'Albion And Jerusalem' Author Harold Fisch, Bar-Ilan English Chairman, Visiting Brown

By LOIS ATWOOD

The book as a whole shows with splendid clarity what can be done by way of illuminating an area both of English literature and of European intellectual history by a scholar and critic who is at home in both Albion and Jerusalem. There have been too many dabblers in this field. . . smattering about with inadequate knowledge. Mr. Fisch's scholarly and eloquent book sets a new standard for this kind of discussion."

So wrote David Dalches, never noted as a gentle critic, in the February issue of "Commentary." Mr. Dalches was reviewing "Albion and Jerusalem: The Hebraic Factor in Seventeenth-Century Literature," by Harold Fisch, chairman of the English Department of Bar-Ilan University in Israel and presently a visiting professor in the Department of English of Brown University. The volume, published earlier in England, has just been published here by Schocken. Its writing occupied some 12 years, said Mr. Fisch last week. The subject combines his Jewish and English literature interests, and "attempts to fuse the two . . . so bringing to bear English and Jewish scholarship. This is the novelty of the thing." The book is a lucid exposition of the writings of Bacon, Milton, Hobbes, Jeremy Taylor and some others.

Nor is this his only recent publication. Professor Fisch has "just now produced a Haggada for Passover, with a new translation and introduction, which is being presently marketed in the United States by the Jerusalem Tenach Incorporated. It's very, very remarkable, a most beautiful thing," with typography and illustrations of unusual excellence. Mr. Fisch provided the translation, introduction and notes for the Hebrew-English volume.

The bearded professor has also just finished a job of Bible translation commissioned by the Koren Publishing Company, an English version of the Bible in which there will be no Greek-type names. All are based on Hebrew. For example, Moses is now Moshe, Eve has become Havva, Isaac is Yizhaq, and the wicked Egyptians are Mizriyans. Some of the name-changes, predicts the translator, will raise eyebrows. The book should be ready within the next year, at the low price of $3.50 — since it was manufactured in Israel.

Mr. Fisch was "so glad to come out as a visiting professor" since he needs access to big libraries for two other books he is working on, one an interpretive study of some of Shakespeare's major tragedies, the other an edition of a 17th century text, "Man's Mortality," by "an eccentric writer called Richard Overton." Liverpool University will publish this when it is ready.

During his visit here Mr. Fisch is staying with Rabbi Yeshayahu Barkay, assistant principal of the Providence Hebrew Day School, who is also from Israel. It was through the good offices of Mrs. Archie Smith ("who has been extraordinarily helpful — a kind of mother and sister — she arranged all this") that arrangements were made for him to stay with the Barkays. Mrs. Smith has often been a friend to visitors to Rhode Island. Anybody who needs a kosher meal is likely to turn up at her home.

Since he is staying here such a relatively small time, it was impossible for his wife and four children to accompany the visiting professor. Mrs. Fisch teaches in a high school in B'nai Beraq, and their three sons and daughter, ranging in age from 17 to seven, are all in school.

A few members of his family are in the United States. An uncle, Rabbi I. L. Swift, lives in Englewood, N.J., and a landscape-painter cousin in New York City. He last met his cousin in Bergen Belsen in 1945, when the cousin had just come out of hiding. Mr. Fisch's parents live in Jerusalem. His father, Rabbi Solomon Fisch, who is now retired, was editor of many Soncino books of the Bible.

Another friendship has also been renewed, after a lapse of 22 years. When Mr. Fisch arrived in Boston he was met by Manfred Weil of Providence, with whom he became acquainted back in the thirties when they were "pen friends." Mr. Weil, a member of Temple Emanu-El, found out when Professor Fisch was arriving and arranged to meet him.

Benjamin Kane Philanthropist Dies At 77

Benjamin N. Kane of 500 Angell Street, a leader in Jewish cultural and philanthropic activities and builder of a business empire, died Wednesday at Bay Harbor Island, Miami Beach, Fla., at the age of 77. He was the husband of Esther (Markensohn) Kane.

In the hold of an immigrant ship, he came from Russia to New York City when he was nine years old. In 1963 he was able to write a check for $250,000 to the building fund of Miriam Hospital, of which he was a founder.

Mr. Kane's major business successes began about 1924 with the founding of the Interstate Home Equipment Company, which sold pots, pans, mattresses, silverware and other furnishings for as little as 50 cents down and 50 cents a week during the depression. With capital from this and other enterprises, he went into Florida real estate development. In 1936 he built the Belmar Hotel, one of the finest luxury hotels in Miami Beach, and was later the principal developer of Bay Harbor Island, where he had a winter home.

Before his business success, he was a newsboy on the Lower East Side of New York, New York policeman, salesman, store manager, and pharmacist who at one time owned six drug stores here. He also served on the Providence City Council for four terms beginning in 1923.

Mr. Kane was former chairman of the board of the Mercantile (Continued on Page 10)

Matsushita Electric Refuses To Yield To Boycott Pressure

NEW YORK — The Matsushita Electric Corporation today declared that under no circumstances would it permit any of its 40 companies to yield to the threats or pressures of the Arab Boycott Office. The announcement came in answer to a published report that the multi-million dollar Japanese complex had refused to engage in trade relations with Israel.

In a letter to Arnold Forster, general counsel of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, K. Isomura, president of the Matsushita Corporation of America, said company policy is to "sell to anyone, anywhere in the world regardless of any individual country's boycotting policies." This policy, he asserted, applies to each of Matsushita's 40 separate divisions. Furthermore, Mr. Isomura said Matsushita "will be pleased to negotiate directly with representatives of Israeli purchasers."

Mr. Isomura attributed the boycott report to "misunderstandings which arise from language barriers." This was his explanation for several of the counts of alleged submission to Arab demands. In regard to one specific charge, that Matsushita had refused to sell its dishwashers to Israel, he said

"an erroneous conclusion" had been drawn. Matsushita dishwashers are not being exported to any country as they are manufactured only for domestic sale in Japan.

The issue developed when the Israeli government cited the Matsushita Corporation among other telecommunications and electrical equipment companies which had allegedly given in to the Arab economic boycott against Israel.

According to Mr. Forster, Arab boycott propaganda techniques "lean more on appearance than on fact." He said boycott officials often use trick devices to create the impression that their blacklist is effective. He gave the following examples:

"They will announce that they have taken a firm off the blacklist which has never been on it, or they will write to a company that has never invested in Israel and is not contemplating such action. When the company writes back to that effect, the reply is released to the press to demonstrate that still another firm has been stopped from cooperating with Israel."

In a report made public last month, the Anti-Defamation League described the Arab economic boycott against Israel as having "dwindled into little more than a publicity campaign" which for political reasons "tries hard to create the myth of ever-increasing effectiveness."

Bridge Expert To Write Columns For Jewish Herald

Robert E. Starr, Rhode Island's first Life Master, will start a series of Contract Bridge articles with this issue. (See Page 8).

Foremost Contract Bridge instructor and Tournament Director, Mr. Starr is the winner of National, New England and Rhode Island Bridge championships. He is now teaching and running Bridge Tournaments in Rhode Island.

Israel Bond Drive Sets $400,000 Goal For 1965

A goal of $400,000 for the 1965 Israel Bond Campaign was set at a meeting of the Rhode Island Executive Committee for State of Israel Bonds, it was announced by Judge Frank Licht, executive committee chairman.

The campaign again will be headed by Joseph Thaler, general chairman; Dr. Ilie Berger, honorary chairman; and Rabbi Eli A. Bohnen, Stanley Grossman, Judge Frank Licht, Marvin S. Holland and Robert A. Riesman, associate chairmen. Paul Bernon and Gen. Leonard Holland will serve as Woonsocket and Pawtucket chairmen, respectively. Chairmen for Cranston and Newport will be selected.

At the meeting Mr. Thaler delivered his report on the results of the 1964 Israel Bond drive.

The Rhode Island campaign raised $320,200, exceeding its $300,000 objective. The sales of Israel Bonds nationally totalled $85,380,350 against a $85,000,000 goal — an increase of 23% over the previous year — and the first time that any major Jewish organization raising funds for Israel reached its goal since the establishment of the State of Israel in 1948, according to Mr. Thaler.

Highlights of the R. I. Executive Committee meeting include a discussion of plans for a series of campaign events to be held by both the Men's and Women's Divisions.

A special sales committee and a community-wide sales committee will be formed to contact people for bond purchases.

In addition, committees will be set up to contact banks, unions, organizations and temples and synagogues — to assure coverage in these areas.

PAIR GET DEATH

LONDON — A Russian Jew and his wife were sentenced to death in a court in Minsk after being convicted of "economic crimes," according to the Minsk daily newspaper, "Zviazda."

The newspaper named the couple as Semion Borisovich Briskin and his wife Celia. Three other persons, non-Jews, were convicted in the same trial, "Zviazda" reported.

Council Denies Presidents' Group Right To Speak For 5,500,000 U. S. Jews

NEW YORK — The Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations was accused of having no mandate to represent all American Jews. The anti-Zionist American Council for Judaism charged last week that it is a front for Israel.

The Presidents' Conference, (with a membership of 19 presidents) last week attacked West Germany for stopping its military aid to Israel under Arab pressure.

The Council said it takes no position on any form of military or economic aid to any foreign state, believing the United States should be free to act on behalf of all Americans.

A Council spokesman insisted the Presidents' Conference is a "paper organization," and rejected its claim to "speak for 5,500,000 Americans of Jewish faith."

The purpose of the Conference, the Council charged, "is to give support for specific military and political policies of the state of Israel."

Noting that Zionists have a total United States membership of 550,000, while there are 5,500,000 American Jews, the Council said, "There has never been a poll or test of whether United States Jews not affiliated with Zionist organizations support Zionist military and political policies voiced in the name of '5,000,000' by the Presidents' Conference."

The Presidents' Conference approaches the Department of State and other executive branches "whenever Zionist policies are at issue," usually involving Middle East policies, the council charged.

"There is no Jewish Middle East policy for the United States from the national interests of our country," the Council concluded. "Neither the Presidents' Conference nor any other Jewish organization can speak on behalf of American Jews. We support President Johnson's recent call for freedom of action in the Middle East to pursue our interests there and elsewhere, without involvement of Jews as partisans in these sensitive, political issues."

Vermont, visited by Samuel de Champlain in 1609, was the first state to join the Union after the original 13 states, says the Automobile Legal Association.

Miriam Hospital To Hold 39th Annual Meeting

Miriam Hospital will hold its 39th Annual Meeting on Tuesday at 8:15 P.M. in the Sopkin Auditorium. Reports for 1964 will be presented by Isadore Paisner, president; Harry A. Schwartz, treasurer; Dr. Stanley D. Simon, president of the Medical Staff Association; Mrs. Ray E. Friedman, president of the Women's Association, and Dr. I. Herbert Scheffer, executive director of the hospital.

A progress report on the status of construction of the new hospital will be given, and officers and trustees elected. A coffee hour will follow the meeting to which the public is invited.

The nominating committee, Major-General Leonard Holland, chairman, and Alter Boyman, Archie Fain, Ray E. Friedman, Edmund Wexler, Max Winograd and Mrs. Eugene M. Nelson, will present the slate of officers and trustees for 1965-1966.

Arab Council Against Israel Threatens Boycott Of Philip

LONDON — The Arab Boycott Council against Israel is threatening to boycott Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II. The Prince accepted an invitation to a party to be run jointly by the Women's International Zionist Organization and Prince Philip's pet children's aid charity aboard a ship now being completed in a Glasgow shipyard for the Israeli merchant marine, "The Sunday Express" reported here recently.

The vessel is the Nili, a $5,600,000, 6,000-ton ferry being finished at the yards of the Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., in Glasgow, for the Geneva-based Somerfin Company. It will be dedicated soon on the Thames. WIZO and Prince Philip's children aid charity jointly have scheduled a gala party to be held aboard the Nili when it arrives here, under the sponsorship of a number of noted personalities, including Mrs. Elaine Blond, sister of the late Lord Marks, and Mrs. Michael Steff.

A spokesman for Buckingham Palace refused to comment on the Arab Boycott Council's announcement, declaring that Prince Philip was interested primarily in the fact that the ship was being built in Scotland and saying that the Palace was under the impression that the party was being held solely for the benefit of the Prince's own charity organization. The Boycott Council at Cairo has issued a statement, the "Sunday Express" reported, declaring: "We are extremely upset that Prince Philip should appear to align himself so closely with the cause of Zionism, our bitterest enemies."

Ban Asked In Canada On 'Hate' Literature

MONTREAL — A renewed plea for the passage by the Canadian Parliament of a law banning the distribution of anti-Semitic and other types of hate literature was voiced here by Sydney M. Harris, chairman of the National Community Relations Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress.

Mr. Harris made his statement in reply to one issued by the Rev. J. R. Hord, secretary of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service of the United Church of Canada. The minister had declared himself opposed to legislation that would punish distributors of hate literature, saying that sending such men to jail "was not the answer." In his answer, Mr. Harris declared:

"The Canadian Jewish Congress is primarily interested in the enactment of legislation which will translate into law what is already declared to be the public policy of Canada — that every person under the Queen's protection is entitled to have his human dignity and integrity secured by the state."

Congregation Ohawe Sholom Organizes Drive For $150,000 Synagogue-Center

Final plans for the $150,000 Building Fund Campaign for the new Synagogue Center of Congregation Ohawe Sholom, Pawtucket, will be made at the campaign committee cocktail hour meeting on Sunday at 6:30 P.M. in the Synagogue vestry. Edwin I. Adler, general chairman, has designated Matthew Preiss, Harold Pansy and Carl Passman as campaign coordinators. They will meet with members who wish to volunteer for specific duties in the campaign. The Sisterhood, led by Mrs. Abraham Mal, president, will be host at the cocktail hour.

Committees which are being organized are Budget and Finance, Building Planning Commission, Publicity, Legal, Memorials, Youth, Parent-Teachers Association, New Prospects and General Campaign.

More than a third of the needed funds were raised at an earlier organizational meeting, when the 41 members present pledged a total of $51,500 over a five-year period. The drive starts officially on April 19.

Joseph Young, president of the Men's Club, which has planned a symposium on urban renewal at 8 P.M. on Sunday, said that in the path of every neighborhood modernization program "is a religious institution that was built by dedicated people with their own money. Sometimes such an institution falls by the wayside because of the obstacles involved in its relocation, but when its leadership rolls up its sleeves fast enough and actively enough, it is not only saved but... vastly improved in its new setting."

Obituaries

MRS. ALEC HURWITZ
Funeral services for Mrs. Celia Hurwitz of 12 Blackstone Boulevard, who died March 5, were held on Sunday at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Stoughton, Mass. She was a lamp and picture buyer for the Shepard Company.

The wife of Alec Hurwitz and a daughter of the late Jacob and Sarah (Fox) Wainshalbaum, she was born in Rockland, Mass. She and her husband had lived in Providence for only six months. For three years before coming here, she had been a lamp manufacturer's representative in Syracuse, N.Y. Earlier they had owned a retail furniture business in Glens Falls, N.Y.

Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Jonathan J. Hurwitz, a University of Rhode Island student; a daughter, Miss Toby Hurwitz of San Francisco; Mrs. Samuel Kramer of South Weymouth, Mass., and Miss Marjorie Wainshalbaum of Brockton, Mass., and two brothers, Benjamin Wainshal of Greenfield, Mass., and Philip Wainshal of Claremont, N. H.

DAVID RUBINSTEIN
Funeral services for David Rubinstein, 77, of 99 Hillside Avenue, who died March 3, were held the following day in the Perlman Funeral Home in Worcester. Burial was in B'nai B'rith Cemetery, Worcester.

Mr. Rubinstein, who retired in 1948, had been a self-employed roofer in Providence, where he had lived for 62 years. He was a native of Romania, and a son of the late Haskell and Rebecca Rubinstein. Survivors are a sister, Mrs. Bertha Feldman, and a brother, Joseph Rubin, both of Worcester, and several nieces and nephews.

GEORGE TANNENBAUM
Funeral services for George Tannenbaum, who died on Monday, were held March 9 at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

A retired self-employed watchmaker who formerly lived on Holden Street, Mr. Tannenbaum was living at the Jewish Home for Tannenbaum, and had been a Providence resident since 1910.

He was the husband of the late Rose (Shapiro) Tannenbaum who died in 1942, and the late Fannie Ginsburg-Tannenbaum. There are no immediate survivors.

MRS. DAVID GUBERNICK
Funeral services for Mrs. Rebecca (Kofsky) Gubernick, 87, of 99 Hillside Avenue, who died

A subscription to the Herald is a good gift for the person who "has everything" else. Call 724-0200.

March 7, were held on Tuesday at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery. She was the widow of David Gubernick.

A daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kofsky, she was born in Odessa, Russia, in March, 1878. A Providence resident from 1920 to 1933, she moved to New York, and returned to this city in 1961.

Survivors include four sons, Max Goodwin of Hollywood, Calif., George Goodwin of New York City, Alfred I. Goodwin and Irving I. Goodwin, both of Providence; two daughters, Mrs. Jack Schlacter of Long Island, N.Y., and Mrs. Anna Kelman of Providence; 10 grandchildren, and 16 great-grandchildren.

ROBERT GILMAN
Funeral services for Robert Gilman of 29 Vista Drive, Rumford, who died unexpectedly in New York on March 2, were held Friday at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel. Burial was in Lincoln Park Cemetery. He was the husband of Elizabeth (Kingston) Gilman.

Mr. Gilman was fleet transportation manager for Ward Foods Inc. and had worked for the firm for 39 years. He had lived in Rumford for the past three years, and in Coventry from 1938 to 1961. He was born June 10, 1904, in Worcester, Mass., a son of the late Max and Clara (Uffer) Gilman.

He was a member of Roosevelt Lodge 42, F. & A.M., the Palestine Temple, a past president of the Coventry Lions Club and the Providence Central Lions Club, past governor of the 42nd district Lions International, a member of the Greater Providence YMCA, the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and a past president of the Highway Safety Associates.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Robert Knight of Coventry; a brother, Frank Gilman of Cranston; three sisters, Mrs. Raymond Anthony of Providence, Mrs. Henry Robinson of Miami, Fla. and Mrs. Abraham Medloff of Red Wood City, Calif.; a stepson, Roland Bizier; a stepdaughter, Maureen Bizier, both of Rumford; and three grandchildren.

ELMAN CORRECTION
Funeral services for Benjamin Elman were held on Feb. 28 at Temple Beth Israel, rather than at the Max Sugarman Memorial Chapel, as The Herald reported last week.

Card of Thanks
The family of the late BESSIE BERKOWITZ wish to express their sincere appreciation to their friends and relatives for the kind expressions of sympathy offered to them during their recent bereavement.

Anti-Poverty Programs Support Asked Of Entire American Jewish Community

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Active support of national and local activities and initiation of new projects to meet "the major domestic challenge of our times" was asked of the 5,500,000 members of the American Jewish community at the final session of a conference sponsored here by the Religious Action Center of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations early this month. The recommendations for combating problems of poverty and economics covered programs in cooperation with federal and state agencies, with other religious and civic groups, and in the synagogue with clergymen, businessmen, professionals and young people.

In the forefront of Jewish involvement in the anti-poverty campaign will be the social action committees of the 660-member Reform temples of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The synagogues will receive a special report on the conference and its recommendations.

At the final session, Albert Vorspan, Director of Social Action of the UAHC, said that Jews have usually been in the "forefront of social advances but unfortunately too many of our constituents and Americans do not know poor people, just as too many individuals do not know Negroes.

"We live on the manicured country-club side of town or, even better, in the outer reaches of suburbia. The poor are invisible to us... The poor are abstractions, statistics, problems; they are not human beings."

Among concrete recommendations made during the meeting was that of Rabbi Balfour Brickner, director of interfaith activities for UAHC, who proposed the establishment, by suburban Jews, of centers in downtown areas "from which will emanate such human services as remedial and tutorial programs, occupational and vocational training projects, and aid to working mothers."

Dr. Oscar Ornati, a specialist in economic affairs at the New School for Social Research in New York City, called for the development of systems and personnel through which social work can be broadened and made to reach more people.

Dr. Avineri To Speak At Midwestern Hillels

NEW YORK — Dr. Shlomo Avineri, well-known Israeli educator and author, arrived here on Wednesday for an extended lecture tour of Hillel Foundations at midwest Universities.

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations conduct a cultural and educational program concerned with involving American Jewish youth in problems facing world Jewry and giving them a broad understanding of Israel's role in the creative survival of the Jewish people.

His lecture topics will be: "How to Build a Nation and Preserve Democracy," with Israel as a case study; "A Contrast Between Affluence and Poverty in Israel," "The Rise and Decline of the Kibbutz," and "The Immigrant and the Clash of Cultures."

Born in Poland in 1933, Dr. Avineri came to pre-Israel Palestine in 1939. From 1951 to 1954 he served in the Israel Defense Forces, then continued his education at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and at the London School of Economics and Political Science. He has lectured in the Department of Political Science at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, and published many scholarly articles in political science journals.

$24,700,000 Pledged By United States To UNRWA Budget For Arab Refugees

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The United States is now pledged to contribute $24,700,000 in cash and foodstuffs in 1965 to aid Arab refugees being sheltered and fed by the United Nations in four regions of Israel's borders, but warned that the UN agency performing this task must effect economies, especially by "long-needed rectification" of its relief rolls.

The American pledge and statement were made here by U. S. Ambassador Francis T. Pimpton, at the UN's annual pledging conference, convened in the General Assembly hall to raise funds for financing the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East.

Altogether, nearly $34,000,000 was pledged in cash, goods and services toward UNRWA's 1965 budget, totaling more than $36,000,000. In announcing Washington's pledge, Mr. Pimpton also told the UN that his Government plans on reducing its pledge by at least $1,000,000 next year.

He said that, in any event, America's share of the 1965 UNRWA payments would be no more than 70 per cent of the amounts raised. He told the UN that Washington felt its share of UNRWA contributions, which are made on a voluntary basis, has been "unduly high." Since the agency started operating in 1950, the U.S. has consistently contributed 70 per cent of the total budgets, giving this UN operation a total of about a half billion dollars.

UNRWA aids more than 1,200,000 Arabs on its rolls, most of them sheltered in camps in the Gaza Strip, which is under Egyptian administration, and in Jordan, Syria and Lebanon. The issue of "clarification" of the relief rolls, swollen with the names of many thousands of refugees known to be dead, as well as with many other ration-card holders known to be ineligible for the relief has been a tough one here for years. Laurence Michelmore, the American head of UNRWA, promised last fall to submit a special report to this year's Assembly, dealing with "rectification." However, due to the fact that this year's Assembly had been prevented from debating any issue, this report has not yet been filed.

Among other pledges announced were one of $5,400,000 by Britain, $1,200,000 by Canada, $500,000 by West Germany and nearly $300,000 by France. The 13 Arab members of the United Nations pledged altogether a total of about $500,000 which, they said, they will give to UNRWA in "goods and services."

Sabbath College Exams Rescheduled For Jews

NEWARK — Jewish high school students who observe the Sabbath have been alerted by Louis J. Cohen, chairman of the Community Relations Committee of the Jewish Community Council of Essex County, to the fact that the major college entrance scholarship examinations are generally given on Saturday.

Provision is made for a Jewish student to take these and other tests on a day other than Saturday, he said, if the student acts "well in advance of the test date to be eligible for an alternate time and place."

Cohen explained that the student should acquaint himself with the regulations governing these special requests. For instance, he said, the testing service may require a Sabbath observer to apply at least five weeks in advance of the regular testing date.

Sometimes the applicant is asked to provide a certificate from a rabbi, and frequently the applicant will need extra time for travel arrangements, since special testing centers may be set up some distance from the student's home.

"The student faced with this situation should seek information on special arrangements from his school or testing service," Cohen said.

Are We Afraid To Speak?

Back in the days of "Bundles for Britain," an ill-dressed emaciated man entered the Chicago "Bundles" office. It was cold outside, with the wind-whipped chill so common around Lake Michigan. In almost unintelligible English he asked for an overcoat. One of the workers spoke to him in German, asking if he wouldn't also like a pair of gloves. He looked at her in horror when he heard the German syllables, stared around the place for a few seconds like a trapped animal, and ran to the door and down the street. He never came back for the overcoat.

For a refugee from Hitler's Germany to be frightened, not by the question he didn't want to hear, but by an American woman speaking German, was not strange during the second World War. It is not unusual today for a citizen of the USSR and similar countries to be afraid to be identified, to fear to voice an opinion. For Americans to feel this way, however, is shocking. For a United States citizen to be afraid of committing himself, whether the issue is local or national, is pretty horrifying.

The Star Chambers weren't publicized enough for most of us to fear that kind of trial. The FBI investigations into background, before men and women can be hired for defense projects, don't keep many Americans from working on naval bases or other federal installations.

Perhaps this fear of speaking out dates from the days of the unlamented Senator McCarthy, whose methods were frighteningly reminiscent of European courts: prove yourself innocent, the court assumes you are guilty. Maybe the many who applauded his unjust accusations suddenly realized that they could be in the same boat as the men facing his committee.

Whatever the reason, however it started, this land built by rugged individualists has become a country of outward conformists. Most people are afraid to say what they think, in any but a private situation, and some of them even then. How many parents will face a PTA meeting with the questions they want to ask? How many salesmen at a meeting with the sales manager just sit silent until one brave man breaks the ice? At a town meeting, only a few citizens have the strength of character to ask questions of the men they elected to office.

This isn't true of every American: right now in Selma, Alabama, people are standing up for what they are sure is right. But where were many of them 10 years ago, when it took moral courage to be a civil rights advocate?

Many of us are timid, but our fear of public commitment goes beyond timidity. When a delegate for elective office refuses to state his stand on such an important public issue as fair housing, and says he guesses he'll go along with the party, we are affronted. But he was lately one of us, and we are afraid, too. We shirk the necessities of citizenship, so that any lobbying group may succeed in a matter the majority of us oppose — but they make their viewpoint known. We don't.

Social Workers In New Wars

While the world's leaders seek ways to reduce the tensions that have led to the little hot wars and the immense and ever threatening cold war, today's social workers are in the forefront vigorously pursuing a whole set of new wars — the wars against poverty, disease, hunger, unemployment, slums, ignorance, racial and religious discrimination, mental illness — wars whose aim is not the destruction but the rebuilding of human lives. The professional social worker of today is a leader, bringing commitment and creativity to his profession — able to meet these problems, to fight these "wars" on the national and not just the local front. They must have know-how in dealing with the complex human problems brought about by automation, desegregation, a rising population of dependent children and aged persons, the atomization of the family unit, urban renewal — to name just a few.

Philanthropy, based merely on the application of human compassion, unaided by the knowledge of forces creating social problems or by the skill to treat either cause and effect is not enough. Today's social workers must be prepared to become both architects and builders of social policy.

The social workers must believe deeply in the dignity of the individual and accept his professional responsibilities to help people with pride, determination and optimism. He must exercise his full rights of citizenship with courage and conviction.

Never has the need been so acute for trained professional social workers in our voluntary and public welfare agencies to meet the desperate social problems that are emerging in our ever more complex urban society. And although the number of students enrolled in the 65 professional schools of social work has nearly doubled in the past decade, this is nowhere near meeting the immense demand for their services. There are at least 10,000 current social work vacancies which cannot be filled; 15,000 social workers would have to be recruited annually just to maintain existing services. Conservatively estimated some 50,000 new social work positions will be needed in the United States in the next decade as our population grows and human problems become more complex.

"Freed from charity, by the skill of his hands," is the heading of one of the ORT publications, and this explains the interest which Mrs. Harold Salk of Warwick has in the Organization for Rehabilitation through Training. "It educates, its gives a person dignity and independence," she says.

Mrs. Salk, president of the Rhode Island Chapter of ORT, has been a member of the organization for about six years. She is enthusiastic about its aims, and is hoping that eventually the local organization, which now has about 150 members, and which recently received an award from the national organization for its re-enrollment, will become large enough to have several Rhode Island chapters. At present, members come from the Greater Providence area — Providence, Cranston, Pawtucket, Warwick.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

While Listening To Dr. Sidney Goldstein

By Beryl Segal

Last Sabbath Night we were sitting at a Melavah Malkah at the Synagogue Mishkon Tfiloh on Summit Avenue. The Melavah Malkah, as you might know, is a late meal on Saturday night in honor of the departure of the Sabbath Queen. The late meal is accompanied by song and sadness. How can you sing and be sad at the same time? Only a Jew knew the secret of this. The songs were mixed with sadness at the departing of the day of rest and the beginning of the week with all its clamor and weariness. It was hated to take leave of the Sabbath.

This is the way we remember the Melavah Malkah in the house of our parents.

Here in the beautiful hall of the Shul the sadness was also due to a talk we heard from Dr. Sidney Goldstein. He spoke on the now famous Survey of the Jewish Population of Greater Providence. The study was done in 1963 and released about a year ago. Since then Dr. Goldstein has gone around to various groups in the area to explain the findings. There is, apparently, a great interest in the survey. This fact in itself is worth a survey. What is it that makes Jews so anxious to know about themselves? It certainly does not indicate indifference toward their Jewishness, and towards everything that concerns Jews. And this is good. The more we know the truth about ourselves, the better.

In this hall we heard some bitter truths about the state of Orthodoxy in Providence. After the preliminaries of "the nature of the survey, what we were looking for in this survey, how people responded," Dr. Goldstein came to the point that concerns this congregation most. The Orthodox worshippers are on the decline in the city. The survey shows that only 16 percent of the population said they were Orthodox. And that too was questioned by one of the audience. His impression was that there are even fewer than 16 percent.

My concern at this point is rather with the criteria for Jewishness chosen by the survey than with the kind of Jewishness. Among Jews the affiliation is different than with the population in general. A man is born into a Catholic family and he is forever with the Catholic church, unless something extraordinary happens. Similarly with the Protestant denominations. People usually are affiliated with the church of their fathers. But our division into three so-called "denominations" does not have the same strength as with the Christians. People change from Orthodox to Conservatism or Reform not because of conviction but because of many things. Very few are Conservative or Reform because of long soul searchings and philosophical considerations. The boundaries between the three forms of worship are very narrow and one passes over from one to the other almost without perception. One does not know what the whole cry is about. He is Conservative because he lives at a certain section of the town. He is Reform because his friends are Reform. He would be Orthodox if an Orthodox Shul were near his home. There was no period of doubt and of questioning the beliefs of one and the acceptance of the beliefs of another. They are Jews, all of them.

Similarly, the fact that one belongs to a certain form of worship does not prevent him from doing or not doing certain things. Witness the five practices that were taken as a basis for evaluation. Kindling of Sabbath lights; Lighting the Chanukah candles; Keeping Kashruth in the home; Attendance at a Seder on Passover; and Use of Kosher meats. These were supposed to show the adherence to traditional Jewishness. Even at that, many Providence households failed. Only one-third qualified to receive a Kosher label at the hand of the surveyors. The other two thirds were neither here nor there. They were moderate. They were doing these things sometimes. They were doing them for the sake of the children.

And it occurred to me as I was listening to Dr. Goldstein talk on the survey that perhaps the criteria for calling one house Traditional and the other Pareve is based on false premises. The fact that some do not kindle Sabbath lights may be due to the custom of going to a parent for the Sabbath meal. The fact that some do not buy Kosher meat may be due to the fact that they follow the strange custom of Kasheren the meat they buy at a Super Market at home. Where they get permission to do that escapes me, but it is a fact that it is being done.

Perhaps a better criterion would be to ask more fundamental questions about people's Jewishness. Such questions as Marriage, Circumcision, Bar Mitzvah, Zedokah, Burial, these would be more indicative of the identification of a person. Did a Rabbi officiate at his wedding? If there was a Rabbi, then they are Jewish. Was his son circumcised? If he was, then the family adheres to Jewish law. Does he prepare his son and his daughter for Bar Mitzvah? If he does, then he does not want his children to escape Jewishness. Does he respond to Jewish appeals for funds at home and abroad? If he does, then he carries the burden of Jewish needs and obligations on his shoulders. Does he have a plot of land in a Jewish Cemetery? If he does, then he should be counted among the Children of Israel.

Was Felix Frankfurter a Jew? He certainly was, but by what criteria? Certainly not by kindling Sabbath candles or attending a Seder on Passover. He was a Jew because though he did not know what it means, he wanted his friend to "say something in Hebrew" at his grave. The only thing Jewish about the funeral was the Kaddish his friend read. Nothing else. And the only thing Jewish about his life was the fact that he was circumcised.

Reduced to such simple but basic terms the face of the Jewish community will perhaps change radically. There will not be Orthodox, Conservative or Reform Jews, but Jews. And even the ones who are now considered as "secular" Jews will also be Jews.

In the meantime it is good that this survey was made, and that so many groups of Jews want to understand the results of the survey. This curiosity about the survey is perhaps as important as the answers they gave to the questions put to them by the survey.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper).

Dr. Gaon Says Americans Must Save Sephardic Judaism From Assimilation

NEW YORK — American Jews must establish an organized educational, religious and economic aid program to save Sephardic Judaism here and abroad from assimilation, Dr. Solomon Gaon, chief rabbi of Sephardic Jews in the British Commonwealth, declared Monday.

Dr. Gaon, currently visiting the United States to direct the Yeshiva University Sephardic Studies Program and the institution's second annual Sephardic Leadership Conference, urged that American Jews band together in a communal effort to help establish new Sephardic congregations; establish scholarship assistance programs for the training of new rabbis, teachers, and lay leaders; and make a joint effort to save the rich traditions and heritage of Sephardism.

"American Jews of Sephardic heritage must play a major role in saving Sephardic Judaism because of their numerical strength and the variety of Sephardic traditions that exist here. They must quickly find a remedy for their own problems so that they may play a major part in saving the Sephardim for Jewry and the Sephardic traditions for Judaism," said the rabbinical scholar.

Sephardic Jews in the United States have inherited a tradition of disunity which has been a tragic quality of Sephardic history since the expulsion from Spain, he stated. Settling throughout North Africa and the Middle East, they formed small congregations which would not establish a common federation in order to preserve their common interests.

"The consequence was not only weakening of Sephardic influence on world Jewry, but also the gradual and consistent decline of spiritual and religious standards," Dr. Gaon declared. Sephardic Jews today compose 12.5 percent of all Jewry throughout the world.

Dr. Gaon said that the establishment of scholarships for young men and women is essential if the greatest hopes of Sephardic Jewry are to be realized. By creating a new spiritual leadership we shall be able to raise a new generation of intelligentsia which has always been the essential characteristic of Sephardic communal life, he said.

"We also need Jewish Sephardic scholars. Sephardic scholarship has been at a standstill for at least two centuries now. There is much of our history unexplored, so many creations of Sephardic spirit unknown, that it will take many generations of scholars to make up for this deficiency," he concluded.

Dr. Gaon is director of the Sephardic Studies Program at Yeshiva University. The programs train students of Sephardic background for positions of leadership, as rabbis, teachers, and communal leaders.

Evangelical Vicar Says Nazis Active In Church

ESSEN — A local Evangelical vicar, himself a former lieutenant in the German army, has alleged that former active supporters of the Nazi regime hold influential positions in both the Catholic and Evangelical Churches in West Germany.

The vicar, the Rev. Arnold Haumann, criticized both Churches for building a "wall of silence" around the Nazi past, thus screening both Nazi crimes and those who participated in them.

Demanding the removal of all Nazi sympathizers from official positions in the Church, he warned that failure to do so would harm Christianity in the Federal Republic.

Director, Israel School For Blind, Tours U.S.A.

NEW YORK — Jacob Igra, Director-General of the Institute for the Blind in Jerusalem, the only school in Israel dedicated to educating Israel's blind children from kindergarten to adulthood, is visiting the United States. He is touring similar institutions in this country, studying the latest methods and techniques, and attempting to rally aid for his Institute through the support wing in the United States, Keren-Or, Inc., 1133 Broadway, New York.

The tremendous influx of blind in Israel, he reported, "has put a great burden on our facilities. We must expand to cope with the newly-arrived blind immigrants."

He has set up a local support committee in Boston, and plans to mobilize help in Chicago, Miami, San Francisco and Los Angeles, where a Keren-Or group already exists, thanks to the one-man campaigning of Harry Glazer.

Yeshiva Chef Gives 'Hamantaschen' Recipe

NEW YORK — Purim is one of the happiest, noisiest and tastiest holidays on the Jewish calendar. One delicacy traditional with the holiday is a triangle-shaped cake called "Hamantaschen." Haman was the name of the evil prime minister and "taschen" is from the German word "pockets."

Alfred Parker, chief chef at Yeshiva University and an authority on Jewish cooking, says that the triangle shape of the cakes is most likely due to the old-fashioned three-cornered hat worn by government officials in early times.

Mr. Parker volunteered his recipe for the cakes whose preparation he will supervise for some 6,000 Yeshiva University students at the school's three cafeterias:

RECIPE FOR HAMANTASCHEN
1/2 lb. sugar, 1 lb. fat
1 1/2 lb. flour, 2 large eggs
1/2 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. vanilla or lemon
1 tsp. baking powder

36 ounces Hungarian prune filling or poppy seeds

Mix the sugar, fat and flour, work in eggs and flavoring to make the dough. Refrigerate for 1/2 hour. Roll dough into round shapes, then fold edges in to make triangle-shaped biscuits. Into center place 1 oz. Hungarian prune filling or poppy seeds (with raisins and nuts if desired.) Bake in pre-heated oven at 350 degrees for 25 minutes. Yield: 36 hamantaschen.

Parker, who puts in a 14-hour day at Yeshiva, became a cook by accident. At the age of 18 he was an engineering student in Vienna. He was forced to flee when Austria was invaded in 1938. At a refugee camp in Switzerland he helped out in the kitchens and began to cook. So well did he learn his new trade that he obtained a job in a Zurich restaurant and, from there, moved to the renowned Hotel Fachschool in Lucerne. He came to the United States in 1947 and stepped into his Yeshiva University role 11 years later.

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

by C. D. Smith

Father Says 'No' Dates Until 18th Birthday

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "My question concerns dating. I am 16 years old and my father doesn't want me to go out with boys until I am 18, although he trusts me. He will let one boy come to the house. Yet, I feel that I am old enough to go out. What do you think?"

OUR REPLY: Any opinion that someone gave to you would be just that, an opinion. The thing you must remember is that you have to obey the wishes of your parents. They are responsible for your welfare and guidance. You will not always agree with them. You may question their decisions and their attitude, but you should always respect their judgment and obey their wishes. When the day comes that you are "on your own" you will be glad they cared enough to take the time to be "parents" and not merely good providers.

Your father lets one boy come to see you. He has promised you can "go out" when you reach a certain age. Thousands of teenagers would be happy in your situation. The majority of letters this column receives is from teenagers who express unhappiness because parents "won't let boys even come to see me," and "won't allow me to even talk to boys." The next big problem of the teenage population can be summed up in these words, "I like this boy, but I don't know if he likes me. How do I find out for sure?" Needless to say, there is no quick answer suitable for either problem.

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUBURBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.

TO TRAIN TIBETANS
 NEW YORK — ORT has been asked to undertake a program to train Tibetan refugee youth to become instructors in vocational subjects. Upon completion, the trainees will become the teaching staff of a proposed trade school for Tibetans who found sanctuary in India. The request was made by the International Council of Voluntary Agencies, which coordinates aid to this refugee group.

The first group of 15 Tibetans, aged 19-21, has already arrived in Teheran. After two years of study, they will return to India.

Increased Tension Over Jordan Water Seen Bringing War Closer In Mid-East

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Tension over the Jordan River has been building up steadily in the Middle East, until the possibility of war between the Arab states and Israel, once lightly discussed, is now a topic of serious consideration by diplomats and other observers here.

Israel's diversion of waters and Arab plans for counterdiversion of headwaters of the Jordan have created an atmosphere in which war is more likely than it has been since the Suez affair. Many Arabs feel that strained relations between the Arab states and the United States, which seems to back Israel, are worse than they have been since the U.S. withdrew its aid for the Aswan High Dam.

Ambassador at Large W. Averell Harriman's visit to Israel and East Germany President Walter Ulbricht's visit to Cairo have seemed to point obviously to the way the United States and the Soviet Union line up on the Arab-Israel issue.

The hanging of Farhan Attassi, a naturalized American citizen, in a public square, and the court summation in the Attassi espionage case indicated to many that what the Syrians meant to hang was not a man but the United States Government.

This is one aspect of Syrian policy on which there is no criticism from any Arab quarters, not even from Cairo, which is normally antagonistic toward Damascus's Baath party leadership.

In Baghdad, Iraq, President Abdel Salam Arif said, in a broadcast statement: "There is no doubt that the final battle with Israel is coming. It is inevitable. The presence of Israel in the midst of the Arab states is just not natural."

In Beirut, Michel Abu Jawdeh, a commentator for the influential and independent newspaper Al Nahar, remarked recently that there seemed to be the threat of "a United States Suez"; three pro-Nasser newspapers and the Damascus radio echoed the phrase.

The weekly newspaper Al Sayyad of Beirut put the idea into a cartoon. The first panel showed "the old trio" of allies against Egypt — Israel, Britain and France. The second panel showed "the new trio" of allies against Arabs generally — Israel, West Germany and the United States.

Much of the argument about the danger of war has centered on statements by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara Feb. 19 and by President Nasser two days later.

Mr. McNamara said: "Violence may flare up at any time over Israel's diversion of the waters of the Jordan River or Arab counterdiversion plans. Thus far, Arab reaction to Israel's diversion has been reasonably muted. A principal United States objective has long been to keep the feud from escaping into overt hostilities."

"The realization of this objective has been made more difficult by the injection of substantial Soviet-bloc aid, both economic and military, into the region—particularly the United Arab Republic, Syria, Iraq and Yemen."

Mr. McNamara also remarked that the United States had sold Hawk antiaircraft missiles to Israel to discourage Arab attack.

Mr. Nasser, in his speech, said 1965 was "the most crucial year in the Arab struggle."

Mr. McNamara blamed Eastern arms shipments for the tension, but Mr. Nasser blamed West German arms shipments to Israel.

Another factor has arisen since a visit by Assistant Secretary of State Phillips Talbot to Lebanon and Jordan. Arab political sources reported that he had relayed to the two countries an Israeli threat of military action if the Arabs persisted in plans for counterdiversion of the Jordan. Arab politicians maintain that he was trying to bring pressure in two Arab countries where the United States still has some influence.

Now, moreover, the Arabs are citing Vice President Humphrey's attendance at an Israel Bond rally Feb. 21 in Miami Beach. Arab commentators have interpreted it as a flagrant provocation.

"When the Vice President of the United States volunteers to sell Israel bonds," wrote the correspondent Basem Jisr in the Beirut newspaper Al Jarida, "no one can any longer wonder why the dialogue between Washington and the Arab states has been 'a dialogue between the deaf.' Nor should one wonder any longer why Soviet diplomacy scores one victory after another at the Arab level."

The Communist newspaper Al Nida summed it all up here by asking where the Arabs' friends and enemies were. "Ulbricht is in Cairo," it replied, "while Harriman is in Israel."

Synagogues Plan Purim Services

On Wednesday, 13 Adar II, which is the Fast of Esther, the Megillah will be read, and again on Thursday, the Feast of Purim. The Book of Esther tells the story of the courageous queen and Mordecai, who put to shame the wicked prime minister, Haman, and persuaded King Ahasuerus to have him executed on the gallows. Haman had prepared for Mordecai. Among the synagogues and temples holding special Purim services are the following:

MISHKON TFILOH

Abraham Linder will read the Megillah at Congregation Mishkon Tfiloh at 7 P.M. on Wednesday. The Sisterhood will serve Purim refreshments to members and their guests. The Megillah will be read again on Thursday at 6:30 A.M.

TEMPLE SINAI

A special family service will be held at 8 P.M. on Purim Eve, Wednesday, at Temple Sinai. Portions of the Megillah will be read. Noise makers will be distributed and the Sisterhood will sponsor refreshments after the service.

TEMPLE BETH ISRAEL

Special Purim services will be held at 7 P.M. on Wednesday, with the traditional reading of the Megillah. All children of the Hebrew and Sunday schools will participate, and a Purim party for the children will follow. Purim morning services will be held on Thursday at 7 A.M.

TEMPLE BETH AM

Rabbi Alfred Fruchter will read the Megillah at Purim services on Wednesday at 7 P.M. at Temple Beth Am. Warwick. Groggers and Hamantaschen will be given to the children.

TEMPLE BETH SHOLOM

Children's Megillah services will begin at 4 P.M. on Wednesday at Temple Beth Sholom, and adult services at 7 P.M. The Sisterhood will serve Purim refreshments to the children. Services on Thursday, the Feast of Purim, will be held at 6:30 A.M. There will be no Hebrew School sessions. On Sunday, March 21, there will be a Purim Carnival, with prizes for children with the best Purim costumes, and with refreshments and games.

SONS OF ABRAHAM

The Megillah will be read in Congregation Sons of Abraham on Wednesday at 6:30 P.M. to usher in the Purim Festival. The Sisterhood will be hostesses to the children at a collation in the vestry after the Megillah reading. The Book of Esther will be reread on Thursday at 6:30 A.M.

OHAWA SHOLOM

Congregation Ohawa Sholom will hold Purim services at 5:45 P.M. on Wednesday and at 6:45 A.M. on Thursday. A special family service, at which the Megillah will be read and Groggers distributed to all children, will be held at 7 P.M. on Wednesday.

New York's Negro Jews Live Full Jewish Life

NEW YORK — There are 10,000 Negro Jews in Harlem, East Bronx and Crown Heights. An additional 20,000 are known to live in Philadelphia, Chicago, Washington and New Orleans. They are religious Jews who fulfill the mitzvahs and observe Shabbat and Jewish holidays.

The New York colored Hebrews send their children to Jewish religious schools. A reconciliation move to bring together the Jewish Negroes and white Jews was started by a Hebrew teacher, M. Gladstone, who was influenced by the late Israel President Yitzhak Ben Zvi's book, "The Exiled and the Redeemed."

Gladstone cooperated with Eliezar Brooks, Panama-born Negro cantor and leader of the East Bronx Negro Hebrew congregation. Brooks hopes to emigrate to Israel. Chaim Farez, Ethiopian-born Falasha Hebrew, a graduate student at Yeshiva University, who attended Hebrew University in Jerusalem, said ten per cent of the New York Negro Jews aspire to emigrate to Israel. There is some intermarriage between white and black Jews, but no mixed marriage between black Jews and white Christians.

OUR YOUNGER SET — Marsha June (left), aged 4, and Randy Elaine, aged 16 months, are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Murray I. Cerel of 76 Peabody Drive, Warwick. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Gratt and Mr. and Mrs. Jack A. Cerel.

Ballet Duo To Perform At Barrington Center

Herci and Myles Marsden, well-known ballet team, will present a lecture and demonstration at a joint meeting of the Barrington Jewish Center Sisterhood and the Ladies Guild of Barrington Congregational Church on Monday, March 29, at the Church meeting house, according to Mrs. Lawrence Gordon, Sisterhood President. A coffee hour will follow the program.

The program, entitled, "Ballet from Beginning to Professional," will feature students from the Braecrest School of Ballet, as well as the Marsdens. The student demonstration will illustrate the development of ballet student from classroom to professional theater. Myles Marsden is artistic director of the Rhode Island State Ballet and Primo, while Herci Marsden is Prima Ballerina. They are widely known for their work with aspiring young dancers.

Gratz College Opens Instrumental Library

PHILADELPHIA — A library of Jewish instrumental music, first of its kind on the eastern seaboard, was opened here last month at Gratz College. The Joseph Kutler Library was established by Dr. Claire Schaff in memory of her brother.

A Gratz College graduate, Dr. Schaff teaches music at Rutgers University and the Philadelphia Musical Academy.

The library contains scores for large and small orchestras, chamber music, string quartets and solo instrumental works.

Establishment of the library has attracted interest in this country and overseas. Contributions of compositions are being received as are requests for scores for performances. The American-Israel Cultural Foundation has contributed a substantial number of compositions, and Issacher Miron, the foundation's Israeli representative, has urged Israeli composers to contribute their scores.

The Kutler Library is a major element of the Jewish music library of the division of community services of the college.

Shalom Altman, head of the music department and library director, said that little was known in the musical world of the creative contributions of Jewish composers to music and that the Kutler library would help to end this lack of knowledge.

FAIR SABBATH

ALBANY, N.Y. — A 300-member delegation of the American Jewish Congress urged Gov. Rockefeller and leaders of the New York State Legislature this week to enact a statewide "Fair Sabbath" law to exempt persons observing as their Sabbath a day other than Sunday from the state ban on conducting business on Sunday. The delegation also asked for broader powers for the State Commission on Human Rights authorizing it to initiate complaints and fix fines against violators of anti-discrimination laws.

Wrong Man Murdered, Say Uruguayan Police

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay — Police here said Monday that assassins may have killed the wrong man, rather than Herberts Cukurz, a former Nazi wanted on charges of having killed 30,000 Jews in Latvia during World War II. The body identified as that of Cukurz was found in a trunk in a suburban villa here on Saturday.

Despite the statement by a group calling itself "Those Who Can Never Forget" that they had executed Cukurz for his wartime villainies, police are not sure the bullet-riddled body is that of Cukurz. Identification may be established by his wife, who is coming here from Sao Paulo, Brazil, where Cukurz was employed in a private plane-rental business. Police plan an autopsy which may help identify the body.

The dead man may be Cukurz's friend and business associate, Anton Kumzle, a 42-year-old Austrian who may have been with him on the night of the gun battle. The men resembled each other.

A Brazilian journalist, meanwhile, suggested that Cukurz had been trying to hunt down Dr. Josef Mengele, the notorious Auschwitz concentration camp physician believed to be in South America.

Writing in the Rio de Janeiro newspaper, A Noticia, Helio Tys, a reporter, said he had learned that Cukurz hoped to capture Mengele and turn him over to Jewish agents in exchange for his own safety. Mr. Tys said that Cukurz was assassinated by some of Mengele's friends.

Mr. Tys, who said he had known Cukurz, reported that the former Nazi had passed himself off as a Jew and moved freely in the Jewish community in Rio. After he was recognized, he went to Sao Paulo to seek anonymity, Mr. Tys said.

Hadassah To Launch Research Program

NEW YORK — A five-year Jewish research and publication program to help strengthen Jewish identity among Jews in the United States will be launched by Hadassah.

Mrs. Mortimer Jacobson, national president of the organization, said that Hadassah has earmarked $25,000 for this program, to be carried out in cooperation with the National Foundation for Jewish Culture. A committee for the project will be headed by Dr. Judah J. Shapiro, secretary of the Foundation.

"Through this new Hadassah program of research and publication, we hope to foster a greater understanding — not only among Hadassah members but among all Jews — of Jewish life and its heritage and the need to preserve it," Mrs. Jacobson said. "It is our intention to mobilize outstanding scholars to give greater understanding of the Jewish situation and condition in American life. This will include efforts to ascertain demographic data which will give us an understanding of our numbers, age distribution, occupational involvement, group fertility rate and many other such facts."

CHILDREN'S CARNIVAL

The Jewish Community Center will hold its annual Children's Purim Carnival at the East Side Center on Sunday, March 21, from 3 to 5 P.M. There will be a costume parade, prizes, refreshments and games. Free bus service will be provided from the South Side Center at 2:30 P.M. Coffee and hamantaschen will be available for adults during the afternoon at the Cafe Shushan.

SOUTH PROVIDENCE YOUTH

A unique project is under way in South Providence. Begun last September, its aim is to introduce South Providence youth to the meaning of Judaism and Orthodox Judaism. Rabbi Hershel Solnick lectures twice each week, to one group between the ages of 9 and 13, and to a group of 13- to 17-year-olds. Thirty to 40 boys and girls meet each Saturday afternoon at private homes, and hold their own services each week.

NEW INSURANCE PROGRAM

The Religious Zionists of America, Mizrahi - Hapoel Hamizrachi, last month endorsed a group major medical plan providing hospital, medical and surgical benefits for members and their families. Coverage will include payments up to $10,000 and will be available (during the enrollment period) to members under the age of 70.

Mrs. Stone knew that trumps had to split or she could not make the hand so her only concern was the club suit. West made the best lead, a trump, which was won in dummy with the Queen. Now came the key play. The singleton club was led and East, looking at it, automatically went up with his Ace, afraid he would not get it. That was defenders' only trick trump in dummy for another club lead which caught the king.

This established the entire club suit for 12 tricks. Had East thought a little longer, or been more experienced, he would have realized that he should not have played his Ace of Clubs. Even if South had the King and Jack, she admitted she would have played the Jack and guessed wrong, figuring as most would, that no one would withhold the Ace looking at a singleton. As was the actual case, West would have won with his doubleton King and returned another trump making declarer helpless. East would still have his Ace and dummy would have no more trumps.

The moral is that even seemingly automatic plays still require some thought.

ENGAGED — Mrs. Irene Fairhurst of 105 Thomas Avenue, Pawtucket, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Sandra Alice Fairhurst, to David Broomfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Broomfield of 85 Payton Street. He is the son of the late Alice Broomfield.

Miss Fairhurst, a 1961 graduate of Pawtucket West High School, is employed at Blackstone Mutual Insurance Company. Mr. Broomfield is associated with I. Broomfield & Son.

A November 20 wedding is planned.

Purim Festival Recalls Threat Of Many Hamans Of History

The colorful Jewish Festival of Purim which recalls the ancient story of Queen Esther and her fight to save her people from Haman, the Persian tyrant, will be marked by Jews all over the world in religious services and ceremonies beginning at sundown on Wednesday, March 17.

The one-day holiday contains a contemporary message universally echoed at this time — the dedication to assuring religious freedom for all individuals.

The word "Purim" means "lots" and relates to the method devised by the Persian Prime Minister, Haman, to select the day on which the Jews would be destroyed. Queen Esther, the wife of King Ahasuerus, fought valiantly to save the Jews and rescind the evil deeds of Haman.

The legendary story of how Haman sought the genocide of his country's Jewish population is found in the Biblical book of Esther. Early in Jewish history, this book was copied on the rolled scrolls called Megilloth. While other biblical texts were similarly preserved, the reading of the Esther Megillah has always received special pre-eminence in the synagogue observance of the day. Purim is a true holiday, with a festive atmosphere. As the scroll is read at worship services, children and adults are encouraged to use noisemakers to blot out the sound of the name of the tyrannical Haman every time it is mentioned. Costume balls and parties are held in religious schools and Purim plays are presented.

The threat to physical survival represented by this story was no mere folktale to the Jewish people. Throughout their long and often tortured history, Hamans have periodically sprung up to destroy

Rabbi Rejects Invitation To Discriminating Club

PITTSBURGH — A local Hillel Foundation director rejected an invitation to attend a dinner of the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh because the event would be held in a club charged with practicing racial and religious bias. The artists' group has Negro and Jewish members.

Rabbi Richard L. Rubenstein took his stand in a letter to Prof. Jerry Caplan, president of the artists' group and director of the Chatham College art department.

He asserted that "it is a matter of public record that the University Club bars Jews, Negroes and people of Southern European descent from membership."

The club is a private institution, not connected with the University of Pittsburgh.

Jews, using as their principal reason that Jews chose to remain culturally and religiously identified. Hamans in various guises constantly threaten the security of societies, diverse religious and ethnic groups.

Though an ancient festival, Purim's message gives it a contemporary ring.

Egypt Arrests Germans On Israel-Spy Charges

CAIRO — Four West Germans, formally charged with spying for Israel, have been arrested by the United Arab Republic. The Government said they had carried on a terrorist campaign against West German rocket and aircraft experts here.

Johann Wolfgang Sigmund Lotz, described in an Egyptian statement as a former Nazi officer posing as a horsebreeder, was accused of leading the spy ring, and of being responsible for the disappearance of Heinz Krug, a German rocket specialist, in Munich in 1962. The statement said Mr. Lotz had confessed to spying for Israel and to sending booby-trapped letters to German experts here. Last fall an Egyptian postmaster was injured by such a letter, and the secretary of Wolfgang Piltz, a German rocket expert, was blinded by one in November, 1962.

Mr. and Mrs. Lotz, said the Government, were arrested at their villa near the Pyramid of Giza on Feb. 22. Radios, hidden explosives and booby-trapped cakes of soap were said to be hidden in their home. A Government spokesman announced that Mrs. Lotz's parents, who were visiting them when the police arrested the couple, had been released from custody.

Egyptian officials said Mr. Lotz had maintained contact with Israel by two short-wave radio transmitters, and sent booby-trapped mail to German scientists on instructions from Israel. They said he confessed that he had been trained for a year in Munich and Paris by Israeli agents before coming to the UAR in early 1961, with the assignment of gathering military information, and infiltrating circles of foreign experts to spy on and demoralize them.

The others arrested, said an unidentified spokesman for the Egyptian intelligence service, were Franz William Kiesow, local representative of the Mannesmann Steel Company of Dusseldorf, and his Egyptian-born wife. Another West German arrested earlier, Gerhard Bauch, was said to be "not completely involved but still under investigation."

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

CLIP AND SAVE ON TAXES —
If you or your wife are 65 or over, you receive a medical expense deduction break in the 1964 law. Until last year you were able to deduct your medical and dental expenses without reducing them by 3 per cent of your adjusted gross income, but you had to reduce your deductible medicine and drug expenses by 1 per cent of your adjusted gross income. This 1 per cent wastage rule has now been knocked out and you may deduct every dollar of your medicine and drug costs on your 1964 income tax return.

This same 1 per cent wastage rule also has been eliminated on the medicine and drug bills you paid for a 65-or-older parent for whom you furnished more than half the support in 1964. You too can now deduct every penny of these expenses on your 1964 return.

For the hundreds of thousands of you who buy accident and health insurance policies, an important tax saving appears an increasingly safe deduction. As a general rule, premiums paid for accident and health insurance are deductible as medical expenses.

The Treasury, however, interprets this to limit the deduction to premiums which cover insurance for medical expenses and it bars a deduction for premiums or parts of premiums covering insurance against loss of earnings, accidental death, loss of sight, limb, etc.

But the courts so far have disagreed with the Treasury and have upheld deduction of the entire premiums on accident and health policies as medical expenses. In one 1964 case the government's lawyers actually conceded that such premiums were deductible as medical expenses, indicating that the Treasury sooner or later may give in.

If you have these policies and are itemizing deductions on your 1964 return, you might deduct the premiums as medical expenses — relying on the court decisions. Keep in mind, though, that this could lead to a dispute and disallowance of your deduction if your return is examined — if the Treasury hasn't by then conceded.

If you are among the countless thousands who have ailing parents or other very sick relatives, you may benefit greatly from a more liberal Treasury attitude toward deduction of nursing home costs as medical expenses.

If a person is in a nursing home primarily for medical care, the entire nursing home cost is a medical expense; if he is not in primarily for medical care, only the actual expense of medical care is deductible and the substantial amounts of nursing home costs allocable to food and lodging are not deductible. The more liberal Treas-

East German's Arrest Asked After Testimony

FRANKFURT — West Germany recently demanded the arrest of the East German Minister for Industry, Eric Markowitch, for allegedly shooting Germans trying to escape to the West over the Berlin Wall. The charge enlivened the trial here, which opened 13 months ago, of leading personnel of the Auschwitz concentration camp, charged with murdering thousands of Jews.

Markowitch had come here to testify against some of the defendants. He had been a prisoner at Auschwitz, and told the court that more than 1,000 of the camp's inmates were murdered in November and December of 1942 because they were no longer able to work. Hans Laterner, a member of the defense counsel, petitioned the court that he be arrested because he had ordered men to be shot while trying to escape over the Berlin wall. The chief judge turned down that application, ruling the Berlin Wall issue had no bearing on the current trial sury view announced in 1964 involves the meaning of "medical care."

A court had previously allowed the entire nursing home costs for an ailing father as deductible medical expenses because the father had high blood pressure and a gall bladder condition, was generally confined to bed, had his meals in bed, had to be bathed by male nurses and attended by other duction because a principal reason for the father's presence in son for the father's presence in the nursing home was to receive the nursing services and attention necessitated by his poor health and age. The Treasury originally barred the medical expense deduction for the portion of the costs allocable to meals and lodging, but it finally agreed that the court was right. This can be a major breakthrough for many hard-pressed families with ill parents.

You now may also deduct as a medical expense the cost of hiring a person to guide a blind child to and from school and during the school day, says the Treasury.

If you're parents of a retarded child who cannot be placed in a special training school, another 1964 court decision may help you — although the Treasury hasn't yet agreed with it. In this case, a court held that the entire fee paid to a regular military school for special training of the child was deductible. However, fees paid to special training schools for retarded children are deductible without dispute as medical expenses.

Montreal Jews Seek School Board Seats

MONTREAL — A bill to be filed soon in the Quebec Legislature will pave the way for Jewish membership on the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal for the first time in the 40-year history of the school board.

The bill would authorize an increase in membership of the board from 16 to 25, of whom five would be Jews.

T. P. Howard, attorney for the school board, and Samuel Godinsky, attorney for the Canadian Jewish Congress, said they saw no obstacles to early passage.

The board had agreed unanimously to seek authority for board membership increase to have Jewish members.

Previously it had been believed that it was legally impossible to have Jewish members on the school board without Constitutional changes in the British North America Act.

Jewish leaders have criticized the system under which Jewish children attend schools under Protestant auspices, since there are no overall public schools as in the United States.

It was felt that there were enough Jewish children in the Protestant-directed schools to warrant Jewish representation on the school board.

About 17,500 of the 65,000 children in the Montreal Protestant schools this year are Jewish.

Right Wing Groups

WASHINGTON — The House Un-American Activities Committee, which has been criticized frequently for avoiding probes of right-wing organizations, may extend its program into investigating the Ku Klux Klan, the American Nazi Party, the Minutemen, the Black Muslims and other groups considered to be part of the "radical right," it was indicated here.

Rep. Edwin Willis, Louisiana Democrat, chairman of the HUAC, said that the committee, in secret session, adopted a resolution authorizing a preliminary study to show whether extension into the right-wing area should proceed. A decision on such a step, he said, will depend on the results of the preliminary study. Disputing charges that the

Combined Sisterhoods Hold Intermarriage Symposium

The breaking-down of anti-Semitism and the resultant social mobility of Jews were cited by Rabbi Jerome Davidson as the primary causes of interdating and intermarriage, at an intermarriage symposium Monday at Temple Beth El. Mrs. William L. Matzner, program chairman of Temple Beth El's Sisterhood, organized the symposium, which was sponsored by the Sisterhoods of Temple Sinai, the Barington Jewish Center and Temple Beth El.

Panelists were Rabbi Davidson, New England Director of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, who gave the religious viewpoint; Dr. Harold Organic, a sociologist at Brown University, who offered statistical observations, and Jeffrey Berger, URI sophomore and Rhode Island Herald columnist, who gave the collegiate view on intermarriage.

Rabbi Davidson indicated that, because of pressures of mobility, families all over the country are breaking up. The Jewish family is affected by these pressures, which are another contributing factor in the growing rate of intermarriage. He defined it as a rebellion against authoritarianism spawned in the "great chaos of adolescence."

The rabbi pointed out several of the "scare" statistics of intermarriage: there are five to six times as many divorces in families which have intermarried and the juvenile delinquency and dope addiction rates of the children of intermarriage are higher.

The rabbi pointed out that religious roots run deep and latent prejudice is likely to emerge in times of stress. The inherent differences of persons brought up in different religious atmospheres are the major cause of difficulty in intermarriages. He mentioned such "idiotic" proposals for settling religious difficulties as "all the boys Jewish, all the girls your religion."

Jews bear a significant obligation to perpetuate their own original and unique version of monotheism, he concluded, and made four concrete suggestions to curb rates of intermarriage. Ties with religious practice should be strengthened; parents should abstain from the hypocrisy of being shocked when their children, allowed to date non-Jewish youngsters, decide on an interfaith marriage; parents should let their children know the problems of dating outside their faith and of intermarriage; conversion should be considered, whenever an intermarriage takes place, so children of such a marriage will have a firm religious base.

Dr. Organic pointed out to the Sisterhoods that there has been a 17 per cent rise in the number of intermarriages in the past 60 years. The percentage of intermarried couples is presently 34%. In the San Francisco area, for example, he said 25% of Jewish marriages are to non-Jewish partners.

The most striking statistic offered by the Brown sociologist was that 70 per cent of the children of intermarriages are not raised as Jews.

Mr. Berger was careful to emphasize the personal quality of his campus viewpoint toward intermarriage. He stressed his belief that the problem facing

Judaism will inevitably grow worse, while population and social trends continue along their present lines.

The outspoken college student outlined the social pressures among young people to belong to cliques ruled by the non-Jewish majority. These cliques are social rather than academic, he said, and naturally affect the social life of their members. This leads to interfaith dating, which he does not oppose. He said such dating will continue as long as parents permit it, and parents have a tendency to "let it happen."

Mr. Berger pointed out the purely personal nature of love and religion, illustrating his remarks with a Catholic rather than a Jewish example by saying that church tells intermarried couples what religion their children must follow, though it has no right to dictate this. He remarked that "once two individuals have decided they wish to marry, no religious body has a right to interfere, traditions notwithstanding." Tradition cannot be held inviolate in a modern, progressive world, Mr. Berger said.

The panel's conclusion was that intermarriage is a threat both to Judaism and to the well-being of partners in such marriages, but that there is a chance to curb the tendency toward intermarriage.

YOU CAN'T HIDE PRIDE!

Have you noticed lately the number of cars on the road that were sold and are being serviced by DARIO FORD? If you started counting, the figure would amaze you.

When you see a DARIO '65 FORD go by, notice the PRIDE with which the driver sits behind the wheel. By the way, you won't hear that FORD go by. (FORDS run quieter than Rolls-Royces.)

At DARIO we take pride in the way we do business — and in the FORD products we sell.

We certainly don't want to hide it, either!

BONN — West German officials have announced plans to issue an indictment charging mass murder against Adolph Hitler, who is generally believed to have committed suicide in a flaming Berlin bunker in 1945 as the city lay under Red Army siege.

Robert Gamzey's 'Miracle of Israel'

"Miracle of Israel" tells of Israel's ingathering of more than a million of the Exiles from the four corners of the Earth. And not only the ingathering. But their rehabilitation and absorption in a thriving industrial and agricultural economy that has achieved full employment, a food surplus for export, and a large-scale housing industry to match mass immigration.

"Miracle of Israel" delves deeply and profoundly in vibrant human terms into the fascinating problems of the integration of the "Oriental-Jews" into the role of the Israel Defence Forces in unifying and training the immigrant youth, as well as standing as an unparalleled shield against constant threats of attack. Gamzey impartially examines the religious "kulterkampf", the crisis of the kibbutz and other problems in an intriguing series of insights into the Miracle of Israel.

world. It maintains schools in 22 countries on five continents — there are more than 17,000 trainees in Israel alone.

Seventy different skills and trades are taught in its three and four year technical high schools to about 40,000 students per year. Schools are established as the need arises — as, for instance, in France since the Algerian crisis when thousands of Jews fled Africa.

In New York also extra schools are established as necessary. There is one permanent school, but after the Hungarian uprising, four other schools were started to take care of the new immigrants coming into the United States.

The courses at the schools change according to the times — at the moment there are many courses in electronics, machinery, dietetics. Other courses include a course in hotel trades in Israel which trains workers to take care of the tourist trade — a booming industry in Israel. There are also courses in sewing, hairdressing, plumbing, tool and dye-making, home economics, etc.

CASE HISTORY OF AN ORT STUDENT

Pierre

Pierre is one of the thousands of Algerian Jews who have fled to France in the past few years. He is 16, the eldest child in his family.

A few months after the father vanished, the mother, who was sick and still is not well, began trying to earn some money by sewing at home. Weak and badly distraught, barely able to care for younger children and her home, let alone do extra work, she could give no attention to Pierre. As a result, the boy received absolutely no guidance for a long time. He roamed the streets, and, like so many other Algerian adolescents, became a part of the war.

For a long time his mother didn't know how he was spending his time, but she finally found out, and, frightened, she sent him off to relatives in France. Pierre's mother knew about ORT, and she asked her relatives to try to place Pierre in a French ORT school. He was accepted by the Strasbour ORT Center, and sent there to live in the school dormitory.

It quickly became apparent that Pierre was a very bright boy with much technical ability. He was not, however, a good student. He had spent too many months in an atmosphere of violence, in a milieu where recklessness and fighting ability were considered the highest virtues. He had forgotten how to discipline himself and how to accept the guidance of others. He felt constrained by the quietness, the orderliness, and the comparative passivity of school life and he grew very restless.

He was, however, far from being the first boy to come to ORT after having spent years amid turmoil, and the ORT instructors continued to work patiently with him, to try to teach him that work and study are worthwhile and that fighting is not the only occupation in which a boy or man can take pride.

A school for training ORT teachers is maintained in Anseres, Switzerland. These are usually former ORT students.

Most ORT schools are boarding schools where clothing, food and shelter are provided, since many of the students either have no homes or come from the very poorest type of home.

Now 84 years old, the ORT group was started in Russia. The American ORT Federation was born in 1922, and the American Women's Branch came into existence five years later. The Providence Branch is ten years old.

The mother of three children — Jeffrey, 6 1/2; Richard, 3 1/2, and Michael, 8 months old — Mrs. Salk says that ORT is principally a money-raising organization — the money going, of course, to help in the establishment of schools and in the training of students throughout the world.

Among the projects which the local ORT chapter undertakes are Casserole suppers, a Military Whist, Rummage Sales, candy sales, etc., and the Annual Luncheon at which time an Annual Ad Book is published. This year the Annual Luncheon will be held on May 20 at the Rhode Island Yankee.

Armando C.

I was born in Trieste on December 1st, 1948. Both of my parents were born in Corfu, Greece, but they did not meet each other until after the end of the Second World War. When the Germans occupied Corfu, both my mother and father were taken, along with their families, to an annihilation camp. They lost every member of their families. They survived, however, an were freed by the Allied Forces. My father was placed in a hospital, where he had to remain for six months.

My mother and father then met each other, and were married, and moved to Trieste. My brother was born in 1947. A year later, and my sister, in 1955.

I went to the Jewish kindergarten, to the grammar school, and then took a year of vocational training. I didn't want to study very much, so I left school and worked with a decorator-upholsterer. I was thus able to help my family, whose economic situation was and is very poor.

In 1961 my mother fell ill with cancer and was operated on. Only by a divine miracle did she survive, but her health is still very poor. My father is ill too; he has had a heart disease for many years.

Now I am beginning a new life. I came to realize that it was important for me to continue my studies in order really to help my family and myself, and I applied to the fine ORT school in Milan. I am now a student again, and I have the chance to become a skilled technician. I consider the dear Directress as my second mother, and my schoolmates are as kind and warmhearted as true brothers.

National Bank in Miami Beach. In Providence he headed the Kane Investment Company and owned major shares in the Lapham and Doris Buildings and in the Wayland Manor, where he lived. He also owned a farm in Seekonk, where he bred and owned a string of racing horses for about five years just before World War II. He gave about $75,000 worth of thoroughbreds, including a son of Man o' War, Kearsarge, to the Army in the 1940s.

Two years ago he estimated that the Benjamin N. Kane Foundation, which he had set up 17 years earlier, had contributed a million dollars to humanitarian projects. He also worked for many years to advance Jewish institutions. He was a founder, first president and honorary president of Temple Beth Israel, a founder and trustee of the Jewish Home for the Aged, a trustee of Miriam Hospital and a member of Temple Emanu-El.

He was born in Russia on July 3, 1887, a son of the late Nathan and Pauline (Woloshin) Kane, originally Kogen. He attended public schools in New York City, and moved to Providence after his marriage in 1908. Later he was graduated from the Rhode Island College of Pharmacy, of which Mrs. Kane is believed to be the first woman graduate.

Mr. Kane is survived by his wife and three sons, Sidney Kane of Providence, Irwin Kane of Los Angeles, and Howard Kane of Miami Beach, Fla.; a brother, Matthew J. Kane of Scarsdale, N.Y.; a sister, Dr. Bella Brower of New York City, six grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held on Sunday in Temple Emanu-El. Burial will be in Lincoln Park Cemetery.

Author Harold Fisch Teaching At Brown

Despite his few weeks in this country, the Israeli scholar had no difficulty in ascertaining the rarest American sport: walking. During a long stroll around the East Side not long ago, he saw no other pedestrian. He hopes to do a great deal of walking, to see quite a lot of this country before returning to Israel, probably in mid-summer, but at any rate, in time for the opening of fall classes at Bar-Ilan.

He and his colleagues at the university near Tel Aviv have been busy lately editing a volume of essays on Shakespeare in Hebrew for the fourth Shakespeare centenary. The book, published at the end of February, was edited by Murray Rostan, a visiting instructor at Brown from 1959 to 1961. Professor Barbara Lewalski of the Brown Department of English contributed to the collection and Mr. Fisch "wrote quite a chunk of the book." Containing articles from a number of leading Shakespeare experts in different parts of the world, it is the first substantial work of Shakespearean criticism to appear in Hebrew. The great poet-dramatist is quite a draw in Israel, said Mr. Fisch. His plays are frequently performed. The English faculty of Bar-Ilan has been quite busy lecturing on Shakespeare during the centennial year.

Combining research, writing, lecturing and teaching poses no problems for Mr. Fisch (he explained that the English don't find it necessary to go in for the nearly-ubiquitous doctorate of American teachers), who is a frequent contributor to scholarly journals. The quarterly, "Judaism," has carried one of his articles, on Israel Zangwill.

At Brown, he is teaching two analytical courses in poetry and fiction to undergraduates, and offering graduate seminar lectures on critical analysis of English and American literature. Next fall, back in his own university, he will teach a second-year survey of English literature to 1740, a fourth-year pro-seminar on the novel, and a graduate seminar in the theory and practice of literary criticism.

Even the best Israeli students of English Literature have the constant difficulty of working in a foreign language, said the British-born scholar when asked how Brown students compared with others he had taught. He did not hesitate, however, to compare Brown boys with English students (he was a lecturer at Leeds University from 1947 to 1957). "Some of the students in England were perhaps better educated, but the average of intelligence and liveliness of mind are better here than in Leeds."

Harold Fisch was born in Birmingham and educated at Sheffield and Oxford. His studies were interrupted by war-service as an officer in the R.N.V.Y. from 1942-1945. In 1957, he left England to take up his present position in Israel. He has also taught at Ha-University College, "a fledgling university," and regularly teaches courses for adults in the popular evening programs in Tel Aviv.

Professor Fisch has done a "fair amount" of lecturing in England and Israel. He speaks often on Biblical matters at ZOA House in Tel Aviv and was last there about the book of Job. He is doing quite a bit of lecturing here: to the English faculty at Brandeis last Wednesday on the Hebraic influence in English literature, to the Hug Ivri this April on Israel Zangwill, at Providence Hebrew Day School this Sunday at 8 P.M., and at Hillel on Tuesday.

"Bar-Ilan University, An Experiment in Education," will be his subject at the Day School. At Hillel House on Tuesday at 8 P.M., Professor Fisch will give the third Helal Hassenfeld Memorial Lecture, entitled "The Jewish Image in English Literature." A question period moderated by Rabbi Nathan N. Rosen, Jewish Chaplain at Brown University, will follow the lecture, which is open to the public.

Mrs. Rita Eitani May Keep Passport

JERUSALEM — The Interior Ministry withdrew last week its demand that Mrs. Rita Eitani, a member of the Upper Nazareth City Council, should hand in her passport pending clarification of her nationality status. The investigation has sparked a controversy in Israel.

The Ministry contended that since she had a non-Jewish mother, she was not entitled to automatic Israeli citizenship under the Law of Return. Mrs. Eitani was recorded in the 1948 census as being of Jewish nationality.

She received Israeli citizenship in 1952 under the Law of Return and in 1961 she received a passport which was renewed in 1964. Last December, the Interior Ministry asked her to hand in her passport and the issue was raised in Israel's Parliament.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — B'nai B'rith's Irving Thalberg Lodge chose the Friars' Club Saturday night, Feb. 13, to present the 1965 Jeff Chandler Memorial Award to George Jessel, who usually manipulates the microphone but for once had to listen to other celebrities talk - about him.

Lodge President Jerry Raschall introduced film producer Sid Rogell who, as toastmaster, said, "The Jeff Chandler Award is one of the highest awards that any worthy man may receive. Tonight, we have reached our pinnacle - a man who has received many awards but not as many as he deserves."

Then the fun started - all slanted at Jessel's speeches, sale of Israel bonds, offkey singing and amorous spasms.

Guests on the dais included: George Burns, Jack Benny, Sidney Miller, Harry Richman, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Oakland, L.A. City Councilwoman Rosalind Wyman, her husband and National Democratic Committeeman Eugene Wyman and L. Wolfe Gilbert.

Composer Ben Oakland keyboarded many excellent standards he had written with Jessel's collaboration. After confessing he had written Jessel's theme song, "My Mother's Eyes," L. Wolfe (Wolfie) Gilbert, dean of American songwriters, asked George how much he would charge NOT to sing it.

George Burns and Jessel promptly jumped up and sang Gilbert's famous "Waitin' for the Robert E. Lee." Mournfully, Jack Benny said, "I'm dead without my violin" prompting Jessel to inject, "And you know something? We're dead WITH your violin."

Bandleader Sammy Weiss' violinist loaned Jack his instrument and the beloved comedian, remaining seated, played a well done "Waitin' for the R.E.L." When the big crowd at the Friars applauded enthusiastically, Jack arose, walked into the audience and serenaded members at their tables.

Toastmaster Rogell introduced George Burns as a singer with the greatest range "from Basso Farshtoonkenar to Coloratsouris." Burns acknowledged the introduction by gravel-voicing the verse of an early tune that ended with, "when the chorus goes like this" and then admitting, "I forgot the chorus."

Burns expressed gratitude that Jessel wasn't acting as toastmaster this evening. "He usually does 25 minutes," he said, "tears you apart and when he's through you have to buy a $25 bond for Israel."

Burns said he didn't know Jessel too well in 1928 when the latter starred on Broadway in "The Jazz Singer," a role Jessel failed to get in the Warner Bros. picture but played by Al Jolson instead. "I sat in the audience," recalled Burns, "and when the prodigal son returned home, taking his father's place as cantor in the synagogue on Yom Kippur and singing Kol Nidre, this really broke me up and I cried."

"I'm a Jew and my father was a cantor. I was so overcome I just had to see Jessel. But the man backstage told me I couldn't go in. He said Lupe Velaz was in Jessel's dressing room."

In closing, Burns said, "I don't have to tell you what I think of Jessel. He knows I love him."

Toastmaster Rogell announced, "Our next speaker is an avid golfer. Jack Benny practices so often I asked the club pro, 'What's with him anyhow?' and the pro said, 'He has the greatest swing in the world but I can't seem to help him. He just walks that way.'"

Said Benny, "I've made so many speeches lately I'm now known as the FULL Jewish Barry Goldwater."

"Tonight we are paying tribute to George Jessel who makes 300 speeches a year, half of them at funerals. He's a wonderful guy who will always 'let you down.'"

Jessel would rather speak at funerals than on the dais. He can't wait until a friend dies. He has everyone's eulogy ready. When I went to the hospital to have some polyps removed from my nose, he had his papers ready.

"I can remember when one of James Mason's cats died. Jessel was ready. The cat had a funeral and I went with a lot of other professional people and a few furriers. Jessel delivered the eulogy and," drawled Benny, "you would never believe what that cat did for Israel."

"Why, Jessel cried and cried and he didn't even KNOW the cat."

Jessel jumped up and protested, "Yes, I did. That cat was Pussy Galore." (Pussy was the sexy gal in the movie "Goldfinger," portrayed by 37-year-old Honor Blackman.)

Benny then scolded his closest friend George Burns for telling risqué stories to a mixed audience and, shrilled with feigned annoyance, "You're the dirtiest man in the world." When Jessel did his best to part the pair, Benny cut him down with, "And you're the next dirtiest!"

Ben-Gurion Confirms Pact With Adenauer

TEL AVIV — Former Premier David Ben-Gurion confirmed here that, in 1960, he and the then West German Chancellor Dr. Konrad Adenauer, entered into an agreement at a meeting in New York for West German military aid to Israel. Until now, that pact had been the object of merely unofficial reports.

Mr. Ben-Gurion not only confirmed that unofficial report but also insisted that "it still stands." He pleaded for greater understanding of the present West German Government under Chancellor Ludwig Erhard, saying Mr. Erhard "is not a Nazi, and the present generation (of Germany) is not Nazi."

 Den*

by Leonard Lyons

STAR: Olivia de Havilland plays a mental case in "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte." She's in N.Y. to make a tour of 37 theaters in three days, by bus, with her co-star, Bette Davis. Judy Garland's tribute to her performance was: "Olivia, you were wickered than the wicked witch of 'Wizard of Oz.'"

Miss de Havilland telephoned her sister, Joan Fontaine, who's married to Al Wright. A man answered the phone, and asked "Who's calling Mrs. Wright?" "Mrs. Wright," said Miss de Havilland. "The man said: 'Mrs. Wright is in Texas, making her way to San Francisco.' . . . Like a hurricane," said Olivia. "Like a whirling hurricane," said the man, "and the storm signals are going up."

Olivia told him: "You were born July 1." The man said it was true, and how did she know? "That's quite obvious," said the star, "because I was born July 1." She never asked the identity of the man. She merely repeated: "Tell Mrs. Wright that Mrs. Wright called," and hung up.

REMEDY: Harold Clurman, who was Mrs. JFK's escort to Sardi's East Sunday night, now directs the playwright's class at the Actors Studio. Last week he complained about some of the language in the play scripts submitted to him as a director. Clurman then instructed each member of the class to stand up and repeat, 20 times, the five dirtiest words each knew.

"Now I hope you've gotten those dirty words out of your system," said Clurman, "and that we won't have to be seeing any of them in your scripts."

RETIREMENT: James Cagney scoffed at the Hollywood report that he would star in a film musical. Cagney, who'd turned down a role in "My Fair Lady," said he never will work in another movie. His only wish is to stay on his farm in Stamfordville, N.Y. — and paint.

TAKE-OVER: Barbra Streisand will have Bergdorf-Goodman all to herself for four nights. To herself, that is, plus her TV camera crew. The Fifth Av. store will be used as the scene of Miss Streisand's CBS-TV special.

MEETING: William Meyerowitz, the National Academy of Design's prize winner, has painted portraits of many Supreme Court justices. The series began years ago, when he had his first show at the Corcoran Gallery in Washington. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes came in, by chance, and complimented Meyerowitz — who shrugged: "I feel I'm only starting."

"I feel the same way," replied Mr. Justice Holmes, who was then over 80. Holmes made a purchase and insisted on paying immediately: "Because I know artists need the money."

MEMOS: Bob Morris, who has sculpted nudes of himself, left for Buffalo to try a new field: he'll do a nude dance there. . . The publisher of Fact will devote its entire next issue to a 60,000-word account of the obscenity trial of his other publication, Eros. The trial ended with his being fined $42,000, plus a five-year sentence. . . Jack Carter will star in a musical version of "Hotel Paradise," his first Broadway show in 10 years.

Jule Styne and E.Y. Harburg will leave for England shortly to write a musical version of "The Great Adventure," the play in which the Lunts starred on Broadway. The Theater Guild will open it in London, then bring it to Broadway. . . Arlene Francis is learning to play a trumpet for her role in "Mrs. Dally Takes a Lover" . . . Because of Brazil's policy switch, invitations to Hollywood notables to the Carnival in Rio were canceled.

ACTING: Melville Cooper, who just finished a nationwide tour in "Camelot," spoke of the difference between the theater and films. "When you work on a stage, it's acting," he said. "When you work in a movie, you're merely behaving in front of a camera."

ADVOCATE: Peter I.B. Lavan, the lawyer, tells of his early days when he followed the work of a brilliant, aging lawyer. The man was a born advocate, who could take either side of an argument — but whose memory was slipping. One day the old man argued an appeal, but apparently forgot which side had retained him. He presented a brilliant argument for the other side.

His colleagues finally whispered to the veteran that he was on the other side. The old lawyer nodded, then suddenly told the appellate judges: "Yes, your honors, these are the preposterous arguments I expect my opponent will make. But, the truth is. . ."

EAR-RING: Zachary Scott and Ruth Ford are co-starring in "Any Wednesday," at Frank Hale's Royal Poinciana Playhouse in Palm Beach. On opening night the audience included James Kimberly, the paper tycoon, who wears an earring in one ear. Scott also wears an ear-ring in one ear, but removed it on opening night.

The star removed it, not because Kimberly also was wearing one: "I took it off because the stage lights might hit the ear ring and the reflection would be distracting."

ROLE: Charlton Heston, who played Moses in "The 10 Commandments" and John the Baptist in "The Greatest Story Ever Told," said of his cavalry-officer role in "Major Dundee": "It was a delight to report to wardrobe and not be fitted for a sheet." BIGAMY?

HAIFA — A new immigrant, Yanco Goldstein, 51, from Rumania, claims that a woman he met accidentally in the street here is his wife, whom he last saw 20 years ago. The woman, Mrs. Ita Zuckerman, 54, says she never saw the man in her life, and is married to someone else.

PREPARING FOR AGE 65? . . .
 BE WARY OF SELLING HOME

"Everybody tells you to prepare in advance for retirement. Nobody tells you how, except for advising you to store up a few nuts and write a will.

"I want some practical advice on a very practical matter.

"I am 63 (so is my wife) and I will retire in two years. My wife and I own our home, which is worth $16,000. We also own 20 acres about six miles from town and intend to build a retirement cottage there.

"Now, the question is: should we sell our home now while prices are high, invest the money for extra retirement income, and move into an apartment for these last two years? It would relieve me of a lot of disagreeable upkeep on the home. It would give me time to begin work on our cottage. . ."

This is a common dilemma for people approaching retirement. So, what is practical advice for such a couple at age 63?

1. Store all the nuts you can lay hands on, and write two wills — one for the husband, one for the wife.

2. Don't kid yourself about the money you'll get from your house. If you think it's worth $16,000 you'll net about $12,000 from it; if an honest real estate agent thinks it's worth $16,000 you'll net about $13,500.

3. Nobody this side of Outer Space knows whether your house will bring more now than it will in two years. You gamble on that.

4. If you net $13,000 you should invest it for safety, since this presumably is the biggest piece of money you have. Safety is in an insured account in a bank or savings & loan association, where you can get 4 to 4½ per cent in most localities, or roughly $43 to $48 a month.

5. If you're planning to cling to the investment, then get a mortgage to build the retirement cottage, you don't know arithmetic. A mortgage will run 6 per cent or better, and if you build a $13,000 cottage you'll start off paying over $65 a month in interest.

6. With these financial matters out of the way, you must decide not whether you'll give up your home two years before retirement but whether you ever should give it up. The second biggest wrench of retirement, after the loss of associates and status on the job, is the loss of a familiar living environment. Even ill-tempered neighbors, if they be that, and annoying children are a consolation as you grow older. Like the cranky lawn mower, you know how to live with them.

7. Finally, the retirement cottage six miles out. This old retirement dream is not panning out. Too much isolation and loneliness. Too far from doctors and stores. Geniuses seem to like it; people who never tried it before don't. Because after a while Bluejays and Chipmunks are about the only creatures who come visiting, and they aren't as much fun as people.

Representative Urges Probe Of Hate Groups

Excellent opportunities are in the Herald's Classified ads.

WASHINGTON — A Republican Representative called last week for an investigation of the Christian Youth Corps. He described it as an anti-Semitic group trying to raise "an army of hate" among college students. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania asked that the House Committee on Un-American Activities investigate the St. Petersburg, Fla., group as well as the Minutemen, an extremist organization that advocates arming citizens for guerrilla warfare against a possible Communist invader.

Mr. Schweiker told the House that the Christian Youth Corps had mailed to college students "a vile anti-Semitic letter seeking to raise an army of hate." He said the group's leaders were identified in the letter as Col. Oren F. Potito and Lieut. Philip D. Le Bus.

"This so-called Christian Youth Corps," Mr. Schweiker said, "goes on at length in its vicious diatribe to make the Jewish religion synonymous with Communism and then urged college students to become 'brothers-in-arms,' to equip themselves for 'guerrilla warfare operations' by obtaining knives, rifles, 1000 rounds of ammunition and other war supplies."

REMINDER OF A JOB WELL DONE: A "memory book" of color photographs taken at events held during the 1964 United Fund campaign, prepared for Joseph W. Ress, campaign chairman, was accepted by Mrs. Ress at the Outstanding Citizenship Awards Dinner held March 2 at Rhodes-on-the-Pawtuxet. Presentation was made by Robert H. I. Goddard Jr., president of the United Fund, to Mrs. Ress, whose husband was unable to attend but spoke to the audience by telephone hook-up from a Boston hospital.

9 Orthodox Groups Oppose AJC Stand, Approve Johnson's Education Aid Bill

NEW YORK — Eight major orthodox rabbinic and lay organizations last week advocated the adoption by the United States Congress of the President's 'Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.'

"If this bill is approved by Congress, it will help to enrich the standards of the secular departments of public schools and private non-profit schools throughout the country," said a Jewish Day School movement spokesman.

Mr. Amos Bunim, National Chairman, Executive Committee of the National Society for Hebrew Day Schools, said the bill has been fully endorsed by Union of Orthodox Rabbis of United States and Canada, Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, Agudath Israel, Rabbinical Alliance of America, Torah Umesorah, Poale Agudath Israel, Young Israel and the Religious Zionists of America. The Lubavitcher Rebbe,
Rabbi Menachem M. Schneerson,
has also endorsed the bill.

Mr. Bunim said the bill "is in full conformity to the basic American principles of separation of church and state. . . It is our contention that children should not be penalized in obtaining benefits because they are enrolled in parochial or religiously-oriented institutions of learning."

"The all-day school is financially hard-pressed in its secular departments. The Congressional enactment of the President's educational program will strengthen the secular content of the public, as well as non-profit private, all-day schools," said Mr. Bunim.
"It will be a great step forward in enhancing the educational standards of all school systems throughout the country. Legislative enactment will foster the development of a dynamic, soundly supported and enriched secular educational system in Jewish communities throughout the United States."

Mr. Bunim sharply assailed
"the recent policy statements of the American Jewish Congress which opposes the recommendations found in President Johnson's education bill. The American Jewish Congress is not authorized to reflect the viewpoint or represent the sentiments of the orthodox Jewish religious community in the United States. The American Jewish Congress has in the past exhibited very little concern or sympathy for the life interests and the sanctities of Orthodox Jewry.
"In its public activities, the major emphasis has been on activities of a secular civic and defense character. It ill behoves this organization to seek to protect the religious freedom of the Jewish community, or for that matter other faith groups, in an instance in which religious leadership of the Jewish community sees no threat whatever to religious freedom."

Mr. Bunim also stated that
"the religious and public school students are joined together in a common pattern of educational striving. There is no reason why the law should discriminate in its effects against religious school students, and, therefore, deny the religious student of such crucial educational tools as libraries, laboratories and textual material.
The Supreme Court of the United States, as early as 1930, sanctioned the supplying of free textbooks to private and parochial schools. That same court later upheld such auxiliary aids to religious students as transportation to and from schools and the whole school lunch program."

He concluded, "The need for Federal assistance to all State-directed educational projects relating to child-welfare is long overdue."

West German Cabinet Backs Extension Of Nazi Crimes Statute Of Limitations

BONN — The West German Cabinet, despite the opposition of Chancellor Ludwig Erhard voted unanimously to back the proposed extension of the statute of limitations for the prosecution of Nazi war criminals beyond the May 8, 1965, deadline.

In effect, the Cabinet supports legislation to this end which must be passed by the Parliament. The German Lower House, the Bundestag, was scheduled to debate the issue on March 10.

Despite his constant opposition to the extension, Dr. Ewald Bucher, West Germany's Minister of Justice, said he would go along with the action of the Cabinet which shifts the ultimate responsibility to the Parliament. Earlier, he had said he would resign his post if the Cabinet tried to extend the statute. This it declined to do in a vote last fall.

Meanwhile, it was revealed this week at a mass meeting convened by a number of Belgian Jewish organizations favoring extension of the statute in Brussels that Dr. Bucher had himself been a one-time leader in Hitler Youth. It was noted that he had been suspended from the German bar for six years after the war.

Cabinet action followed a report presented to it by Dr. Bucher. It was based heavily on his declaration that the possibility could not be excluded that after May 8 new Nazi crimes might be uncovered which would necessitate additional investigations. The report was to be presented to the Bundestag on March 4.

The Government, however, took pains in its gingerly worded statement to note that it had not specifically reversed its previous decision.

"The Federal Government," the statement said, "will support the German Bundestag (lower house of Parliament) in its efforts to create the possibility of satisfying justice while maintaining the principles of legality."

In other words, the Federal Government will not itself make any suggestions to extend the statute of limitations, but will support legislation introduced in Parliament that is designed to do just that.

In the course of his report, Dr. Bucher noted that as a result of the appeal in 1964 by West Germany to all governments to send documentary material on Nazi crimes, more material was now available, particularly from the Eastern countries, which might serve to help check known cases and provide knowledge on as yet unknown Nazi criminals.

Asserting that these investigations were still underway, Dr. Bucher reported that more than 70,000 Germans had been tried for Nazi crimes and that an additional 13,000 had been accused whose cases were still pending. For these cases, he said, the limitations statute cannot be applied nor could it be effective after May 8.

Movement's Usefulness Questioned By Zionists

JERUSALEM — The Zionist movement has "not faced up to itself but has taken refuge in organizational amendments," Dr. Israel Goldstein, Chairman of the Keren Hayesod and Co-Chairman of the World Confederation of General Zionists, said recently. "We are told that we must become a fighting movement but we are not told what we are fighting for. In the absence of such Zionist ideals as youth education and the centrality of the State of Israel, no cosmetics will avail to hide our fading beauty."

Trevor Chinn (Youth Delegation, England), like other youth delegates and some adult delegates stressed that the Zionist movement "today . . . presents to young Jews just one further sterility in their background. To be a Zionist means to attend party bickerings."

"The suspicion of propagandistic misuse (of these materials) is hardly avoidable," the Government said.

It concluded in its report, "that contrary to the previous assumption, the possibility cannot be excluded that new punishable acts will become known after May 8, 1965, which would necessarily occasion further investigation."

Apparently Dr. Bucher felt he could go along with the Cabinet since it was not specifically repudiating its previous position and in so doing rejecting his own recommendations.

New information aside, informed observers here believe that the Cabinet decision on the statute was in large part influenced by a shift in political sentiment recently.

West German opinion on extending the statute may have been ambivalent last fall, but there seems to be wide sentiment for extension today.

This sentiment appears to have been reinforced by the belief that West Germany let Israel down when it canceled arms shipments to her under pressure from the United Arab Republic.

Israel's Arrest Of Arab Spies Called 'U.S. Retaliation' By Syrian Minister

BEIRUT, Lebanon — "American-Israeli reprisals against Arab citizens in Palestine" have obligated Syria "to seek humanitarian redress at international levels," said the Syrian Minister of Information in Damascus earlier this month. He called Israel's recent announcement of the arrest of Arab spies said to be working for Syria "the first step in American reprisal measures concocted" by W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador At Large.

The Syrian Minister, Dr. Mashour Zeitoun, was apparently referring to the reported arrest of five Arabs in Haifa on a charge of espionage. He said the retaliation was for the execution of American spies, and that Israel is cooperating in the reprisals.

Dr. Zeitoun's remarks were broadcast from Damascus the day after Elie Cohn, on trial as an Israeli spy before a special military court there, completed three days of testimony. Syrian

Jewish Museum To Hold 'Purim In Venice' Ball

NEW YORK — "Purim In Venice" is the theme of the sixth annual Queen Esther Purim Ball to be held Saturday, March 27, at The Jewish Museum here in honor of the 1964 Venice Biennale. The Jewish Museum organized the United States exhibition in Venice, at the request of the U.S. Information Agency. Robert Rauschenberg received the First Prize of the President of the Council of Ministers, the second time in the history of the Biennale that the top painting award was made to an American artist.

Honored guests will include Mr. Rauschenberg and Dr. Alan R. Solomon who, as Director of The Jewish Museum at the time, supervised The Jewish Museum's participation in the Venice Biennale.

The Purim Ball tradition dates from the end of the fifteenth century when it first found expression among the Italian Jews. Purim commemorates the struggle for freedom of religious expression won by the Jews in Persia, as told in the Book of Esther.

The proceeds of the five previous Balls contributed to the support of the Museum, enabling it to attain an international prominence. William Jaffe, a member of the Board of Governors of The Jewish Museum, anticipates that this year's Ball will mark further growth in the Museum's membership and provide increased support for its program. The Jewish Museum, under the auspices of The Jewish Theological Seminary of America, is open to the public every day but Saturday.

AWARD WINNER — Hillary Ann Miller, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Miller of 86 President Avenue, has won the American Legion Award for excellent scholastic achievement. A member of the National Honor Society and the Rhode Island Honor Society, Miss Miller has been accepted at Michigan State and plans to become a veterinarian. While at Hope High School she was secretary of her homeroom, a conservatory aide, a member of the United Nations Club, publicity chairman for the senior play. She has been first vice-president of United Synagogue Youth.

authorities have been angered by charges that Mr. Cohn was involved with some of the highest officials in Syria, according to radio and newspaper reports. Mr. Cohn's arrest, said newspapers, came about through a tip from UAR intelligence.

The Baghdad radio charged that Mr. Cohn's testimony was arranged with the court president, Lt. Col. Salah Dallil. During the trial Colonel Dallil denounced two Beirut newspapers as "Israeli agents." The Syrian Foreign Ministry was reported to be drafting a protest to Lebanon.

At his trial, the accused man said that he supplied nothing but political gossip to Israel. According to testimony, he was born Eliahu Cohn in Alexandria 40 years ago, was expelled from the UAR in 1957, and went to Israel, where Israeli intelligence recruited him at a time when his wife was pregnant and he was hunting a job.

He said he was instructed in the Moslem religion and given a new identity as Kamel Amin Tabet, with a Syrian passport listing Beirut as his birthplace. He said he was trained in espionage techniques.

The hanging of a naturalized United States citizen, Farhan Attasi, as an American spy in Damascus at the end of February is the specific incident for which the United States is thought to be seeking retaliation.

Couldn't Stop Killings Says Dr. Hans Globke

DUSSELDORF — Dr. Hans Globke, for 14 years the top right-hand man to former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, told a court here that it was not his responsibility to take steps, during the Nazi regime, to prevent the execution of Jews.

Dr. Globke had been a senior official of the Ministry of the Interior during the Hitler regime, and was the legal officer who had written "the Nazi official 'interpretation' of the anti-Semitic Nuremberg Laws.

He was called by the court as a witness in the trial here of former officers of Hitler's SS, charged with mass shootings of Jews in Poland.

Asked by the judge whether he had done anything to halt such murders, Dr. Globke replied, "It was not my responsibility. I was in a different department. In any case, what would have been the sense in publicly opposing it."

Earlier, Dr. Globke had told the court, "I heard from people who were home on leave (from the Nazi army) that shootings were going on in Poland. But I knew nothing of concentration camp victims."

IN HOLLYWOOD

Reminiscing about his early vaudeville days, Jack said, "Jessel and I used to date the same girls in our old Palace days. Then he got married and I got married and he got married, and he got married and then he SHOULD HAVE gotten married. Today he has the only wives who get alimony from B'nai B'rith."

Jack then said, "My birthday is after 12 tonight." At that moment in the Friars Club, it was 9:30 "My birth date is Valentine's Day but not really. I was born on Feb. 14 but eight years later it became Valentine's Day."

The band played "Happy Birthday" and someone brought in a cake with sparklers. The audience arose and cheered the beloved comedian who didn't mention his attained age - 71 - but who, if scrutinized at close range, falls to reveal any severe lines on his deadpan face.

Benny added, "For some reason everyone laughs when I say I'm 39. I'll tell you why you should never worry about getting old. Two years ago, I was playing at the Ziegfeld Theater in N.Y. Maurice Chevalier - we're old friends - came backstage. It was his 75th birthday.

"A newspaperman asked the French idol, 'How does it feel to be 75?' and Chevalier replied, 'When I think of the alternative I like it.'"

Jack said that the evening's tribute almost canceled itself out when Toastmaster Rogell argued to convince a stubborn Jessel that he couldn't act as toastmaster at his own testimonial.

Before sitting down, Jack congratulated Jessel and said, "I love him and I hope some day he'll straighten out."

The lodge's Vice President Sidney Miller, talented actor-writer-director and last year's recipient of the Jeff Chandler Memorial Award, sang a clever parody explaining why members singled out Jessel and then George finally got his chance to speak.

There is no denying Jessel's fluency when the occasion demands seriousness but in between he's a very funny man.

He said, "In the last 230 days

BONN — A new search for hidden Nazi documents — plus a possible cache of gold and other looted valuables — is scheduled to be launched by the German Government in the Hartz Mountain area near Hannover. The search will be conducted by the Pioneer Corps of the army.

I made about 240 speeches." Jessel always throws figures around loosely but nobody ever bothers to check his statistics.

He went on to describe the many cities he visits and how he is usually greeted at the airport by the local chairwoman who is decked out in "orchids her relations bought her." She invariably invites him to her home where he meets her friends who always outnumber the attendance later at the ballroom.

Jessel's stories soon had George Burns and Jack Benny laughing hysterically with Benny paying him the supreme compliment by pounding the table with the palm of his hand.

Jessel said, "I had a very warm association with Jeff Chandler and I included him in my book, 'Halos Over Hollywood.'" He spoke of Chandler's tolerance and proceeded to read his halo about the late star from his book.

"I have a great knowledge of the Jewish religion," said Jessel, "but not enough of the spirit." He paid fitting tribute to B'nai B'rith who, he said, "has done more good than any other organization in the history of man."

JWV Brotherhood Affair Scheduled For Sunday

The Jewish War Veterans, Department of Rhode Island, will hold a Brotherhood Breakfast on Sunday at 9 A.M. at the Colony Motor Hotel, Cranston. Awards will be made to outstanding senior high school students of the state. Selection of award recipients will be based on resumes supplied by the schools, in regard to school citizenship, participation in school activities, scholastic and attendance records, and brotherly respect for all without regard to race, creed or color.

"66 Classmates Today, Neighbors Tomorrow" is the slogan selected for the Brotherhood Breakfast.

Guest speaker will be the Rev. Edward H. Flannery, editor of The Providence Visitor.

Judging will be done by the Education Committee of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, working with the JWV to sponsor the brotherhood program. The three top awards will be $100 scholarships and wrist watches. Certificates will be presented to all participants.

Parents of the students selected for awards have been invited to attend, and about 250 are expected. Twenty-eight schools will be represented. Principals and leaders in the field of education have been invited to the breakfast.

Past Dept. Commander Sidney D. Long is chairman of the committee. Other committee members are Harry Fain, location and food; Paul J. Robin and Aaron Mittleman, awards and gifts; Morton Gleckman, color guard; Mr. Robin and Abraham Goldstein, invited guests; Irving H. Levin and Harvey Green, printing and mailing; Melvin Goldwin and Melvin Harriet, tickets; Herman Braff and Harold Israel, publicity.

PAST PRESIDENTS' NIGHT
Harry Goldstein, a former board member and past president, will be guest speaker at the Rhode Island Jewish Fraternal Association's annual Past Presidents' Night on Thursday at 8:30 P.M. in the Sons of Abraham Auditorium. Mr. Goldstein was recently appointed Public Safety Commissioner of the City of Providence. At the meeting, amendments to the constitution of the Association will be considered.

R. I. CLUB OF GREATER MIAMI
The Rhode Island Club of Greater Miami will hold a "Purim Party Meeting" at the Washington Federal Bank Auditorium, 1234 Washington Avenue, Miami Beach, Fla., on Sunday at 7:30 P.M. Judge Morris Berick, a former Rhode Islander who was recently installed as president of the Miami Beach Bar Association, will be guest of the evening. Purim delicacies, a card party and entertainment will follow. Rhode Islanders are invited to attend the affair.

Officers of the club, installed recently by Judge Berick, are Ben Friedenn, president; Joseph Rotenberg, 1st vice-president; Alfred Aden, vice-president; Irving Cohen, recording secretary; Mrs. Ann Cohen, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Dora Rotenberg, treasurer; Mrs. Ann Rudnick, financial secretary, and Mrs. Jeanne Rotenberg, publicity chairman.

Board members installed were Mr. and Mrs. Friedenn, Mr. and Mrs. Aden, Mr. and Mrs. Rotenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Rudnick, Mr. and Mrs. Nat Cohen, Mrs. Rothberg, Mrs. Mandell, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard White, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goldberg, Mr. and Mrs. Max Dubbin, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gersh and Mr. and Mrs. Boris Pritcher.

Meetings are held on the second Sunday of each month at the Washington Federal Bank Auditorium.

BETH AM SISTERHOOD
Plans for the Strawberry Dessert Bridge of the Temple Beth Am Sisterhood, to be held on April 7, were formulated at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Howard L. Winograd of Warwick. She and Mrs. Bernard Freeman are co-chairmen of the bridge.

QUARTER PAST CLUB
The Quarter Past Club of the Jewish Community Center will hold its Purim Festive Dance-Cocktail Social on Sunday, March 21, in the Georgian Ballroom of the Crown Hotel. Bob Banner's Orchestra will furnish music and entertainment. Purim refreshments will be served. All single adults are invited to attend.

MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION
The Mothers' Association of Temple Beth David will hold a Purim festival and card party on Monday at 7:30 P.M. Mrs. Mildred Gorin is chairman and committee members are Mesdames Benjamin Ludman, Louis Goodman, James Riseberg, Raymond Muffs, Philip Woled, Arnold Rosenfeld, Rea Holland and Charles Ross.

Dean Rusk Explains U. S. Arms Policy

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Dean Rusk has told newsmen that the United States encouraged the West German shipment of arms to Israel, because of the U.S. policy of helping maintain a military balance of power in the Middle East. In line with this policy, Mr. Rusk said, was Government approval of the transfer of American-made tanks to Israel, before West Germany responded to Arab threats by suspending its arms shipments.
The Secretary of State, at a news conference, said the United States is not interested in becoming directly involved as a supplier of arms.
Commenting unfavorably on the United Arab Republic's invitation to Walter Ulbricht, East German leader, Mr. Rusk said this country "does not look with favor on any action that seems to reinforce the division of Germany or to undermine the authority of the Bonn Government as spokesman for all the German people in international affairs."
He mentioned another possible crisis spot, Africa, and said the foreign ministers' meeting of the Organization of African Unity might be able to find a way to keep the Congo "free of molestation" by other nations.

ROUSLIN HONORED
NEW YORK — Paul H. Rouslin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's Pawtucket district office, has been invited to a five-day business conference with President Gilbert W. Fitzhugh and other company officers at the Riviera Hotel in Palm Springs, Calif., next week from Monday through Friday.

Last year Mr. Rouslin, who lives at 169 Ninth Street, placed more than $1,000,000 in personal life insurance. It was the eighth time that his annual sales have passed the million mark.
