PRICE CLIMB

TEL-AVIV—A four room apartment (1100 to 1200 square feet net) cost between IL 110,000 to IL 120,000 at the beginning of the year. Now, in the month of May, the very same dwelling sells for approximately IL 165,000. Anyone who purchased such an apartment in Tel-Aviv at the beginning of the year, has effectively earned 50% on his investment in a few short months. Experts in this field are even suggesting that in a few more months the same apartment will cost about double what it did on January 1st. According to these sources, there is simply no prospect of a reversal in this steeply climbing price spiral, because the circumstances responsible for it are not likely to change.

Latvian Court Finds Four Riga Jews Guilty

MOSCOW —The Latvian Supreme Court last week found four Riga Jews guilty of anti-Soviet activity and sentenced them to terms ranging from one to three years in prison camps.

In a separate development, it was learned that Simas Kudirka, the Lithuanian seaman who was returned to the Soviet authorities after having jumped aboard a United States Coast Guard cutter last fall seeking political sanctuary, was sentenced last week to 10 years on treason charges by the Lithuanian Supreme Court.

Tass, the Soviet press agency, said that the four-day trial of the Jews in Riga, held in a workers club, ended when the judge, Luka I. Lotko, read the sentences. Arkady A. Shpilberg, a 33-year-old engineer, received three years. The prosecutor, Dmitry F. Chibisov, asked for a four-year term. The other defendants received what the prosecutor had asked; Mikhail Z. Shepshelovich, a 28-year-old worker, two years; Boris M. Maftser, a 24-year-old engineer, and Ruth I. Aleksandrovich, a 23-year-old nurse, got one-year terms.

The sentences given the four defendants were milder than those imposed in trials in Leningrad last winter and earlier last month, in which some defendants received sentences of 15 years in camps —the maximum term of detention in Soviet law.

This was presumably because the Riga defendants had not been charged either with participating or assisting in plans to hijack a plane. Twenty-one persons —19 of them Jews —were convicted in the Leningrad trials. They were linked to an apparent plot by 12 persons to hijack a plane last June as part of a plan to flee to Israel.

Nine other Jews are awaiting trial in Kishinev on charges believed similar to those brought against the Riga defendants. The four Riga Jews were charged with reprinting and distributing "subversive" and "slanderous" material about the Soviet state, a crime punishable by up to seven years imprisonment. The exact nature of the material has not been made known, but presumably it covers petitions sent abroad complaining of Soviet policy toward Jews not wishing to assimilate and typewritten material on various aspects of Jewish life here.

Because of wide foreign interest in the trials of the Jews, Tass has distributed accounts of the trials, usually omitting the defendants' side of the case.

The Tass accounts were intended only for foreign subscribers to the Tass service. Soviet newspapers have printed less about the trial than has been sent abroad.

However, there was no publicity about the trial of Mr. Kudirka, in line with the blackout on news about the Lithuanian since he was turned over to Soviet authorities last November 23.

On that day, Mr. Kudirka, who is 32 years old, leaped from the Sovetskaya Litva, a fishing vessel, when she was tied to the Coast Guard cutter Vigilant and asked for asylum.

The two boats were anchored off Martha's Vineyard, Mass., while Soviet-American talks took place aboard the Soviet boat on fishing matters. Top Coast Guard officials, however, decided without informing the White House to let other Soviet seamen come aboard and drag Mr. Kudirka back to their boat.

In the aftermath of the incident, two top Coast Guard officials were allowed to retire from the service.

Dissident sources here in March reported that Mr. Kudirka had been arrested after his return to Lithuania and was under investigation for treason. Under Soviet law, attempting to flee the country is regarded as treason and carries with it a possible death sentence.

The case was heard last week, according to those sources.

Chaim Gross To Unveil Works At Dedication Day Ceremonies

Chaim Gross, one of the world's foremost sculptors, will personally unveil two of his works at the Dedication Day ceremonies marking the opening of the new Jewish Community Center building at 401 Elm Grove Avenue on Sunday, June 13.

Mr. Gross' busts of Milton Sapinsley and Max L. Grant will be displayed for the first time during the formal Dedication Dinner and Dance which will cap the dedication ceremonies on Sunday evening.

Mr. Sapinsley and Mr. Grant served as the first two presidents of the Center in its founding years, more than 45 years ago.

Austrian-born Mr. Gross came to this country in 1921 where his first art ventures were water color paintings. He branched into sculpture while attending the Education Alliance Art School in New York.

After studying at the Beaux Arts Institute of Design in New York, he became a teacher of wood carving at the Cummington School in Cummington, Massachusetts.

His works are among the permanent collections in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Brooklyn Museum, the Tel Aviv Museum and others.

Gross' "The Performers," a magnificent outdoor bronze, will stand at the west entrance to the University of Rhode Island's new Fine Arts Center. Another Gross work, "The Acrobats," will be on permanent display at the List Museum now under construction at Brown University.

His busts of Mr. Sapinsley and Mr. Grant will be permanently displayed in the new Center building's Adult Lounge and Hall of Honor, on the building's main level.

Mr. Gross will be introduced on Sunday evening by Bo Bernstein, local advertising executive, and a personal friend of the sculptor.

The formal dedication ceremonies will take place on Sunday afternoon, beginning at 3:45 p.m. with the dedication and blessing of the Mezzuzah on the Center's doorstep.

The Mezzuzah will be nailed in place by Harlan J. Espo, president of the Center, with blessings by Rabbi Saul Leeman of Temple Beth Torah, chairman of the Rhode Island Association of Rabbis, and Cantor Ivan E. Periman of Temple Emanu-El.

After this brief ceremony, guests will move outdoors, if the weather permits, to the Center's rear parking lot for the formal dedication ceremonies. In the event of inclement weather, these ceremonies will be held in the new building's gymnasium.

The afternoon's ceremonies, beginning at 4 p.m., are open to everyone in the community, and will be preceded by tours of the new building, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

After a series of welcoming remarks by Dr. Samuel Pritzker, general chairman of the Dedication Week program, there will be greetings from government officials and representatives of the Jewish and general community.

The formal transfer of the keys will then take place—from architect Lester J. Millman and builders Samuel Molony and Joseph Rubien to representatives of the Center which will include Bertram L. Bernhardt, chairman of the Building Campaign, Mr. Espo, and Dr. Bernard Carp, executive director of the Center.

Special guests at the Center's dedication ceremonies will be representatives of Jewish Community Centers from all over the northeastern United States. In addition to a special tour of the facilities, these guests will attend a reception in their honor at 3 p.m.

Center President, Mr. Espo, this week issued a personal invitation to the community to attend the Center's dedication.

The Dedication Day program will be followed by a full week of special activities through Sunday, June 20. After that date, it is expected that the new building's facilities will be opened for a summer program that will continue until the fall, when the full range of Center activities will be offered.

Jewish Community Center To Open Two Day Camps

Almost lost in the excitement of the opening and dedication of the new Jewish Community Center building is the coming opening of the Center's summer day camps.

For more than a quarter of a century the Center's day camps have served thousands of Rhode Island boys and girls with a day camp program recognized as among the area's most outstanding.

Small camper groupings with a high proportion of counselors have been a trademark of Center day camping and the high standards of facilities, staff, program and administration have earned Center camps the approval of the American Camping Association ever since that organization began certifying standards for summer day camps.

Today the Center makes use of three summer day camp sites, one of them the new Center building where Camp Samil Fry, for junior campers aged four and five, will spend their summer under the direction of Lola Schwartz, director of children's activities of the Center, and her counselor staff.

The Camp Small Fry program, geared to the needs and capabilities of the younger child, includes swimming and sports, crafts, games, music, trips and nature stories.

Older campers spend their days at the Center's two country day camp sites. Camp Centerland, oldest of the two installations, is located in Scituate on the Pawtuxet River. Here, more than 20 acres of woodland and playing field provide the background for a day camping program for boys and girls from first grade through age 13 in three special camp divisions, each with a program particularly designed to meet the needs and interests of the age group it serves.

Swimming, hiking, picnics and outings, cookouts, campcrafts and pioneering, arts and crafts, sports, overnight campouts, music and nature lore and special nature activities hold the interest of Center campers throughout the eight week camp season.

A second camp site, in Johnston, is located on the Langford Farm. Once a working farm, this more than 40 acre location includes nearly half a mile of waterfront on Simmonsville Lake and a huge woodland area. Older campers enjoy pioneering, nature activities, boating, fishing and many other activities here.

Both Center camps are firmly rooted in the Center's commitment to Judaism and many of the camps' activities are designed with this in mind. One of the highlights of the camp week is the regular Sabbath service held outdoors.

Camp Centerland is directed by Aaron Segal and a staff that includes three counselor staff members with each camp group. Bus transportation is provided for all campers.

Both camps open their 1971 summer season on Tuesday, July 6. Camp Small Fry has one six week period beginning on that date. Campers at Centerland may register for either or both of the four week periods that begin on July 6 and August 2.

Enrollment information is available at the Center office.

Carlone Retires After 41 Years

Edmund J. Carlone, vice president in Industrial National Bank's Commercial Loan Department, will retire this week after 41 years with the bank.

R.I. Conference On Soviet Jewry Asks Community To Send Letters

The Rhode Island Conference on Soviet Jewry has recommended that at this time, in order to help those Soviet Jews who have been sentenced or who are going to be on trial shortly, a letter writing campaign be started in an attempt to sway world opinion.

The contents of two aerograms, which can be purchased at any post office for 15c, follow. It is important that the sender include his name on the return address and also personally sign the letter.

The first one is addressed to Premier Alexei Kosygin at The Kremlin in Moscow.

"I write to you today in dismay at the recently completed trial of nine Jews in Leningrad. These young men were tried because they stood up and asked for the right to live as Jews in the Soviet Union. There was not a complaint against the ideology of the government of the U.S.S.R. but a cry for freedom to live their own lives, to maintain their national identity, or to leave the U.S.S.R. for the homeland of their ancestors in Israel.

"As Premier of the U.S.S.R., and as a world leader who has publicly stated in Paris the 'right of every individual to emigrate to the country of his choice,' I appeal to you to take every possible action to correct the travesty of justice that has occurred in Leningrad and to publicly reaffirm the Soviet position that every minority group has a right to maintain its own national and cultural identity."

The second, which is addressed to The Honorable Anatoly F. Dobrynin, Ambassador, Embassy of the U.S.S.R., 1125 Sixteenth Street, Washington, D.C., reads:

"I am writing to you today to protest the recent trial of nine Soviet Jews in Leningrad and the sentences meted out to them. These unfortunate young Jews and those awaiting trial in Riga and Kishinev are not guilty of any crimes against the Soviet government nor against Communist ideology. Their only crime is that they have stood up and asked for the right to live as Jews in their country - the U.S.S.R. If their country does not want them, they have appealed for permission to leave the Soviet Union.

You, as the representative of the U.S.S.R. in this country, can convey to your government the feelings of the American people. I ask that you do this. I ask that your government be told that Americans expect a great nation to live up to its commitments to human rights (viz. the U.N. Universal Declaration of Human Rights)."

How To Pick a Lawyer

How long has it been since you have had to use—and pay for—the services of a lawyer?

If it hasn't been long, you won't be surprised to learn that a single hour of a lawyer's time today may cost from $20 to $50 and that many lawyers charge $100-up for one hour of work.

Nor will you be surprised to learn that a sticky divorce may cost $3,000 to $5,000 or more in legal fees for EACH spouse; that legal fees when you buy or sell a house may amount to 1 percent of the price of the house; that representation in court may cost $250 to $300 a day; that the typical "contingency fee" (in which the lawyer collects only if he wins the case for his client) may run 20 to 40 percent of the amount awarded by the court.

Yet, never has your need for legal services been as great as now—whether you are an individual wanting to draw up a contract or a will, a couple wanting to adopt a baby or get a divorce.

Let's say you have never before had any reason to consult a lawyer and you have no idea how to find one. Millions of you fit this description, so here goes with basic rules to guide you.

(1) Shop for a family lawyer BEFORE you need his services.

(2) Find out if there is a local Lawyer Referral Service which will advise you for a fee of only $5 $10 whether your problem actually requires legal assistance, and if so, which local lawyer can handle it. The local Bar Assn. or the telephone yellow pages can direct you to such a service, now available in over 260 cities.

(3) Check your prospective lawyers' reputation for competence, good judgment and reliability with friends, other clients, bank officers, your labor union or fraternal club, real estate agents. Also check the Martindale Hubbell Directory, which should be in your local library and which lists and rates U.S. law firms.

Ed Dooley, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, was a Dartmouth all-American. His arms are so strong that six presidents have felt his muscle.

Ben Lyon, the screen star who moved to England with his wife, Bebe Daniels, now deceased, is flying to New York, Balt. and

Only In America

The American Dollar
 By Harry Golden

The interesting phenomenon about the dollar crisis is that the banks are unflappable. They are perfectly capable of explaining the reasons for the crisis in a jargon no one understands.

I imagine the tourists didn't respond with the same show of equanimity. If some cashier behind a steel cage told me my American Express checks were suspect, it would be like hitting me over the head with the news that the world is really flat.

I would protest that they told me it was round in grammar school and now it is possible for so many grammar school teachers to be mistaken? I would argue that while I know it looks flat, that is all the more reason to believe it is round.

In short, what has happened to our universe when we populate a flat earth and, no one wants our American Express Traveler's Checks?

I have no remedy to cure the ills of the dollar except to suggest if Mr. Nixon is going to invade another country he invade on behalf of the dishonored buck instead of on behalf of those political hacks in Saigon.

If anyone survives this assault on our fiscal integrity, it will, of course, be the bankers.

Now let me apologize. All my life I have opposed stereotypes. I deplored the stage Irishman and the stage Jew. I have heaped scorn on those who mythologize about the Negro's sexual powers.

I think there are policemen who are courteous, kind, efficient, and honest. By extension, I must deplore the stage banker, the computerized man who evicts widows on behalf of the interest rate. But the banker is not a stereotype.

If what happened to the dollar happened to our foreign policy, they wouldn't need the hippies to stop Washington traffic. The entire State Department would be home nursing new-born ulcers.

But the bankers can live in a world where the dollar has no value. Imagine an embassy in New York with a flag pole flying a flag a half-inch higher than Old Glory. Why, the street below would be crowded with hard hats all armed with hack saws. But no one understands enough about the buck and the gold drain to mount a serious demonstration outside a subway kiosk let alone invest Wall Street.

The bankers have revealed that the source of the problem is simply the fact that we do not have enough gold to buy back the dollars in Europe. Big news! We don't have enough money to buy rat poison for the slums let alone buy dollars.

Thus we must return to basic questions: Is the dollar crisis good for the Jews or bad for the Jews? If they deal in foreign currencies, it is bad for the Jews. If they are broke, as some Jews are these days, it is probably not bad.

Anshei Slavita and Anshei Kovno

By BERYL SEGAL

When two people are joined together it is customary for the parents of the bride and the parents of the bridegroom to tell of their Yihus, their distinguished pedigree, their illustrious family, their impeccable origin. In the merger of Temple Beth David and the Tiferet Yisroel-Anshei Kovno, which will take place on Sunday, June 6, the Yihus is great on both sides, and we are at a loss where to begin. But as Temple Beth David is older in years we will tell first of that congregation.

Beth David is a combination of three and possibly four congregations that existed in Providence at that time.

First there was the Russian Congregation Agudath Hakolei. The name means approximately 'Communitywide Association, or Union.' They applied for a charter and got one in 1897. The Charter reads: 'For Religious Services.' No place of these services is given, and we may assume that the congregation gathered in private homes or in a hired hall as was the custom in those days.

Then there was 'Keshet Yisroel,' meaning Bond of Israel. This group left a record of its activities and that record consists of a beautifully illustrated Pinkos. We are sorry that the scribe of this Pinkos is unknown. He must have been a Scribe of Torahs, since, unlike other Pinkosim, the Keshet Yisroel Pinkos is entirely written in script. The hand was steady, one used to write scripts of the Torah. The script is as fresh as if it were written yesterday.

The front page of the Record Book, the Pinkos, reads:

Pinkos of the Hebra Mishnayos and Ain Yaacov, of the Synagogue Keshet Yisroel of Providence. The year: 'And in His Laws does he meditate day and night.' 1907 (5667).

The first of the By-Laws of the Hebra is: 'The purpose of this Hebra and its goal is to study one chapter of Mishnayes every morning and a few folios of Ain Yaacov every evening.'

Such were the early immigrants of our city.

The translation of the Pinkos was made by Rabbi George B. Schwartz of the Congregation Beth David, and is, in the archives of the Rhode Island Jewish Historical Association. It was placed there by the late Henry Brill, President of Beth David for 22 years.

And there was a congregation Ahavath Achim Anshei Slowitz, and the meaning of the name is Brotherly Love of the People of Slowitz. Slowitz was a city in Russia famous the world over for its printing presses. It is of particular importance for the printing of the Talmud. A Slowitz Talmud by the Brothers Schapiro was a guarantee of accuracy and perfection.

There are indications of a fourth group, but since not much is known about it, we will only say that they had their home on Shawmut near Chalkstone Avenue. Chalkstone and Shawmut figure prominently in the records of the beginning of the century as sites for Congregations and Hevros, or Societies.

All these congregations merged into Beth David, the House of, or Household of David. In the year 1914 they built a little Shul on Chalkstone Avenue, hard by the railroad tracks. Whenever we approached this spot we knew that Providence was not far away. We took another look at the Shul and started to collect our belongings to alight from the train. It was a quaint little Shul, not much on the outside, but warm and cozy inside, with the Aron Kodesh, the Holy Ark, the work of a volunteer artisan, looking down at you when you entered.

But time proved the Shul not so convenient as it was picturesque. The whistle of the engine as it passed the Shul interrupted the prayers. Trains ran in those days more often than they do today. The foundations weakened because of the constant rattle of the trains. And the neighborhood deteriorated fast because of the building of commercial houses and the flight of Jewish homes from the vicinity.

It was decided to build a new Shul, and the story of the acquisition of the land, the construction of the building, and the financial difficulties that plagued the congregation year after year, for many years, and the decision to change from an Orthodox to a Conservative Temple, is worth retelling. But the people are all still here. They know the story well. We will, perhaps, return to Temple Beth David again.

Suffice it to say, that today Temple Beth David, the people of Slowitz, and Anshei Kovno, the People of Kovno, are merging and it is time to introduce the other party, the Anshei-Kovno-Tiferet Yisroel.

The city of Kovno, in Russia, is known for its great Yeshiva, and for the famous Rabbis who dwelt there. Kovno supplied instructors for Yeshivos all over Russia. In 1900 Cantor Abraham Cohen arrived in Providence, and around him gathered people who came from the vicinity of Kovno, and since they had a Hazan, a Cantor, they hired a tenement upstairs from a Bakery on Shawmut Street and gathered for the purpose of worship and study. They were joined soon by a congregation Tiferet Yisroel, the Glory of Israel, and they called their Synagogue Tiferet Yisroel-Anshei Kovno. A small group that existed in Providence and called themselves Shomrei Shabos merged with them, and for a while, according to Rev. Morris Drazin, the Synagogue was also known as the Shomrei Shabos Shul. They were a closely knit congregation, spending a goodly part of the Shabos in Shul. The women were in the habit of preparing Kugel and other delicacies from their own oven and bringing these for Sholosh Seudos, the Third Meal of Shabos which the congregation ate together, singing Zmiros and listening to a talk on the meaning of Shabos.

Rev. Drazin, the Shohet of Providence, was the Reader and the Chanter and the Rebbe of the Shul. He performed all the functions of a Rabbi. Before him there was Zeev (Velvel) Mallat, also a Shohet, a Ritual Slaughterer, and a man of great erudition. He served the Shul as Hazan and expounder of Torah and Mishnayes. The Shul was fortunate in having men who could take the place of a Rabbi. Such a man was Reb Hayim Mordecai (Max) Sandier. He was the Rabbi, the Hazan, the Reader of the Torah, and he moved the hearts of men and women by his sermons on Yom Kippur night, during the Kol Nidre services.

The Anshei Kovnon never engaged a Rabbi, partly because they were too small in number and could not afford it, and partly because they were so blessed with men of learning who could take the place of a Rabbi. They worshipped in their little Shul, nothing more than a converted house, until about three years ago when they had to give way to progress, a highway going through Orms Street, just as the largest, oldest and most beautiful Shul in the North End, Sons of Zion, had to do.

On the evening of June 6, history, Jewish history in Providence, will stand at the curtains and wait for a new chapter to open. The chapter will be known as the Anshei Kovno and Anshei Slavita, Beth David and Tiferet Yisroel, two congregations of such great Yihus, forming a new Synagogue. Let it be an auspicious hour.

Let it be an auspicious hour.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK: Arthur Goldberg, the Memorial Day speaker at Hyde Park, lunched at 21. He told of another visit to Hyde Park, to Eleanor Roosevelt's funeral. He flew there in President Kennedy's plane. It was the first time Goldberg had spoken to JFK since his appointment to the Supreme Court.

During that trip, JFK spoke of his post-White House plans. He hoped to buy a small newspaper somewhere. He added: 'I'm sorry for the next president who's not a lawyer. As a lawyer he'd have no problem getting adjusted to private life.'

At Temple Emanu-El's traditionally solemn confirmation services the other day the 68 teen-age confirmands sang "If We Only Have Love" from "Jacques Brel Is Alive & Well" . . . Joe Papp, who produced the original "Hair" downtown, gets 3 per cent of Michael Butler's Broadway production. So far its brought Papp's Shakespeare Festival Theater $430,000 . . . William Morris, the ex-editor of Harper's magazine, may return to the Texas newspaper job he'd left.

The Boca Raton Hotel in Florida was sold last week. It once belonged to Meyer Schine, who sold his holdings for $75 million. This included bowling alleys. Schine at first resisted expanding into that field. A salesman convinced him by taking him to a crowded alley and saying:

"Listen. Whenever you hear a bowling pin drop, think of a cash register ringing up two cents."

BAR MITZVAH: Joel Irving Schwartz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Schwartz of 56 Greaton Drive, became Bar Mitzvah on April 25 at Congregation Ohave Shalom.

A dinner-dance reception was held following the services. One hundred and ten guests attended from Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York.

Joel is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Schwartz of 29 Wriston Drive and Mrs. Jennie Press of 55 Hamilton Street, Pawtucket.

One evening, recently, we held one of our more important tournaments in which many of the better players participated. I was quite astonished when I examined the traveling score that accompanied today's hand and noted the results shown. In one of the sections only one Declarer made twelve tricks to receive an absolute "Top" yet what I call only normal play should easily enable Declarer to obtain that score. No lead can stop it, the tricks are just there as you will see.

Mrs. Elliot Slack and Mrs. Philip Finkle were North and South. North was Dealer, no one vulnerable. The bidding:

N	E	S	W
2♥	P	1♥	P
4♥	P	3♦	P

Some players opened the South hand Two No Trump and ended in game there which was not nearly as good as the Heart contract. The others did play in Hearts. The South player shown above, when she heard her partner's raise to two, did not give some thought to slam. She even probed a bit for it by bidding three Diamonds on her rebid. This was absolutely forcing and simply asked partner whether she had a good or bad two Heart bid. North happened to have an excellent Two Heart bid so showed it by now jumping right to game. If she were on the lower side she would have bid only three. South thought a bit about going on to six then decided against it. As it so happened she would have gained nothing by bidding the slam for her score was the top score anyhow. In rubber Bridge, of course, there would have been a considerable difference.

It mattered not what West led although a Trump lead would have to be carefully won by Dummy's King. You will see why shortly. Most Wests led a Diamond and now after winning in her own hand Declarer stopped to count. She could see that if the Hearts broke normally she had a loser there. There were no losers in the black suits but there were two Diamond losers. What could she do with those? Easy, she could ruff them with the two small Trumps in Dummy.

Apparently the other Declarers drew two rounds of Trumps and then tried to ruff out the Club Queen which failed to drop. Our Declarer played a high Diamond at trick two and then ruffed a small one low. Now back to her hand with a Spade and the other small Diamond also ruffed low. You will note that she did not play the two high Diamonds first for by the time she got around to ruffing the fourth Diamond someone might be out and overruff at the cost of a trick.

After the second ruff, she played the Trump King and then returned to her hand with the Club Ace and drew the second round of Trumps. When both followed she faced her hand on the table saying: "I will concede one Trump trick, the rest are mine."

If a Trump was led and she carelessly let it ride around to her hand as possibly someone did she would now have to ruff one of the Diamonds with the Trump King. This would establish a second Trump trick for the defenders. This is why I stated before that with a Trump lead Declarer must think ahead and carefully win it with that King so Diamonds can be ruffed low. At any rate every Declarer should have made six, even the poorer ones for this hand is not that difficult. They didn't.

Moral: True, Trumps should be drawn unless something better can be done with them. One of the best tasks they perform is ruffing losers. Before drawing think about that.

Jewish Twin Brothers From USSR Will Receive Yeshiva Degrees

NEW YORK — Jewish twin brothers from the Soviet Union who could not speak English when they arrived in the United States two years ago are celebrating their new found academic and cultural freedom with twin bachelor's degrees from Yeshiva University prior to entering the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in August.

The 23-year-old brothers, Gabriel and Sllim Goldberger, who live with their family in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, emigrated from Riga in the spring of 1969.

Since then, with the aid of the New York Association for New Americans, a part of HIAS; Yeshiva University faculty and friends they have gone through a crash course on Americanization. Discussing their life in Russia, the twins said, "We were made to feel like strangers in our native land." They were expelled from the university in Riga after school officials learned they wished to emigrate. "We waited five years for permission to leave the country: Month after month we'd visit the Interior Ministry whose only reply was 'You ask, we decide.' There is no logic to their method of issuing exit permits. Suddenly you are told you can go, and you might have to leave within a few days," they said. They explained that applying for an exit permit was tantamount to announcing your disloyalty as a citizen, "with the consequences leading to loss of job or being expelled from a university and losing all prospects of life in the USSR."

They deemed the continuing demonstrations, producing a new world awareness of the plight of Soviet Jewry, a major factor in the Soviet government's relaxation of emigration restrictions. "Soviet policy towards its Jewish population actually hasn't changed," they said, "It is the Jews who have changed." They contrasted the current period with that of the 1950's, when the government sent their father to jail.

"He had been elected to head the city's Jewish community," they said, "and was soon approached by the KGB (secret police) who demanded that he turn informer against his brethren. He refused, and was sent to jail for eight months." Today's Soviet Jewish youth, more active and outspoken, do not relate to the more terrible periods of Soviet history, they said, "They are not heroes, but they realize that for them, deprived of their culture and tradition, schools and synagogues, life for a Jew there is no life at all." The Goldberger twins' life has been altogether different in their adopted land. They have worked during the summer for New York's Urban Corps in a hospital and laboratory, their father is a supervisor of kashruth and their 24-year-old sister, a pianist, is preparing to graduate from the Manhattan School of Music. Their mother is a working housewife. The brothers said they did not hate the Russians. They feel that what is most important about the recent international atmosphere is the new sense of identity that has arisen between American and Soviet Jewry.

SOVIET JEWRY A POLITICAL FOOTBALL

TEL-AVIV—Although the number of Soviet Jews now resident in Israel is small, party leaders are convinced that a mass immigration will be forthcoming from the USSR, which will play a decisive role in future Knesset elections. This would account for the competition now evident in capturing the loyalty of the present Soviet immigrants. At Herut headquarters there are frequent receptions in their honor, and the United Labor Party arranges social gatherings and tours for the new Soviet olim. According to the local press, it would appear that Herut has an edge in the competition. Many of the newcomers are from Baltic countries which have a strong Zionist Revisionist movement that has influenced the youth, and which views the Herut party in Israel as the logical heir of Jabotinsky. By all calculations it would seem that the competition for the hearts and minds of Soviet immigration will persist for a long time into the future.

R.I. Jewish Bowling Congress Names Israel Man Of The Year

Richard Israel, Rhode Island Attorney-General, the only Republican candidate to be elected to state office in 1970, has been named Jewish Man of the Year by the Rhode Island Jewish Bowling Congress. He will be presented with the award at the 19th Annual Banquet and Sports Award Night of the Congress which will be held on Monday, June 7, at the Colonial Hilton Inn in Cranston, it has been announced by Abbott Dressler, president, and Alan Hopfenberg, first vice president in charge of arrangements for the banquet.

The Rhode Island Jewish Athlete of the Year and receiver of the Wally Sundlin, Jr., Award, is Arnie Berman of Short Hills, New Jersey, a junior at Brown University. The 6'7", 210 pound basketball player had probably the best overall season in Brown basketball history a year ago, and if he continues his pace will easily become Brown's all time leading scorer. Berman ranks high on several national and regional statistical categories and has broken an all-time Brown free throw record.

Gerry Philbin, all-pro defensive end, member of the all-time all-AFL team as selected by the Pro Football Hall of Fame and twice an AFL all-star, of the New York Jets will be guest speaker. Toastmaster at the banquet will be Jack Comley, moderator of "Talk-Back," the often controversial day-time telephone talk program on WJAR radio.

Receiving the Bert Summer Memorial Award for Service to Sports of the Congress will be Bill Kutneski, athlete, coach and educator. Mr. Kutneski, who is principal of Cranston High School East, has been active in sports since his high school days, and is now chairman of the Rhode Island Principals' Committee on Athletics.

Individual members of the Congress and Congress teams will also receive awards for their performance during the past year.

Hello Again!

AN EXPLOSION: This one is bound to happen. It's in the cards or it's written somewhere in invisible ink that is becoming visible. But it's got to happen and when it does—ZOWIE! It's the impending meeting between Don McNamee and Tommy Dragon, the two foremost leather-pushers in this territory today. Yes, and in any territory as far as that statement goes. It's a meeting that carries everything necessary for ballyhoo, for suspense and, most important for making the welkin ring in the form of filling the cash drawers in Danny Norton's R.I. Auditorium box office.

BEFORE AND BEFORE: It's happened before and it's a well known format with assurance for success. Back in the so-called halcyon days of boxing at Marleville A.C. (It was not called 'Gardens' at that time) two of the magnetic attractions for ring shows were Young Montreal and Terry Martin, both contenders in the bantamweight class. And it was said, "If they meet, one will have to lose." Obviously, my dear Watson. But down through the years, while they shied away from a match that would drop a drawing card from the top spot, the promoters have always realized the "draw" a match between a pair of local rivals presented. And so matches have been arranged and the two popular contestants have met, not only once but several times while attracting big crowds—yeh—big money gates.

THE ROSCOMMON GIANT: Jim Coffey, the Roscommon Giant, and Fred Fulton (They called him some sort of a plasterer) came along at the same time, seeking a match with Dempsey or Willard. They eventually had to meet for the right to it and one was eliminated.

NEARER HOME: Jack Sharkey and Jim Maloney were prominent contenders at the same time, each riding his own wave of popularity, the discussions concerning their relative merits creating new enthusiasm for boxing. Came the time when they had to meet; did it more than once; and attracted big crowds and gates; Maloney being relegated to the role of an also-ran while Sharkey scaled the heavyweight heights.

AND ALSO: When the "Greats" in boxing history are mentioned, who would leave out the names of Benny Leonard, Lew Tendler, Jack Britton, Ted Kid Lewis, among the Immortals. Leonard and Tendler met a number of times and so did Britton and Lewis, their ring battles being among the finest examples.

AND SO: Although Eddie Imondi doesn't consider Dragon ready for McNamee and although Charlie Lagor does think his star charge, Dragon is ready, sooner or later those local boys will toe the scratch facing each other in the ring. And if each keep progressing, that meeting will attract one of the bigger gates in the history of the game hereabouts. In the meantime, McNamee is being headlined in another boxing show that is scheduled for R. I. Auditorium on June 14. And, also, in the meantime, Don is keeping his eyes on the light-heavyweight title held by Bob Foster. Wouldn't it be something if he won it and then defended it against Dragon. It would be a "first" with two Rhode Island boys battling for a world title. It could happen.

HOPPING ABOUT A BIT: At one time the "Bowling Green" at the foot of Neutaconkanut Hill was a thing of beauty. Have you seen it lately? Attention City Fathers! Those police dogs are beauties but please strengthen the kennels lest someone lets them loose—or more probable—they crash through the barriers themselves. They might bite you, too—so—take a look, eh. In these times of uneasiness and turmoil, it would be a good idea to bring back or reproduce "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse". A little gentleman baseball player with the Caruso team of the Elmwood Little League is a budding bigger star of the future. Al Smith will bring more fame to a well known name while pitching and hitting if predictions come true. They attended the happy breakfast when the Reds-Rangers tie-up was announced. Who followed Sage and Tom Pucci to the wrong room, thinking they were heading for the breakfast? And with that—CARRY ON!

Your Money's Worth

(4) Find out which legal services and specialists are offered by the law firm as a whole—or if services you might need are not provided, whether the firm has access to top outside specialists. For instance, among legal services a firm might offer are: drawing a will, planning and serving as executor of your estate; representing you in court if you're involved in a suit or an arrest; preparing a separation agreement or divorce; steering you to a competent insurance agent, tax advisor, realtor; drawing up and reviewing contracts of all kinds; dealing with zoning matters; resolving legal disputes with neighbors, landlord, creditors, etc.

(5) Be immediately suspicious of any lawyer who tries to lure you with the promise of an unusually fat court settlement in, say, a negligence case of divorce.

(6) Concentrate instead on whether a prospective lawyer's key concern is in preventing costly legal confrontations and in making all reasonable efforts to keep you OUT of court.

(7) Most important, discuss with care the fees your family lawyer may charge for various services. Generally, these five factors will influence the charge; the difficulty of your job; the time invested in your case; the good the services have done you; office and other costs associated strictly with your, your ability to pay. Despite these variables, at least ask in advance what basic hourly rate the lawyer charges and also the basic rate for each day spent in court on your behalf. At least get some estimates on costs of tackling your specific legal problems.

(8) And be sure you—and your spouse—like and trust the lawyer you finally choose to protect you and your family.

You will need a lawyer over the years—so go back to that first rule and choose him or her before the need and then use the other rules to help you choose him or her wisely. A good lawyer will more than make his fees in terms of the money he saves you and the costly, exhausting legal snarls he is able to prevent.

currency of some 200 million deutschemerk and an even larger flow in that currency is expected this year. According to Bank Leumi's Chairman, Dr. Ernst Lehman, the upgrading of European currency at the expense of the American dollar is tantamount to a devaluation of the American dollar.

JERUSALEM — Several hundred American "hippies" have asked the Absorption Department of the Jewish Agency to assist them in establishing their autonomous settlements in Israel, it was disclosed here by Abraham Rosenman, director of assistance for the Agency department. He said that the applications were made by young people in their twenties, most of them with a college education. According to Mr. Rosenman, these youngsters are completely disillusioned with the materialism of America and want to flee the polluted urban centers in the United States, where people live lonely lives in fear of violence. The Americans emphasized that the settlements they plan will strictly outlaw the use of narcotics.

 HOWARD JOHNSON'S
SODA 3 FOR 79¢ QUART BOTTLES

MRS. FRIEDA NEMZOFF, assistant director of records at Rhode Island College, retired on Friday, May 28, after 26 years of service over a 41-year span. At a farewell party, she was presented an official college chair.

Mrs. Nemzoff (formerly married to the late Cantor Jacob Hohenemser) served as secretary to the president of RIC from 1930 to 1944. She later became academic scheduling officer and, this year, assistant director of records.

She also served on the board of the Rhode Island Tuberculosis League and was secretary of the Jewish Family & Children's Service. Before beginning work at RIC, she was director of Camp Tel Noar.

She and Samuel Nemzoff, who were married in 1970, will make their home at 7 Holland Avenue, Newton, Massachusetts.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

By Roger E. Spear

New Name May Portend New Image for NL Ind.

Q: I purchased National Lead 20 years ago and have always been pleased with its performance and dividend return. Last year the dividend was cut, the stock dropped in price and now the name has been changed to NL Industries. Shall I sell or hold on? J. A.

A: The collapse in 1970 earnings, which precipitated the 42% reduction in the dividend rate, was caused by lower sales, the GM strike and continued weakness in titanium dioxide pigment prices. Titanium pigment, which contributed 74% of profits in the late 1950's, produced only 27% of the total in the 1960's. However, scarcity of the primary source of titanium may lead to firmer prices. Absence of the auto strike will also boost results for the Doehler-Jarvis division which sells two-thirds of its production to this industry.

By 1972, NL's $70 million 45,000-ton magnesium plant should be shipping commercially. The potential for magnesium, particularly in the automotive market, could lend some glamor to a heretofore conservative cyclical issue. After sitting out a decade of downtrending share prices, this is not the time to sell.

Q: What do you think is causing the price of Gino's stock to drop? Is it a good long-term investment? A. M.

A: Gino's operates 311 company-owned fast-food restaurants concentrated on the East and West coasts. Last year 98 new units were added and 60 are planned for this year. Mainly, expansion has been financed internally, although long-term debt more than doubled in 1970 to $20.63 million. In March, 1971, a $3.5 million lease-back arrangement covering 9 restaurants was announced.

A deficit of 5 cents a share was reported for the first quarter, despite a 27% increase in volume. While newly opened units have lifted sales, opening costs and reduced traffic at older units have penalized earnings and therefore share price. Deferred development charges equal to 53 cents a share will be amortized over the next five years. Until earnings recover, I would avoid this issue.

Recovery Seen For Phillips Lamp

Q: What is your view on Phillips Lamp, purchased at 18? J. N.

A: This international electronics giant had a discouraging year in 1970, with earnings off 7% to $1.11 a share, despite a 16% gain in sales to an all-time high of $4.2 billion. The poor performance reflected sluggish economic conditions in the U.S., which absorbs 13% of sales, and sharply higher labor and material costs. A cost-cutting program, expansion of overseas markets and an upturn in the business climate in the U.S. should turn profits around this year.

Q: I have E bonds dating from 1941 which are soon coming due. Should I replace these with other Treasury issues? A. S.

A: Because of a recent Treasury announcement you will be able to continue holding these bonds. The Treasury has extended maturities another 10 years on E bonds purchased between May, 1941 and April, 1952. This was announced as being the third and final extension for the series, which can be exchanged for H bonds at any time prior to maturity. Interest will be paid at the rate prevailing when the bond enters the extension period; and at present this rate is 5 1/2%.

Q: I have a sizable position in Dymo Industries and would like your opinion on the company's future. R. L.

A: Although Dymo's 9-month sales (through Mar. 31, 1971) were up 9%, earnings dropped to 57 cents a share from 85 cents the year earlier. A $250,000 write-off of past due Penn

Central Transportation commercial paper reduced nine month 1971 results by 11 cents a share. Third quarter operations, however, were more encouraging, with sales rising 12% year-to-year and earnings up 1 cent to 24 cents a share.

The company is presently involved in litigation with Sea Container, Inc. over a division purchased in June 1970 from Dymo. Dymo has a well-established position in the highly competitive labeling and marking products area, which accounts for about 80% of its pretax profits. Although industry outlook has improved, I would suggest lightening your position on any rallies.

How Meaningful Is Par Value?

Q: What is the difference between par value and no par value common stock? How does this affect the investor? A. L.

A: Practically speaking, par value or lack of it has no meaning for the investor. At incorporation a company may assign a par value to its capital shares. Originally this represented the investment behind each share. However, even with a new issue the difference between Par value and selling price can be dramatic. Levi Strauss which recently went public is an excellent example. The shares were brought out at $47.00, yet had a par value of $1.00.

State laws vary widely, some requiring a par value, others not and some restricting sale price of new shares. Corporate balance sheets include either par value, or stated value for the common shares as part of stockholders equity. And, capital received from the sale of these shares in excess of par is included as paid-in surplus.

When shares are increased through a stock split, par value is reduced accordingly. One common misconception is that par represents the amount that a stockholder would receive in a liquidation. Actually under such circumstances the shareholder receives whatever remains after bondholders and creditors have been satisfied.

Q: I own Avnet which I purchased at around $22. Should I sell or hold for recovery? H. L.

A: Avnet has speculative appeal as a turnaround candidate. While improvement has been slow since the company reported break-even results in fiscal 1970's fourth quarter, signs of a gradual turnaround are evident.

In the just-reported third quarter, ending March 1971, margins continued to widen and net again rose. Sales for the 9 months of fiscal 1971 rose to 1.3% to $220.8 million; net income advanced 4% to $9.8 million, or from 68 cents to 71 cents per share. Now that liquidity and profit margin difficulties appear to be in hand, there may be a return to a more active acquisition program, with take-overs aimed at rounding out and supplementing existing operations. Hold shares.

A REPLY TO ARON VERGELIS

by
Will Maslow,
Executive Director
American Jewish Congress
(Editor's Note: The Herald recently published a column by Aron Vergelis, editor of the Moscow Yiddish magazine "Sovietish Heimland," protesting "anti-Soviet canards" and asserting that "the vast majority of Jews in the Soviet Union . . . totally reject the pretensions of Zionism." Here is Mr. Maslow's reply.)

Aron Vergelis, whose article appeared last week, is a well-known apologist for the Soviet Union. Indeed, by virtue of his position as editor of "Sovietish Heimland," he is a functionary of the Soviet State. His statement must be understood in terms of the allegiance he has sworn to the rulers of Soviet Russia.

Mr. Vergelis has no similar allegiance to the truth. He insists that Jewish religion and culture are flourishing in the USSR. But the facts are these:

Some 160,000 Jewish students attended 11,000 classes in the Soviet Union's Jewish schools in 1937; today there is not a single classroom in the Soviet Union where Jewish culture and history are taught. In 1956 there were 450 synagogues in the USSR; in 1969 the number of synagogues has declined to 55. In all of the Soviet Union there are only three functioning rabbis, two of them more than 75 years old. There are only three Yeshiva students in the Soviet Union—two of them old men. The last Hebrew Bible was printed in the Soviet Union in 1917. There were 117 Yiddish books published in the USSR in 1947 and 1948. During 1960-68 only eight Yiddish books were published. There were 16 Jewish theatres and two academies of Jewish dramatic art in 1953. Today there are only a few semi-professional companies scattered in Vilna, Birobzhnan and Kishinev.

Not only is there a determined effort to destroy Jewish religious and cultural life in the USSR, but discrimination against Jews in almost all aspects of Soviet life is notorious. There were 47 Jewish members of the Supreme Soviet in 1937. There are only four today. In 1939, 10.8 per cent of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party were Jewish. Today there is only one Jewish member. Jews are denied access to Soviet military academies and to training schools for diplomats and suffer from a attributable to "mystification" about the Talmud propagated by the Nazis.

The library operates on an annual budget of $33,000 funded by the city government, the North Rhine-Westphalian state and private contributions. Its five rooms on the fourth floor of an office building have been made available rent-free by the city of Cologne.

In addition to its function as a lending library, Germania Judaica aids scholars by maintaining catalogues on new publications with listings according to authors, titles and subjects.

From time to time it has issued short studies on subjects such as the history of ghettos, Jewish literature and the Jewish youth movement in Germany. These publications are made available to schools and colleges.

Dr. Bohnke-Kollwitz said that West Germany's surviving Jewish communities had shown little interest in the library, mainly she thought, because most of the 26,000 Jews living here now come from Eastern Europe. "They have little or no ties to German-Jewish history and culture," she explained.

The library's policy, she said, is that it should contain as much as possible of the literature pertaining to German-speaking Jews. "That means including the works of the Czech, Franz Kafka, as well as Austrian and Swiss and Hungarian Jewish writers," she said.

Library Of Germania Judaica Continues Popular In Cologne

COLOGNE, West Germany—the early postwar years the Cologne bookseller Karl Keller was besieged by scores of students from the nearby university who demanded books about and by German Jews.

He felt helpless. During the 12 years of their rule, the Nazis had burned thousands of books by Jewish authors and plundered the private libraries of German Jews. Most Jews who managed to escape the holocaust took their books with them to Israel, Britain and the United States.

The lack of books concerning German Jews here gave the 54-year-old bookseller the idea of starting a public library on the subject. With some friends who are publishers, writers and lawyers Mr. Keller founded the Germania Judaica library here in 1958.

It was a modest beginning—only a few hundred books. Now in its 13th year the library, unique in West Germany, has more than 16,000 volumes and thousands of regular readers all over the country.

According to the chief librarian, Dr. Jutta Bohnke-Kollwitz, 64 per cent of the users have been university students and high school pupils. The librarian, herself a student of German literature, said that the major part of the collection had been purchased from secondhand booksellers here and in the Netherlands.

"It is still far from comprehensive," she said. "There are larger collections in the United States and in Israel. But our aim is somewhat different also. Through this library ordinary Germans can acquire a deep understanding of the role of Jews in German history and culture."

Dr. Bohnke-Kollwitz, a grandchild of the realist artist Kathe Kollwitz, said she was attracted to the library 12 years ago through her interest in "the image of Jews in German literature."

The Germania Judaica collection reflects this interest in part. Among the volumes are 19th century novels with caricatures of German Jews and the pseudobiological "Sin Against the Blood" by the early 20th century racist Arthur Dinter.

Dr. Bohnke-Kollwitz said that she felt that these and similar works were important to readers who wished to trace and understand the spread of anti-Semitism in Germany.

The most popular book in the library, however, appears to be a German edition of the Talmud. She said this was perhaps

DISCLOSES WARNING
NEW YORK — Former U.S. President, Lyndon B. Johnson, in a TV interview, revealed that near the conclusion of the 6-Day War on the 10th of June 1967, he received a call on the hot line at 8 a.m. in the morning from Premier Kosygin, warning that the Soviet Union intended within a few hours to intervene with military force unless Israel unconditionally halted its attack. Failure to do so, Kosygin warned, would result in a "grave catastrophe." Johnson ordered the U.S. Sixth Fleet to approach within 50 miles of the Syrian coast. This order was immediately detected by Moscow intelligence, from which it drew the conclusion that the U.S. is prepared to face up to the ultimatum. On the same day, somewhat later, the tense situation was relieved when agreement was reached at the U.N. on a cease-fire.

Members Of ECM Approve Draft Policy

PARIS — Foreign Minister Schumann said that Britain and three other nations applying for membership in the European Common Market had approved in principle a draft policy statement on the Middle East drawn up by the six ECM member nations but not officially announced.

Schumann said that details of the statement have not been published in order not to undercut the Jarring peace mission. He said the plan would be forwarded to United Nations Secretary General Thant.

It calls for Israel's withdrawal to its pre-June, 1967, boundaries; the establishment of demilitarized zones under international supervision on both sides of the border, and the option of repatriation or compensation for Palestinian refugees. The policy statement was reported to have been accepted unanimously by the six ECM powers.

Reports from Israeli sources later claimed that it was supported by France, Belgium and Luxembourg but rejected by West Germany, Holland and Italy.

White House Officers Tear Up Protesting Rabbis' Placards

WASHINGTON — Officers of the Executive Protective Service, the special White House unit assigned to shield foreign diplomats from illegal demonstrations and physical harm, tore up placards carried by a group of rabbis outside the Soviet Embassy.

The 35 rabbis were making their second circling of the block, protesting the trials of Soviet Jews, when an EPS sergeant read a mimeographed statement warning them to cease demonstrating within 500 feet of the Embassy. The rabbis nevertheless raised their signs and continued their march, and "the EPS police literally ran after them and grabbed the placards from their hands and tore them up," it was reported by Samuel H. Sisen, assistant community relations director of the Jewish Community Council of Greater Washington.

Sisen said the officers outnumbered the rabbis. There were no arrests. The demonstration was sponsored by the Washington Board of Rabbis, the Rabbinical Assembly of Washington, Rabbinical Council and the JCC. The rabbis — representing all three branches of Judaism — proceeded to a nearby rally by more than 400 students,
