Cantor Ivan Perlman Finds Warm Providence Reception

At the age of ten, Ivan Perlman decided that he was going to become a Cantor. With the encouragement of his Sunday School teacher, and through his own constant work toward his goal, he achieved his ambition. Tonight, he will be formally installed as Cantor at Temple Emanu-El, succeeding the late Cantor Jacob Hohenemser.

Born in Flushing, N. Y. in 1925, Cantor Perlman is a graduate of the New York Conservatory of Music and the Seminary School of the Jewish Theological Seminary from which he was graduated in 1950. Between 17 and 20, he served in the U. S. Marine Corps where he received the Bronze Star Medal for Heroism for his action in saving a communications jeep from an ammunition dump while under fire.

In an effort to encourage "those who are willing to dedicate themselves to creating beautiful music for synagogues," Cantor Perlman, once a year, introduces a Friday evening service which is entirely new to the congregation, the music of which has been written by one of the newer composers such as Katchko, Lewandowski, Freed or Janowski.

Throughout the year, he will use segments of this liturgical music in other services.

For the past 13 or 14 years, the Cantor also has prepared a concert in celebration of Jewish Music Month of secular Jewish music — folk and art songs and instrumental music — which has been written by Jewish composers, and particularly that which has been inspired by Jewish themes. At times he has utilized non-Jewish performers for these concerts as he did for the past two years in Des Moines where the music was sung by the St. Paul's AME Richard Allen Chorus, a negro choral group, to whom he had taught the Hebrew and Jewish music.

Cantor Perlman occupied his first pulpit while still a student in Lyndhurst, N. J. at the Lyndhurst Hebrew Center. He served next at the Fairlawn Jewish Center, also in New Jersey, and from there he went to Congregation B'nai Emanuh in Tulsa, Okla.

He comes to Providence from Tifereth Israel in Des Moines, Iowa, where he had spent ten years as cantor and youth director. For the past three years, he has (Continued on Page 6)

Israeli Cabinet Refuses To Re-Open Lavon Affair

JERUSALEM — The Israel cabinet has decided not to appoint a commission of inquiry to reopen the Lavon affair as requested by former Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion.

It is understood that no vote was taken. Instead, Premier Levi Eshkol followed the procedure whereby any proposal before the cabinet required support of at least four ministers to be included on the agenda. The proposal—which would have probed the responsibility of the ten-year-old security mishap—was presented by Justice Minister Dov Joseph and was supported only by Housing and Development Minister Yosef Almogi. Failing to receive the required minimum, the proposal was not included in the agenda.

Anticipating that the Government would not reopen the inquiry, Mr. Ben-Gurion had said that he would nevertheless bring the matter up before the Mafai convention scheduled for February and that he would publish the new material which he submitted to the Justice Minister on the case after getting censorship clearance.

The cabinet heard a report by Chief of Staff Yitzhak Rabin on details of the incident on Mount Scopus in which three Israeli border patrolmen were wounded by Jordanian gunfire while guarding a group of Arab women who were permitted by the Israeli authorities to harvest an olive grove in the Israeli enclave.

Prime Minister Eshkol also reported on his meeting with Gen. Odd Bull, chief of staff of the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization, in which the Premier told the UN official that the Israel Government took "a grave view" of the incident and that the "deliberate attack greatly increased tension on the border at a season of particular significance to the Christian world."

It is understood that the Premier stressed to Gen. Bull that the harvesting of the olives had been allowed by the Israeli authorities as a humanitarian gesture at the request of the United Nations and that the organization ought to react to the shooting. Gen. Bull expressed his regrets at the incident.

World Zionists In 26th Congress Plan Continued Aid To Israeli Emigrants

JERUSALEM—The 26th Zionist Congress now meeting here is primarily concerned with finding ways to aid Israel. More than 500 delegates from 31 countries are attending the congress, the fourth held by World Zionists since the establishment of Israel. Participants also include 72 representatives of youth organizations and representatives of 26 Jewish communities and major Jewish organizations that are not affiliated with the Zionist movement.

The United States, with 145 delegates, has the largest contingent except for Israel's 190 delegates. The only delegates from the Communist world are two from Cuba. The Zionist movement has been outlawed in Eastern European countries.

The conference agenda includes items like migration and the settlement and absorption of newcomers to the Jewish state. The delegates also will decide on how best to foster the cultural and traditional links between Israel and Jewish communities throughout the world.

Since establishment of Israel in 1948, the World Zionist Organization has assumed auxiliary functions, chiefly to help the young state. Under a 12-year-old pact with the government of Israel, it has undertaken to continue looking after Jewish emigrants and their transportation to Israel.

As for immigration to Israel, a Jewish Agency report shows it has been somewhat disorganized because its flow and timing have been determined largely by countries unfriendly to Israel.

The countries alluded to were not identified. Reticence has been maintained about sources of immigration for fear that publicity would expose the governments concerned to Arab pressure to halt the movement altogether.

The report said the number of arrivals since the last congress in 1960 was 250,000. It listed the origins of only about 30,000 who came from North and South America and Western Europe.

It may be deduced that the 220,000 others came mainly from Communist and Moslem countries, some of which have declined to recognize Israel. Zionist activities are punishable by imprisonment in many of these countries.

Some governments, for reasons of their own, have allowed substantial numbers of Jews to emigrate. There has been no coordination with the Jewish Agency, which had to pick up Jews at times and transit points not always convenient.

Keynote speaker at the congress was Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, who told delegates that the state had never really been the aim of the Zionist movement, but only an instrument to insure Jewish survival.

Pro-Zionist Letter From Feisal Found

JERUSALEM — The original letter which Arab leader Emir Feisal wrote to Felix Frankfurter in 1919, declaring that "We Arabs look with deepest sympathy on the Zionist movement," has been found in the London files of the Jewish Agency. It was reported here this week. Arab leaders have consistently denied Feisal ever wrote such a letter.

Feisal, who led the Arab revolt against the Turks during World War I, and was designated King of Syria in reward, was at first sympathetic to Zionism, from which he hoped to get help in building his kingdom. After he was expelled from Syria by the French in 1920, his attitude toward Zionism became hostile.

The letter was written in English by T. E. Lawrence, the famous "Lawrence of Arabia," and signed in Arabic by Feisal. Lawrence was Feisal's adviser and interpreter. The Emir himself, when questioned about it later, said he could not recall such a letter.

The letter, together with a large number of other important and interesting documents, was discovered by Josef Praenkel during the recent transfer of the Zionist offices in London from Great Russell Street. They were then sorted out and despatched to Jerusalem by Dr. Alex Bein.

Woman's Dream Brings Live Entertainment To New York's Hospitals And Institutions

NEW YORK — The chronically ill and handicapped of New York City are being entertained by young, talented actors, musicians and magicians, as the result of Mrs. Stanley L. Kaufman's concern over "an increasing number of young talents going to waste."

Mrs. Kaufman, with 10 years' experience in show business, began the venture three and a half years ago.

The program of diversified, live entertainment has given young artists an important medium for gaining experience, and has been an invaluable morale booster to patients forced to spend long periods in hospitals and institutions.

14,000 Patients in Audiences
Mrs. Kaufman established the National Entertainment Service Committee, which since its inception, has presented more than 250 qualified professional and non-professional artists before an estimated 14,000 patients.

About 35 hospitals — city operated and private — as well as various nursing homes regularly call for the services of the organization.

"One of our problems," Mrs. Kaufman explained, "is that the demand for our services is greater than the supply."

excerpts from unproduced plays, concerts, recitals and performances by rock 'n' roll singers and magicians.

Often they are presented in the hospital wards, corridors, alongside beds, on improvised stages, in waiting rooms, lecture halls and auditoriums.

26 Shows in One Hospital
Mrs. Kaufman recalls with satisfaction one of the high points of her agency's operations. It put on 26 shows simultaneously in the Goldwater Hospital on Welfare Island a year ago.

"When show business comes to a hospital," she said, "the atmosphere becomes electric. That day things were really jumping on Welfare Island." Mrs. Kaufman recalled the animated faces, the smiles and laughter that lingered after the players had made their exits.

Mrs. Kaufman, the wife of a New York lawyer and mother of three children, conducts the activities of her committee from her brownstone home at 214 East Sixty-second Street. Her staff consists of Sally Fly Connell and Joan Kline, administrative director and secretary, respectively, who are volunteers.

During a typical week, she says, the organization receives from 10 to 15 requests.

To determine the entertainment best suited to the psychic and physical needs of the patients—some of whom are mentally ill or addicted to narcotics—the organization does research into the age, sex, illness and intellectual capacity of each group.

Foundations' Help Possible
Performers are paid a minimum salary for appearances, although many are always eager to donate their services, Mrs. Kaufman said. Financial resources of the organization are limited, but Mrs. Kaufman is hopeful that assistance will come from foundations. At the moment the project is supported by private donations, and out of the proceeds of dance and entertainment benefits.

During one week, programs engaging 15 singers, instrumentalists and actors, were presented at Harlem, Morrisania, Lincoln, Gracie Square and Metropolitan Hospitals, the College Nursing Home and the Bird S. Coler Hospital on Welfare Island.

"Without outside help," Mrs. Kaufman said, "this vital program, which is giving so much joy and meaning to the lives of thousands in our hospitals and institutions, will be severely curtailed."

Broadway Producer Claire Nichtern Draws Standing Room Only With First Play, 'Luv'

NEW YORK — Broadway producer Claire Nichtern, in the hit-and-miss jungle of New York theater, managed to score a bull's-eye with her very first show, "Luv," a Murray Schisgal comedy with Eli Wallach, Anne Jackson and Alan Arkin, is currently playing to standing room only at the Booth Theater.

At her office at 1545 Broadway, atop the Victoria Theater, Mrs. Nichtern discussed her present show business status with articulate modesty.

The tall, brown-haired, bespectacled Mrs. Nichtern observed: "Some people think I've sprung from another planet. But I worked with the Phoenix Theater Company and the defunct Playwrights Company for some years. Both groups put on about eight shows a season. In fact, 'Luv' is the 52d production I've been associated with."

She says that "there is no science to producing. It takes a little bit of luck and taste. With 'Luv' we had a marvelous fusion of talents. In my honest moments I say 'I had a small part in it.'"

Mrs. Nichtern is married to Dr. Sol Nichtern, a psychiatrist, and has two children, a 19-year-old daughter, who was married recently, and a 17-year-old son attending Columbia University.

Her family's reaction to her new role?

"My husband feels like any husband whose wife combines housekeeping with a career. I'm sure there are moments when he's very proud, except, probably, when a button is missing from his suit or shirt," she said. She paused, chuckled and reconsidered. "No, I'm just joking. Actually, he's a very self-sustaining person. He gives me wonderful support. My children are very pleased. They say I've done a marvelous job without neglecting them — which is nice."

Mrs. Nichtern has no special feelings about being a woman producer in a field long dominated by men.

"You are judged by your achievements. I don't think anyone cares whether you have purple hair or not. Producers are great individualists," she said, adding "I think the thing that counts is whether you are competent in your craft. People don't discriminate or resent me in the theater."

The producer's entry into show business was almost accidental. "I went to work for the Phoenix Theater by virtue of being a housewife who wanted to do something while the kids were at school," she explained.

"I had no theatrical ambitions," she continued.

But, after working on the switchboard for several months she was made assistant casting director because of her ability to remember the names of actors.

While reading scripts for the Phoenix she became enamored of four one-acters by Mr. Schisgal. Since the Phoenix did not have room for any of them on its schedule, she decided to produce two of them, "The Typists" and "The Tiger," on a double bill. The production, headed by the husband and wife team of Eli Wallach and Anne Jackson, proved one of the most profitable of the 1962-63 Off Broadway season. It returned a profit of 600 per cent to the investors.

Mrs. Nichtern next acquired Mr. Schisgal's full-length play, "Luv," for Broadway. Again she obtained the services of Mr. Wallach and Miss Jackson, and went after Mike Nichols to handle the direction. Since its opening in November, "Luv" has paid back 25 per cent of its investment. By February, it is expected that "Luv" will have recouped all of it.

Mrs. Nichtern has other Broadway plans but, donning the traditional mantle of managerial secrecy, declines to discuss them at the moment.

Three New Air Routes To Use Israel Facilities

ROME — A four-week conference of 46 countries ended here last week with approval of three new air routes using Israeli facilities despite strong objections by seven Arab members.

The plenary subcommittee of the International Civilian Aviation Organization approved the air routes and other recommendations to be submitted to the ICAO council in Montreal. The subject of the conference was a five-year civil air communication plan for the region.

The three new air routes are Nairobi (Kenya) to Teheran, already in operation; Nairobi to Tel Aviv; and Kano (Nigeria) to Tel Aviv. The seven Arab delegations opposed fiercely inclusion of the three air routes in the technical plan.

The Arabs suffered their first defeat on the issue when the other delegations brushed aside Arab warnings that they would not allow such flights to pass over their territories. The vote was 13 to eight with 11 abstentions.

When the Arabs opposed inclusion of Israel in a plan for exchange of meteorological information, they were defeated by a vote of 12 to seven.

The results of the conference were expected to speed development of African-Asian air communication.

OTTAWA — Canadian Immigration Minister Rene Tremblay said last week that if American Nazi George Rockwell tries to enter Canada again, he will be arrested. Rockwell sneaked into Canada recently without being recognized.

BARZILAI APPOINTED
TEL AVIV — Gen. Mishne Aviv Barzilai has been appointed Area Commander of Jerusalem. He fought in the Jerusalem region at the start of the War of Independence, and then moved to the Negev. In 1949 he was made battalion commander. He became a regular Hagana officer commanding Hagana field troops in 1946.

U.S. - U.S.S.R. TRADE

It's the first business day of 1965, Lyndon B. Johnson is reporting on the "State of the Union" this evening as a President elected in his own right and now one great issue buried by the 1964 election campaign must soon emerge. That issue is: what are we going to do about expanding our trade with the Soviet bloc?

Of all subjects guaranteed to arouse deep emotional, intellectual and political conflicts, trading with the Soviets stands at the top of the list. You know this and I surely do.

But for a moment, put aside your bias and skepticism — and I assume you have at least as much bias and skepticism as I. Consider cold-bloodedly and objectively the following hard facts.

Fact: In 1963 the Free World sold more than $4.4 billion of merchandise to the Soviet Bloc in Europe. Almost $2 billion of this came from our North Atlantic allies and Japan, with West Germany's sales alone totaling $669 million and Britain's, $411 million.

Sales by the U.S. were the lowest of all. Our exports to the Soviet Bloc in Europe amounted to a puny $166 million.

Fact: Britain recently sold 2,000 cases of Scotch whisky and 340 cases of gin to the Soviets, with payment in cash. Whisky and gin fall within the non-strategic categories of what the Soviets can "eat, drink or smoke," are hardly items to help Russia fight a war against the West.

Under our basic policy, we have never barred sale of foodstuffs to the Soviet Union or Soviet Bloc countries in Europe. However, there have been no orders from Russia for Kentucky bourbon, New York champagne or California wines.

Fact: Britain is extending long-term credits to Russia for construction of a polyester plant in the U.S.S.R., A Netherlands syndicate has signed an agreement for building of a caprolactum plant in Russia. Sweden is selling the Soviets equipment for a paper mill. Germany is selling them three complete synthetic fibre plants. Italy is selling woolen goods, nylon stockings, shoes.

The one big deal we have made recently involved the sale of wheat for $220 million in hard cash. Since the U.S.S.R. is normally a grain exporting country, this sale demonstrated to the entire world the productive might of U.S. agriculture and the miserable failure of the Soviets' farm policy. It also added a significant amount to our earnings abroad and strengthened the U.S. dollar.

Fact: The Soviets have just retained a U.S. representative to place ads of U.S. companies in Russian publications. The Kremlin's leaders have been dropping broad hints that they're ready to make some settlements on long-standing debts to us to pave the way for expanded trade. A delegation of 90 U.S. businessmen to Moscow recently returned with a long list of products the U.S.S.R. is eager to buy from the U.S.

Fact: At its 51st annual convention in November, the National Foreign Trade Council adopted a declaration strongly urging the U.S. Government to broaden the range of products American companies are permitted to sell to the Soviet Bloc — although the Council also flatly opposed long-term credits to the Soviets. Of 125 businessmen polled for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in November, 105 said trade with Russia should be increased. David Rockefeller, president of the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, is publicly urging the U.S. to "look seriously for ways of increasing East-West trade." Rockefeller admits the "formidable" problems, but says there are "compelling reasons" for exploring the issue with the Soviet Bloc.

Fact: Just before he resigned, former Commerce Secretary Hodges called for the increased trade, declared, "We are losing millions in sales of 'eat, drink or smoke' merchandise to our competitors in Europe and Japan — and I see no reason why we shouldn't have our share of this business as long as the goods involved are non-strategic."

Remember, every line you've read here is a fact. From them you can draw your own conclusions about what we should — and what we probably will — do about expanding our trade with the U.S.S.R.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Dan Almagor, whose Hebrew translations on the Israeli stage have invited enthusiastic comment by critics for newspapers in Israel, temporarily lives in Hollywood where he teaches at the University of Judaism. He is also writing the script for Israel's first high-budget musical comedy film.

Almagor will translate in Hebrew "The Windows of Heaven," author Shimon Wincelberg's ghetto play for the Haifa Municipal Theater, Israel's most modern playhouse. The production first appears on Broadway early next season under the English title, "Resort 76."

Almagor and Shraga Friedman translated "My Fair Lady" in Hebrew and the critics raved that not only did the lyrics lose nothing in translation but they sounded as natural as if they had been originally written in the native tongue.

The talented writer also translated "Guys and Dolls" (Kol Yisrael), Danny Kaye's "Children Songs" and "The Long, the Short and the Tall" (Habimah), among others.

For the 1964-65 Israel stage season, he plans translations of

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

The Egrets

By Beryl Segal

Like an island in the midst of the sea, like an oasis in the desert, stands a growth of trees and shrubs in the middle of the field in the back of our house. It is roundish and thick with underbrush and feared by the children of this Florida neighborhood. The island is said to be the home of snakes and lizards, and no one ever enters it. When children go across the field and they come upon this island of growth they circle it around and look with fear in their eyes to its interior.

But the island is also the haven for birds that keep twittering early in the morning and then fly away to the neighborhood trees. And also three pair of Egrets live there in the thickness of its bushes. In the afternoon, when the sun is high above the heads of everyone, the Egrets emerge from the island, and walk out into the sun-drenched field.

The Egrets, birds I have never seen, but have only known of from reading, are graceful creatures of exceptional beauty and dignity. I have a chance to observe them at close range now, and to study every motion of their bodies and every mood of their soul, during our visit to this part of Florida.

The Egrets walk sedately, in pairs. He and She. One walks ahead of the other and when one stops the other stops too, at a respectful distance. After a few steps, the Egrets stop and look around in the field. They dip their beaks in the ground and then look up to the skies.

It is in this looking up to the skies that the Egrets are most engaging. It is not a quick looking up as the doves do. It is not a quick jerk with the heads as the sea gulls do. The Egrets stand as if in meditation. When they stand in this manner, they are much taller than usual. They are in fact twice as high as they are when walking. Their necks are stretched out and it seems as if they stand on tip toes, the better to observe what is going on above them. Thus they stand erect, their pure white necks reaching upwards, and they do not move. Then, suddenly they take to their wings and fly away. Their flight is not too far and not too high. They will fly to the next field, divided from the field of their home island by a road which was built in the hope of developing the neighborhood and building homes on the fields. In flight as in walking, they fly one behind the other. There is always a leader. Is it the He or the She who leads? Who knows? Then they alight on a chosen spot and begin their walk. Always one is ahead of the other. They walk sedately and with measured steps.

I would give anything to know how the Egrets keep themselves so neat, so clean. I have never seen them preen themselves in the open as other birds do. They are always so pure white and their feathers are in the most perfect order.

All day long the Egrets spent in the field, not entering their home island. They dip their beaks in the ground, or just simply premedinate in the field, or they take to flight for no reason at all. No one disturbs them. No one is approaching. Nothing throws a shadow over them. They just fly as the spirit moves them.

But the Egrets know why, and they also know when they will take flight. All together they suddenly start from the ground and they fly one behind the other to wherever their wings take them. And we who observe them stand puzzled.

Most beautiful are these birds in their meditation. Towards the evening, when the sun is about to set, they stand silently and look to the setting sun. Their necks are out full length, and their white feathers shine in the setting sun. I have had the occasion to observe the Egrets these ten days, and always at that hour they stand at the edge of the field and look motionless at the setting sun. And we who watch them standing so, also turn our eyes to the setting sun and also meditate. Another day is gone, never to return. How many more suns will we see setting and rising? Where does the sun come from in the morning and where does it go for the night? And what is the meaning in the setting and the rising of the sun?

On one such evening I saw the Egrets stand silently by the road, motionless, statue-like. Suddenly it occurred to me that there were only five Egrets. Two pairs standing apart, two by two, and one solitary standing by the road. They were waiting in deep silence. My curiosity was aroused. I circled the field so as not to scare the birds. As I approached the road, the mystery was revealed to me. The Egrets were waiting for the sixth of their group to come up to them. But the sixth Egret was lying on the road lifeless. Its body was lying on the side and life was gone out of the graceful creature.

I soon knew what had happened. A trickle of blood from the mouth of the Egret told the story. A careless driver took its life away, and now its friends stand in silence waiting for the dead Egret to stand up again and to walk in beauty again with them.

I moved the body of the dead Egret away from the road and left it in the field. The Egrets will probably know what to do with it. I looked up to the setting sun that just then went over the top of the palm trees in the distance.

Another day was gone, and another life was ended.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

REUNION: It was late and raining, and Billy Reed was closing up. We walked from his Little Club to the Stork, and there found Joe E. Lewis. The comic fell upon Reed in an affectionate embrace, then told of the days when Reed was a hooper who worked in Lewis' act.

They were at the Royal Frolics in Chicago in '34. "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn—who'd slashed Lewis during the nightclub wars and then was shot by avengers—joined their table. Lewis mentioned that he and Reed were on their way to Hollywood. "If you see that phony, George Raft, spit in his eye," McGurn said.

Lewis was puzzled. He knew that Raft was a friend of some mobsters. "He's a phony," McGurn explained, angrily. "I saw his last movie. He played a dirty copper in it. . ."

START: Gala and Salvador Dali were at the corner of Madison Av. & 53d one day last week. We spoke for a while, and then noticed the roped-off area around the Sport & Travel shop. The showcase was broken and shattered glass was all around the area. Dali first made the frontpages when he hurled his fur-lined bathtub through a 5th Ave. shopwindow. "Believe me," he said on this occasion, as he raced off with Gala, "this I did not do."

CARD: David Merrick, the producer, was in Sardi's the other day, beaming over the fact that he had received a Christmas card from LBJ. "I suppose that's for okaying the song, 'Hello Lyndon,'" said the producer of 'Hello Dolly,' or maybe for refusing to let Barry Goldwater use it."

GRAMMAR: An applicant for a Rhodes scholarship believes the reason he wasn't selected was the way he answered one question. A member of the examining board had asked him: "What would you say if one of your fellow students at Oxford were to stick his head in your door and say 'Let's you and I go out and get a beer.'"

The applicant replied: "I would not correct his grammar. . . The questioner blushed and the applicant did not get his Rhodes Scholarship.

INFLUENCE: Richard Adler, the songwriter who's been staging all the President's shows and will produce the Inaugural Gala, arranged to fly to the Virgin Islands for a week. His wife, Sally Anne Howes, was getting a week off from her hit musical, "What Makes Sammy Run?" They had hotel and plane bookings for themselves and the children. Then the fog hit N.Y.

Their plane reservations were canceled because of the fog. The airline counters were swamped by all those eager to fly South for the holidays. Adler's White House influence, he knew, was not enough. He phoned his barber, Rocco Miglorie, for help.

He knew that one of Rocco's customers was Floyd Hall, pres. of Eastern Airlines. The barber called Hall — and the Adlers were on the first plane out.

'Day Of Hebrew' Exhibit Will Tour United States

NEW YORK — A 50-panel exhibit, "A Day of Hebrew," sponsored by the Tarbut Foundation for the Advancement of Hebrew Culture in America, has opened at the Jewish Agency building here.

The exhibit will travel through universities, public libraries, synagogues and community centers from coast to coast. It will be on display at the Jewish Agency until the middle of January.

In opening the exhibit before a distinguished audience of educators, writers and community leaders, Dr. Emanuel Neumann, president of the Tarbut Foundation, and member of the Jewish Agency executive, gave a short review of the foundation's work in the first two years of its existence, encompassing among other projects the growing activation of a "Living Hebrew" program in summer camps operated by community organizations, the publication of a Modern Hebrew Classics Series, and a large-scale national effort for creating a climate for the acceptance of Hebrew in America.

The Tarbut Foundation is operating with funds endowed primarily by Abraham and Jack Goodman, industrialists and leaders in New York's Jewish community. Other sponsors of major Tarbut projects include Ralph Wechsler of Essex Fells, N. J. and Philip Lown of Boston.

BAR MITZVAH — Ronald Paul Wunsch, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Wunsch of 74 Lenox Avenue, became Bar Mitzvah on Nov. 26 at Congregation Sons of Abraham. A Kiddush followed the ceremony, and a reception was held at his parents' home that evening.

Russians Try To Prove All's Well With Jews

LONDON — Using Chanukah celebrations as a peg, a massive propaganda campaign intended to convince the world that all is well with Soviet Jewry has been mounted by the Russian authorities, using the facilities of the news agency Tass, the publicity organization Novosty, the Soviet Information Service in London and such individual Jewish employees of the regime as Asron Vergelis, editor of the "Sovietish Heimland," and George Leib, chairman of the Marina Roscha Synagogue in Moscow.

A statement by Rabbi Nathan Olevsky of the Marina Roscha Synagogue, expressing amazement and disappointment at the "falsehoods" spread in various countries about the status of Soviet Jewry has been reported by Tass and carried by Moscow radio and Soviet Information Service.

Leib observed that there was a time when Jews took pride in the services of their forefathers. Today, they take pride in their children and grandchildren who include many engineers, technicians, doctors and Soviet Army officers.

Massive publicity was given to two recent publications — a collection of writings by Jews on the "Way we live" and a collection of poetry by Jewish writers in Russian translation.

A case where a Jew was "framed" by economic police in Czernowitz was brought to light by a Soviet publication, "Literaturnaya Gazeta."

A Ukrainian newspaper, "Pravda Ukrainy," reported that 20 people in Chernovtsy, all Jews, organized a black market in clothing made from synthetic fibers. "Literaturnaya Gazeta" says the alleged black market leader Frekhtman is innocent. "Neither the investigation nor the court produced anything against the accused, except his sentence," the paper wrote.

Israel's Fair Pavilion Has $350,000 Deficit

NEW YORK — The American-Israel World's Fair Corp. finished its first year of operation with over a $350,000 deficit, it has been learned.

Some $300,000 in admissions to the American-Israel Pavilion was taken in and an additional $350,000 in merchandise was sold. The cost of erecting the pavilion, paying rent and maintaining operating costs, however, came to more than $1 million.

According to the group's president Z. Stichin, discussions are going on with Israeli authorities about assistance to the Pavilion. This would largely take the form of providing more technical and industrial material for the "Israel Today" section of the Pavilion and setting up an information booth to answer questions about Israel.

About 500,000 visitors paid the admission fee to walk through the American-Israeli Pavilion, but Stichin said another three million had entered the "free" section to purchase Israeli items or eat at the snack bar.

Emanuel Celler, Brooklyn Democrat, New Dean Of Representatives At 76

WASHINGTON — Emanuel Celler, 76-year-old Brooklyn Democrat, became the dean of the House of Representatives at the opening of Congress last Monday. The veteran congressman echoed Benjamin Disraeli, nineteenth century British statesman, whose comment on seniority was, "I have climbed the greasy pole."
 It was on March 4, 1923, that Representative Celler first took his seat in the House and looked out politically, as he recalled, on "a sea without a shore."
 "I was quite bewildered," Mr. Celler said, in a somewhat uncharacteristic admission of uncertainty, "but it was not too long before I began to chart my bearings."

The retirement of Representative Carl Vinson of Georgia at the close of the 88th Congress left the veteran Brooklyn Democrat as senior man in the House.

His nearest rivals are Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts, whom he outranks by two years, and Speaker John W. McCormack of the same state, on whom he enjoys a seniority advantage of more than five years.

Swears In McCormack
 The only outward recognition today of Mr. Celler's new position was, appropriately, honorary. He swore in Representative McCormack as Speaker, following the latter's re-election by the House at the opening session.

Representative Celler is very nearly the seniority champion of the entire Congress. He falls behind only Senator Carl Hayden, who entered the Senate in 1927 but had previously served in the House since Arizona was admitted to the Union in 1912.

At 76, "on the threshold of my career" by his own admission, Mr. Celler spent a typically busy day on the Hill, working over President Johnson's State of the Union recommendations in the judiciary field and trying to line up liberal Democrats for vacancies on his Judiciary Committee.

In 1923, Mr. Celler recalled, he was assigned to the Accounts and Civil Service Committees, two not particularly exciting designations. It took him three years of apprenticeship to climb onto the lowest rung of Judiciary.

Looking back over the longest current House career, the Representative observed:

The legislative achievement he values the most highly of any of his 42 years is the Celler-Kefauver Anti-merger Act of 1950, a major latter-day antitrust statute.

His mentors over the years in the House were two New York City colleagues, Representatives Thomas H. Cullen and John F. Carey, and two former Speakers, William B. Bankhead and Henry T. Rainey. All, naturally, were Democrats.

His advice to House freshmen: "The good lord gave you two ears and one mouth; listen twice as much as you speak — at least for a year or two."

Another Brooklyn colleague of Mr. Celler's formally joined the House leadership on Monday. At the opening ceremonies Representative Eugene J. Keogh sat with party leaders. He was chosen chairman of the House Democratic caucus over the weekend.

One of the freshmen to whom Mr. Celler referred was seated by the House, overriding a challenge by his defeated opponent, Representative Richard L. Ottinger, Democrat of Westchester County, was seated by a voice vote. The man he defeated, former Representative Robert R. Barry, had charged the Ottinger campaign had been illegally financed.

Observe 15th Yartzeit Of Lubavitcher Leader

NEW YORK — The 15th Yartzeit of the late Lubavitcher Rebbe, Rabbi Joseph I. Schneerson (1880-1950) will be marked on Jan. 13, when the present Lubavitcher Rebbe, Rabbi Menachem M. Schneerson, his son-in-law and successor, will speak at the Lubavitcher headquarters in Brooklyn. Memorial prayers will be held at the center, and visitors are expected at the grave in Springfield Gardens, Long Island.

The rabbi commemorated next Wednesday struggled to preserve and strengthen Jewish life in Soviet Russia until his extradition. He continued his efforts in Latvia and Poland, establishing Torah schools and organizing Jewish welfare activity.

His last 10 years were spent in the United States, where he paved the way for the Jewish day school system now found in many communities. He also published treatises, commentaries and essays concerned with Chassidic philosophy, and part of a voluminous diary containing hitherto unknown details of the history and development of Chassidism.

KOFFLER APPOINTED
 STATE HOUSE — Governor John H. Chafee has appointed Sol Koffler of Providence, president of American Tourister Luggage, to the Emergency Planning Committee in charge of production and distribution. Mr. Koffler succeeds committee member Felix Miranda who resigned.

ENGAGED — Mr. and Mrs. Jack Esman of 150 Chace Avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Flora Brenda Esman, to Elliott J. Tramer, son of Dr. and Mrs. Allyn Tramer of Shaker Heights, Ohio.
 Miss Esman is a senior at Western Reserve University.
 Mr. Tramer, a graduate of Western Reserve, is attending graduate school at the University of Georgia.
 A June 12th wedding is planned.

Industrial National Bank Earnings Grow In 1964

The Industrial National Bank of Rhode Island reported net operating earnings of $4,878,825 during 1964, an increase of 3.7 per cent over the previous year. This was equal to $3.98 a share on the 1,225,000 shares currently outstanding. During 1963 the Bank earned $3.84 a share, based on the same number of shares.

Deposits on December 31 totaled $601,346,000, exceeding $600 million for the first time on any statement date. This compares with $541,328,000 on the same date a year ago, an increase of $60,018,000 or 11 per cent. Demand deposits of $233,589,000 at the end of 1964 show an increase of $3,159,000.

De Gaulle Warns Egypt Against Attacking Israel

LONDON — President Charles de Gaulle, of France, has sent former Premier Edgar Faure to Cairo to warn Egypt's President Nasser against the danger of involving himself in another war against Israel as a diversion to cover the Egyptian leader's economic difficulties, it was reported here from Paris.

At the same time, a Cairo dispatch reported that the USSR's Deputy Prime Minister, Alexander Shelepin, one of the most influential members of the Kremlin's new regime, has informed Nasser that the Supreme Soviet has approved the grant of a $280,000,000 loan to Egypt.

The loan had been promised to Nasser last May by the then USSR Prime Minister, Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Gen. de Gaulle's message to Nasser, according to the Sunday Telegraph, promised the Egyptian leader an increase in Franco-Arab trade if he refrains from attacking Israel. On Nasser's acceptance of these terms, the Telegraph dispatch stated, depends a formal invitation from de Gaulle to Nasser to visit Paris next summer.

Nasser is scheduled to visit Bonn, and is anxious to come to Paris also during the trip to Europe.

Yeshiva College To Run 'Storefront' Aid Centers

NEW YORK — President Johnson announced a grant of $289,000 from the United States Office of Economic Opportunity, under the Administration's Anti-Poverty Program, for the establishment of a network of "storefront neighborhood" aid centers to be conducted in The Bronx by the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University.

The project will serve an area termed "the most disadvantaged in the city," embracing a population of 350,000.

Temple To Install Cantor Perlman

 also served as Hillel Director at Drake University.

The cantor and his wife, the former Muriel J. Herman, and their four sons have been "overwhelmed by their acceptance," Mrs. Perlman says that she "doesn't feel new here. It's as though we have always lived here." According to the cantor, the complete turkey dinner (with all the trimmings) which the Temple Emanu-El Sisterhood presented to the Perlmans on their first night in Providence, is "indicative of the spirit we've found here in our meetings with the people of the community."

The Perlmans are particularly pleased with the fact that there is a Hebrew Day School in Providence. They had great difficulty in the smaller cities of the West in finding adequate facilities for the Hebrew education of their sons. Their older son, Eli Beryl, 15, whose ambition is to become a rabbi, is still attending George Washington High School in New York, but in a week will transfer to Hope High School here in Providence.

Emanuel Chaim, 12 and Richard Edward, 8, have already started at the Day School, and the youngest, Josh Cary, who is 3, has already been enrolled at the School which he will enter at 4. They were delighted with Rabbi David Jehuda's "kindness and courtesy" in preparing the two boys for their entrance into the Day School by tutoring them.

In Des Moines Cantor Perlman was past president of the Friends of Music, and past commander of the Jewish War Veterans. He also was past chaplain and adjutant of the JWV of Iowa and Nebraska.

On the executive committee of the Polk County Heart Association, he was also an executive committee member of the Polk County Society for Children and Crippled Adults. He also belonged to B'nai B'rith, the Zionist Organization of America, the Masonic Order and the Knights of Pythias.

Coming into a temple which by itself has more Jewish families as members than there are Jews in all of Des Moines, Cantor Perlman says, "Nowhere can any Cantor come into a Congregation and be made to feel more at home by Rabbis Bohnen and Zelman than I have been made to feel... After observing Temple Emanu-El and the opportunities for Jewish-American living, Providence is the answer to a prayer."

Rochester Jewish Community Center Launches Long-Term Cultural Program

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — A blueprint for a three-year civic cultural project has been developed here by the JYM & WA. The first program will begin at the end of January. The project will stress Jewish culture but is intended to reach the whole community as a Jewish contribution to drama, music and other arts of the Rochester area, according to Samuel W. Kolko, JY president.

In the planning are a drama center with a professional director, a resident string quartet, periodic exhibits of outstanding artists, major concerts and dance presentations and literary exhibitions and lectures. The blueprint, a result of two years' work by a committee headed by Mrs. Lester J. Berlove, is a 15-page document giving the philosophy, objectives and procedures of the project.

In setting forth the blueprint program, the committee asserted that, as one of the more than 300 YM-YWHAs and Jewish Community Centers in the United States affiliated with the National Jewish Welfare Board, the Rochester JY is committed to implementing a dynamic program of cultural activities. The Board has traditionally stimulated grass-roots interest and participation in the Jewish cultural heritage and has aided its Centers in developing cultural arts projects.

The first three years of the project will be financed by the Charles W. Markus Fund, established by the late Eastman Kodak executive. Trustees of the fund said that a program to enrich the lives of Rochester's Jewish community while providing the entire community with a significant program of the cultural arts was "very much in line" with Mr. Markus' own desires. The blueprint notes that while Rochester is fortunate in its present cultural resources, the identification of Jewish culture with the cultural pattern of today's American culture is important. The committee also felt that in providing an outlet for Jewish cultural creativity of all kinds, it would not only serve those who participate in programs but could stimulate further creative development.

In the blueprint, the committee stated that the Center is the appropriate institution to serve as the cultural arm of the local Jewish community. It cited the Jewish Welfare Board's sponsorship of Jewish Book and Music Councils and consultative services to affiliated Centers in this program area as an expression of this role. While the Center must take the lead and the responsibility for developing an arts program, the committee asserted, it must look to the entire Jewish community for participation and sponsorship in an activity which can unify the various segments of the community on a level beyond organizational affiliations.

Mr. Weiner will conduct the Temple choir in his Chasidic Service for the late service on Jan. 15. An illustrated lecture in the temple meeting hall on the topic, "Why Jewish Music?" will follow. On Jan. 17 at 9:45 A.M., after a breakfast sponsored by the Temple Brotherhood, he will speak on "Liturgical Music of the 20th Century."

The lectures and presentations, in celebration of Jewish Music Week, are open to the public.

Social Action Needs Organized Religion, Rabbi Tells Sixth Interfaith Institute

WORCESTER — Aspects of religion in the world today were discussed at the 6th annual Institute on the Person and the Common Good held here at Assumption College recently. Two Roman Catholic bishops, the dean of Harvard Divinity School and the director of the interreligious department of B'nai B'rith's Anti-Defamation League spoke at the interfaith institute.

Nazi Party In Chile

Legally Reconstituted

SANTIAGO, Chile — The tiny Chilean Nazi Party, which was dissolved at the beginning of 1964 under Government orders, appeared last week to be active again. Under the name of the National Socialist Workers Party, it was reorganized by Franz Pfeiffer-Richter, who headed the banned organization.

He said the party had been legally constituted again.

The reorganized Nazi group has been publishing a leaflet every two weeks bearing the name Cruz Gamada, which means Crooked Cross, a reference to the Nazi swastika's origin.

The reappearance of the Nazi Party was assailed by La Segunda of Santiago, one of Chile's leading evening newspapers, which asserted that nazism "cannot take root in Chile."

The newspaper recalled that many years ago when German nazism was in full power and opened branches for youth in Chile, it had failed.

The newspaper said that the issues of Cruz Gamada it had examined contained attacks on democracy and Jews.

La Segunda reported that "Hitler is remembered as an idol" in the Cruz Gamada "and the hope is voiced that nazism will be revived in Germany and the whole world."

of the New England Regional Office of the Anti-Defamation League, told the 60 panelists that the Institute, sponsored by Assumption College, the League and the Worcester Jewish Federation, has served a national role as the predecessor of 30 large conferences on interfaith relations in the United States.

A founder of the Institute, Bishop John J. Wright of Pittsburgh, said religion (the bond of a people's unity) is the channel, and the community is the beneficiary of the common good. Religion separated from narrow community lines, said the bishop, has been able to serve more than just one nation and now works for the common good in the world-wide human community.

"New magnitudes of responsibility" are needed to warn off misuse of the "most lethal power in the universe," said Harvard Divinity's dean, Dr. Samuel H. Miller, at the closing dinner. What man has been at his best is "inadequate for the world God thrusts into our hands. The answer can only be in religion."

The role of religion in the field of social welfare was discussed by a panel. Rabbi Kenneth E. Stein stated, "Organized religion is infinitely more important than the individual in organizing and carrying through programs of social action."

In another panel, a Roman Catholic clergyman called for frank and open discussion of historical prejudices.

2 U. S. Companies To Study Desalting

WASHINGTON — The Kaiser Engineering Co. of Oakland, Cal. and the Catalytic Construction Co. of Philadelphia have been chosen to carry out a technical study in Israel to determine the feasibility of the joint desalting program of Israel and the United States, it was reported here last week.

The program aims to determine the usefulness of nuclear energy for such desalting programs.

The Oakland firm specializes in nuclear and hydroelectric power and treatment plants.

The Philadelphia firm specializes in chemical processing plants including desalting operations.

Work will start immediately on the $300,000 project which is scheduled to take between eight and nine months for completion.

Zim Lines To File $2,000,000 Claim Against Owners Of Norwegian Tanker

NEW YORK — A $2,000,000 claim for damages will be filed by Zim Lines against the owners of the Norwegian tanker Stolt Dagali as a result of the collision between the Zim-owned liner Shalom and the Norwegian tanker on Thanksgiving Day off a fog-bound New Jersey coast. An exchange of conflicting statements between the owners of the two ships preceded the decision to claim damages.

A statement blaming the Stolt Dagali as the sole cause of the crash was made by Eugene P. Gilligan, an admiralty lawyer, in a report for the Zim Lines. Lely A. Arntzen, president of the Scandinavian Marine Claims Office, Inc., speaking for John P. Pedersen and Company, owners of the Stolt Dagali, issued a statement in reply to the report by Mr. Gilligan.

Mr. Gilligan charged that the Stolt Dagali was traveling at "immoderate" speed through sudden fog, failed to heed a fog signal from the Shalom and altered course in violation of international navigation rules.

He also asserted that the Shalom's radar was scanned regularly and that when fog suddenly enveloped the liner, Capt. Avner Freudenberg reduced speed and ordered fog signals. When a fog signal was heard by the Shalom, the report continued, the Shalom's engines were stopped.

The report also denied that Capt. Freudenberg had sent out an erroneous position signal 15 miles off his actual position immediately after the collision. The report asserted that if the tanker had not altered position, the two ships would not have collided.

Mr. Arntzen, in his reply for the tanker's owners, called the Gilligan report "patently untrue" and asserted that the statement that the Shalom met fog only 90 seconds before the crash was "a futile attempt to justify the Shalom's admitted speed of more than 20 knots in dense fog." He asserted that the tanker had been moving at "dead slow ahead" for more than 20 minutes before the crash and that its engines had been shut off as soon as the Shalom's fog signals were heard. He said that the tanker was "practically dead in the water when the Shalom, at top speed, knifed into her and cut her in two."

New Joint Youth Group To Aid Soviet Jewry

NEW YORK — Twenty national Jewish youth groups agreed to join forces to aid Soviet Jewry, it was announced here. Known as the American Jewish Youth Conference for Soviet Jewry, the body will coordinate inter-organizational activities. The nation-wide program is being undertaken as an adjunct to the American Jewish Conference for Soviet Jewry, an ad hoc body composed of 24 major national Jewish organizations seeking to secure equal cultural and religious rights for Jews in the Soviet Union.

The new group maintains that the "Jews of the Soviet Union today are denied the exercise of their spiritual and cultural heritage although guaranteed this right by the Soviet constitution." Insisting that Soviet Jews are "singled out from all other groups for severe limitations beyond those imposed on other religious groups" the Conference addressed itself to youth throughout the world.

Participating in the Conference are B'nai B'rith Youth Organizations, National Hillel Foundations, National Jewish Welfare Board, National Federation of Temple Youth, National Conference of Synagogue Youth, United Synagogue Youth, National Council of Young Israel, Yavne, Atid, Leaders Training Fellowship, the American Zionist Youth Council, Betar, B'nei Akiva, Dror Hechalutz Hatzair, Habonim, Hashomer Hatzair, Junior Hadassah, Mizrahi Hatzair, Student Zionist Organization, Masada of ZOA and Young Judaea.

Goldmann Says Germans Will Extend May 8 Limit

TEL AVIV — Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Jewish Congress, recently forecast that the West German Government would extend the period for instituting prosecutions for Nazi crimes, which is to expire May 8.

The Jewish leader said at a news luncheon here that, after private conversations, he was satisfied that Chancellor Ludwig Erhard favored an extension and that former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer had changed his attitude and now also supported it.

The objections come from the Ministry of Justice on the ground of constitutional difficulties, but important German jurists have suggested means of overcoming them, he said.

France and Belgium Act
The fact that France and Belgium have extended their periods for prosecuting war criminals has removed the argument that such a measure in Germany would be undemocratic, Dr. Goldmann said.

He noted that the Soviet Union, Poland and other countries had recently supplied much data to the German authorities. Action on the new information would be impossible before May 8.

According to Dr. Goldmann, the West German Government, which is scheduled to report to the Bundestag in March on the situation, will be able to cite that development as a ground for requesting revision of the statute of limitations.

Relationships Of Christians, Jews Explored In Lutheran Publication

CHICAGO — A magazine which reaches about 15,000 Lutheran ministers and lay leaders, used its November issue to explore in some depth, the relationships between Christians and Jews. "The National Lutheran" cover shows the ruins of a synagogue at Capernaum which dates from the early Christian period. It is used as the symbol for "an uncounted number of Jewish houses of worship which have been destroyed or desecrated in Christian lands in the long centuries since church and synagogue fell apart. But in its still stately columns," their readers are told, "can be sensed something of the tenacity and nobility with which the Jews have clung to their traditions of faith in the face of persecution and religious encirclement."

"History, Theology, Charity Offer A Prelude To Understanding," an article by Philip A. Johnson, public relations director of the National Lutheran Council, explains that in this age of Christian ideals, "10 of the 12 million Jews in the world today are descendants of people victimized in . . . pogroms."

He explains to his readers that "We ought to recognize that organized efforts to convert Jews are seen by nearly all Jews as gratuitous threats to their identity as a people and their integrity as a believing and worshipping community." He quotes an unnamed rabbi who said "Will you try by conversion to complete what Hitler was unable to do - to destroy the Jew?"

He also tells his audience that to correct gaps in their knowledge they should write to the ADL for pamphlets.

Another article, "Are Christians Responsible For Anti-Semitism?" by Aarne Sirral asks "How was it possible that millions of our Jewish fellow-beings disappeared from us, as we remained silent?"

The magazine also includes the "Statement on Church and the Jewish People" issued by the Department of World Mission of the Lutheran World Federation made at Logumkloster, Denmark, last April, when some 40 theologians, pastors and mission specialists met.

The statement asked the Lutheran World Federation and its member churches to examine their publications for "possible anti-Semitic references and to oppose false generalizations about Jews."

In addition, the issue contains, as suggested reading, reviews on books by Jewish authors. Books reviewed included "Judaism and Christianity" by Rabbi Leo Baeck and "The Teaching of Contempt," by Jules Isaac.

Interfaith Group Develops Shrine

ELBERON, N.J. — The church where seven United States Presidents worshipped is being developed into a shrine by Jews, Protestants and Catholics working together. Exterior restoration of historic St. James Chapel, unused for many years as a church, has been completed. The chapel will be opened as a museum early next year, it is hoped.

The turreted structure, on Shore Drive between Asbury Park and Long Branch, stands a short distance from the site of the house where President Garfield died of an assassin's bullet.

The Episcopal church was opened in 1869. Its services were attended by Presidents Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Harrison, McKinley and Wilson. It was consecrated at about the time of World War I.

During the Depression it was placed on the auction block for nonpayment of a special road assessment. A number of neighboring residents, many of the Jewish faith, provided the money to prevent the foreclosure, and the building was given to the Long Branch Historical Museum Association, which has continued to maintain it.

Move To Strengthen World Conference Endorsed By B'nai B'rith Governors

NEW YORK — B'nai B'rith has announced endorsement of a proposal to strengthen the World Conference of Jewish Organizations, a worldwide coordinating body, by replacing its "informal procedures" with a more formal organizational structure. The B'nai B'rith move was voted by its board of governors.

The action virtually assured broader and more intensive activity by the World Conference. Its nine other constituent groups had previously accepted the proposed change. Approval by B'nai B'rith had been viewed as "necessary" because of its size and influence, and the fact that it operates in 43 countries.

In a companion action announced by Label Katz, B'nai B'rith president, the organization also agreed to plans for converting the present Conference of Presidents of Major Organizations to a "Conference of American Organizations."

The Conference of Presidents, organized in 1954, has heretofore comprised the heads of 18 Jewish groups acting consultatively on issues involving American-Israeli relations and, more recently, on problems affecting Jews in other foreign countries.

Mr. Katz described the B'nai B'rith decisions as "further implementing our long-standing policy of entering into cooperative and coordinative movements that encourage consultation and, wherever possible, the autonomy or freedom of action of its constituent members."

Last week, B'nai B'rith adopted similar action when it voted to rejoin the National Community Relations Advisory Council, a coordinating body of national agencies and local community relations councils engaged in combating anti-Semitism and discrimination.

Christians Build Town In Israel

TEL AVIV — Four Christian families from Switzerland, Great Britain, the Netherlands and the United States have begun construction of a Christian village near the Hageatot Kibbutz.

Named Nes Amim (Miracle of Nations), the Christian village was undertaken by the families to create a tie between Christianity and the Jewish people. Land for the village was purchased with funds collected in Scandinavia, Switzerland, the Netherlands and the United States.

The Nes Amim families, who total 17 persons, plan to support their village with a mechanical workshop. The families regard their work in Israel as a service and after a period of years will return home to make room for others.

SYNAGOGUE SMEARED

PARIS — A synagogue in the Paris suburb, Neuilly, was found smeared with swastikas and a statement "Long Live Nasser, the Enemy of the Jews." Police were asked to investigate but it was indicated there was little chance of apprehending the culprits who are generally believed to be Arab students living in Paris.

MORAL ISSUE
JERUSALEM — Health officials here have intimated that delays in permitting manufacture of an oral contraceptive pill stemmed from considerations of a social and moral nature and from the Government's policy of encouraging large families. A local drug company said the delay was endangering possibilities of establishing an export trade in such contraceptives. The company said it had already received large orders for the pill from a number of Far Eastern countries.

Almagor tickled Israel's fancy when he translated Shakespeare's "Comedy of Errors," producing "one of the most beautiful Hebrew texts heard in years, with rich dialogue and brilliant wit."

One critic credited it "Comedy of Errors" by William Shakespeare and Dan Almagor because he felt the translator might have accomplished as much as the original author.

MURRAY KORDA, who presides over 16 violins in the luxurious Monseigneur Room in the Beverly Hilton Hotel, constantly keeps the room in Cloud Nine orbit.

Murray has recorded six albums, now up for grabs by major labels. One set is "My Heart Is a Violin" while the other appropriately bears the title, "Murray Korda and His Monseigneur Strings." He even includes a waltz, "Hopelessly," composed by Al Rabin, board chairman for a prominent drug company.

Dining at the Monseigneur one night with friends, Rabin dipped into his inside pocket, withdrew a songsheet and told Korda, "I just happen to have a song that I wrote."

Prime target for amateur songwriters, Murray groaned but politely agreed to play Rabin's tune. Oddly enough, he liked it and decided later to include it in his album.

Max Kelner remains the paradox of the Murray Korda Strings. After teasing lush muted music from his violin during dinner, Kelner beats out some funky, frantic rhythms on his drums for dancetime.

No greater love hath man for music.

RICHARD BURTON may play the role of Oskar Schindler, German Catholic who saved 1300 Jews from death in World War II. The film will be produced by Martin Gosch and directed by Delbert Mann. They intend to build the infamous Auschwitz camp and streets of Krakow and Brno in Portugal.

A leading industrial engineer, Schindler headed German and Polish armament factories. His unskilled laborers consisted of Jewish victims of the SS and Gestapo. He armed them with black-market guns and they took over their concentration camp.

Now 56, Schindler lives in Argentina. Not only has Israel decorated him but survivors send him gifts to replenish the fortune he spent saving them.

16,000-Case Study Reveals Incidence Of Cancer Reduced By Circumcision

WASHINGTON — a prominent urologist's research based on 16,000 case studies strongly suggests that cancer of the genito-urinary organs, which claims 60,000 American lives each year, can be drastically reduced by circumcision during infancy.

Dr. Abraham Ravich reports his findings, taken from his 35 years of medical practice in Brooklyn, in the current issue of The National Jewish Monthly, published by B'nai B'rith.

In his article, Dr. Ravich estimates that, throughout the world, three-quarters of a million persons die each year from cancer of the genito-urinary organs.

In his article, Dr. Ravich offers corroborating medical evidence from other sources to support his view that circumcision is a preventive for a disease that claims one-fourth of the nation's annual death toll from cancer.

Dr. Ravich, who has retired from private practice and now lives in Miami where he continues urological research, suggests that the causative agent of cancer of the genito-urinary organs is probably a virus, not yet isolated but present in the smegma, or secretion, found under the foreskin of uncircumcized males.

The virus, he adds, "appears to be transmissible, like venereal infections, through sexual contact, and after varying periods of latency seems to develop into cancer of these organs."

Ninety percent of Dr. Ravich's 16,000 patients in Brooklyn were Jews. In his study of the accumulated cases, Dr. Ravich found that:

Not one case of cancer of the penis, vulva or vagina appeared among his Jewish patients. Cancer of the prostate was 11 times greater among non-Jewish patients, almost all of whom were uncircumcized. Cancer of the bladder was three times greater among non-Jewish patients.

The case studies, covering the period of 1923-1948, showed little difference in the social, hygienic and economic status of the patients. Most of the prostatic patients, Dr. Ravich reports, were immigrant Jews from Eastern European ghettos who had not been sexually assimilated with other ethnic groups.

Dr. Ravich, a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and inventor of the cystoscope and other urological instruments, had presented his findings in a report to the American Medical Association's Section on Preventive Medicine at its meeting in San Francisco last summer.

His article adds the following as further documentation to substantiate his theory:

Studies by two Israel urologists which found no case of cancer of the prostate or bladder among Yemenite Jews who, before emigrating to Israel, had led a strongly enforced segregated social and sexual life in their native country.

A lower incidence of cancer of the genito-urinary organs in Moslem countries as compared to non-Moslem countries in Africa and Asia. Moslems practice ritual circumcision.

Similar results in a comparison of circumcized Malaysians and uncircumcized Chinese in Singapore.

"Since primitive forms of hygiene obtain equally in Moslem and non-Moslem areas of Asia . . . it is clear that hygiene alone is not a significant factor," says Dr. Ravich.

He blames "apathy, ignorance, fear, superstition and irrationalism" for the lack of early circumcision on a universal scale.

A plea for further research and preventive action on a national and world level is made in a companion article, published in The National Jewish Monthly, by Label A. Katz, president of B'nai B'rith.

Mr. Katz proposes that the World Health Organization give Mr. Ravich's investigations "urgent attention" for the effect it could have in reducing the cancer toll, particularly in underdeveloped countries where the ratio of cancer of the genito-urinary organs is high.

He also suggests that the scientific data "become a matter of discussion and investigation in the Soviet medical profession," noting that the circumcision rite is being violently attacked in the Soviet press and in official books as "barbaric" and "a savage ritual" — all part of the Soviet Union's efforts to diminish Judaism and Jewish cultural life in that country.

'Palestine Liberation Army' Equipped With Soviet Arms

LONDON — Soviet arms are being used to equip the "Palestine Liberation Army," authorized recently by the "Arab Liberation Organization" formed by the 13 Arab League states, the Daily Telegraph reported here from Beirut, quoting official "Arab Liberation Organization" sources.

The Beirut report stated that most of the arms being allocated to the "Palestine Liberation Army" are being withdrawn from stockpiles of Soviet arms in Egypt and Iraq, which Moscow has promised to replace with more modern military equipment. Another Beirut dispatch reported that Egypt and Iraq have named their joint military command which is to prepare for the military union of the two countries. Each of the governments has named 25 men to this joint command, headed on the Egyptian side by President Gamal Abdel Nasser and on the Iraqi side by President Abdel Salam Arif.

German Jews Rapped For Advocating Recall Of Scientists

MUNICH — Advocates of legal measures to control the activities of German scientists working on the development of advanced weapons in Egypt were sharply denounced by the Deutsche National and Soldaten Zeitung, a neo-Nazi newspaper, which virtually warned Jews they were playing with fire and betraying "German interests."

Lashing out against A. Rosenberg, chairman of the West German Federation of Trade Unions, for his strong position on recalling the West German scientists from Egypt, the newspaper said that "the German Jew" Rosenberg was playing with fire and betraying "German interests."

In Bonn meanwhile a spokesman for the Ministry of the Interior said in reply to a query that the Federal Government could not guarantee the safety of German scientists in the event they returned home from Egypt.

The query was triggered by an assertion by Dr. Wolfgang Pilz, one of the leading German scientists working for Egypt, that returning scientists must be guaranteed safety.

He made the demand in an interview in which he said two other conditions must be met—an expression of public regret by Israel for its alleged attacks on German scientists by its agents and payment of a life pension to his former secretary who lost her sight when a parcel allegedly mailed to her by Israeli agents exploded in Cairo.

New York Police Rule: Cop Can't Be Lawyer

NEW YORK — Enforcing the law is one thing. Interpreting it for clients is another, a Police Department spokesman said in effect yesterday in announcing the dismissal of a sergeant for moonlighting as a lawyer.

Sgt. Irvin Fendel, 54 years old, of the Fresh Meadow, Queens, precinct, had been in the department 24 years and had won three citations. He also took time to study law and was admitted to the bar in December, 1958.

However, a departmental trial found that, Sergeant Fendel had violated departmental rules by acting as a lawyer for policemen and clients outside the force. As a result of his dismissal, he loses his pension, which would have been half his annual salary of $9,108.

Mr. Fendel is listed in the Queens telephone directory as an attorney.

'Palestine Liberation Army' Equipped With Soviet Arms

rut dispatch reported that Egypt and Iraq have named their joint military command which is to prepare for the military union of the two countries. Each of the governments has named 25 men to this joint command, headed on the Egyptian side by President Gamal Abdel Nasser and on the Iraqi side by President Abdel Salam Arif.

The "Palestine Liberation Army," authorized after last September's Arab summit meeting at Alexandria — where a resolution was adopted unanimously for the initiation of a drive to "liberate" the portion of Palestine held by Israel — has already established training camps for Arab refugees in the Sinai Peninsula, the Gaza Strip and Syria, the dispatch reported. The military instructors are chiefly Egyptians, Iraqis and Syrians. In addition, Algeria has reportedly offered arms supplies as well as instructors and is willing also to help train some of the refugees on Algerian soil.

Under the plans of the "Arab Liberation Organization," headed by Ahmad Shukairy, former Saudi Arabian representative to the United Nations, all able-bodied refugees in the Arab states — with the possible exception of those in Lebanon — will be liable to conscription in the "Palestine Liberation Army." Plans are under way to start a recruiting drive in all refugee camps next March, with six hours of radio broadcasts beamed to those camps daily from Radio Cairo.

Catholic Gives Window To Beth Judah Temple

WILDWOOD, N.J. — As a holiday gesture of brotherhood, a Catholic layman donated a large stained glass window to Beth Judah Temple, a synagogue here.

The donor, Edwin Zaberer of North Wildwood, a restaurateur, said the window will be dedicated in memory of his mother, Mrs. Frances Zaberer.

Rabbi Yakov R. Hilsenrath called the gift "a moving tribute to the Jewish community."

Mr. Zaberer said he made the gift as a gesture of ecumenism and as a mark of respect to the members of the Jewish community during the Christmas and Chanukah seasons.
