up an overtrick. At any rate, I am certain that any Declarer leading a Heart at trick two would be rewarded either by seeing the Ace played or getting enough hesitation to formulate an almost sure opinion as to who does hold that Ace. No one would have any problem if he held the Queen and not the Ace.

No Declarer did play the hand this way and so they had to guess. The better the field the less help they are going to get later on yet for that same reason, the better the field, the more they will receive if they start the Hearts right away. The shrewder the Defender the more he will wonder why anyone would go right after a suit like that in a Slam before he draws Trumps or does anything else. They would be the ones most likely to feel Declarer was trying to steal something.

Moral: The sooner you attack something such as the above, the less clues you give and the more help you will get.

Uganda's Leader Agrees With Hitler

KAMPALA, Uganda — Uganda's President, Gen. Idi Amin, has suggested that all Israelis be moved from the Middle East to Britain, adding that he understands why Hitler killed six million Jews.

President Amin stated his views in a message to Secretary General Waldheim of the United Nations and to Premier Golda Meir of Israel.

His message said: "Germany is the right place where, when Hitler was the Prime Minister and supreme commander, he burned over six million Jews. This is because Hitler and all German people knew that Israelis are not people who are working in the interest of the people of the world and that is why they burned the Israelis alive with gas in the soil of Germany."

Last spring, General Amin expelled Israeli diplomats, military advisers and technicians after 10 years of friendly Israeli-Uganda

General Amin said in his message: "We must consider this problem very seriously jointly with the people who want to assist the Palestinians to remove all Israelis from the Middle East and take them to Britain, which was responsible for taking them to Palestine."

temporarily suspended, and once again in effect — until next March — are the old rules. The key provisions: a student from a family with an adjusted yearly income of $15,000 per year or less may borrow at very favorable rates up to $1,500 per academic year, begin repaying nine to 12 months after graduation, take up to 10 years to pay. Interest subsidies are paid to the lending institutions to encourage them to extend the loans at the below-market rates.

What should you do, if you or your college student son or daughter are among those who have not obtained loans for the current or winter semester? Here is advice from the American Bankers Association in Washington, which includes among its members banks making more than 80 per cent of all the subsidized loans under this 1965 student loan program:

(1) Immediately apply for a loan — or reapply — at the lending institution where your family is known.

(2) If you are still turned away, immediately apply — or reapply — for guidance from your college financial aid officer. Many educational institutions maintain lines of credit with lenders in their own areas which a qualified student may tap.

(3) Also request information from your financial aid officer on other sources of funds — to help you through a crisis period caused by events far, far beyond your control.

What this report is all about is the untenable position of middle-income taxpayers who, in the words of Representative Edith Green, D-Oregon, are "clobbered by taxes, cannot come up with the college tuition for their own sons and daughters" but who receive "the lowest priority for student financial aid."

And what this report is shouting between the lines is that America cannot possibly properly educate its young men and women unless there is a drastic overhaul in the way we handle the financing of higher education.

For college costs continue to soar; corporate financial support of higher education is not expanding at nearly the pace essential; in many ways, corporate support is actually shrinking; and it's painfully obvious that the "clobbered" middle-income taxpayer won't be able to manage it without far more liberal government help.

Italian City Suspicious Of Arab Community

PERUGIA, Italy — This ancient hill capital of Umbria, host to a fluctuating body of more than 2,000 Arab students, has suddenly become tense with suspicions, rumors and fears.

Newspapers in Rome and Florence have charged recently that the Palestinian community and other Arabs living here may be connected with the Black September terrorist group and the attack on the Israeli team at the Olympic games in Munich.

Last week, reports circulated there that 15 to 20 Arab students had been taken out of Perugia and were to be expelled from Italy.

The formal reason for the measure was said to be failure to comply with the rules that oblige every foreigner, except tourists, to register with the police. Implied was the suspicion that the expelled Arabs might be members of conspiratorial networks.

'Exercising Vigilance'

But the duty officer at Perugia police headquarters stated that "only one or two" Arab students had been expelled. The expulsion order was issued, the police spokesman said, because the student or students did not hold a sojourn permit.

"We are exercising vigilance," the police officer declared. "We are watching the situation, and we have special organs of observation."

The Italian police have lately expanded their services for the surveillance and investigation of suspect foreigners.

Many local people are convinced that agents of the Italian military intelligence service and of the Israeli secret service have lately — and independently of each other — moved into Perugia, which is 80 miles north of Rome. "I'm now getting dinner guests who seem like James Bond characters," a restaurant owner said with pride.

Rumors Are Denied

Police officers here deny a rumor — which appeared in the local press — that one of the Arab terrorists who were holding the

Hello Again!

News of the Sports World by Warren Walden

DECISIONS, PROBLEMS QUESTIONS: Why does a television network carry baseball all Summer when the games are not as important as they are when the pennant races tighten and then show a football game that doesn't mean too much when each baseball game affects the championship and World Series? Contracts, I suppose, and for years people have been trying to be in two places at the same time. The first place Red Sox, in the midst of a red hot pennant race, attracted 21,502 at Fenway Park, while the Patriots and Bengals were the magnet for a crowd of 60,999 at Schaefer Stadium. The televised New York Giants and Detroit Lions played before a visible audience of 54,418. And, according to figures available, the Patriots attracted more than three games involving three top contenders in the Eastern Division of the American Baseball League. My goodness, has football moved that far ahead of baseball in popularity?

MONEY MAD! The players in the National Basketball Association, whose average annual salary is $50,000, are now the highest paid professional athletes in the United States, according to an article in SPORT magazine. Salaries in the National Football League are the lowest among the major sports when the average is used as a measure, according to the article. The NFL players Association sets the figure at $26,000. The article, which attempts to put skyrocketing sports salaries into perspective, emphasizes that average salaries do not always give the most accurate picture of wages. In baseball, for example, a number of players were listed as earning over $100,000, but for every player in the six figure bracket, there are four making the minimum of $13,500. It is conceded by sports experts that the reported salaries of sports stars and their actual pay checks vary considerably. Of the top money-makers cited in the SPORT article, baseball heads the list with more than 20 players in the $100,000 or more class. Hank Aaron tops the list with $200,000.

GROW TALL AND STAR: In Basketball, Wilt Chamberlain, Jerry West, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Elmore Smith each pull down more than $250,000 a year with Oscar Robertson not far behind. Derek Sanderson, now with WHA's Philadelphia Blazers, is reputed to have the number one salary in hockey. Prior to the hockey war, the players in the $100,000-or-more-club were Bobby Hull, Bobby Orr, Stan Mikita, Tim Horton, Frank Mahovlich and Carl Brewer. Others are expected to join the list this season.

CONLEY STADIUM: Recently an obituary told of the passing of William L. Conley, an outstanding athlete and notable citizen in the South Providence section. Known as "Wild Bill," Mr. Conley and his athletically-inclined family typify the tradition of one of the beloved neighborhoods in memory and recall the bygone eras of amateur wrestling, club fighting and sandlot football and baseball. "Wild Bill" played football for several clubs including the "Argonauts" and "St. Joseph's". Once he scrimmaged with the famed Brown "Iron Men." In addition, he won his first eleven boxing bouts before abandoning the sport at the request of his mother.

"Wild Bill's" father, "Packy" Conley had been widely acclaimed for his fistic prowess as an amateur boxer and his cousin Jack was an able amateur wrestler. "Packy's" cousin, George "Tiger Jack" Conley, became very popular as an Adonis-type professional wrestler of unusual capabilities. Back to "Wild Bill." His two sons, Patrick and Bill Jr. carried on the athletic tradition notably. In basketball, Bill Jr. set a record for Junior High competition when he scored a season's high of 60 points. Patrick Conley, now Dr. Patrick Conley, who is among other designations a History Professor at Providence College, has an enviable athletic and scholastic record that is lengthy. He played baseball and track at PC, was a medalist in the NE Interscholastic Track Championships in the Javelin and was acclaimed "Outstanding All-Around Athlete" in the Providence Junior Olympics, those accomplishments being included in a long list of athletic achievements. The "Conley Story" is impressive, the name adorning the stadium in Mt. Pleasant being worthy of the honor, being recognized for distinction through the popularity of "Wild Bill's" cousin, "Bucky" Conley, who probably was not as proficient in sports as some other members of the family but who loved the games and loved people. He was officially U.S. Marshal — unofficially, "The mayor of South Providence." Good reasons for naming it, "Conley Stadium." — CARRY ON!

Get on the bandwagon, join with your leaders to keep the vital promises of 1972. Yes, you have helped hundreds of thousands of immigrants come home to Israel. You have kept part of the promise. But the people of Israel need you now more than ever. The tragic events at Munich point up the daily crises in the life of this beleaguered country. Russian Jews are arriving in Israel—more than one hundred a day. Here in Providence, the needs of our elderly have increased. We have added the Jewish Home For The Aged to the 26 local agencies supported by our Jewish Federation. Keep the promise. GIVE MORE THAN BEFORE!

Premier Golda Meir plans to address a special vacation session of the Knesset to explain her reasons for wanting Shapiro back.

Libya Buries Arabs As Heroes

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Libya gave a heroes' burial today to five Palestinian guerrillas killed at a military airfield near Munich, West Germany, September 5 as they were trying to escape with nine Israeli hostages taken in a raid on the Olympic Village. Egypt's official Middle East News Agency, in a dispatch from Tripoli, Libya, said that the funeral of the five Arabs had been a "majestic spectacle."

Large numbers of mourners reportedly marched behind the funeral procession, led by members of the ruling Libyan Revolutionary Command Council. The press agency did not say whether Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi, the council's Chairman, had taken part. Palestinian guerrillas reportedly participated in the procession.

The mourners marched through the streets until they reached Martyrs Square, where prayers were offered, the press agency said. The five bodies, flown from Munich were later interred.

Soviet Journalist In Unofficial Article Calls On Jews To Refuse Tax Payment

MOSCOW — A Soviet journalist this week called for Soviet Jews to refuse to pay the new tax on educated emigrants, charging that it would doom thousands of Jews to years of waiting as "unsold slaves" until ransom money could be raised abroad.

Viktor Perelman, who was dismissed from his job after he applied to emigrate to Israel earlier this year, estimated that the total costs of the new taxes could run as high as $250-million and questioned whether such large sums could be raised soon.

In an unofficial article circulating in typescript copies and titled "Reflections Before the Auction," Mr. Perelman contended that Soviet authorities were trying to convert emigrating Jews into a "commodity on the international financial market" to earn badly needed hard currency.

Soviet authorities, he contended, were eager for some Jews to begin paying the taxes though so far as is known none have. Officials, he said, were trying to induce payments from Jews with approved visas and threatening to withdraw the visas if they delayed too long.

'Sale Might Flop'

"It seems that the authorities are hurrying to declare the auction open, fearing that the sale might flop if civilized society said 'no.'"

Mr. Perelman rejected the official assertions that would-be emigrants should repay the state for their education as "no more than camouflage, devoid of any legal basis," on grounds that educational costs were recouped by society early in an individual's working career.

In support of this thesis, Mr. Perelman cited an article published by a leading Soviet demographer, Prof. B.T. Uralnis, asserting that "After the first five or six years of his working life, a person has completely paid off his debt to society" for the costs of education.

"There then begins a period of credit balance between the value of the material wealth created by him and what has been invested in him," Professor Uralnis wrote in Literaturnaya Gazeta, the Writers' Union weekly, on July 29, 1970.

Expelled From Party, Too

Mr. Perelman worked on the staff of that newspaper until seven months ago after having applied for a visa to Israel. He was also expelled from the Communist party and was later told that his visa application was being rejected because he knew too much about the internal workings of the Soviet Establishment, he said.

Last week, he was arrested by three plainclothes men after meeting with a foreign correspondent but was later released.

Mr. Perelman contended that even without the new tax, the state was gaining financially from emigration because emigrants were forfeiting pension benefits that they had accrued.

His estimate that as much as $250-million might be needed to pay education taxes was based, according to his article, on the assumption that there were now 80,000 applicants for visas to Israel and that 20 per cent to 25 per cent had higher education.

Mr. Perelman is said to have reckoned that on the average individuals would have to pay 11,000 rubles — about the median amount of the taxes — meaning that 20,000 educated applicants would face total levies of about 220 million rubles, or roughly $250-million.

Western diplomats and other Jewish activists consider these figures vastly overstated. One knowledgeable activist reckoned the amount at more than $25-million. But even such figures are hypothetical because no official statistics even on the number of applicants, let alone their educational levels, have been made public.

Says Authorities Open

Mr. Perelman contended that Soviet authorities had been fairly open about their intentions of making the new education tax a money-making proposition, though other analysts have thought its primary purpose was to stop a drain of educated people by checking the emigration of intellectuals to Israel.

On August 15, Mr. Perelman said, a group of Jews was told by Sergei Alyoshin, a Finance Ministry officer: "We are not so naive as to suppose that you have as much as this. Put you know where to get it and I imagine you'll be able to do so."

Court Sentences Arab To Die; Punishment Always Commuted

TEL AVIV — A military court sentenced an Israeli Arab to death last week for a bomb explosion on a bus that wounded two persons in Tel Aviv nearly a year ago, the military command said. Israel has never carried out an execution of a guerrilla sentenced to die.

The court condemned Yussuf Mahmoud Ahmed Mansur, 22 years old, of Tira for having planned a grenade last November in a spare tire hooked to the rear of an intercity bus when it stopped in Tel Aviv. The explosion sent glass flying into the bus, wounding two persons.

Mansur, who had pleaded guilty, was convicted as a member of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist Arab guerrilla group, the command said. It said that the defense would appeal the court decision, which is routine.

The court action came amid public demands to sentence all guerrillas or fedayeen, to death after the slaying of 11 members of the Israeli Olympic team in Munich, West Germany.

Two other guerrillas have been sentenced to death since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, one of them on July 13 for having thrown a grenade into a crowd of tourists in the Old City of Jerusalem about a year ago. Both sentences were commuted.

Military courts this summer waived the death penalties for Kozo Okamoto, the survivor of a three-man Japanese terrorist squad whose attack at Tel Aviv airport May 30 resulted in the death of 28 persons and two women accused of hijacking a Belgian jetliner to the airport May 8. All were sentenced to life imprisonment.

Although capital punishment is legal in Israel for treason and war crimes, it has been carried out only once, in 1962 when the convicted Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann was executed.

Brown To Offer Course In Yiddish

An independent study course for academic university credit in Yiddish Language and Literature will be offered at Brown University. The course, the first of its kind at Brown, will be taught by Rabbi Nathan N. Rosen, Jewish college chaplain and director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel in Providence.

The course will use as its text, College Yiddish by Professor M. Weinreich. The university Language Lab facilities will supplement the text. The class will meet four hours weekly.

The office of Yivo, the international organization for the promotion of Yiddish language and literature, reports that Brown is now one of more than 30 universities and colleges offering Yiddish. Among them are Columbia and the City Colleges of New York, University of Florida, University of Arizona, and University of Texas.

Canadian Jews In Government

Trudeau, bilingual in French and English, found a kindred soul in Gray, who learned French by living with a French Canadian family, gaining fluency through total immersion. Gray has often introduced reports in the House of Commons in French, to the annoyance of the unilingual Anglos, who in turn annoy the bilingual French. This is undoubtedly one of the factors in Gray's acceptability. It's certainly a political plus for a Jew who took his oath as a Cabinet minister in English and French on a silver-cased Hebrew Bible published in Jerusalem.

Another plus is his amenability. Gray hews to the party line — some question his political courage — but he rejects the label of conformist. "I have spoken in Parliament on occasion in disagreement with the Liberal Party," he points out, "but I have generally kept criticism within the confines of the party." He quotes his leader: "Herb is one of the outspoken critics among Cabinet members in caucus." Trudeau seems to feel comfortable with Gray. The two see each other almost daily. Compatibility is the long suit of the member for Windsor West and certainly one of the reasons for his political rise.

Trudeau knows Jews well; neither St. Laurent nor Mackenzie King did. Trudeau taught them law at the University of Montreal, rubbed shoulders with them as a labor lawyer and was elected to Parliament from the strong Jewish district of Mount Royal. Jews were prominent in the group of young Turks that started him on his campaign for the leadership of the Liberal Party. Even before his parliamentary career began, Trudeau served on the committee which formulated legislation for banning hate literature in Canada.

Trudeau is a federalist. He cannot abide French-Canadians who want Quebec to separate from the rest of Canada. The appointment of a Jewish Cabinet minister must have struck him as not only poetic justice but a symbol of the ideal of Canadian unity. Herb Gray says that his Prime Minister isn't interested in a man's origins if he wants him for a certain task and believes he can do the job. That sounds like the essential Trudeau, the man who elevated the first Jew to the Supreme Court.

In the final analysis, it was Quebec — the province where organized anti-semitism flourished and flourishes as nowhere in Canada — that denied Croll a Cabinet post. Fascist Adrien Arcand and the Unite Nationale spewed a hate to match Goebbels' in the thirties. Maurice Duplessis, 'le chef' of the Union Nationale, knew his Quebecers when, in the campaign for the provincial premiership in 1944, he announced the discovery of a "plot" by Canadian Jews to bring into the country one hundred thousand Jews after the war. To this day nobody knows the origin of the synagogue fire in Quebec City in the early 1940s; it took a long time for the embers of the spanking new structure to get cold. And during World War II, the Bloc Populaire, like most French-Canadian nationalist movements, had anti-semitic overtones. All these worked against Croll.

Herb Gray argues against an over-emphasis on Quebec. He claims there is a traditional strain of tolerance among French-Canadians, often overlooked. One of the first invitations for a speech after his Cabinet appointment came from Trois Rivieres on the St. Lawrence, where in 1807 Ezekiel Hart was elected to the Assembly of Lower Canada but forbidden to take his seat because of his Judaism. Trois Rivieres defied the legislators and elected Hart again, to no avail. But Hart lived to see the passage in 1832 of a law granting civil rights to Jews, twenty-five years before such a law was promulgated in Britain. That is the counter-tradition, says Gray, and he maintains it is gaining ground.

But the overtones still linger. In the Quebec election in April, which brought Liberal Robert Bourassa to power, the separatist 'Parti Quebecois' won 24 per cent of the popular vote. Its leader, Rene Levesque, spoke kind words about the Arab liberation movement. Separatists, the New Left and the Arab Federation of Canada have made common cause in 'la belle province.'

There is a movement of Jews from Quebec to other provinces, although it is denied by Jewish leaders in Montreal, who are admittedly in a difficult position. Jews have always felt more at home in an Anglo-Saxon culture. In Ontario, for example, while 100,000 Jews live in metropolitan Toronto, there are still 25,000 dispersed through the province. In Quebec, Jews outside Montreal, and to a fractional degree Quebec City, are about as scarce as the 'afikomen' on Yom Kippur. Jews may be partly to blame because they are oriented to the English community in Montreal, where the economic opportunities abound.

Sentiment is afoot for the integration of Jews into the French milieu, but the prospect is dim. Can a Jewish fragment be expected to join a French enclave not only 'vis-a-vis' Canada but the whole of North America? Jews would have to be given some valid reasons for becoming a minority within a minority. Quebec history and the current fact of separatism are unlikely to provide those reasons.

Still there is that counter-tradition of Trois Rivieres and Herb Gray's promotion to a post which always seemed beyond the Jew. In a world troubled by violence and exclusivism, these are small but gratifying blessings. Reprinted from The Jewish Digest

Russia Tells People Of New Emigration Taxes

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union told its people last week, for the first time, about its new high emigration taxes, publishing the rules in the controlled domestic press.

Publication of information about the taxes, ostensibly intended to compensate the Soviet Union for free higher education given to people who want to emigrate, was taken as an indication that Moscow did not plan to back down in the face of pressure from Western public opinion.

Although the education taxes, decreed August 3, apply to all Soviet citizens, seeking emigration to the West, they now primarily affect Jews, who are the most highly educated ethnic group in the Soviet Union and who now account for most of the relatively small emigration.

Western diplomats had speculated in recent weeks that by not going on the public record with the new levies, ranging from $5,000 to as much as $30,000, the authorities were leaving themselves a possible choice of abrogating the regulations.

This prospect now appears to have been ruled out by publication of a defense of the new rules in the magazine New Times an authoritative foreign affairs weekly, which is published in several languages, including English, and often reflects thinking at high levels in the Kremlin.

PROPOSES CONFERENCE
LONDON — Lord Caradon, the former British Ambassador to the United Nations, urged in a letter published in The Times that an international peace conference be convened in Geneva to reach an overall settlement of the Middle East conflict. Lord Caradon recalled that he had proposed such a conference "long ago in the Four Power talks in New York." Now, he wrote, "No one can watch the drift and delay in the Middle East without a sickening sense that the last hope of peace is draining away."

Russian Jewish Dragunsky Denies 'Jewish Question'

UNITED NATIONS — In an attempt to offset the charges that the Soviet Union is against the State of Israel, a Russian-Jewish Colonel-General, "twice a Hero of the Soviet Union," has come out with a statement to the effect that "the Soviet Union was one of the countries which voted in the United Nations for the creation of the State of Israel where both Jews and Arabs could live side by side as equals."

The General in question is David Dragunsky and he is quoted from a signed article in Komsomolskaya Pravda.

"What and who, then, is the Soviet Union opposed to?" Gen. Dragunsky asks. "Certainly not the State of Israel as such, but — he then adds — its aggressive policy which threatens the peace and causes enormous damage, primarily to the interests of the working people of Israel proper."

Dragunsky attempts to belittle the view of a "World Jewry" denying that there is a "Jewish Question in the USSR."

STILL CLOSED

JERUSALEM — The Al Aqsa mosque, second holiest shrine to the Moslem world, which was gutted by fire three years ago, appears as if it will be closed for prayers for at least another year. The delay in reopening the mosque is due to the renovation work still underway. The delicate task of restoring the interior to its former beauty is being carried out in cooperation with a Cairo-based architectural firm. Arabs from the West Bank and Gaza Strip have borne most of the cost of repair work, donating over IL 1 million (about $245,000) and the Jordanian Government has contributed IL 300,000.

Only In America

By Harry Golden

Biography of an Upstart

A little over 100 years ago Ignaz Semmelweis was a young doctor working in a charity ward of a clinic in Budapest. Ignaz spent all the spare time worrying about the fact that four of every ten women died in childbirth.

He brooded over this so long that finally an inspiration came to him and he made some experiments. To his tremendous good fortune, he not only found an answer, but tested his findings to his complete satisfaction.

Ignaz Semmelweis was timid about disclosing his findings to his superiors; he realized it would take two to three months to get an interview with the authorities. He decided that it would be best to put his findings into practice so that when he did finally come before his superiors, he could confront them with a newly discovered scientific fact.

Finally the big day came and Semmelweis appeared before the directors of the clinic. He told them that he had discovered a method which would greatly reduce the number of deaths in childbirth. He produced his clinical records, which showed that out of his most recent 50 charity patients none had died, whereas the records of the other wards continued to show the devastating toll of death.

With this impressive evidence, Ignaz Semmelweis then made a historic announcement: "Sirs, I have discovered that if the doctor washes his hands in solution, before delivering the child, the danger of death will be greatly reduced. Please tell the doctors to wash their hands."

The "status quo" boys turned purple with rage. "Is this all you have to say? You dare to expose the medical profession to scorn and ridicule?" The head of the clinic (the one with the beard) told Semmelweis that he was a disgrace to his profession and that his impertinence could easily result in his discharge.

With tears in his eyes, Ignaz kept pointing to his records, "None of them died!" His persistence only added to the rage of his superiors, and he was fired.

He spent what little money he had saved traveling over the country, pleading with physicians, writing letters to editors and to the medical societies. Every door was closed to him, and he could no longer find a job.

Finally, Ignaz decided to go to the common people — those whose wives and mothers were dying at the rate of four out of every 10. He printed little circulars, which he distributed to workers outside the large factories. These circulars read: "Don't allow a doctor to deliver your wife of a baby, unless he washes his hands first."

The working man laughed at him and tore up his circulars. And Ignaz Semmelweis went his way, a bewildered man, pleading with humanity.

EX-NAZI ACQUITTED

BONN — A former SS officer who made home movies of the execution of Jews by SS units, was acquitted of murder charges by a Bonn criminal court which accepted his plea of amnesia concerning "everything connected with the Jewish question during the Nazi regime." The acquittal was the second for the defendant, identified under court orders only as Franz T. He had been tried previously on charges of participation in the mass murder of Polish Jews and was released after the court accepted his contention that he had known nothing of the executions at the time and found out about them only at the end of the war.

This was an educational program on the proper techniques of fund-raising in preparation for the Federation's upcoming 1972 campaign.

Gunshot Wounds, Smoke Kill Israeli Hostages

MÜNICH, West Germany — All but one of the 11 Israelis who were killed after an Arab guerrilla raid on the Olympic Village here died of gunshot wounds, according to autopsy reports made public recently.

A statement issued here by the Justice Ministry of the State of Bavaria stressed that the reports were preliminary. But it said the autopsies yielded these details on how two Israelis died in the Olympic Village and how the remaining nine Israelis, five Arab terrorists and one West German policeman died during the subsequent gun battle at Fürstfeldbruck military air base 15 miles west of here.

- One of the two Israelis who died in the Israeli team's quarters at the Olympic Village was killed by two shots, the second by several shots.

- Three of four Israeli hostages in a helicopter that was wrecked by a grenade and burned at Fürstfeldbruck were shot to death. The fourth Israeli in that helicopter was wounded twice but died of smoke inhalation.

- The five Israelis in a second helicopter were killed by what were described as horizontal shots that stayed in their bodies. The helicopters flew the hostages and terrorists to the air base.

- Four of the five Arabs who died in the gun battle at the air base were killed by gunfire. The fifth was apparently killed in the explosion of the grenade that he tossed into one of the helicopters.

- The policeman was killed by a shot in the head.

It was reported that the three Arabs captured by the police have apparently discussed the events of that day but have refused to give any details of the circumstances leading to the attack.

The Justice Ministry statement said that further investigation would be made into the deaths, which led to a 24-hour suspension of the Olympic Games.

In the Olympic complex, Munich policemen and green-clad border brigade troops have replaced the civilian uniformed security policemen who guarded the complex during the games, which ended last week.

In the athletes' village, the Israeli quarters were still being guarded. Traffic in and out moved only after identity checks. Most athletes have already departed.

Trains out of Munich were jammed. Security checks of persons and baggage delayed departure of airliners for two or three hours at the Riem Airport.

Discussing new entry restrictions for Arabs, a Government spokesman said in Bonn that the West German Cabinet had approved an amendment to the law on foreign residents that would require all Arabs wishing to enter the country to obtain visas.

This means that Libyans, Moroccans and Tunisians will also be subjected to visa requirements. Until now, they did not need visas for short visits to West Germany.

The new measure requires approval by the upper house of the West German Parliament, but it was thought certain to be adopted because all major political parties have demanded tighter visa requirements for Arabs.

The move was the latest in a series of measures to tighten national security following the Munich events. Interior Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has already approved the establishment of a special antiterrorist police unit to act as a federal emergency reserve for all 10 state governments.

Airport security has been tightened and the 60,000 Arab workers and students in West Germany are under increased observation by security agents in an effort to track down terrorist groups.

of 54%. Shares are still rated buy, particularly on weakness.

Winnebago is the leading producer of motor homes which account for 90% of sales. Over the last five years earnings have grown an average of 61% yearly. In the May quarter, first of the fiscal year to end in February, sales rose 80% and earnings 89%. Buy/hold for growth.

Q: Among my late husband's effects I found various stock certificates including five shares of Van Camp Packing dated 1930. How can I determine whether these shares have any current values? A.B.

A: You may try any one of several approaches to secure information on the value of the certificates. However, the above named company declared bankruptcy and properties were sold in 1933. R.M. Smythe & Company, New York, New York 10038, specializes in appraising obsolete securities. For a modest fee this firm will research the shares in question. A second method is by searching old Standard & Poor Manuals (if your library carries old issues). You may also write to the secretary of the states of incorporation listed on the various certificates to determine if the companies have retained their charters of incorporation. Considerable digging is required, however, to determine whether shares are of any value.

Kellogg Shares Lack Snap, Crackle & Pop

Q: About 18 months ago I bought 300 shares of Kellogg Company (NYSE) as a start toward a retirement portfolio. So far it has achieved nothing. I don't expect miracles but would like gradual appreciation over the next 12 years. Should I continue to hold?

A: In recent years investors have been reluctant to accord Kellogg a P/E multiple consistent with its outstanding growth record. In fact, currently, shares are trading at a nominal 14.5x estimated 1972 earnings of $1.65 a share. Several negative factors are behind the less than enthusiastic investor appraisal. For one thing the Federal Trade Commission has been critical of the industry's marketing practices which the FTC claims prevents health competition. Secondly, the FDA has grave doubts as to the advisability of mineral and vitamin additives in cereals. Conversely, nutritionists charge that cereals are in many cases empty calories, devoid of nutrition and loaded with sugar. A third but vital consideration is the slowdown in the birthrate. Children, the most voracious cereal eaters, have not increased in number for several years, indicating a limited growth rate for the cereal market.

Kellogg has moved positively to counteract the long range effects of the above. Acquisition of Salada Foods and Fearn International broadened Kellogg's product base, provided a solid position in institutional feeding and expanded the company's marketing area. Shares possess strong defensive qualities. Conservative appreciation prospects and a record of increasing dividend payments. Hold.

Q: I have $20,000 to invest in trust for my son with income coming to me for life. I need regular income and safety of principal. Would you suggest possible 20-year minimum term investments? R.S.

A: Your best choice is two good quality bonds. General Mills 8-7/8s of 1995, rated A, sells to yield 8.1% currently and slightly less to maturity. A second A-rated debt issue, Maine Yankee Atomic 9.10s of 2002, yields 8.3%. By purchasing 9M of each bond you will receive approximately $400 quarterly in interest income.

RETELLS LIES

TEL AVIV — Reports reaching this country indicate that King Feisal of Saudi Arabia has rekindled the blood libel against Jews. Interviewed in the Cairo magazine "al-Mussawar" he said that five French children were killed and their blood drained to be used in "baking the bread of the Jews." According to the King, French police discovered the bodies when he was in France two years ago. Feisal also accused the Jews of having "always attempted to destroy all the other religions." The Jews started the Crusades, he contended, to weaken the Moslems and Christians.

Black September Group Considered Part Of Al Fatah

NEW YORK — Fervent young Palestinians, convinced that the Arab commando movement must go completely underground, have swelled the year-old Black September organizations' ranks to about 300 men, well-placed Arab informants reported in Beirut.

In Jerusalem, Israeli military sources said that the group's strength was at least that size and reached possibly into the thousands. Some Israeli officials believe that it was Black September terrorists who received a $5-million ransom that the Bonn government paid last winter for a hijacked Lufthansa jet.

Reports from correspondents of the New York Times in the two Middle Eastern capitals, and in Washington, London, Paris and Rome indicated that supporters in Europe have been giving aid to the shadowy organization, which claims responsibility for the bloodshed at the Olympic games.

Reports Are Conflicting

Though the reports conflicted on such points as the group's ties to the main commando group, al Fatah, what emerged was a picture of a small, discreet, proud, highly motivated body of men who have seldom hesitated to kill in the service of what they call their "cause."

The self-proclaimed founder of the group is a 29-year-old Palestinian Arab named Munzer Salman Khalifah, who surrendered to the Egyptian police after he and three comrades assassinated Jordan's Premier, Wasfi Tell, in front of the Sheraton Hotel in Cairo last November. They were later freed.

Young Khalifah, who had lived in Beirut, said Black September's members all belonged to al-Fatah, which he called "the mother organization."

Consider Jordan an Enemy

Speaking to an Arab journalist, he said proudly, "One does not separate from one's mother." But he said he and his men had decided to work on their own to wreak vengeance on the Jordanian regime for crushing the commandos, or fedayeen.

Since then, Arab informants reported, the group has remained completely underground, in contrast to the relatively middle-of-the-road Fatah, whose leader, Yasser Arafat, is very much an Arab public figure.

Black September has kept its other leaders' names secret. And, according to the Arab informants, it is not directly represented within the over-all commando organization, the Palestine Liberation Organization.

After killing Mr. Tal, the group tried but failed in December to assassinate Zaid Rifai, then the Jordanian Ambassador in London. He had been a confidant of King Hussein, who had ordered the guerrilla movement in Jordan crushed in September, 1970 — thereby providing the organization's name.

Its men have also tried and failed to hijack planes of the Jordanian national airline on three separate occasions.

Early this year, the group began striking European targets. Mr. Khalifah had said earlier that his men originally only 150 in number — were organized in secret cells in non-Arab lands.

In February Black September men said that they had set off an explosion at a Hamburg plant that manufactured electric generators for the Israeli air force. Later Black September men hijacked a Belgian airliner to Lydda airport in Israel but failed in their demand that Israel free 300 commando prisoners.

The group has never publicly announced that it received the German jet ransom — and Bonn has never said to whom it was paid — but the scope of its activities suggests that it receives considerable financing from one quarter or another.

Western diplomats say that the group's financial sources are not definitely known. But some well-placed Arab informants in Beirut say that it gets funds from, and is really merely an unacknowledged arm of al-Fatah, which in turn gets money from various Arab countries.

In Israel, military sources say that Black September also has received support from underground ultra-leftist organizations in Europe, notably the Bader-Meinhoff group in West Germany. And they say that it also gets money from the oil-rich government of Libya.

Some Western intelligence experts believe that the terrorists who carried out the Munich massacre belonged to a free-lance band with possibly only "part-time" ties to the main Black September group.

In Rome, Italian security officials are convinced that Black September and other Arab extremist groups have fewer than 100 men in Western Europe and Yugoslavia. But they believe that Arab terrorists at work on the European continent get aid not only from leftists but from some Arab officials based there.

"Where do the terrorists get their false passports? Their airlines? Their funds?" one Italian expert asked grimly.

Arab informants said one reason that Black September was able to keep its work secret was that it was organized in separate, secret cells whose members do not know the members of other cells.

They say non-Palestinian Arabs are permitted to join the group and are recruited from university campuses — with "a certain level of education" being required for membership.

Black September also gets support from the Cairo-based "Voice of the Palestine Revolution" radio which is controlled by al-Fatah. The station praised the Munich violence and, mysteriously, scooped other Arab stations with its reports on the negotiations that preceded the killing of the Israeli hostages.

RUSSIAN JOURNALIST EXPLAINS TAX

By Vladimir Katin

MOSCOW — A decree has been adopted in the Soviet Union on "reimbursement by Soviet citizens taking up permanent residence abroad, of state expenses on their education." This decree has caused a preconceived attitude in some countries. What then is the meaning of this measure?

From now on, persons leaving the U.S.S.R. to take up permanent residence in capitalist countries must repay the expenditures incurred by the state in providing higher education or other higher levels of training for specialists and scientists. This measure is assessed by the Soviet public as a just and justified one directed against the drain of public money to other countries.

The point is that Soviet citizens get their higher education free, that is, at the expense of the state. Besides, students and postgraduates are paid state scholarships, which have been largely increased as of September 1. In senior years, for instance, the scholarships are equated with state-fixed minimum wages and salaries. All in all, there are 811 higher educational establishments in the country, with a total student body of about five million.

The system of higher education in present-day conditions requires placed in a vault overnight. Yesterday morning, the Postal Inspection Service was notified, which, in turn, notified the bomb section of the Police Department.

Find Many Explosive Devices Sent To Israeli Officials

The police removed the envelopes inside a woven steel casing to Rodman's Neck in the Bronx, where the police handle explosives. Shortly after 5 P.M., the police reported that one of the devices, which was explosive, had successfully been dismantled. The two others were stored for later study.

The discovery of four of the devices in Jerusalem prompted a warning on the state radio for utmost caution in opening postal items. The police said that although the envelopes that were intercepted had been mailed from the Netherlands, they could not exclude the possibility that devices might be in envelopes postmarked in Israel.

The first two envelopes found in Jerusalem were addressed to Shimon Peres, Minister of Communications, and Dr. Moshe Kurtz, director general of the Ministry of Welfare.

One Detonated in Montreal

In Montreal, the police detonated a device in a letter addressed to the Israeli Consul General, Pinchas Shaanan. Mr.

Shaanan said it was "an ordinary white envelope, but it was tightly closed with a sticker."

"My name was printed on the sticker," he said. "It looks as if they have the names of all Israeli officials around the world."

Later six of the envelopes were reported found at the Israeli Embassy in Ottawa. All, according to the police, bore Amsterdam postmarks.

Two packages were intercepted in Geneva. Each weighed less than a half pound and each was addressed to the Israeli diplomatic mission. The five mailed devices seized in Vienna were addressed to the Israeli Embassy.

Descriptions of envelopes differed — some were said to resemble striped border air-mail envelopes, some were said to be buff, some white, one pink.

Believed to be U.S.-Made

United Press International quoted Scotland Yard sources as saying that the explosion that killed Dr. Ami Shachori in the Israeli Embassy in London Tuesday was probably caused by an American-made explosive that had been dumped from helicopters into Communist-controlled areas of Vietnam.

The news agency said that the explosive, about the size and shape of a teabag, is packed with plastic and other explosives, is code-named Gravel and explodes when stepped on. A police spokesman reportedly said that the devices sent to Israeli officials had a folded spring designed to strike a detonator when the envelopes were opened.

Plans to bomb Arab airlines, organizations and embassies in retaliation for Arab attacks on Israelis were announced in Germany in letters sent to newspapers and news agencies by a group calling itself the International Anti-Terror Organization. A spokesman for the Federal Criminal Office in Wiesbaden, West Germany said he had not previously heard of such an organization, but a police spokesman in Bonn said the threats were being taken seriously.

Arabs Said to Receive Bombs

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Arab informants reported that booby-trapped mailings had been sent to one or two leaders of Al Fatah earlier this year.

They said that the mail had been intercepted, but they suggested that a desire to retaliate might have encouraged the Black September group, which may be an offshoot of Fatah, to send postal bombs to Israeli officials this week.

Premier Meir Warns That Israel Must Strike At Terrorists

believed that the two men were specialists in psychological warfare against Arabs.

Similar specialists managed to help frustrate the plans of the Black September guerrillas who hijacked a Belgian jetliner to the Tel Aviv airport last May. The Arabs threatened to blow up the plane and everyone aboard if guerrillas in Israeli prisons were not freed. Israeli soldiers dressed as airline ground crewmen stormed the plane, killing two guerrillas and capturing two.

Mrs. Meir stressed that by the time the two men had arrived at the Olympic Village the West Germans had already worked out their plan of action and that the principal Israeli official had neither commented on the plan nor given his approval.

Rather, Mrs. Meir said, he and his assistant were "witnesses" to what happened there and at the Furstenfeldbruck military air base, to which helicopters had brought the Israelis and their captors. Nine of the Israelis were killed there — two had been killed at the village in the morning — and three Arabs were captured after five had been killed.

Appeal in Arabic

At one point, Mrs. Meir said, the security official suggested that the guerrillas be addressed in Arabic. She said: "His assistant, who speaks Arabic, appealed to the terrorists over a loudspeaker and attempted to persuade them that their fate was sealed, that it was therefore preferable for them to lay down their arms, whereupon they would be permitted to leave Germany for whatever destination they chose."

"This method, too, was tried as a final hope to rescue our men," she said.

The Premier also said that before and during the Olympic Games, Israeli representatives had approached the German authorities to work out security arrangements for the team.

"To our regret, these did not prevent the terrorists from breaking into and taking over the Israeli pavilion at the Olympic Village," she said. These arrangements, she said, would be the subject of "painstaking investigation" by her office.

wishing to leave the U.S.S.R. for Israel is very insignificant.

Thus, over the entire postwar period approximately 21,000 people have emigrated from the Soviet Union to Israel, that is, less than 1 per cent of the Jewish population in the country.

According to Soviet Ministry of the Interior figures, the following numbers of applications to leave for Israel from Jewish nationality citizens were registered by the beginning of March of this year: 285 in Moscow, 50 in Leningrad, 119 in Kiev, 124 in Moldavia. An opposite development is also in evidence — many of the former Soviet citizens of Jewish origins, upon arriving in Israel, experience disappointment and ask to be permitted to return to the Soviet Union. I personally met and talked in Vienna with dozens of such families fleeing from Israel and asking the Soviet Embassy to help them go back to the U.S.S.R.

Obviously there is the need to take special note of the circumstance that the new arrangement for going abroad apply in absolutely the same way to all Soviet citizens without any exceptions, whatever their nationality. The new decree adopted by the Presidium of the U.S.S.R. Supreme Soviet deals with Soviet citizens in general, not with some particular nationality.

It is believed in the Soviet Union that the new arrangements for citizens going abroad have been prompted by the logic of life, by the Soviet state's concern for the interests of the entire people. Not preventing private individuals from taking up permanent residence abroad, the Soviet state at the same time has no intention of acting as philanthropist toward them and to the capitalist countries where they are going.

Thus, the principal meaning of the new decree is to preserve public money and to protect the rights of those who live in the Soviet Union and want to study and work in their own country.

Incidentally, obligatory reimbursement of the educational cost in state-run higher educational establishments and the repayment of benefits received from the state, when moving to another country, has long become an international practice. These measures exist in many countries, for example, in France, Sweden and so on. This is fully in accordance with Resolution 1,243 of the 1970 UNESCO General Conference which directly addressed itself to the members of UNESCO to undertake the measures necessary to restrict the encouragement of scientists and specialists to leave their countries.

Israelis Get Into Debt In Topsy Turvy Economy

TEL AVIV — If David Ronen lived in the United States he might earn about $17,000 a year. Doing a key job in Israel, where the cost of living can be higher than in Washington, D.C., he takes home about $50 a week.

"I take my wife to a restaurant once or maybe twice a year for special occasions. I buy my clothes straight from the factory, and I am in debt," he says. He isn't complaining — he thinks he's lucky.

David Ronen — that isn't his real name, which he prefers to conceal — is an example of Israel's topsy-turvy economy. Even highly trained economists say they can't completely understand it.

Stooping beneath colossal military bills and squeezed by some of the world's highest taxes, Israelis somehow manage to eat well, dress well, and fill the streets of Israel with expensive cars.

"I don't understand how we do it," says Ronen, who holds a degree in economics. "Just good household management. I suppose."

An Israeli taxpayer who earns more than $714 a month is in an 80 percent tax bracket. With an income of $381 he is in a 60 percent bracket. A married man with two children who earns $99 a month is in a 28 percent bracket.

Ronen is assistant director of a department in Mekoroth, the water utility.

"I am fortunate," says Ronen. "I get a good salary and many people do not get those other benefits." Construction workers or Israelis in business for themselves can earn far more than Ronen. Some Israelis, however, work at two jobs to make a living, and many wives work too.

The Ronens own their apartment, a gift from his parents. But after paying tax on it and water, electricity, telephone and maintenance bills — plus $2840 a year tuition for a daughter in university and $34 a month for another in high school — there isn't much left.

Licensing his car costs $176 a year. The medium-sized French model is worth $7,350 in Israel, where taxes make an ordinary Dodge cost more than $15,000.

Yet statistics say one Israeli family in every five drives a car. An average refrigerator costs $633 but 96 percent of the families own one. Three families out of five own $400 television sets. Most of these families earn less than Ronen.

Milk, fruit and bus fares are cheap, but a man's shirt costs about $8.50. Coffee is $2.40 a pound.

"On days off we watch TV, visit friends, pick mushrooms in the forests or sometimes go camping," says Ronen.

Israelis buy almost everything on installments. New immigrants can buy things like cars and washing machines tax-free. Much of the visible property comes from German payments to Jewish families who suffered under the Nazi regime — about $2 1/2 billion so far.

Jewish donors abroad help. The government uses deficit financing to stimulate the economy, guard the explosive borders and buy Phantom jets, to run welfare services, provide jobs, build immigrant housing and maintain living standards to keep the immigrants coming.

Israel has run up foreign debts of almost $3 billion since the 1967 war.

The gross national product last year was $5.22 billion, almost as high as neighboring Egypt which has tenfold the population. On a per capita basis, Israel beats Japan. But nearly one-fourth of the GNP goes to maintain the military.

For a country with little oil, no coal, ore or timber, limited water and vast desert areas, Israel's progress is remarkable, economists agree. But the burdens will remain as long as the country pours energies into defense.

Ronen, a reserve captain who has fought in Israel's three wars, observes: "If we could spend the military money on increasing production instead of weapons, who knows what we could do?"

A gray-haired 44-year-old, who speaks four languages, Ronen like most Israelis works six days a week. He put himself through university in his spare time.

To help pay the bills, his wife runs a kindergarten and knits some of her own clothes.

The Ronens live in an apartment with 11/2 bedrooms. One of his daughters moved out "because there wasn't any privacy."

Ronen's gross salary is 1,400 Israeli pounds or $333 a month. The take-home pay is reduced to $214 by income tax, deductions for two compulsory loans which every Israeli pays the government, national insurance that covers a pension and Ronen's wages during the month he serves in the army, plus health insurance and Union dues.

As benefits, he gets two free cups of tea and a sandwich in the office every day, travel allowance of $71 a month, 75 percent of his car operating costs, $8 a month toward his telephone bill, and a week's free holiday for himself and his wife during his one-month vacation.

Majority Of Israelis Mellow Toward Ger.

NEW YORK — The attitude of the Israeli man in the street toward Germany has mellowed in the 27 years since the end of World War II, and only 18 percent of the Israeli populace is now opposed to the existing diplomatic ties with that country.

This is indicated in a recent poll of the Jewish population of Israel by PORT (Public Opinion Research of Israel Ltd.) and reported here by the American Jewish Committee.

In a companion poll, only 9 percent of those queried expressed opposition to the forthcoming visit to Israel by West German Chancellor Willy Brandt. Sixty-six percent of the respondents said that they were in favor of the chancellor's trip, while the others were either indifferent or had no opinion.

On the subject of Israeli-German relations, 56 percent of those questioned said they were in favor of ties and 18 percent said they were for only "necessary ties."

In a breakdown of the poll by education, age, and place of birth of the respondents, the poll found that better educated individuals, younger persons, and Israeli-born people looked more favorably upon ties with Germany than did others.

RECEIVE ESROG, LUCAS

NEW YORK — Soviet Jews will receive their succos species — etrogim, lulavim and hadassim — two weeks before American Jews will, Rabbi Pinchas Teitz of Elizabeth, New Jersey, reported. Rabbi Teitz, a former member of the presidium of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada, said that he had been advised by telephone that the shipments he had sent had been received and were appreciated "very much."

Denies Promise To Greek Composer

TEL AVIV — Mikis Theodorakis, the renowned composer who is in exile from his native Greece, is carrying on his campaign against the "regime of the Colonels" during his current visit to Israel, a campaign which drew a flat denial from Defense Minister Moshe Dayan of an alleged promise several years ago to the composer to help him in his anti-government effort.

The composer came to Israel to participate in the annual drama and music festival and has spent some of his time meeting with leftist groups in Israel at which he has expressed his opposition to the Greek regime.

One of the meetings was held at the home of Amos Kenan, a dissident Israeli journalist. There the composer reportedly said that several years ago, Gen. Dayan promised him help in creation of a Greek underground.

Theodorakis, said then to have been a member of the Communist Party, told the meeting at Kenan's home that he had brought the purported Dayan offer before his colleagues and that they rejected it.

A spokesman for Gen. Dayan said the Defense Minister had never met the composer and had accordingly never talked about such a proposal.

A Young Rabbi

Michael Alony Of England Is Orthodox, Flexible

LONDON — Heads shook and tongues clucked when Rabbi Michael Alony launched a Jewish football team in Southport. "It's not fitting for a rabbi," they said. But when they looked again at their new spiritual leader they wondered less. With his slender figure and clear-cut boyish features, the rabbi didn't seem so far off his Bar Mitzvah days.

The rabbi is just 26, but still doesn't look it, despite all the maturity symbols of a lovely wife, Shirley, and baby daughter, Shoshanna. In a town not noted for youthfulness, he sees his role emphatically with the young people — who represent 30 percent of his community. Five years after he came to Southport, the town boasts a young marrieds group and a JYVS group, and he encourages youth activities by announcing dances publicly and refusing to charge young people for the loan of the synagogue hall.

"I'm a realist," he says, "if you ostracize them you are responsible for increasing the intermarriage rate."

Rabbi Alony is quick, candid, engaging and, though strictly Orthodox, flexibly humanist. He claims to have raised the standard of Kashruth since he came to the town, and even introduced kosher milk, but he also believes that mixing with young people has taught him to become more compassionate, more liberal.

"I have come to share their problems," he says. "Dignity is part of it, but you can get the dignity through working with the people. It's not a matter of whether they call you rabbi or mister — the title is meaningless. If they see you're doing your best, whether you fail or not is immaterial. You are one of them and you earn their respect. This is the dignity I want."

Of his involvement with the young, Rabbi Alony confides that — although it is in the long-term interests of the community — "I must admit I enjoy every minute of it. This is me."

Rather than a parish butterfly, he'd like to be regarded as a rabbi of the people. He's a member of many committees in the town.

"I have had people coming to me who would never have done so had I not worked for it on a personal basis," he suggests. "A

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: Many bank branches in Manhattan are experiencing a severe shortage of tellers, which is leading to delays in banking business and long lines at windows. One bank official at Chemical explains that parents of young girls who want to work in Manhattan are reluctant to allow their daughters to do so, because of the skyrocketing crime rate.

On a recent CBS-TV broadcast, "A Conversation with Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas," the justice answered critics who complained about his article for Playboy Magazine. "I wrote the article," he explained, "because Playboy reaches 18 million youngsters — and they're the minds I want to reach....LBJ has cut his long hair, which looked so surprising during his talks with Senator McGovern last month."

When Patsy Kelly leaves No, No Nanette in early November, she will be replaced by Martha Raye. Miss Kelly will return to Broadway in the winter in Irene. Her sister is visiting New York for the first time. The last time they saw each other was in Ireland, 60 years ago.

Jerry Stiller will star in the off-broadway 1890 Parisian comedy Boubouroche this winter. Stiller and his wife, Anne Meara, are active in their block association in New York. They were instrumental in the purchase of seven high-powered street lamps with twice the intensity of ordinary city street lights...Theodore White has no plans for retirement. He has a documentary in the works, plans to make a movie, write a play, and is even looking forward to writing The Making of the President, 1980.

Dick Schaap, the NBC sportscaster, has gained back 15 of the 30 pounds he lost. At the Plaza's Oak Room bar he said, "Being in shape isn't a requirement for my job. But I can beat Bobby Fischer and Pancho Gonzales — Fischer at tennis and Gonzales at chess....A fifth-year retrospective of paintings and sculptures by Mrs. R. Handforth Zinsser will be held at the Bodley Gallery September 18. It is the artist's second one-woman show. She is 92."

Xavier Hollander, the exiled ex-madam who wrote The Happy Hooker, is confident that she will be allowed to re-enter the country soon. She plans lecture tours at colleges and will be a judge at the N.Y. Erotic Film Festival. She even made an advance appointment with her beauty parlor...Danny La Rue, London's famous female impersonator, will make his U.S. debut early next year at the Palace, and then play Las Vegas and Miami.

In his new book, King of the Hill, A.E. Hotchner tells of when he was a boy in the summer of 1933. He was sitting in the bleachers in left field at old Sportsman's Park for a Cardinals' baseball game. Joe "Ducky" Medwick, the left-fielder who was voted into the Hall of Fame two years ago, threw young Hotchner a piece of chewing gum on his way out to his position.

"I kept the unchewed gum in my treasure box for years," says Hotchner, who was later to become Hemingway's biographer and screenwriter.

When Hotchner returned to St. Louis to promote the publication of his book, he was taken to the new Musch Memorial Stadium and lunched at the Stadium Club. In the middle of lunch, a waiter presented him with a box of chewing gum, which was sent over by Joe Medwick. He was dining there too with Stan Musial and General Manager Bing Devine.

Murray Schisgal, Joseph Heller and Bruce Jay Friedman will play for the Writers against the Artists in the East Hampton softball game to raise money for Senator McGovern's campaign. All three writers have plays opening in the fall in New York...Bill Cosby and James Earl Jones, who wanted to film an all-black version of Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men, in which they would co-star, were refused the film rights by the late author's estate.

President Georges Pompidou has told the Duchess of Windsor that she can stay as long as she wishes at the Bois de Boulogne home which she and the Duke shared. Although she has given no indication of plans to move, the Paris City Council has received more than 50 applications from people who want to take over tenancy of the home. The Duke paid a nominal monthly rent of $75.

Jerry Lucas, the Knick star, will make his singing debut on The Jerry Lucas Super Kids Day Magic Jamboree on November 24 on ABC-TV. Lucas, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Ohio State, has memorized long portions of The Godfather, the first 200 pages of the Manhattan telephone book, and is a champion at spelling.

"At times I get demoralized. But then I think — No. This is me. Michael Alony. I suppose what I'd really like to see is a Utopian rabbinate."

The Treasure Chest

Of Outstanding Offers and Opportunities

By Alan Shawn Feinstein

Welcome, my friends. Here's what we have for you this week.

First, about those studies of auto and life insurance rates and the report on 14 rules for avoiding unnecessary surgery I wrote about two weeks ago — please note the following: I've been advised that due to the heavy demand for them, there has been a slight delay in filling orders but that all will be filled shortly. So if you haven't received yours yet, it should just be a few more days. (If you haven't sent for these, do — they're not only free but extremely worthwhile. The address is Insurance Commissioner's Office, Insurance Department, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.)

Next, any song writers or potential ones here? If so, send for a free copy of a booklet by Sigmund Romberg, "So You've a Song To Publish." It will tell you just what to do (and what not to do). An invaluable publication for anyone interested in this field and who wants to be sure to avoid the charlatans that invest it. Send your request to the Public Relations Department, American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, ASCAP Building, One Lincoln Plaza, New York, New York 10023.

Interested in making money in your spare time? Send for a free copy of Second Income News, Box 2506, Santa Rosa, California 95405. This bi-monthly magazine explores in depth several fine money-making opportunities each issue. It's by far not the ordinary run-of-the-mill "opportunities" magazine filled mostly with advertisements. This one is good. Definitely worth seeing for anyone looking for a way to augment his income.

Have you ever gone to a dentist and been less than satisfied with the results? There is something you can and should do about it. First, send me a letter about it, giving your name and address in it, the name of the dentist and your complaint. (Please keep a copy of your letter.) Then read this column next week.

Until then, adieu, my friends. Have a good week.

Bishop Admits Leading Hitler-Type Movement

DETROIT — The bishop who presides over the Romanian Orthodox episcopate of America has admitted he led a right-wing Romanian youth movement sympathetic to Adolf Hitler's Germany early in World War II. The Detroit Free Press reported recently.

The Rt. Rev. Valerian D. Trifa of Grass Lake, Michigan, accused by some Jewish groups as having incited anti-Semitic "pogroms" in prewar Romania, admitted to the Free Press he was the leader of 16,000-member National Union of Romanian Students in 1941.

The group was affiliated with the Legion of the Archangel Michael, popularly known as the Iron Guard, of which Bishop Trifa, now 85, was a member.

But the prelate denied Jewish accusations that he directed a slaughter of Jews in Bucharest on January 21, 1941, following a student uprising inspired by the Iron Guard.

"I have never in my life killed anyone, neither Jew or Christian, nor a member of any faith," he said.

"I have never been a soldier, nor have I participated in any way in activities while Romania was at war. I was a political prisoner in Germany, interned in the concentration camps in Buchenwald and Dachau, and carried 44953 as my prisoner identification number."

MUST NEGOTIATE JERUSALEM — Premier Golda Meir has served notice to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that he must agree to direct negotiations with Israel if he hopes to get any part of the Sinai back. She declared on a television interview that Israel's principles for peace remained unchanged despite Sadat's ouster of Soviet military advisers. "Once Egypt starts negotiations there will be concessions on our part," she said.

Feels Internationalization Of Jerusalem Impossible

NEW YORK — "I am absolutely opposed to the internationalization of Jerusalem," Mayor Teddy Kollek reasserts in an interview in "World," a new biweekly. "It sounds so very nice and logical when they talk about it at the United Nations or various foreign offices," he continues, "but internationalization hasn't worked anywhere . . . The citizens of such cities have felt miserable. Leave aside the fact that the Israelis would never accept it; it is a bad idea on its merits . . . It will be impossible to run such a city. It will become a deteriorating city." "It will take a very long time until the world gets used to the fact that the Jews are running Jerusalem," Kollek continues, adding: "Hundreds of thousands of Arabs from outside the country — Christians and Moslems — have visited their holy places while there is still war, no armistice, just a cease-fire. But if the city would come under Jordanian sovereignty again, this would disappear . . .

Nobody in Israel will take that risk. Logic is all against it."

Estimating that "with some effort we can catch up with our housing problem in five or six years," Kollek commented: "It is damn difficult to run a city these days. We haven't learned how to run a city — anywhere. And Jerusalem is a more varied city than any other. It has more problems to solve. I am convinced that long after we have solved all the problems in Vietnam, Taiwan and the Middle East, we will still be struggling with the question of how to live in the cities . . . If things continue on in the course they seem to be taking all over the world, they will have to sentence people in court to four years as mayor of a city."
