

American-Type Education May Bridge Israel's Culture Cleavage, Says Zur

By LOIS ATWOOD

"Education itself in America is much more elaborated on than anywhere else. In England the art of teaching is not important, but the subject matter. Teaching and education and all that is involved in it are best taught here — and I wanted to get education in education, not in my subject matter," said Mordehai Zur, principal of a two-year vocational high school for girls in Jerusalem, in explaining his choice of America for graduate work. Mr. Zur addressed the Providence Section, National Council of Jewish Women, at a meeting for new members on Wednesday.

He had come to this country in 1963 as a Council fellowship student to study educational administration at Teachers College, Columbia University, and is presently continuing work for his doctorate under a grant from Columbia. Most Council grants are for one year, two at most, as there are so many students. Mrs. Bernard Carp, past president, and Mrs. Irving Goldfarb, president of the Providence Section, agreed that the persons who receive Council fellowships are very carefully chosen and are of extremely high caliber. They go back to their own countries to wield a great deal of influence in their particular field.

The 100 or so Council grant "alumni" in Israel are mostly involved in social work, education, nursing services, educational and vocational counseling, psychology, psychiatry and rehabilitation.

Through the Fellowship program, started in 1946, more than 200 professional men and women have received graduate training in education and social welfare. A committee of Council alumni screen grant applicants, who must have at least a Bachelor's degree, experience in their fields and either a theory or practice which is unique.

"Mine was with girls thrown out of the regular school system or left out. We took them in, in the vocational school," said Mr. Zur, who started the school in 1961 with about 19 girls. The present enrollment is 200. "It's growing fast. There's a great need for it," he added. Normally, enrollment in Israel public school classes is from 45 to 50 pupils; classes in Mr. Zur's school numbered about 25.

The girls don't have very high IQs, and the school is more remedial than anything else, he said. The students there have completed eighth grade, but they're more like children who have completed fifth grade. They master technical drawing, home economics or similar skills. Not all the girls pursue economics as a vocation, but most come from families where cooking is primitive. At the school they learn to use modern equipment and to organize a home. Some of the girls will cook food in European style, said the principal, but refuse to eat it.

Mr. Zur, whose thesis is about education and the "manpower consideration" of Israel, is still on leave from his school. He feels, however, that he could put his "widened horizons" to better use in, perhaps, the new Department of Planning of Israel.

Silvermans Celebrate 65th Wedding Anniversary

Friends and family gathered Tuesday evening to celebrate with Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Silverman their 65th wedding anniversary.

To live a long life is not too unusual an event in these days what with modern medical advances — but to live a long and useful life is much more rare.

Between them Mr. and Mrs. Silverman have spent a lifetime helping the cause of Zionism and the state of Israel, and still, as they can, continue in this work.

To list the many activities in which Mrs. Silverman has been engaged over the years is close to impossible. She calls herself the "Queen of Beggars" as, in her role of Zionist worker she has traveled over 600,000 air miles, the only civilian with such a record. She has visited Israel at least 20 times, and has spoken on behalf of Zionism and Israel in all the European countries, including Britain, Germany, Poland, Hungary, Rumania and Sweden. She has also visited all the South American countries, all of the West Indies, Panama, Mexico and Dutch Guiana. She has visited every principal city in the United States and Canada, many of them several times.

A former vice-president of both the National Zionist Organization and the American Jewish Congress, the only woman to hold such a position, she is also hono-

FESTIVAL FORUM SPEAKER — Isaac Bashevis Singer, Yiddish novelist, short story writer and journalist, will be guest speaker at Temple Beth El's Chanukah Festival Forum next weekend. On Friday, Dec. 17, he will speak on "My Philosophy as a Jewish Writer" at the 8:15 P.M. service, and on Sunday, Dec. 19, at a breakfast meeting of the Brotherhood at 9:45 A. M., he will speak on "The Autobiography of Yiddish." The public is invited to hear Mr. Singer, the first non-English writer to receive a National Academy of Arts and Letters award.

Voice Complaints About Activities Of B'nai B'rith

BUENOS AIRES — Argentine Jews are seeking a more influential role in international Jewish councils. They want, above all, to gain wider recognition as the world's fourth — largest Jewish community, whose Latin-American identity must be better understood and respected.

Spokesmen for Argentina's two principal Jewish organizations, Kehillah and DAIA, which represent most of the 500,000 Jews concentrated in Buenos Aires and the rural settlements of the northeastern provinces, have made their views known to a mission of the American Jewish Congress that ended a week-long visit here last week.

They voiced complaints, it appeared, about activities of the American Jewish Committee and B'nai B'rith, which have recently sought to intensify contacts in Latin America.

According to local Jewish leaders, these organizations are seeking to apply essentially American experiences to Latin America in such areas as community relations, interracial activities and political action, even though the problems here may be entirely different from those faced by United States Jewish organizations. The American Jewish Congress, on the other hand, has emphasized the local autonomy of national organizations.

Gregorio Fainguersch, president of Kehillah, reproached the American Jewish Committee and B'nai B'rith for "initiatives ostensibly designed to help us but without first consulting us on whether we consider them to be necessary or useful."

Although he did not elaborate, it was obvious to Jewish leaders here that Mr. Fainguersch was alluding to the Jewish Committee's recent contacts with Argentine officials concerning the problem of anti-Semitism and a reported plan by B'nai B'rith to open a human relations center here to strengthen Roman Catholic-Jewish relations.

Mr. Fainguersch said he intended to raise the matter at a regional conference of Jewish organizations in Latin America early next year and at the next meeting of the World Jewish Congress, which will be held in Copenhagen, Denmark.

The Kehillah leader's statement and similar reports by DAIA, and Marc Turkow, local representative of the World Jewish Congress, made a strong impact on the American delegation.

Will Maslow, national executive director of the American Jewish Congress, disclosed that Mr. Fainguersch had accepted an invitation to attend the annual meeting of the national conference of presidents of Jewish organizations to be held next month in New York.

The Argentine leader was invited last month by Yehuda Hellman, secretary of the conference, after he had indicated that he wanted to discuss the recent activities of American Jewish organizations before a representative American Jewish body.

Mr. Maslow declared: "We would regard it as an act of cultural imperialism for any American Jewish organization to come to Latin America and pretend to usurp the function of the local Jewish organizations."

NEW YORK — William A. Wexler, president of B'nai B'rith, said that the organization's recently announced aid program for Latin America had been "initiated at the request of the Latin American district of B'nai B'rith."

Criticize Legion Post For Retracting Award To Boston Rabbi

BOSTON — A rabbi accused the Crosscup-Pishon American Legion Post here of rejecting "true Americanism" after it became known that the post had decided not to give him a Good Government award because he was a sponsor of the Nov. 27 peace march in Washington.

Rabbi Roland B. Gittelsohn, former national chaplain of the Jewish War Veterans, declared:

"The claim that patriotism at all times demands an uncritical acceptance of Government policy is a characteristic of dictatorship, not democracy."

The post, which includes many advertising and professional men among its 280 members, had planned to give its annual Good Government awards to the rabbi; to Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, and to Bishop Anson Phelps Stokes Jr., of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts. The presentations were to be made at a banquet on Jan. 26.

The post decided not to give the award to Rabbi Gittelsohn.

The decision became known Dec. 3.

Later today, Bishop Stokes notified the post that he would not accept his award. The bishop, in a letter, said that although he "declined to endorse the purposes of the peace march, I do feel that Americans had a right to express themselves in an orderly manner and that patriotic Americans should defend their rights."

Cardinal Cushing said he would accept the award.

Plan Hadassah Donor Luncheon

A luncheon meeting for the Hadassah Donor committee was held on Monday at the home of Mrs. Leonard Y. Goldman. Mrs. Leo Rosen, Mrs. Abraham Berman and Mrs. Irving Gordon assisted the hostess. Mrs. Eli Bohnen gave the invocation. Plans were formulated for the Donor Luncheon, which will be held at the Temple Emanu-El Meeting House on Jan. 11 at 12 o'clock noon.

This year's goal for the Providence Chapter is $15,000, to aid the medicine, research, and teaching program at the Hadassah Medical Center in Israel, where 1,000 patients are treated daily, most of them free of charge.

Mrs. Ezra Yagiel, an Israeli "sabrah" who teaches at the Providence Hebrew Day School, addressed the meeting. She told of the newly-centralized Hebrew University Medical School, the cancer clinic and the advanced techniques in maternity care.

The general chairmen, Mesdames George Tuck, Donald Barenigos and William Mayer, have announced the following committee: Mesdames Leonard Y. Goldman, chairman of launching the campaign; Meyer Saval, treasurer; Stanley Grossman and Nathan Samors, initial gifts; Milton Brier and Robert Gittleman, program; Abraham Grober, printing; Abraham Berman, reservations; Bernard Podrat, decorating; Ralph Semonoff and Paul Corin, area chairmen; Harry Seltzer, Joslin Berry, Albert Kumins, Irving Gordon and Louis Yoken, secretaries; and Karl Foss, publicity.

Zionists Hear Dr. Goldmann

NEW YORK -- The time has come to "create a favorable atmosphere" for Israel and in other countries, especially those with large Arab populations, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, declared Sunday. He was principal speaker at the 18th annual Chanukah dinner of Americans for Progressive Israel-Hashomer Hatzair, a Zionist organization. The dinner concluded the organization's three-day convention. National Chairman Abraham Schenker presided.

Dr. Goldmann said there is danger that the conflict in the Middle East may develop into Arab-Jewish as well as Arab-Israeli strife. Since the encounter between Arabs and Jews throughout history has been "one of the most creative peaceful" ones in the history of the Jewish people, it would be a denial of the Jewish past and a violation of the traditional friendship between the two peoples if a violent conflict should develop between them, and if the Arabs should go into the forefront of neo-Nazi movements, he said.

Dr. Goldmann probably had in mind the situation in Argentina and other South American countries, where Arab League propagandists have begun a violent campaign against "Zionism" and have been linked with the neo-Nazi movements which have sprung up there.

He said that, naturally, Jewish communities cannot negotiate for Israel, but the Jewish people, with the help of non-Jews, could create an atmosphere which would facilitate a psychological basis for direct Israel-Arab contacts.

Israel should create an atmosphere for this, he went on. This may take a number of years because it is not easy "to do away with the accumulated bitterness of nearly eighteen years," but there are no barriers between them that cannot be made to fall. Israel-Arab talks cannot be expected at the present time, but "Arab leaders can talk to trusted Jewish leaders throughout the world who may serve as a liaison between Israel and the Arab states," Dr. Goldmann said. These Jewish leaders cannot negotiate for Israel, but they can "soften the atmosphere."

The American premiere of "Kibbutz Dan on the Syrian Border," depicting the Arab attack on that settlement, was shown at the dinner.

General Assembly Votes To Revise Arab Refugee Lists

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The General Assembly's Special Political Committee adopted this week a resolution on the Arab refugee problem originally sponsored by the United States, then rejected by the American delegation because its draft had been amended by pro-Arab states.

The U. S. resolution, in its original form, called upon the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees to rectify its relief rolls, and extended UNRWA's mandate for three years beyond its expiration date of June 30, 1966. But, prior to the vote on the U.S. resolution itself, the Arab bloc, aided by other Moslem states and by the Soviet members, managed to put through an amendment which, among other instructions, would enlarge the UNRWA relief rolls by extending aid to many refugees not now eligible for U.N. aid.

The amendment, sponsored by Pakistan and Somalia, won by a vote of 43-39, with 24 abstentions. The United States, Britain, France and Israel were among the members who cast negative votes. Then the U. S. draft as a whole, including the amendment, was put to a vote. This time, the United States voted against its own amended resolution, joined again by Israel, Britain, Canada and others. Despite the extraordinary step by the United States in rejecting its own resolution, the measure was carried by a vote of 47-31, with 17 abstentions. However, the resolution must now go to a plenary session of the General Assembly where it would need a two-thirds majority of the U.N. membership to obtain final approval. The committee's vote fell far short of the two-thirds vote needed.

There was uncertainty as to the next steps that might be taken by the committee or by a General Assembly plenary session, now that the amended U. S. measure has been rejected.

NEW YORK, N.Y. — A Reform Jewish synagogue on the West Side, at 7 West 83rd Street, has opened its auditorium for at least the rest of this year to an Episcopal congregation that lost its church building in a five-alarm fire on Dec. 1. Episcopal Holy Communion will be celebrated three times on Sundays in the house of worship of Congregation Rodeph Sholom, and Christmas masses will be conducted in the synagogue in the same week that Chanukah, the Jewish feast of liberation, will be celebrated.

Congregation Rodeph Sholom, stands back-to-back with the Episcopal Church of St. Matthew and St. Timothy at 26 West 84th Street, and the back of the synagogue was scorched in the fire that destroyed the church edifice.

Another fire made the Emmanuel Baptist Church at 327 East 118th Street the third place of worship to be damaged or destroyed in upper Manhattan in a week. The West Side Institutional Synagogue at 120 West 76th Street was ruined in a fire a week ago. Fire marshals have investigated all three fires, but apparently none have yet been declared suspicious.

Dr. Max Feder, administrator of the synagogue that has invited the Episcopal worshipers in, said that Walter W. Weismann, the congregation's president, had extended the invitation with the approval of the trustees as "an act of interfaith." The Rev. James A. Gusweller is rector of the church.

'Mein Kampf' Still Sells

PARIS — Hitler's "Mein Kampf" is still a best seller. Despite the fact that publication of the book has been prohibited in Germany, it is being published in a huge number of copies in French, English and Portuguese and, in the largest quantities, in Arabic.

In the Egyptian Army, officers are obligated to read the work. In the United States 300,000 copies of the book were sold. A new edition is now being prepared in Spanish.

Eshkol Sees Danger In Continued Aid For Egypt

TEL AVIV — Premier Levi Eshkol has warned that the inclination of some countries to accept overtures from President Nasser of Egypt to patch up relations might endanger peace in the Middle East. The Premier voiced the warning at mustering-out exercises of reservists and regular troops at the close of extensive maneuvers.

The Nasser regime recently sent a high-level delegation to Paris for talks with top French officials and a State Department spokesman announced yesterday in Washington that President Johnson had authorized resumption of food shipments to Egypt and that the United States was also negotiating a new aid agreement which will provide $55,000,000 to Egypt over a six-month period and be partly payable in dollars.

These changes, the Premier told the troops, meant that Israel's defense forces would have to do their utmost to defend the country and to serve as a deterrent to aggression. He added a blunt warning that if the order to march was given, "we will carry the war beyond our frontiers."

Asserting that Nasser's hostility against Israel remained unaffected by the poverty of his people and his country, the Premier expressed the hope that the day would come "when the Arabs recognize that Israel is indestructible and cannot be destroyed by local wars." He called Israel's situation without a parallel anywhere in the world. "We are in a permanent stage of siege, out-numbered in men and weapons" he said. "Our defense forces are few against many and would have to rebuff adverse odds of quantity by quality."

BAR MITZVAH — Andrew Marc Bronstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Bronstein of 150 Isabella Avenue, became Bar Mitzvah on Oct. 16 at Temple Beth David. He is the grandson of Mrs. Minnie Spivack and Mrs. Ida Bronstein of Providence. A reception and dinner were held after the services at the temple.

INSTALLING OFFICER — Judge Frank Licht will be guest speaker and installing officer at the special services of installation of new members of Temple Beth Shalom tonight at the 8:15 o'clock services. Rabbi Charles M. Rubel and Cantor Karl Kritz will conduct services and Fred Vervy will play the organ. Samuel Lapatin, president of the temple, will introduce Judge Licht. An Oneg Shabbat will follow the services. Nathan Lury is president of the Men's Club.

'Egyptian' Forces Maneuver Foe

TEL AVIV — A large Israeli military task force, including artillery and massive air support, opened an attack last week against Egyptian style fortifications in the Negev, as part of maneuvers of Israel's armed forces.

The purpose of the exercise was to test new combat methods, providing an opportunity for the coordinated participation of all of Israel's land-based forces in a simulated war.

Israel's "blue" forces were to test their strength against presumed Egyptian positions which they were to overcome before proceeding further inland, if Israel were engaged in war against Egypt.

The Egyptian-style positions were given names like "Shulamit" and "Naomi" for the purposes of this exercise.

Jerusalem Marked By Signs Of Intramural Disagreement

JERUSALEM — The burnt-out wrecks of jeeps, tanks, trucks and armored cars, used during the Arab siege in 1948, litter both sides of the main road for more than a mile before the border with the Arab sector is reached. Brick walls, sandbags and barbed wire mark the border, where shooting has now become infrequent. A high wall runs at the end of many streets, but on the fringes of the city the wire is carelessly strung to mark the border, where casual troops mark time in the nearest buildings.

Sun-darkened wreaths hang on some of the wrecked vehicles along the road, and on others the Star of David still shines, after 17 years of dust and heat. Houses in the heavily populated parts of Jerusalem are sandbagged or reinforced with concrete.

Near the Hebrew University is Israel's memorial to the Jews of Europe, who faced a relentless enemy with few or no warlike weapons. Reactions among Israelis to the Nazi slaughter range from asking why they didn't fight to a paralyzing grief too deep to seek explanations. A seven-year-old asked why the Israeli army didn't fight Hitler.

The theme of Jerusalem's memorial exhibition is based upon a truth unadmitted by many of the confident, angry and not always tolerant young kibbutz dwellers, that where the Jews of Europe could fight, they did, and that where they couldn't fight, they died more slowly. Among the many photographs in the exhibition are those showing the long lines of cattle trucks, their departure points and destinations, the symphony orchestra formed inside the Warsaw Ghetto, the Ghetto fighters whom it took the German Army three weeks to crush.

Next to the exhibition hall is another building, containing a great stone slab carved with the names of each extermination camp. Jews from all over the world come here. Wearing borrowed black paper yarmulkes, they read the names and stare at the flame in the center of the slab.

Christopher Farman of the Manchester Guardian talked to a Government chauffeur, formerly from Poland, who could have gone to America or England after the war. "The people in Palestine were heading for real trouble. I was a young man, I had no wife or family, so I thought I'd come to Palestine because the Zionists needed soldiers. I tell myself for one year. But then I meet a girl from Czechoslovakia, we get married, and I have been here ever since. Sure, I've been to see my brother in America, and he keeps saying, 'Come to America, come to America.' What do I want to go to America for? This is my country. I fought for it."

The chauffeur, who had driven "a lot of the 'Exodus' guys round when they were filming here," asked Mr. Farman, "Did you see that film? Schmalitz!"

In the Orthodox quarter religious zealots crowd the streets, defying the sun with their long overcoats, beards and side-locks. Often they defy the police too. They demonstrated furiously against Jerusalem's mixed swimming pool and they stoned a coach-load of Spanish pilgrims who had driven into the New City through the Mandelbaum Gate because the vehicle was moving on a Saturday.

A sign strung across the main street of the zealot section, in Hebrew, Yiddish and English tells Jewish daughters that the Torah obliges them to dress with modesty. "We do not tolerate people passing through our streets immodestly dressed," proclaims the Committee for Guarding Modesty. "I hate those bastards," said the driver. "They're intolerant."

Dayan Reveals Sinai Strategy

LONDON — Moshe Dayan's Sinai Diary destroyed one myth about the Suez operations, the "Sunday Telegraph" said. The paper stated: "It has been claimed that Britain and France should have left the Israelis to deal with Nasser alone. The same victory would have been won and the Anglo-French intervention in fact achieved nothing."

"General Dayan's Diary makes it clear that his Sinai operation would never have taken place without the promise of that intervention and that it played a crucial part in distracting American attention from the consolidation of the Israeli success to the bullying of London and Paris."

Gen. Dayan said Israel planned its attack on the Sinai Peninsula on the assumption that British and French forces were about to take action against Egypt.

People Are Funny

AN OFFICER in South Vietnam who had been overseas for 10 months, received a letter from his wife telling about a prayer their little four-year-old daughter made:

"Dear Lord," the child began, "please send me a little baby brother, so we will have something to surprise Daddy when he gets home."

Romantic youth: When we are married, darling, the dark clouds will roll away and the blue sky.

Practical girl: Just put the ring on my finger and forget about the weather report.

A TRADITIONAL CHANUKAH — Jewish servicemen will celebrate Chanukah in the traditional style at overseas and stateside American military installations, through arrangements made by the Commission on Jewish Chaplaincy of the National Jewish Welfare Board.

Electric Fans Sent Servicemen In Viet Nam For Chanukah Treat

NEW YORK — Chanukah parties for Jewish servicemen with the U.S. Armed Forces in Vietnam, like those at American military installations throughout the world and at Veterans Administration hospitals in the United States, will be made brighter by gifts and holiday supplies shipped by local U.S. groups affiliated with the National Jewish Welfare Board Women's Organizations' Services. More than 50,000 gift-wrapped packages will reach Jewish servicemen before the first Chanukah candle is kindled after sundown on Dec. 18.

Hundreds of gifts, including Jewish books, records, silver mezuzot and Stars of David on chains, are on their way to chaplains in Vietnam, Richard E. Dryer, Robert Louis Reiner and Harry Z. Schreiner for distribution to the growing number of Jewish military personnel in that area.

At Chaplain Dryer's request, 500 battery-operated fans have been shipped by JWB Women's Organizations' Services to help bring relief from heat, humidity and insects.

The Los Angeles Serve-A-Committee has provided gifts for distribution by the USO clubs in that country to members of the U.S. Armed Forces of all faiths and to Vietnamese children.

Congressman Joseph Y. Resnick of Ellenville, N.Y., will attend Chanukah celebrations during his forthcoming visit to Vietnam.

Over 2,000 dreidlach (tops) are among the gifts going to the children of Jewish servicemen through out the world. In many military chapels, Chanukah candles will be lit in the large, attractive menorot provided by Serve-A-Chaplain Committees. Committees of hospital volunteers, working under the auspices of the WOS, will give Chanukah parties and distribute gifts to patients in all VA hospitals.

JWB Women's Organizations' Services is composed of Hadassah, National Bureau of Federated Jewish Women's Organizations, National Council of Jewish Women, National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, National JWB Jewish Community Center Services, National Women's League of the United Synagogue of America, United Order of True Sisters, the Women's Branch of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America and the Women's Division of the American Jewish Congress.

JWB is authorized by the Defense Department to meet the religious, morale and welfare needs of Jewish military personnel, their dependents and hospitalized veterans. It is a beneficiary of the Greater New York UJA and of hundreds of Jewish federations and welfare funds outside New York.

ISRAEL PROTEST

JERUSALEM — Mayor-elect Theodore Kollik's decision to restrict Sabbath traffic in Israel triggered a demonstration in which forty cars carried placards protesting against the development. The cavalcade was halted by the police who sought to prevent a disturbance of the peace. The action was taken when the police received a tip that religious zealots were planning to launch an attack on the motorists.

QUEEN OPENS HOME AMSTERDAM — Queen Juliana opened a Jewish Children's Home here recently in the presence of many Dutch and Jewish officials. The institution was built with funds from the Dutch Government, Joint Distribution Committee, Jewish Organization for Social Work and the Jewish Children's Institutes. Land was provided by the Amsterdam municipality.

The Legion's Definition Of Patriotism

A Boston rabbi, an Episcopal bishop and a Catholic cardinal were to receive the Good Government awards of a Boston American Legion Post next month, Rabbi Roland B. Gittelsohn for a sermon on the brotherhood of man that he preached during the dedication of the Fifth Marine Division cemetery at Iwo Jima on March 22, 1945. In the sermon he had said, "Here lie officers and men, Negroes and whites, rich and poor - together . . . Among these men there is no discrimination, no prejudice, no hatred."

Had the Crosscup-Pishon Legion Post planned its awards banquet for last month instead of next, Rabbi Gittelsohn, former national chaplain of the Jewish War Veterans, would have been honored. Since the time when the post planned to give him an award, however, the rabbi has been a sponsor of a peace march in Washington. He did not participate in the march, held November 27, because it was on the Sabbath, but he was one of 58 sponsors of the demonstration for peace in Viet Nam.

Preaching a brotherhood sermon in 1945 seems an unlikely reason for receiving a good government award in 1965. Caring enough about government policy to help sponsor a peaceful demonstration (which can be a dangerous thing for any respectable citizen to do), seems a much better reason for giving Rabbi Gittelsohn the award, though in fact it caused the award's cancellation. The rabbi remarked that the claim that patriotism "at all times demands an uncritical acceptance of Government policy is a characteristic of dictatorship, not democracy."

"Devotion to the welfare of one's country" is among the dictionary definitions of patriotism. Such loyalty must include the possibility of criticism of any given policy, yet it is criticism of Rabbi Gittelsohn's devotion to the nation's welfare that prompted the American Legion post's officers to cancel the award they had planned to give him.

Perhaps to such dicta as Lord Acton's about the corrupting effects of power should be added a new one, that a republic is better served by individuals than by bands of men, and that the timidity of one man is a small thing compared to the vast timidity of an organization.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

BROADWAY GAZETTE

WAR NOTE: One of President Johnson's friends asked him what caused his decision to become so inextricably involved in the war in Viet Nam. LBJ replied: "One day I received a report that they'd killed 23 of my boys. That's when I decided we ought to stop 'em."

SCHOOL NOTE: Yale's president Kingman Brewster saw Mayor-elect John Lindsay in New Haven just before the Harvard-Yale game. Brewster told Yaleman Lindsay: "I know you're here to swipe some of my faculty. You want to steal them? Go right ahead and steal them."

TRAVEL NOTE: A former aide to the late Henry Wallace tells of the then Vice President's wartime trip to Asia. Wallace wrote the parents' names and phone numbers supplied by GIs he met, and promised to report on their meeting . . . In Fort Worth he tried reaching the mother of one GI, but she was too busy at her manicurist's job.

Wallace took direct action, by making an appointment to have his nails manicured. He told her about meeting her GI son. She thanked him, and then said: "Your nails have been terribly neglected. When did you have them done last?" "Never," said Wallace.

FINANCE NOTE: Lillian Gish, co-star of the new musical "Anya," was one of the youngest of the silent-film pioneers. She had an opportunity to join Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin in organizing United Artists, but turned it down because her mother said she was a poor business woman. Instead, she made a new pact with D. W. Griffith, for a bonus of 5 per cent of the gross.

Her first film under this new deal was "White Sister." It made so much money that even in those low income tax days she paid $650,000 in taxes.

SOCIAL NOTE: Billy Rose saw a tall, blond, familiar looking man in a theater and told him "I'm a big, big fan of yours, Mr. Buckley - a big, big admirer." The man looked puzzled. He was not William Buckley, the Conservative candidate for Mayor but Kirk Douglas. Someone whispered this to Rose, who rushed back to embrace the star he's known for years, "Oh, Kirk."

THEATER NOTE: Ginger Rogers, now starring in "Hello, Dolly!" had to miss one performance recently, because of illness. Her understudy, Bibi Osterwald, went on in her stead. Miss Rogers, ever the born performer, made it clear she felt it was disloyal of Bibi to do that.

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: Barbara Barrie, whose performance in "One Potato, Two Potatoes" won the top prize at the Cannes Film Festival, is the wife of producer-director Jay Harnick. After their baby was born, she phoned her mother about the infant. Her mother responded with the traditional, "Now you know what I faced, as a mother."

Miss Barrie suddenly recalled: "But you, Mother, always had a cook and a seamstress and a maid" . . . "Yes," her mother finally conceded, "but THURSDAYS were terrible."

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY The Tzeenah U-Reenah In English

By Beryl Segal

White winter afternoons in the town of my birth on the Ukraine. White and quiet. The Sabbath meal and the Sabbath rest after the meal are over, and women begin to gather at our house. Five or six women of the neighborhood come silently with their shawls over their heads and their coats wrapped around their bodies. They come to listen to my mother reading to them the "Tzeenah U-Reenah".

My mother begins with the plaintive voice reserved for the reading of the Tzeenah U-Reenah, and the women repeat after her the words familiar to them from last year and from the year before.

"Vaanee. And I Jacob, although I trouble you so much with my burial (not to be buried in Egypt), I did not do the same with your mother Rachel. I did not bury her with my fathers in the Cave of Machpelah, and I did not even take her into the city of Bethlehem to bury her there. I put her grave by the road side near Bethlehem. But know that all this was done by the will of God. For when the Children of Israel will be taken captive by Nebuzaraden they will pass by her grave, by the road, and they will cry, and Mother Rachel will hear their cry and will plead in heaven for their return to the Land of their Fathers. As it said 'And Rachel cries for her Children.'"

And so on and on the reads from the Tzeenah U-Reenah and the women cry bitterly. They cry over Mother Rachel all alone in the grave, by the roadside, over the Children of Israel being driven into captivity in chains, driven by Nebuzaraden, the wicked, and they cry over their own bitter lot in life.

Every week they came, and every week they listened to the Sidrah of the week with embelishments from the Talmud, the Midrash, and from the writings of Rabbis and travelling preachers, in the Tzeenah U-Reenah.

In almost every Jewish Home on the Ukraine and in Poland there were at least two sacred books. The Chumash, the Five Books of Moses, in Hebrew, for men, and the Tzeenah U-Reenah in Yiddish for women. The author of the Tzeenah U-Reenah was Rabbi Jacob ben Isaac Ashkenazy of Yanow, who lived in the seventeenth century. He wove into the stories of the Torah all kinds of legends, homilies and anecdotes which the author knew so well and which he wanted the women to know, since they had no other way of learning them except in Hebrew. Jewish women in the main knew very little Hebrew. The listened in the Synagogue, but did not understand what they heard.

At the beginning there was great consternation among the rabbis. The author was even ridiculed. But the readers found in the Tzeenah U-Reenah Inspiration, faith, and even solace. The women adopted the Tzeenah U-Reenah as their own book, ranking only second in sacredness to the Hebrew Bible. Edition followed edition. At the end of the 1930s it is said that more than three hundred editions were printed. Rabbi Jacob of Yanow opened for the Jewish women a closed treasure of stories, legends, wise sayings, moral teachings, and glimpses into the world of learning that their husbands enjoyed.

The women were forever grateful to Rabbi Jacob Yanower, for writing the Tzeenah U-Reenah, and we are even more grateful to Dr. Norman C. Gore for translating the Tzeenah U-Reenah into a wonderful readable English.

Dr. Norman Gore is a graduate of the Divinity School of the Pacific and rector of the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany in Atlanta, Ga. He knows Yiddish thoroughly and he was very meticulous with every phrase, every word, every idiom of the Yiddish of three hundred years ago.

I compared Dr. Gore's translation with the text of the Tzeenah U-Reenah which my mother used and I was impressed with the difficulties he encountered and which he satisfactorily overcame. The translation reads fluently and does not remind one of its being a translation.

Dr. Norman Gore's work is even more meritorious for something that has nothing to do with the scholarly translation. In the Preface to the translation he writes:

"The Tzeenah U-Reenah was the product of Polish Jewry. Therefore, this work is fully dedicated to the millions of Jewish martyrs in Poland, victims of Hitler, to whom the Tzeenah U-Reenah is a memorial of piety and learning."

Dr. Gore translated the Book of Exodus only. This is the second Book in the Five Books of Moses. Let us hope, and also urge, Dr. Gore to translate all the other Books of the Torah. May he find strength and inspiration for his work.

Our Rabbis said:

"Hamaschil bamitzvah omrim lo g'mor." He who began to do a worthy commandment, to him we say finish the noble work.

No nobler work could be undertaken by any man.

The name of the book is derived from the first two words in a verse in The Song of Songs:

Tzeenah U-Reenah, Come out and behold, you daughters of Zion, and gaze upon the splendors of King Solomon.

We heartily recommend this book for all Jewish Women, and men as well, in America. Not for a decoration, but as a source of inspiration and learning of the splendors of Jewish wisdom.

Tzeenah U-Reenah. A Jewish Commentary on the Book of Exodus, by Norman C. Gore, Vantage Press, New York, 1965.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own, and do not necessarily reflect the views of this newspaper.)

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

COIN HOARDING CRAZE DYING

The U.S. Treasury is starting to win its three-year battle against coin hoarders and speculators who have hoarded billion of silver dollars, half-dollars, quarter and dime into hiding in recent years, have contributed mightily toward the nation's serious and chronic coin shortage, have embarrassed millions of legitimate coin collectors.

The speculators have been counting on a rise in the price of silver to push the silver content value of their hoards well above the face value of the coins. They have been betting that the current changeover to silverless dimes and quarters would raise the prices of "old" silver coins to collectors and dealers. They have been draining tons of silver bullion at $1.29 an ounce from the Treasury by offering silver certificates for redemption in metal.

Now, though, the trends are shifting.

Item: In April, May and June, the months preceding passage of the act providing for the changeover to silverless coins, silver purchases from the Treasury amounted to an extraordinary $33 million -- the equivalent of more than a half-year's domestic silver production. But in July, August and September, following passage of the law, silver purchases fell to $11.5 million, an amount which the Treasury considers well below "normal industrial demand."

Item: The going retail price for coin "proof sets" -- sets of silver, uncirculated coins prepared by the mint for collectors -- has dropped from a high last year of $27.50 to $15.95 and to $12 at wholesale. The $12 price is what a hoarder would get from a coin dealer.

Item: At the peak of the coin craze last year, there were 10 wire services reporting bid and asked prices for coins by the bag or roll. Today, only three remain in service.

Item: The bid price for silver futures -- the price a buyer contracts to pay for an ounce of silver to be delivered at a specified future date -- has plunged from $1.38 last year to $1.30 for silver to be delivered next May. "A lot of silver speculators who bought at higher prices are now taking a big licking in the futures market," says a top Treasury official.

A first major reason for the shift is the U.S. Treasury's announced determination to maintain the price of silver at $1.29 an ounce by continuing to sell it at that price to all comers. This policy is set for a minimum of two years and possibly for much longer. The Treasury has close to a 900 million-ounce backlog of silver today -- nearly a decade's supply for the silver-using industries.

A second major factor is simply that there are easier ways to make a profit than silver hoarding. Since 1940 the price of silver has risen 58c -- an average of 2.3c a year -- against a 12-

Today's hand is really quite simple to make if the unsuccessful declarers had stopped to examine the information actually presented to them but most of them ignored it and went down when the hand was there to be made.

The bidding:

N	E	S	W (Dealer)
			1H
2S	P	4S	End

Mrs. Lawrence Bertman and Mrs. Albert Surdut, of Cranston, were one of the few pairs who did avail themselves of the so-called blue print given for the play of the hand. First, the bidding. After West had opened and North and East had passed, South had a somewhat sticky problem. She had various ways of reopening the bidding; a take-out double would have been acceptable but we think she made a finer bid when she bid one Spade. She felt that if she doubled she would be unable to cope with her partner's likely responses but that should her partner make a move over her 1 Spade overcall she could go directly to game which is exactly what happened.

To repeat, the play of the hand should have been very simple but most of the declarers made a problem of it, not Mrs. Surdut. West led his 3 high Hearts, the 3rd being ruffed by South, East discarding 2 Diamonds. South now turned her attention to the trump suit where her only other possible losers were. Before she played, however, she reviewed what she knew about the hand. West had opened and East had been unable to respond. More than that, by adding her and her partner's combined high card points, she could count up to 27 points, leaving but 13 for the opposition all but 1 of which had to be in the hand of the opening bidder which automatically placed the Spade King.

Knowing from the above that if she took a finesse against the trump King it would certainly lose and that she would then have another sure trump loser she could not afford, Declarer gave herself her only chance. Hoping the Spade King was a doubleton she played the Ace and then a small Spade and when the King won that trick she was home free. Her Queen could cope with the Jack which was left so in all she lost only 1 Spade trick. All the other declarers had the same information but failed to take advantage of it, losing their Queen to the King.

Moral: Many sources of information are available to the declarer. Pool all of it, negative and positive, then use it accordingly.

Beware Arab Tourist Trap, American Travelers Warned

WASHINGTON, D.C. — For American Jews wishing to travel in Arab countries, the Near East Report in an October supplement has listed what it calls Arab tourist traps. The situation is confused, no two countries agreeing on procedure.

An American going to Israel (or one who has been there), a Jew or a Jehovah's Witness, a writer who has praised anything Israeli, or anyone whose name appears off an Arab blacklist headed "Zionists" will be summarily barred from some Arab countries, barred from others sometimes, "investigated" by some and restricted to "transit rights" by others.

Inquiries at Arab embassies and a major airline office reveal that travel restrictions imposed by the Arab League countries are neither uniform nor static. They may be changed without notice to the traveler, and information from different sources may not jibe.

Before a traveler begins listing the cities and villages, ancient ruins, oases, mosques and bazaars he plans to see, he should check with the Arab consuls. The Near East Report found that no Jews are permitted to enter Syria under any circumstances or for any reason. It even prohibits a member of the Jewish faith from transiting the country; if the plane he is on must make an emergency landing, one can only hope that the unfortunate passenger will not be jettisoned.

No one can enter Saudi Arabia, except for business purposes (the would-be visitor must be vouched for by a business associate in Saudi Arabia) or to spend time with a friend or relative (who must apply to local authorities for approval). The applicant must then supply either a baptismal certificate; a birth certificate showing religion; a marriage license showing a church wedding, or a letter from a church certifying membership. No Jews allowed.

Yemen is issuing no tourist visas at the moment because, it is explained, there has been a civil war, and establishment of a new government must await the "unity conference" planned for December.

JEWISH WAR VETERANS
The Jewish War Veterans will meet on Monday at 8 P.M. at the Peter Pan Restaurant, Elmwood Avenue, at 8 P.M. Harold I. Fink, department commander, and Irving Levin, national executive committee member, will report on a Washington, D.C., meeting. Cantor Ivan E. Perlman of Temple Emanu-El has been appointed department chaplain.

The Sackin Shocket Post No. 533 and its auxiliary held a combined meeting last Monday. Mrs. Rose Chernov is president of the auxiliary.

Commander Fink discussed the activities of the Birch Society and of American Nazi George Rockwell at a breakfast meeting of the Re-back Winsten Post J. W. V. of Pawtucket last week, at which other guests were Harvey Green, senior vice commander; David Penn, junior vice commander, and Aaron Mittleman, past department commander. Melvin Harriet was chaplain of the day, and Past Commander Morton Gieckman was officer of the day. Harry Shogel was elected to membership in the Post, which will sponsor a children's variety show at the Veterans Hospital.

WASHINGTON PARLEY URGES U.S. RATIFY GENOCIDE PACT

WASHINGTON — The White House Conference on International Cooperation issued a final draft on human rights recommending that the United States ratify the human rights conventions, including the genocide pact, now pending before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In an address before the conference, Ambassador Arthur Goldberg, U. S. chief delegate to the United Nations, also indicated agreement that the genocide measure should be ratified by the United States. The report of the National Citizens' Commission on Human Reports, noted that "the Genocide Convention has been ratified by more than 60 nations" but not by the United States. The Convention was sent to the Senate in 1949. Neither the Republican nor Democratic Administrations have pressed for action on it.

The final draft said: "It is in the interest of the United States to have the standards embodied in the United Nations Convention on Human Rights adopted by as many countries around the world as possible. But it cannot exhort others to ratify these conventions, if it is not itself a party to them." A shift in American attitude was demanded. "Should some other country violate the agreed standards, the United States would be entitled to complain in good faith about it only if the United States has itself accepted the obligations," said the final draft.

A number of committee members criticized the final draft on grounds that it claimed sweeping achievements on human rights in the United States but that action has been lacking on genocide ratification and in other areas. It was stressed that the United States must put its own house in order before it can lecture to other nations on human rights matters.

Rabbi Solomon Sharfman of the synagogue Council of America, told the committee that the American people are not adequately informed or aroused on human rights problems. He referred to the situation of minorities in the Soviet Union and said more must be done to provide facts. The committee reported that "though the problem of European refugees is largely resolved, the refugee situation in Africa, Asia and the Middle East is constantly deteriorating. New efforts are needed to take care of the increasing numbers of refugees in those areas."

Citing ratification by many European countries of human rights agreements, the report said that "despite close political, military and economic links to Europe and a common tradition in the field of human rights, the United States has made no attempt to participate in this highly-advanced system of protection of fundamental freedoms or to extend it to the whole Atlantic community."

The human rights committee was under the chairmanship of Prof. Louis B. Sohn of Harvard University, and included, among others, Jacob Blaustein, Jewish leader and former U. S. delegate to the U.N. General Assembly; Rabbi Philip Hiat, director of the Jewish Center for the United Nations, and Sidney Litskofsky, director of the U.N. division of the American Jewish Committee. Philip M. Klutznick, noted Jewish leader, served as moderator of a panel on technical cooperation and investment held by the conference. A number of other leading personages of Jewish faith took part in various aspects of the four-day gathering.

Jerusalem's Mayor Given Symbolic Gift

JERUSALEM — An unusual gift for the new Mayor of the Israeli sector of Jerusalem, Teddy Kollek, broke the tension last week after a political flare-up had marred his inauguration.

Mr. Kollek had been characterized by a member of the outgoing coalition as a man of "neither principles nor values but only a lust for power and publicity." He had also come under bitter attack for allegedly giving in to demands for privileges by the religious parties in order to draw them into his coalition.

Finally, Victor Shemtov, representing the Marxist Mapam party, said that Mr. Kollek had ignored the majority of the people of Jerusalem by including the religious groups in his coalition. Then he presented the new Mayor with a "token of appreciation."

It was a knitted skullcap, representative of the city's large Orthodox population. The city councilors especially the religious members, roared with laughter.

Ben-Gurion Charges Mapai Conspiracy In Preface To Book

JERUSALEM — Former Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, who formed Rafi, his own Israel Workers List, which won 10 Knesset seats in the elections, has charged that his former colleagues among the veteran leaders of Mapai "conspired" against him as far back as 1960.

He made that accusation in the preface to a new book entitled "Things As They Really Were." The book, which he authored, deals with the old Lavon Affair and with the events that led up to the formation of Rafi. At a meeting of his Rafi adherents, Ben-Gurion said that, with the publication of this volume, he would regard his participation in those events as having ended.

Declare Budgetary Move Will Hurt Many Hitler Victims

BONN — The West German Government's announced intention to defer payment of $50,000,000 in restitution claims to a special group of Hitler's victims has triggered Jewish protests in Europe, and the United States, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency reports.

The Central Council of the Jews in Germany denounced the move Monday in a message to Peter Altmeier, president of the Upper House of Parliament.

A delegation of leaders representing virtually every section of British Jewry protested the action to the German Ambassador in London.

And in New York, Bonn was castigated severely last week by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Jewish Congress and the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany.

Those affected are persons, including an estimated 150,000 Jews, trapped in Iron Curtain countries at the October, 1953, deadline for filing compensation claims and unable to file in time.

The Council message called the deferment a "serious breach of the law" and added that "this hasty ill-considered step is directed against a small minority of survivors who were victims of state injustice." The protest statement asserted that the budget cut would "lead to an intolerable new situation" for those victims.

The London delegation presented its protest to Herbert Blankenhorn, West Germany's Ambassador, for transmission to Bonn. The group stated that some of the victims of nazism are old people who may not live long enough to receive the payments due them if the postponement materializes.

They pointed out that the post-1953 claimants waited 20 years before they could even file their claims, and stated that, if the delay is effected, it would "undermine confidence in the sincerity of the Bonn Government's declared intention to redress the unprecedented evils committed by the nazis."

The West German Parliament decided several months ago to grant them compensation and to make the first payment of $50,000,000 in 1966. The West German Finance Minister Rolf Dahlgren now claims that the payment cannot be made because of "budgetary difficulties."

"This is an immoral (act) with regard to the obligations of the West German Government to the nazi victims," Dr. Goldmann said.

He also criticized the Bonn Government for evading to enter negotiations with Israel about German economic aid to the Jewish state.

Dr. Goldmann voiced his criticism in an address at a dinner marking the 20th anniversary of the liberation of the Jews from the nazi concentration camp in Bergen-Belsen.

More than 1,000 persons attended the dinner at which Brig. General H.L. Glyn Hughes, known as "the liberator of Bergen-Belsen" because of the major role he played in bringing freedom to the camp inmates, was honored.

Dr. Goldmann said that coming generations of Jews must always remember the nazi holocaust and that "the Germans must always be reminded" about it. Gen. Hughes appealed to the world "never to forget" the crimes of the nazi regime. The nazi concentration and annihilation camps were "the worst horror story of the war," he said.

The dinner was arranged by the World Federation of the Bergen-Belsen Associations and was presided over by Josef Rosenhaft, federation president.

Earlier in the day, addressing a meeting of the North American executive committee of the World Jewish Congress, Dr. Goldmann said that the Soviet Government has become more aware of, and sensitive to, the situation of Soviet Jewry.

While the situation had not fundamentally changed, he declared, there seemed to be certain indications of positive developments such as permission to allow between 20 to 25 students to attend the Moscow Yeshiva, the granting of permission to the Jewish theater in Vilna, Lithuania, to become a state theater, and the coming establishment of Jewish theater in Moscow.

Slate Conference On Day Schools

NEW YORK — The first conference of Solomon Schechter Day Schools in North America, sponsored by the United Synagogue of America commission on Jewish education, will be held Sunday and Monday, Dec. 26-27 at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Dr. Louis Finkelstein, seminary chancellor, will deliver the keynote address to an expected audience of 300-400, composed of rabbis, educators, administrators and laymen, representing a cross-section of the Conservative movement.

The day school movement of the United Synagogue has, at present, 20 accredited schools in operation throughout the United States and Canada. Three thousand pupils are enrolled in kindergartens through junior high school grades.

Dr. Gorlin To Give Kiven Memorial Lecture

Dr. Richard Gorlin, assistant professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School, will lecture on "Anatomical and Physiological Correlations in Coronary Heart Disease" at the Miriam Hospital auditorium on Monday, Dec. 13, at 8:30 P.M. His address will be the fifth annual lecture in memory of the late Dr. Nathan J. Kiven, who was a visiting physician and clinical director of the cardiopulmonary service at Miriam. The Kiven Memorial Lectures were established by colleagues and friends of Dr. Kiven and the Rhode Island Heart Association.

Dr. Gorlin is senior associate in medicine and director of cardiovascular research at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. He is a member of the Royal Society of Medicine and the Argentine Society of Cardiology.

Orange Crisis Faces Israel In Euromart

JERUSALEM — Minister of Commerce and Industry Haim Zadok returned from a trip to Europe, where he had gone to try to persuade the Council of Ministers of the European Economic Community to negate a new ruling on oranges. He was unsuccessful in this endeavor.

The new ruling imposes "reference prices" on oranges shipped by non-Euromart exporters to countries belonging to the EEC and increases the price of Israeli oranges for the ultimate European consumer by about 20 percent. This could reduce Israel's cash income from the sale of oranges considerably.

Reporting that he had discussed the issue with the top representatives of the Euromart at the EEC headquarters in Brussels, Mr. Zadok said that reversal of the newly-created rule on "reference prices" was unlikely in view of the fact that France, one of the six members of the EEC, is now boycotting the EEC's Council of Ministers.

However, the Council's decision did authorize the Commission and the Special Committee for Agriculture to present before January 31, proposals for an alternate solution to the problem.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. — They threw Milton Berle to the lions in Friars clothing. It was a bruising, old-fashioned, sudden-death stag roast at the Friars Club in Beverly Hills with more than 500 of Milton's friends and admirers putting reverse English on their friendship and admiration.

Everyone laughed as if the rain had tickled their funny bones. It was all good, although not all clean fun as a dais of celebrity-filled, salty individualists sought out Berle's Achilles heel, hung him in effigy and burned him at the stake. They reduced the comedian to a common single denominator — crisply burned toast.

When it was all over, they praised him, hugged him, kissed him and wished him a long succession of happy tomorrows.

George Jessel, now 67, turned Roastmaster and first introduced the nonspeakers: Sandy Koufax, Mike Frankovich, George Raft, Jack Warner and Joe Louis.

"Milton Berle has a lot of friends," spoke Jessel. "It was as easy getting a crowd for this Roast as stealing a girl from Eddie Fisher."

Vin Scully, silver-tongued radio voice for the Dodgers, started building up the head of steam that would boil the guest of honor. Comedian Godfrey Cambridge, portly, smiling, said he loved Berle so much that he, his uncle, a nephew and three sons-in-law had pooled their money to purchase the house next door to Milton's Beverly Hills property.

Jessel introduced producer-director Stanley Kramer who said, "Milton appeared in my movie (4 Mad World), which we codirected." (Much laughter at this point from those who recognized the comedian's eagerness to improve the director's work.)

Jessel introduced The Smothers Brothers with "angel" Tommy doing most of the talking. He thanked Berle for once introducing their act, although he did 20 minutes while doing it.

The guests continued to make Berle as popular as a man holding memberships in the Communist Party, Ku Klux Klan, John Birch Society and American Nazi party. This was the free and salty speech that our founding fathers fought for.

Jackie Cooper told how Berle broke up his vaudeville debut when Jackie was only 9. Comedian Gene Baylos ran roughshod over his pal, thumbing him in the eye, kicking him in foul territory and slugging him with brass knuckles while he was down. Jack Carter found the chinks in Milton's armor and poured in the acid. Comedian Pat Henry said, "Before I start, which one is Milton Berle?"

Lenny Kent gave Mil the back of his hand. George Burns revived memories that made Berle feel like he had indigestion on top of the flu. Jan Murray put the mustard on the poison pie with a sharp tongue and ready wit.

Were they putting Berle on? They certainly were.

They unlit the roasting lamp, said many kind things about him and presented him with the Friars medalion. This was Milton Berle, 1965 version, the Friars' newest proof that any celebrity is but mere mortal and put together with baling-wire and hairpins.

Read Barney Glazer's story, "Annette Funicello and Jack Giliardi — We Couldn't Be Happier" in the January issue of "TV and Movie Screen" magazine, now on sale at most newsstands.

When To Date---Whom Should She Date?

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "I am a teenager. I want to know when I should start going on dates. I want to know what kind of boys I should go out with when I am old enough. I enjoy going to school and to church. Some boys want to go out with me, but I don't want to go with them. There is one particular boy I like very much and I think he likes me. Yet, I don't know if I should go out with him or not."

OUR REPLY: When you are old enough to have dates and to go out is a matter to be decided by your parents. They also have the responsibility for determining that you go out with the right boys and that you go only to the right places.

Dating is not something that you aren't old enough for one day, and then suddenly are free to go where you wish with whomever you wish. Dating begins with supervised — and chaperoned — affairs. Properly, parents will escort their teenagers to early "dates" and pick them up when the party is over. This isn't as far-fetched as it sounds because many teenagers are allowed to go to parties before they are old enough to drive. Some teenagers don't think so, but it is a "date" if you ask a boy or a girl to a party and it remains a "date" even if parents provide the transportation.

The best advice we can give is to discuss dating with your parents. You will disagree with them often, as to whom you should date and where you should go on dates. But the more you listen to them and the older and wiser you become, the more you will understand why we suggest you take your problems to them.

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUBURBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORD, KY.

Philharmonic Announces Mall Festival Concert

The Rhode Island Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Francis Madeira, will present its first Christmas concert on Saturday, Dec. 18, at 8:30 P.M. at the Albee Theatre, Westminster Mall. This concert is one of the featured events of the Holiday Festival.

Henry Mollicone, pianist, will make his first appearance with the orchestra. The young Rhode Islander, also a composer, is a student at the New England Conservatory of Music where he holds a full scholarship from the Fanny Peabody Mason Foundation of Boston. He will play Variations on a Nursery Tune, for Piano and Orchestra, Op. 25, by Dohnanyi.

Also on the program will be music from "Eight Russian Folk Songs," Op. 58, by Lisadov; two chorale-pretudes by Bach-Stokowski; the overture to "Die Fledermaus" by Johann Strauss; Village Swallows, Waltzes by Josef Strauss, and suite from the ballet, "The Nutcracker," by Tchaikovsky.

Judge Finds Juveniles Protest Tradition By Taking To Crime

NEW YORK — The impact of Western ideas, shaking the rigid patriarchal family structure of Arabs in Israel, is cited by Arab fathers as a major cause of delinquency among their children. In Israel, delinquency among Arab youth is found largely in rural areas, as opposed to world patterns of juvenile crime. Such offenses as trespassing and illegal border crossings rank with bodily assault as the more common manifestations of juvenile delinquency among Arabs.

These findings were made public in a recent study, "Patterns of Juvenile Delinquency Among Israeli Arabs," by David Reifen, Judge of the Juvenile Court, Tel-Aviv.

Judge Reifen points out that the conflict between older and younger generations is especially sharp among Arabs in Israel. The children are eager to accept new ideas and feel that the social structure of the Jewish population offers many advantages. Their elders strive to maintain the status quo. In some cases this conflict results in a youngster's running away from home and illegally crossing the border into Arab territory.

Some older children, in the 15-16 year age bracket, also cross to Arab-controlled areas. Their motivation is not so sharply defined, though a desire to harm Israel's security may be one reason. Since the Arab-Israeli border is a closed frontier, this action by children of any age is a crime. The younger escapees, after interrogation by the Arabs, are sent back by the Mixed Armistice Commission. They are usually held by the Juvenile Court as delinquents. Older children are often infiltrated back by the Arabs as agents.

Trespass, a crime peculiar to the Arabs' pastoral tradition, is serious since the cultivation of land is important to Israel's economic position. Young shepherds, eight or ten years old, lead livestock into fields or young forests where grazing is forbidden and sheep or cattle can do enormous damage. Despite the extent of loss, and the tendency of offenders to repeat the crime, penalties are light, in view of the former custom permitting livestock to graze wherever there was food. Fencing and posting of lands have not prevented Arab shepherds from committing trespass.

Another type of offense common among Arab juveniles and stemming from tradition is bodily assault. Feuds among Arab clans are frequent. Clan members of all ages are expected to take part; children are considered cowards if they do not defend clan honor. Stone-throwing and other forms of bodily attack are involved, and this is one form of delinquent behavior which involves Arab girls. Assault of this nature represents over 20 per cent of all Arab juvenile crime, as opposed to seven per cent of Jewish juvenile crime.

According to Judge Reifen's findings, Arab delinquents commit comparatively few offenses against property (a much more common crime among young Jews). Both groups have a large share of "minor" crime, but there are no gang activities or drug addiction, and robbery and sex crime are infrequent. Judge Reifen feels that the pattern of delinquent behavior among Arabs in Israel is markedly related to social and political conflict, rather than to personal problems. The high incidence of trespass and assault in clan feuding are manifestations of the Arabs' rural life, and as the Arabs leave their villages for work in the cities, the patterns of juvenile crime will change.

Statistically, there is more juvenile crime among Arabs than among Jews, but this disparity in figures is in part due to different methods employed by Arab probation officers, more frequent complaints lodged among Arabs than among Jews and more Arab than Jewish children.

THE Golden Years

YOU GET PAID BY THE WEEK? YOU WON'T WHEN YOU RETIRE

Did you know that a goodly number of newly retired couples are winding up a bit hungry about the 25th of each month?

Apparently nobody else did either, until a man named Horace D. Stockmeir started snooping around.

Mr. Stockmeir has come up with a study of the budget problems of people recently retired. He finds some of them serious, and says it is because "most people in this country have forgotten how to live on a monthly income."

He explains that most working people and some executives have not been familiar with any kind of income except a weekly paycheck. At least not in recent times. "They cash their checks on Friday night, buy their groceries on Saturday, have their fun Saturday night and Sunday, then coast down their financial hill until the next Friday night."

"After years and years of this, retirement comes. They are switched abruptly to a monthly income. And some of them are getting into trouble before they learn how to adjust . . ."

Mr. Stockmeir points out that nearly all retirement income — pensions, Social Security, annuities, etc. — comes by the month.

"I find the first month of retirement is usually no problem," he says. "People have a few dollars backed up from severance pay, vacation pay, or savings. These tide them over. But when the first monthly checks hit they start spending too much too fast. They can't realize how long the money must last."

It seems not to be just spend-thrifts, whose money burns holes in their pockets. It's conservative people too.

For those on weekly payrolls who are now approaching retirement, Mr. Stockmeir has some suggestions:

1. Switch from a weekly to a monthly household budget as soon as you can. A year in advance of retirement wouldn't be too soon. The switch will take a little money because you'll have to build up a month's income to start. You then will budget this so it will extend over a month, meanwhile using the weekly paychecks to build up the lump for next month.

2. Understand that a month is not so cooperative as a week. A week is a neat seven days — always. A month can extend from 28 to 31 days. It is best for most people to budget on a daily basis always using 31 days and reaping a bonus when the month is shorter.

3. Kiss the famous Fifth Week good-by. About four times a year, workers on a weekly payroll get five paydays in a month. Many of them have always regarded this as a bonus and used it for vacations, motorboats and such. On a monthly retirement income, the Fifth Week is no more.

4. Switch all bills to a monthly basis, and if you can, to the date when your pension checks arrive. Many people have weekly bills for milk, newspapers, groceries, gasoline, etc.

5. Set out as soon as you can to make some sense out of income you will be getting in addition to the pension and Social Security.

orary vice-chairman of the Jewish National Fund, and honorary president of the Providence Chapter of Hadassah which she founded. The recipient of several honorary degrees, she was awarded a Doctor of Education degree by Rhode Island College of Education in 1954 and a Doctor of Humanities degree by Bryant College in 1959.

An organizer of the Israel Synagogue Building Fund, she has helped to build 88 synagogues in Israel.

Mrs. Silverman, the mother of four children, was elected Jewish Mother of the Year in 1951, and Rhode Island Mother of the Year in 1954.

Mr. Silverman, who is always remembered for his delightful sense of humor when he speaks, whether the speech is prepared or impromptu, has several firsts to his credit also. It was just last year that Mr. Silverman was honored by the General Jewish Committee for his more than 50 years of work for the organization which he helped to found, and of which he was first president.

Still vice-president of the Plan-tations Bank and a member of the Board of the Old Colony Bank, the former jewelry manufacturer has been retired for several years, although he still participates in community activities.

Preceding the dinner which was held at Temple Beth El, Minyan services were held in the temple where some of the prayers were read by Irwin N. Silverman, one of the couple's sons. Master of ceremonies was another son, G. Leon Silverman, and their third son, Norman L. Silverman, one of a group of businessmen from this city invited to Antartica, is on his way home from there. Their daughter, Mrs. Arthur D. Holzman of Washington, D. C., was also present for the celebration. The Silvermans also have five grandchildren.

Retract Award

"This is American Legion business," he said. "This has nothing to do with me."

William B. Curran, commander of the post, said its officers had decided to cancel the award to the rabbi after learning that he was one of 58 sponsors of Saturday's demonstration for peace in Vietnam.

"I believe that Rabbi Gittelsohn has a right to do what he wants," Mr. Curran said. "This is just a matter of policy. We are supporting the national policy of the American Legion which has supported our United States national policy."

Rabbi Gittelsohn, although a sponsor of the march, did not take part in it "because it was on the sabbath," he said.

The award to the rabbi was to have been for a sermon on the brotherhood of man that he gave during the dedication of the Fifth Marine Division cemetery at Iwo Jima on March 22, 1945.

The 55-year old rabbi is the spiritual leader of Temple Israel here and is a leader in national Reform Judaism. He served as a Navy chaplain with the Marines during World War II. He was appointed by President Harry S. Truman to the Civil Rights Commission in 1947, and received a Freedom Foundation award in 1952.

A statement criticizing the American Legion post in Boston was issued yesterday by a group of Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergymen.

The signers declared: "Freedom of speech and diversity of opinion are the hallmarks of American democracy.

No organization, government or private citizen has the right to subject anyone to its own litmus paper test of what Americans should think. Even high spokesmen of the Government have recognized the right of dissension for private individuals and groups. This right must be fully protected. Only a totalitarian government prohibits such dissension.

"It is reprehensible that the American Legion seeks to cast a shadow on the loyalty and integrity of a distinguished rabbi. Such action violates the spirit of free inquiry which undergirds America. It ill behooves the American Legion or any other group to sit in judgment in this fashion or to endeavor to silence the prophetic voice, be it true or false. The issue is not the Vietnam problem in itself on which conscientious citizens can differ; it is rather freedom of expression about which our whole heritage is clear."

Voice Complaints

Morris Abram, president of the American Jewish Committee issued a statement that said in part:

"The American Jewish Committee's program in Latin America was launched in 1948 at the request of community leaders in Argentina, who sought assistance and know-how to help pressing problems.

"From the outset, this program has been conducted in close partnership with autonomous 'sister' organizations in last week," a statement by Mr. Wexler said in part, "the B'nai B'rith stressed that it would be locally planned and locally directed by Latin Americans through B'nai B'rith affiliates on the continent."

The program would provide technical and financial aid for the establishment of human-relations projects. B'nai B'rith has constituents in 15 Latin-American countries.

he said, and within a year or two education will be compulsory up to 15 or 16 years of age. Planning of school curricula is done by the government in Israel, even for private schools. The Council has built and operates the Hebrew University High School, where Mr. Zur taught mathematics and physics.

Born in Czechoslovakia, he came to Israel in 1939 after his whole family had been killed. He and other Czech youngsters attended a preparation camp, sponsored by Henrietta Szold (Hadassah), before they went to Palestine, to a "small, tiny kibbutz, quite well off, with around" 100 grownups. The relationship was very warm, "we were...living together in a larger family." He and the boys from Czechoslovakia and Germany who were together in Kibbutz Kvutzat Schiller are still very good friends. On the twentieth anniversary of their coming to the kibbutz, they spent the day together there with their families.

The Jerusalem educator said he "liked kibbutz living tremendously. I was 16 to 18, a very formative age, when a child is susceptible to all kinds of influences... and the kibbutz was a very good influence in the life of a growing-up boy."

During World War II Mr. Zur served in the British Army in the Middle East and Italy, in Ordnance. Serving in the British Army "involved a kind of double allegiance. We had to serve our own objectives, so we stole explosives and arms." He attended Teachers Seminary in Jerusalem after his discharge, but was graduated only after the Israel War of Liberation, when he was a company commander in the Infantry.

Mordehai Zur had always wanted to be a teacher. When he came back from fighting, there were many opportunities in education, and the British government was "quite free with grants" to ex-soldiers. Education in Israel was based on the continental model, but American's child-centered curriculum and comprehensive schools (embracing both academic and vocational education) are having an effect.

The problem of integrating immigrants may be partially solved, Mr. Zur said, by turning to comprehensive schools, where the differences between those going into the professions and into trades will not be as obvious as at present, when there are separate "academic" and vocational high schools. This kind of school helps perpetuate the differences between primitive and sophisticated peoples and "creates a kind of cleavage between the two parts of the country. The cohesiveness of the nation is threatened...the situation is explosive. There is a great drive for education, which is the key to social advancement." The Council has started a program similar to Project Headstart, in Israel, for culturally deprived children.

Mr. Zur said the American influence on his sons has been good in many areas, but the effect of mass media, with the theme that if you have luck you can become rich, has made them want to be musicians when they grow up—like the Beatles. The two boys, aged 14 and 16, attend Jewish schools in Boston, and Mrs. Zur teaches Hebrew in a day school in New York.

America from a distance, he said, "seems fascinating—and my wife even more than I wanted to come here." They will return this July to their home in Israel.

TCHORBA (SOUP SOUP)

1 pound soup meat
bones
2 leeks
1 cup canned tomatoes
parsley
1 stalk celery
1 carrot
2 tablespoons salt
1 crystal sour salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 egg yolks
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup cold water
Simmer soup meat and bones in water to cover until meat is tender. Add vegetables and seasonings. Cook until vegetables are tender. Strain. Beat egg yolks with 1/2 teaspoon salt and water in a large soup tureen. Pour hot soup carefully over egg mixture and serve at once. Serves 4.

GHIVETCH (BAKED FISH AND VEGETABLES)

1 onion
1 tablespoon oil
1 teaspoon paprika
salt, pepper
pinch of thyme
1 bay leaf
2 pounds carp
2 cups water
4 large tomatoes, sliced
1 1/2 cups cooked rice
1/2 eggplant, peeled and diced
2 carrots, diced
1 green pepper, sliced fine
butter
Slice onion and brown in oil. Add seasonings, fish and water. Cook gently until fish is tender. Grease a baking dish and line with half the sliced tomatoes. Cover with a layer of cooked rice, eggplant, carrots and green pepper. Place slices of drained fish on the vegetables. Cover with remaining rice and tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Dot with butter. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves 4.

SCOTCH BROTH (LAMB BROTH AND BARLEY)

1 1/2 pounds lamb neck
or shoulder
2 quarts water
salt, pepper
1/4 cup washed pearl barley
1 carrot
1 turnip
2 stalks celery
2 leeks
1 onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Bring lamb slowly to a boil in 2 quarts water. Skim. Add salt and pepper to taste and pearl barley. Simmer for one hour. Dice vegetables, add to soup and cook for another hour. Cool. Skim off fat. Remove meat and dice. Reheat. Add parsley. Serves 6.

BAKED SALMON

salmon steaks
salt, pepper
butter
minced onion
parsley
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 tablespoon capers
Place salmon steaks in a shallow greased baking dish. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Dot with butter. Sprinkle with minced onion and parsley. Bake at 400 degrees for 40 minutes. Just before serving, mix vinegar with liquid in pan and pour over salmon. Garnish with capers.

COCK-A-LEEKIE SOUP (CHICKEN AND LEEK SOUP)

5-pound stewing chicken,
disjointed
12 fresh leeks, roots and leaves trimmed
3 tablespoons uncooked rice
salt, pepper
water
Boil chicken in water to cover for one hour. Then add leeks and uncooked rice. Let simmer until chicken is soft. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Remove chicken, cut white meat into cubes, disjoint remainder of the meat and serve with the soup. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serves 4.

HOCHEPOT (MEAT AND SOUP)

1 1/2 pounds brisket
1 1/2 pounds lamb shoulder
1 1/2 pounds veal shoulder
1/4 pound carrots, diced
2 turnips, diced
3 stalks celery, diced

12 white onions
1 small head cabbage,
cut in chunks
salt, pepper
1 bay leaf
1 small bunch parsley
pinch of thyme
2 cloves, crushed

Cover meat with water. Bring to a boil. Skim thoroughly. When stock is clear, add vegetables and seasonings. Simmer for 3 hours. Serves 6 or 8.
NOTE: This is a variation of the French "Pot au Feu" and is served in a soup tureen. However, the soup is dished out into one plate and the meat into another. Use a large deep pot.

PATLICAN SALSICI EGGPLANT SAUCE

2 large eggplants
2 1/2 cups stewed tomatoes
3 tablespoons olive oil
3 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons chopped
parsley

Place whole eggplants on an oiled cookie sheet and bake in a 300-degree oven for 45 minutes, or until very soft. When cool, skin the eggplants and mash them thoroughly. Put stewed tomatoes through a sieve or food mill. Heat oil in a large saucepan, add flour, and cook without browning for 3 minutes over low heat. Add the tomato and eggplant pulps to the oil and flour, stirring constantly until the mixture is smooth. Add salt, lemon juice and rind, and parsley, and continue to cook until sauce is well blended and heated through. Serve with roast chicken, broiled lamb, or rice.

Jewish Partisan Activity Described By Smoliar

OAKLAND, CALIF. — "Resistance in Minsk," an eyewitness account of Jewish participation in partisan activity and of life in the Minsk ghetto during World War II, will be published by the Judah L. Magnes Memorial Museum in February. Publication was announced on Oct. 21, the 22nd anniversary of the Nazis' liquidation of the ghetto.

The first edition appeared in the Soviet Union in 1946. Written by H. Smoliar in Yiddish, few copies were published and it was not widely circulated outside of Russia, so little was known about Jewish life in Belorussia during the Nazi period. The book's publication in English will help bridge the wide gap in our knowledge of Jewish resistance during the last world war.

The seriousness of the gap was indicated by Alexander Werth in his recent study of Russia from 1941 to 45. He says there is a "virtual lack of any reference to Jews taking part in the partisan war — despite the very large Jewish population in Belorussian towns like Minsk, Gomel, Pinsk, Vitebsk, etc. Did most of the Jews not even try to escape their fate, or did the partisans not want them? Or were they already wholly isolated or dead by the time the partisan movement got into its stride?"

Smoliar's book was discovered and translated by Dr. Hyman Lewblin, Jewish art historian and Yiddish literary critic, who has visited the Soviet Union in recent years. Mr. Smoliar, one of the few who survived the creation of a resistance movement, records the link between the Jews and partisan bands in the forests of White Russia.

KNOW NAZI RECORD

PARIS — Entries for an essay prize for school children in Paris showed recently that an overwhelming majority of the children knew about the scope of Nazi crimes during World War II.

The subject for the annual contest sponsored by the Association of Former Deportees and Concentration Camp Inmates was "What Do You Know About the Concentration Camps of the War?"

The 7,000 responses submitted so far showed that the children knew a great deal about France's travail during the war and about the Nazi record.

Why this new symbol for Industrial National? Because we've changed.

We've grown, for one thing. But not just in size or number of offices. You'll find our banking services have been expanded, improved, made more efficient and convenient. The people at Industrial National are committed more firmly than ever to giving you not just competent service, but cheerful, interested attention. You'll find all of our 47 neighborhood offices reflect this friendly, informal atmosphere. And there's another reason why we've changed our symbol. Once we were a Rhode Island bank. Now we're a Southern New England bank, serving this whole vital, vibrant region (that's why we no longer say Industrial National Bank of Rhode Island, but just Industrial National). Over the years, we've grown bigger by emphasizing the little things. And that's what we plan to continue doing — to keep Industrial National a good neighbor you can bank on.

Reporter Helen Bloom Traces Search Into Background Of Nazi R. J. Burros

MIDDLETOWN, N.Y. — The recent exposure of two neo-Nazi leaders as Jewish in background was due to different reporters for different publications. The New York Times sent McCandlish Phillips to track down Ku Klux Klan member Daniel Burros. When his story appeared, and Mr. Burros apparently committed suicide, Reporter Helen Bloom was told by the editor of the Middletown Times Herald-Record to check into the background of a local Nazi, Robert Joseph Burros.

Originally, she tried to find out if the two neo-Nazis were related, but when his mother wouldn't answer her question and she was unable to get in touch with him, Miss Bloom began serious digging. In files at her newspaper was a signed statement that he had once been absent from high school on Yom Kippur, and at the high school he had attended was a record showing that he had named a temple as his religious affiliation. The rabbi there gave her the date on which Mr. Burros became Bar Mitzvah.

Miss Bloom, sherlocking further, called his unlisted New York City telephone number. When he answered the phone, she asked the policy of the National Renaissance Party, of which he was regional director and national secretary, on accepting Jews as members.

"Well, we don't," she reports Burros as saying, and then as praising the dead Daniel Burros lavishly. He denied that he had any relation to the Jewish faith, denied being related to a Jewish uncle in Middletown, and gave a false birthplace and date.

She continued, "Burros was in Newburgh when I contacted him on Nov. 8 to find out if he had ever been affiliated with the B'nai B'rith's Anti-Defamation League.

"The party's directors had set a meeting for the next night to decide Burros' fate.

"Burros was aware of this when he asked me in a shaky voice, 'I was just wondering, Miss Bloom, do you find your health is good these days? Because you just better watch your step. Because things may get sort of unhealthy around the Times Herald-Record building. You know, there are other kinds of assassinations besides character assassinations.'

"I asked in almost a flip manner, 'Are you threatening me, Mr. Burros?'

"His voice got shakier, as did my rapidly typing fingers, as he replied, 'You can interpret that anyway you please. Now is there anything else?' he growled.

"Mr. Burros, were you ever affiliated with the Anti-Defamation League?"

"His phone slammed down. Psychiatrists from the state mental health hospital called to warn me Burros is a sick man, which I knew. But there was nothing to do but continue writing the stories and hope I didn't look too much like a sitting duck."

Miss Bloom "hung on her end of the phone" while the fuhrer, Joseph H. Madole, put the local Nazi membership to a vote on the question of allowing Burros to remain in the party. They had gathered earlier in party headquarters to discuss his Jewish background.

Nobody opposed allowing Robert Burros to remain in the party, but the members voted unanimously against allowing him to retain any offices he held. "I'm afraid that the officers simply feel it would be detrimental to the interests of the organization for him to be national secretary," said Madole, and that it would be "difficult to explain a Jew in national office to the San Francisco members."

So far as Miss Bloom and the Middletown Times Herald-Record were concerned, that ended their news story. In an editorial on Nov. 16, the Herald-Record editor spoke of its pride in the story, written despite outright lies and threats against the reporter's life, in the "classic tradition of courageous journalism." The paper's "fact-finding expedition" obviously had hurt the Nazis.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS TO MEET
NEW YORK, N.Y. — Establishment of research programs at rabbinical seminaries in the field of pastoral psychology of grief therapy and bereavement will be considered by the Jewish Funeral Directors of America at their 38th annual convention on Dec. 13 through 16 at the Fontainebleau Hotel, Miami Beach, Fla.

Guest speakers at the convention will include Governor Hayden Burns of Florida; Mayor Elliot Roosevelt of Miami; Dr. Samson R. Weiss, executive vice president of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, Rabbi Mayer Abramowitz of Miami Beach and Rabbi Julius Nodel of St. Louis.

3 Religious Faiths To Maintain Joint Race Relations Office

DETROIT — Protestant and Jewish groups have agreed to join Detroit's Roman Catholics in the maintenance of a joint office on race relations.

The directors of the Detroit Council of Churches, representing 850 Protestant congregations, voted unanimously recently to accept a Catholic invitation to contribute about $9,000 annually to a $27,000 budget to establish the office.

The Jewish Community Council has agreed to furnish 20 percent of the total — $5,400.

Histadrut Sets $5,000,000 Goal For 1966

NEW YORK — The 42nd annual convention of the National Committee for Labor Israel adopted a $5,000,000 goal for the 1966 Israel Histadrut campaign and an additional $2,000,000 for the American Histadrut Development Foundation. Histadrut is Israel's national federation of labor.

The quota is based on the overall budget of the Histadrut Assistance Fund in Israel, which will amount to $10,630,000 in 1966, according to the report by Yehoshua Levy, Histadrut treasurer. The Histadrut executive will provide about half of this amount while the National Committee will seek the balance.

The budget covers 10 categories: health services, education and culture, vocational training, scholarship fund, mutual aid institutions, immigrant absorption, physical training, youth centers, aid to Arab workers and aid to religious workers.

Special emphasis will be placed, in the U. S. campaign, on sponsoring major health and cultural projects in immigrant communities in Israel and on the Histadrut scholarship fund for secondary and vocational training, according to Dr. Sol Stein, national director.

Aharon Becker, secretary-general of Histadrut, said in a message to the convention, "Histadrut in Israel is approaching its 10th convention in January, facing problems resulting from major social and economic changes and the increased membership of the labor federation, now approaching the first million.

"We are satisfied with the results of the last Knesset elections which also pose new tasks and commitments for Histadrut. In meeting and fulfilling them, we count on the continuous assistance from devoted friends and partners like those gathered in New York now at your convention for Labor Israel."

President Johnson extended greetings to the convention in a message to Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein, chairman of the National Committee for Labor Israel. "Over the years," the President said in his message, "Histadrut has played a significant role in helping the people of Israel to advance and achieve a fuller way of life.

"It has been a guiding force in Israel's remarkable progress in the fields of medical care, vocational training, culture and education. May the future of your enterprise and of Histadrut be as productive as in the past."

Since its founding in 1924, the National Committee has raised $72,400,000 to help finance 1,032 projects and institutions in Israel. These include 601 medical centers, clinics, hospitals and related facilities; 146 cultural centers; 70 children's institutions, including five children's villages, old age homes, 47 vocational schools and training projects, 59 libraries, 27 synagogues and other religious institutions, and 25 sports centers and facilities.

More than $500,000 has been transferred to the Histadrut Scholarship Fund in Israel during the past eight years, mainly for vocational training.

The committee also engages in educational activities in the Western Hemisphere, promotes tourism in Israel, and serves as a bridge between the American and Israel labor movements.

Joseph Schlossberg was re-elected president of the organization. Rabbi Weinstein was elected honorary president. Dr. Stein was re-elected national executive director; Israel Stolarsky, associate director; and Paul L. Goldman, associate secretary.

One of the highlights of the convention was a testimonial luncheon in honor of Schlossberg, the 90-year-old leader who was hailed as a "patriarch of the American labor movement."

Nahum Shamir, Israel's economic minister to the United States told the delegates that Israel faces a threefold economic challenge: Israel's annual population growth of 5% through mass immigration; its very high budget for needed defense; and its rapid rate of economic development which "must be kept up if the gap between exports and imports is to be closed, and Israel is to achieve a self-sustained economy."

Rabbi Mordecai Waxman was elected chairman of the American Histadrut Cultural Exchange Institute at the close of a two-day annual conference of its board of trustees.

The conference adopted an extensive program for an exchange of lecturers and for joint seminars between American unions and educational institutions of the Histadrut.

Says He Started World War II

LONDON — West Germany's Director of Public Prosecutions arrived here recently to see a filmed interview with a former Nazi officer who lives behind an incredible security curtain and says he started World War II.

The British Broadcasting Corporation announced yesterday that Egon Westermann would see a preview of an interview with Alfred Naujocks, 54, ex-major in the Nazi Secret Service.

Naujocks, who spent four years in prison for war crimes, says he started the war on instructions from Nazi Security Chief Reinhard Heydrich. He says he went with troops in Polish army uniforms to the Polish border town of Glatz on Aug. 31, 1939, stormed the radio station, and broadcast an attack on Hitler and Nazi Germany.

Hitler then told the German people that because of the broadcast Germany would take action against Poland, and the war began.

Hits Induction On Political Grounds

NEW YORK — The director of the Selective Service System was urged by the American Jewish Congress to prevent local draft boards from inducting political dissenters as a form of punishment.

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey was urged, in a letter, to tell boards they cannot revoke deferments and draft men "as a means of silencing political dissent."

Howard M. Squadron, who signed the letter, said that Selective Service officials in Delaware and Michigan have regarded anti-war protests by students as grounds for immediate induction.

Squadron, chairman of the AJCongress' commission on law and social action, said such action is "improper" and that "selection of inductees on political grounds is clearly unconstitutional."

"It is not permitted by the Selective Service law and it is absolutely prohibited under the Bill of Rights," he declared.

ENGAGED — Mr. and Mrs. Harry Halpern of 82 Gaskill Street, Woonsocket, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marjorie Iris, to Norman Stuart Bean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Bean of 15 Rosewood Drive, Worcester, Mass.

Miss Halpern, a graduate of Woonsocket High School, attended Mount Ida Junior College and is a student in the medical secretarial program at Bryant College.

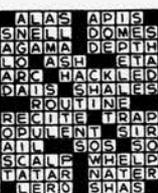

Mr. Bean, an alumnus of Classical High School, Worcester, is in his senior year at Clark University in the School of Business Administration. He is also on the athletic staff at Bancroft School, Worcester.

ANTI-SEMITIC INCIDENTS
NEW YORK — Reports of two anti-Semitic incidents in Hungary, one in Budapest and the other in the village of Balaton Boglar, have reached here from reliable sources abroad.

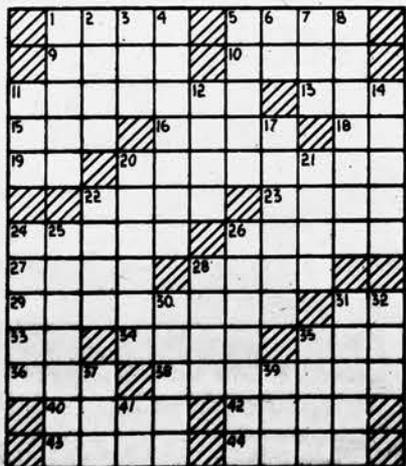

The Budapest incident involved smearing of a swastika on the walls of the Jewish Community Center. In the village of Balaton Boglar, the target was the Jewish cemetery, where thirty tombstones were found to have been broken.

Rejects Arab Plan To Destroy Israel

PARIS — Russia rejected a renewed Arab request for support in the plan to liquidate Israel. The Kremlin consistently turned a deaf ear to similar Arab overtures. The Soviet Union is not in a position where she needs to play up to Egypt. Nasser waits anxiously for a long-term moratorium on his $4,000m. debt.

The Soviet trade mission due in Cairo is expected to grant only a short-term moratorium of a year or two, which will leave Nasser in Russia's pocket.

Egypt is doubly engaged — dependent on Russia for arms and on America for wheat.

Rumania appointed a minister to head its legation in Israel which had a Charge d' Affaires.

This step is seen as part of Rumania's world-wide aim of improving relations with other countries and in taking an increasingly independent stand in world affairs.

Israel Certain
Of Continuing
French Amity

JERUSALEM — Foreign Minister Golda Meir declared that Israel had no doubt about France's continuing friendship, and that French amity with Arab countries did not have to work to the detriment of Israel.

Mrs. Meir expressed the deep friendship existing between France and Israel. France has always supported the concept that the best guarantee for peace in the Middle East was a strong Israel, she said. Israel's strength was due largely to France, she added.

FEWER WEDDINGS

JERUSALEM — The number of marriages among the Jewish population in Israel is progressively declining, according to recent statistical research. In 1950 there were 15 marriages for each 1,000 persons but in 1964 there were only eight per 1,000. Thus in 1964 the number of marriages was halved as compared with 1950.
