

Gerald S. Goldstein, Warwick Mayor Candidate, Takes Pride In Politics

Business, politics and civic organizations makes Warwick's Gerald S. Goldstein one of the busiest men in the state, and one of the most interesting.

In his 38 years, he has started his own profitable business, Town & Country Cleaners (with three branches); has become active in just about every civic organization in town and has a political history dating back to 1954 when he was only 27 years old.

He sought his first major office last year, the mayorship of Warwick, but lost the Republican party endorsement by one vote, 32-31, and despite protests from his supporters to run, he didn't want to split his party and run in the primary so he became Warwick campaign manager for Governor Chafee. (His leadership and planning ability was proven with the election as Governor Chafee received the highest plurality in the state from Warwick.)

He will again seek his party's nod in the 1966 election and has already announced his candidacy for the office.

One of the many interesting facets in Mr. Goldstein's life is how he got started in his political career.

Thomas Pearlman, presently Ward 2 Councilman, East Side, (at that time state Representative) invited him to lunch one afternoon and later extended an invitation to attend a session of the general assembly.

"It was a disheartening experience" related Mr. Goldstein. "All machine controlled, several members showed a lack of interest and they were told what to do from the front office."

"If the Republicans had been in control at the time, I would have in all probability become a Democrat", related Mr. Goldstein.

His introduction to political life came later that year when he ran for Representative in the Middle East Side district and lost by only 300 votes.

It was at this time that he branched out into his own business, Town & Country Cleaners, with his first plant on Warwick Avenue in Warwick.

He was no newcomer to the cleaning business as his father is the owner of Kent Cleaners in Providence.

When he opened the plant, a 20 hour day was in order for the first several years and many friends warned him on his choice of location as six plants were located within two miles of his plant, all on the same street.

But, with his determination and quality work, he not only survived, but now his is the largest establishment in the area.

GERALD S. GOLDSTEIN

Once settled in Warwick with his wife Joan Efron Goldstein and daughter Jill at 80 Massasoit Drive, he actively became a prominent member of that community by joining various organizations including the Chamber of Commerce, March of Dimes, Elks, the Businessman's Association, Kent County YMCA Board of Management, and the Kent County Cancer Crusade.

His political affiliations include Warwick campaign manager for Gov. Chafee, Young Republicans, Republican Finance Committee and he also received the award as the Republican Of The Year in Warwick.

Why does Gerald Goldstein run for political office?

"I take a civic pride in government."

He finds politics "like a disease. Many people tell me I spend too much time in politics, being an active businessman, but I feel that everyone should take an active part in the party of their choice. If not, you'll once again get the element in politics you don't want."

Concerning his 1966 campaign, for which he has already started to lay the groundwork, he related, "the swell for the coming election has been tremendous so far. Supporters from all walks of life in the community have called me and have offered their help. Not a day goes by without several calls."

His progressive and creative planning has shown merit in several instances.

One plan he proposed has been used successfully by the opposite party.

During his campaign for the Republican party endorsement in

Negotiation Proposals Of Bourguiba Welcomed By Senator Claiborne Pell

In an exclusive interview with the Rhode Island Herald, Senator Claiborne Pell hailed the recent statement of President Hagib Bourguiba of Tunisia, in which the Arab leader proposed negotiations aimed at settling the cold war between Israel and the Arab world.

Senator Pell, who is a member of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, said, "Although I do not agree with all of President Bourguiba's specific points of solution, to my mind, the significant thing is that a highly respected Arab leader has displayed a willingness to give de jure recognition to the State of Israel and to work towards a peaceful settlement of Arab-Israeli differences. This action on the part of an Arab leader took a tremendous amount of political courage which should be applauded by peace-loving people everywhere."

The Senator continued: "It seems to me that this is the sort of statesman-like action which President Kennedy had in mind for our own country when he told us we should never negotiate out of fear, but we should never fear to negotiate."

Mr. Pell said that we obviously cannot expect either side to look with joy upon the immediate proposals made by the Tunisian President. Such small beginnings, however, often open the door to real progress towards peace, he added.

On his return from a visit to

SEN. CLAIBORNE PELL

Israel last fall, Senator Pell discussed his reactions with the Herald. He commented that as a nation which had to fight to gain our own independence, the United States has always been particularly sympathetic to other nations, such as Israel, which have shown similar successful determination.

"Israel, standing as it does, as the only viable political democracy in the Middle East, has proven to that entire section of the world the economic and social progress which is possible only under democratic government," he said.

DR. SAMUEL PRITZKER

Slate Dr. Pritzker For Re-Election As Beth El President

Temple Beth El will hold its annual meeting at 8 P.M. on Sunday. A buffet supper at 6:30 P.M. will precede the meeting. The nominating committee will again present the name of Dr. Samuel Pritzker for a second term as president of the congregation.

Other officers to be nominated are Kenneth Logowitz, Dr. Manuel Horwitz and Ernest Nathan, vice presidents; Raymond G. Franks, treasurer, and Mrs. Robert Hochberg, secretary. Trustees for the term ending June 30, 1968, are Mrs. Abraham Adelman, Nathan L. Alterman, Harold D. Fine, A. Archie Finkelstein, Joseph M. Finkle, Stanley Grossman, Harold Leavitt, Dr. Herman B. Marks and Mrs. Ernest L. Shein.

An honorary life trustee will be elected at the meeting, appointive trustees will be announced, and messages and reports will be presented by the president, rabbis and executive director.

Nominating Committee members are Abraham Adelman, Herbert J. Cohen, Newton B. Cohn; Irving Jay Fain and Saul Zarchen, alternates; Maurice W. Hendel, Harold S. Moskol, Dr. Harold R. Musiker and Bertram L. Bernhardt, chairman.

Plans For New Jewish Community Center To Be Presented At 40th Annual Meeting

Plans for a new Jewish Community Center will be presented at the Center's 40th annual meeting on May 26 by the Steering Committee, which will report the results of a fact-finding study. Max Grant is chairman of the committee, and Bertram Bernhardt and Merrill Hassenfeld, co-chairmen. Building plans, the program at the new Center, location of the Center, proposals for the building campaign and recommended membership rates will be announced at the meeting.

Merrill L. Hassenfeld, president of the General Jewish Committee, and Robert H. I. Goddard, president of the United Fund, will be guest speakers at the meeting. The Center has met several times with the Capital Funds Committee of the United Fund to discuss its plans, and has met once with the GJC Planning Committee. Both the United Fund and the GJC contribute to the Center.

Lawrence Hopfenberg is chairman of the Annual Meeting Committee and Mrs. Sidney Meyer, co-chairman. Members are Mesdames Stanley Grossman, Bernhardt, chairman.

AJC Renews Protest Against Jordanian World Fair Mural

NEW YORK — The American Jewish Congress last week renewed its protest demonstration against the anti-Israel mural in the Jordanian Pavilion at the World's Fair.

This time there were no arrests as AJCongress officers distributed printed leaflets to Fair visitors, charging that the Arab nations themselves were responsible for the Arab refugees depicted in the Jordanian mural.

The AJCongress protest took place in the second week of the Fair under the terms of a court order permitting the Congress to challenge the message of the Jordanian Pavilion through the distribution of handbills. Both AJCongress and Fair officials agreed to the order.

The agreement came after a hearing on a suit brought by Dr. Joachim Prinz, president of the AJCongress, and rabbi of Temple B'nai Abraham, Newark, seeking to enjoin the Fair from interfering with the AJCongress in exercising its Constitutional right of free speech.

Two officers of the AJCongress wearing white identifying buttons began distribution of the leaflets in front of the Jordan exhibit on Monday, April 26.

Other American Jewish Congress officers took up their posts in front of the Jordanian exhibit later in the day.

The display in the Jordanian Pavilion consists of a mural depicting an Arab refugee mother and her child accompanied by a poem that speaks of "a million of us...wasting lives in exiled misery waiting to go home..."

The mural charges that "terror's fierce practitioners" have used their "gains ill-got...to disturb the Jordan's course and make the desert bloom with warriors."

Last May 25, Dr. Prinz, and 11 other leaders of the organization entered the Fair and were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct after seeking to set up a picket line outside the Jordan exhibit.

After a two-day trial, Judge Bernard Dubin of the Queens County Criminal Court acquitted Dr. Prinz and the 11 others.

He ruled that picketing was an exercise of the constitutional rights of the defendants under the First Amendment, that the World's Fair was a "quasi-public" operation and that its streets had the character of public streets. His ruling declared that "all guarantees of the United States Constitution apply," including the right to picket on the Fair's walkways. The judge rebuked the Fair's management for allowing Jordan to exhibit what he termed "the offensive mural."

Israel Bar-Yehuda Dies In Jerusalem

JERUSALEM — Israel Bar-Yehuda, Israel's Transport and Communications Minister, died last week after a brief illness. He was 69 years old.

The Ukrainian-born minister, a Zionist from his youth, was a founder of the left-wing Socialist party, Achdut Avodah, and a former Interior Minister.

Mr. Bar-Yehuda was exiled to Siberia shortly after the Russian revolution. He was allowed to leave the Soviet Union in 1926. He settled in Palestine as a road worker and farm laborer.

Surviving are his widow and a daughter.

Wiesel Wins Top Jewish Novel Award

NEW YORK — Eli Wiesel's novel, "The Town Beyond the Wall" (Atheneum Publishers) has been named the outstanding English-language work of fiction of Jewish interest published in the United States during 1964, it was announced by Dr. Gilbert Klaperman, president of the National Jewish Welfare Board Jewish Book Council of America.

Mr. Wiesel will receive the $250 Harry and Ethel Daroff Memorial Award, one of the four carrying cash prizes totalling $850 for 1964's best Jewish books in fiction, Jewish thought, poetry and juvenile fields, to be made by the Jewish Book Council at its annual meeting, Wednesday evening, May 19, at 8:15 in the Assembly Hall of Temple Emanu-el, 1 East 65th Street, New York.

The $250 Frank and Ethel S. Cohen Award for the best book on Jewish thought was voted to Dr. Israel Efros for his "Ancient Jewish Philosophy" (Wayne State University Press). The $250 Israel Siegel Memorial Juvenile Award, for the best Jewish juvenile, will go to Dr. Azriel Eisenberg and Chaplain Dov Peretz Elkins, who is on duty at Fort Gordon, Ga., co-authors of "Worlds Lost and Found," (Abelard-Schuman).

Aleph Katz was named the winner of the Florence and Harry Kovner Memorial Award for the best book of Yiddish poetry, "Di Emmesse Hasunah" (Cyclo).

Israeli Parade Of Military Power Marks 17th Anniversary Parade

TEL AVIV — Israel's 17th anniversary was celebrated here with an impressive parade which was highlighted by a show of military power witnessed by hundreds of thousands of spectators.

Israel also unveiled her American-built Hawk anti-aircraft missiles for the first time. The parade also included a show of airpower by 300 Israeli Air Force planes, from helicopters and troop transports to supersonic jet fighters.

The show of force seemed as much calculated to remind Israel's hostile Arab neighbors of her military capabilities as to provide a colorful and reassuring spectacle for a celebrating nation.

The new armaments included mobile L-70 anti-aircraft batteries, each made up of three Swedish Bofors 40-mm guns with Swiss-built radar-tracking and fire-control systems.

Another new weapon was a 160-mm mortar, the largest in use in the army. The mortar was manufactured by Israel's relatively modest arms industry.

American-built Sherman tanks rumbled down the parade route, but in an altered form that improves their performance. The Israelis have installed a more powerful engine, wider treads and a French turret assembly.

The parade was reviewed by President Zalman Shazar and Premier Levi Eshkol. The procession of troops, motorized units and armored units, with an air show, lasted an hour.

As Israel enters her 18th year, the Middle East is passing through a period of ferment.

Several months ago, the region was highly tense over the Arabs' plan to divert headwaters of the Jordan River. Israel and the Arab states exchanged threats, and there were fears that a clash might be imminent.

Tension over the Arab water plan has diminished somewhat, although there is no certainty that it will not recur. Israeli leaders still insist that any Arab diversion that deprives Israel of her fair share of the Jordan waters will be an act of war, but there has been less talk lately of preventive military action.

ENGAGED—Dr. and Mrs. Louis R. Brenner of 129 Lyman Street, Woonsocket, announce the engagement of their daughter, Beverly Kay, to Paul Benton Levitt, son of Mrs. Milton Levitt of 226 Blackstone Boulevard and the late Mr. Levitt.

Miss Brenner, a graduate of Hope High School, attended Boston University. Mr. Levitt, also a Hope High graduate, is a senior at the University of Rhode Island and is affiliated with Allen J. White, investment brokers.

A June, 1966, wedding is planned.

Four Rhode Islanders, B'nai B'rith Delegates, To Leave For Israel

WASHINGTON — Four Rhode Island men depart for Israel this month as part of a 1,300-person airlift of American and Canadian delegates and guests to the triennial convention of B'nai B'rith on May 23 in Jerusalem. Bertram Louis Bernhardt and Sidney L. Rabinowitz of Providence, Al Saltzman of Pawtucket and Lester A. Macktey of Woonsocket are delegates to the five-day convention.

Mr. Bernhardt, a business executive, is a past president of B'nai B'rith's Roger Williams Lodge and a member of the board of governors of B'nai B'rith District 1. Mr. Rabinowitz, an attorney, is a past president of Roger Williams Lodge and of the B'nai B'rith Central New England Council.

Mr. Saltzman, a merchant, is a member of the Council and of the New England regional board of the Anti-Defamation League. Mr. Macktey, a business executive, is president of Woonsocket Lodge and a member of the District 1 board of governors.

The B'nai B'rith convention is the second to be held outside the United States. The Jewish group met in Israel in 1959, setting up what was then the largest airlift in commercial airline history. The convention will mark the 100th anniversary of B'nai B'rith's association with Palestine.

NEW SCIENCE AID
TEL AVIV — The Weizmann Institute of Science at Rehovot dedicated a $1,500,000 American-made, 15,000,000-volt, tandem accelerator for the study of nucleons and nuclear activities. Funds for the apparatus came partly from West Germany as a loan and partly from a donation from the Hebrew University which will also use the facility.

The Fact-Finding Study

The conclusions of the Fact-Finding Study of the Providence Jewish Community Center will be reported at its 40th Annual Meeting on Wednesday, May 26. This study has been in progress for many months and many members of the community have been involved in its work — in investigation, discussion, study and decision-making.

The present Center building, obviously, offers neither the space nor the facilities necessary to fill the needs of the present Jewish community. This Fact-Finding group was interested in discovering what sort of Center building the Jewish community needed — its size, the services it should offer, the people it will serve, the type of personnel needed, the amount of money necessary to bring about the best results.

The Community Center serves the entire Jewish community — the senior adults and the nursery age child; the teen-agers and the adults. The entire community should be interested in its welfare.

The meeting will be held on Wednesday, May 26. It is in the interest of the entire Jewish community that this study has been made. It is in the interest of the entire community that its members attend to hear the results of this study, so that when the time comes they may help to bring about the realization of a new and larger and more useful Center.

They Have Nowhere To Go

The war on poverty and the fight for civil rights are not necessarily related, but any minority group is likely to be short-changed in the economic as well as the civil rights realm. The waste of human beings trapped in a situation that seems to have no solution is always more frightening when there are children to be considered, children growing up with no hope or knowledge that there is a good life.

For them, there isn't. The teenage gangs in Harlem, whose only goal is escape from the intolerable boredom of living, are full of children who have no chance to live as befits human beings. Segregation and poverty compound the other social ills, until a hundred news stories tell us of teenage mobsters jailed or dead, to every one article by a Negro who was able to break away.

Quite a good movie about such a Harlem gang will be shown in area theaters this week. "The Cool World" is the simply-told story of a 14-year-old boy who wants to own a gun and boss his gang. It was filmed in the streets of Harlem and portrays with rare restraint (if undue length) the conditions of hopelessness which are relieved primarily by violence and drugs.

At a special showing for the press last week, one viewer asked why the movie offered no solution. "Perhaps there are many solutions which, taken together, can change Harlem and places like it," said Fred Wiseman, producer of the film. "I question whether there is any single solution." Our interest in finding a solution, a way to decent living for everyone in this country, cannot but be accelerated by this portrayal of children who have nothing to do and nowhere to go.

FROM FRIDAY TO FRIDAY

An Award For Frank Licht

By Beryl Segal

Whenever people talk or write on the subject of American and Jew, Good American and Poor Jew, Good Jew and Poor American, dual loyalties and multiple allegiances, I think of Judge Frank Licht.

Judge Licht is a happy blending of American and Jew, of a Good American and at the same time, a Good Jew. His allegiances are not divided, but they live in him in a perfect union. He does not apologize for one and is not condescending to the other. He is the perfect answer to all the discussions on this never ending argument.

Jew and American are as natural to him as his name, and you do not know where one begins and the other ends in Judge Frank Licht.

He is equally at home when he addresses a State Convention of State Judges and when he addresses a State Conference of Zionists. He speaks as freely to a gathering of his fellow Rhode Islanders, as when he dons a yarmulke and is the toastmaster at a dinner given by the Hebrew Day School of Providence. He is a spokesman for the Community Chest and for the General Jewish Committee at the same time. He is to be found among his fellow citizens and among his fellows in the congregation. He pays homage to a distinguished American as well as to a distinguished Jew, and he does both with the eloquence and ease and good grace that comes from a recognition that all is one and in one can dwell all the good qualities we seek in the good man.

Now Judge Frank Licht is honored and given recognition for his years of faithfulness to Zion. He is given the Herbert Lehman Award by the Committee of State of Israel Bonds.

Frank Licht became a Zionist early in his life. His teacher and Rabbi Morris Schussheim must be very pleased with his eager pupil. From his youth he was destined to become a leader. He was at the head of his class, he was at the head of his group, and he did not forsake Zion when he grew up. He remained faithful to his love for Zion and his belief in Zion through his college years, and in his busiest days, he found time to make this love and this belief come a little closer to becoming flesh and blood and soil and home for thousands of Jews.

And it could have been otherwise.

Frank Licht could have been a successful lawyer or doctor or business man steeped in his career and quite pleased with himself. He could have grown up a young man who waters his lawn, rakes his leaves, polishes his car and goes after his golf ball in his leisure time.

But Frank Licht does all these things and finds time to spare for the work of Zion. He is everywhere. He is above all a devoted servant to the State of Israel Bonds. In the bonds he found the real meaning of work for Israel. You are not asked to give to Israel, but are advised to invest in Israel. Invest in its industry. Invest in its development. Invest in its trade and commerce. And above all, invest in its new ventures in Atomic Energy for peaceful uses. Things of which neither Frank Licht nor any of his generation dared dream in their most daring dreams, came to be. You can see it. You can feel its power pulsating through the hills and valleys and sands of Israel. This is the idea of Israel Bonds. This idea appeals to Frank Licht.

Frank Licht has been chosen to receive the Herbert Lehman Award. He has been chosen to receive this award on the tenth year of his Judgeship. Frank Licht became a member of the Superior Court in 1956. At that time, I understand that he expressed his wish that I write the citation which was given to him by an appreciative community. I am glad that I can write about him now on the tenth anniversary and on his receiving the Israel award.

Like Herbert Lehman in whose memory the award was established, Frank Licht carries the two titles, American and Jew, with dignity and honor. Governor of New York, Senator of the United States, Elder Statesman in his party, Herbert Lehman remained a whole man, an American and a faithful Jew. No conflicts. No apologies. He embraced Zionist cause and defended it in the Senate and on the platforms of the land. His letter to a young man who sought his advice is now a classic.

How should I succeed and remain a Jew? asked the young man. Be yourself, was the advice Herbert Lehman gave.

Those who will hate you because you are a Jew do not deserve your consideration. Those who will value your abilities, your devotion, your faithfulness, will not mind your being a Jew, Herbert Lehman goes on in his letter.

Of course you will suffer, he says in his advice to the young man, but who does not suffer for the sake of one cause or another? Make sure that you chose a right cause. Believe in it. Stick to it. Do not let your enemies discourage you. In the end you will see good days.

Be a Jew and an American because there is no discord between the two.

The Herbert Lehman Award will fit Frank Licht well. He will wear it with distinction and with dignity.

And he, Frank Licht, will serve as an example for all young men in our community to emulate and to mold their lives in his image.

(Mr. Segal's opinions are his own. His views are not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

Matilda Litwin

Consultant On The Aged Says R. I. Needs More Volunteer Services, More Money

Rhode Island has two major gaps to be filled in its treatment of older people: an increased financial appropriation to meet the need for homemaker services, and volunteer services of varied types.

Miss Matilda R. Litwin, Consultant on the Chronically Ill and the Aged, Rhode Island State Department of Social Welfare, said that the newness of the group is indicated by the difficulty we have in knowing what to call them. Her preference is for "Older Adults," but "Golden Aged" and "Senior Citizens" are among the widely-current terms. President Johnson has designated May as "Senior Citizens Month," a period "dedicated to community action on behalf of older people whose hopes and problems must be shared by us all."

Her concern, that of the community, must be more than helping those who are older adults now. We must change the image, in our culture, of the older person, Miss Litwin said. We are and had to be a youth-oriented culture to accomplish what has been done in this country, but the time has come when we must acknowledge that there is worth and dignity in old age. The United States wastes the talents, experience, skills and energies of its older people, who in other countries are useful and honored.

There are 18,000,000 persons 65 years old or older in this country; retirement at 65 is compulsory for most Americans, and it is predicted that in about 20 years it will only take half as much time and half as many people to produce the necessities of life. Retirement will probably come earlier, the work week will probably shrink still more, and an enormous group of healthy, energetic people will have lost their status as persons who work for a living.

The image of work as the basic dignity must change, under these circumstances, said Miss Litwin, and, for the sake of all of us, the sooner the stereotype is gone, the better. Regardless of the persons in their late 80's or 90's who are vigorous and alert, we tend to think of older people in terms of the sick elderly, rather than the well elderly.

The climate is beginning to change, added Matilda Litwin; by virtue of the numbers involved, older people are making themselves heard. This became evident in regard to medical bill legislation.

Rhode Island made a "very fine beginning" when Selig Greenberg wrote "The Rising Tide," a series of articles on the problems of older people in this state. Following this, a commission was set up by the state, then a committee, and now the Division on Aging. There has never been an appropriation, however, which would be adequate to allow the agency to discharge its responsibilities.

In December, 1962, Miss Litwin was appointed to the newly-created position of Consultant on services to the aging and chronically ill. It was a specialized assignment; previously, as state supervisor of the City of Providence for the Division of Public Assistance, she had been concerned with all kinds of social problems — aid to the blind, the disabled, and dependent children, general public assistance and old age. This is a developmental kind of position, because her charge is to work not only within her own department to develop services, but to help train staff for work with the elderly and to give leadership in the community towards bringing about an understanding of older people and ministering to their needs.

"We have made a very good beginning, but I don't feel that we have kept abreast of the developments and services for older people in the State of Rhode Island. There are many vital unmet needs." Among these needs are a Today's hand is a fine example of good bidding. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Friedman of Pawtucket, another of Rhode Island's leading husband and wife pairs, were North and South respectively.

The bidding:
 North East South West
 Pass Pass 1D Pass
 3D Pass 3S Pass
 4S Pass Pass Pass

North's response of 3 Diamonds may cause some wonderment as he has not the supposed requirement of an opening bid but remember, he had passed originally. Now his bid was an excellent description of his hand. South had a good opening bid but did not particularly want to contract for an 11 trick game in Diamonds; nor did she have a No Trump type hand so she made a waiting bid of 3 Spades, giving her partner several choices; he could either return to 4 or 5 Diamonds, bid 3 No Trump or, as was the actual case, bid 4 Spades with his fine 3-card Spade support.

After the lead of the Heart king, Mrs. Friedman had no difficulty making her game despite the 4-2 Trump split and the valiant effort of West to foil her. After winning the King and Queen of Hearts, West cashed the Club Ace and could see that to set the hand he would have to establish his Spade 10. He now made a good play, giving declarer a sluff and ruff intentionally by leading another Heart. Had Mrs. Friedman ruffed in her own hand, she would have gone down, but she calmly ruffed in dummy, played the King and Jack of Spades, returned to her hand with a Diamond, drew the remaining trumps and claimed the balance.

Neither 3 No Trump nor 5 Diamonds could make, so the Friedmans reached the only makeable game.

Today's moral: When it costs nothing to make a bid that may lead you to a better contract, you should always avail yourself of the opportunity. Also, 4 Trumps opposite 3 is not to be shunned as long as you know how to handle it.

Israeli Hoop Mentor Returns To Middle East

NEW YORK — "Many of your American basketball terms are the same in Hebrew," said Yehuda Birnszweig, one of Israel's most promising young coaches, as he prepared to return home after a four month visit to the United States. "Terms such as 'jump shot' and 'pivot' are exactly the same. However, 'dump shot' is not a Hebrew phrase simply because we can't make them."

A huge smile broke out across the face of the 6'3", 225-pound Birnszweig, who bears a striking resemblance to Theodore Bikel. At 27, he has been entrusted by his country with the task of raising the level of Israeli basketball at the grass-roots level.

Birnszweig came to the United States last Nov. 3 at the suggestion of Lafayette basketball coach George Davidson, who spent six months in Israel in 1964. Davidson worked with the Israeli national team, conducted clinics, and was a visiting professor at the Orde Wingate Institute.

"I spent the first month at Easton, Pa. with Davidson," said Birnszweig, "learning how to conduct pre-season practices. Then I went to Philadelphia and worked with Harry Litwak of Temple, Jack Ramsey of St. Joseph's, John McCloskey of Pennsylvania, Bob Walters of LaSalle, and Harold Reinfeld, who coaches one of Philadelphia's largest recreation centers.

"From Philadelphia I went up to the Boston area," Birnszweig continued, "and was helped by Irv Olin of Brandeis, Bob Cousy of Boston College, John Barry of MIT and many, many more."

Birnszweig, who was born in Tel Aviv and has also coached the Maccabi-Tel Aviv club team, believes his biggest problem at home will be in translating what he has learned to Israeli conditions. "I'm afraid basketball in Israel is still in a relatively primitive stage," he said. "Perhaps the best illustration of this is the fact that there is a 200% luxury tax on basketball sneakers, which sell for 55 Israeli pounds. Three pounds are equal to one United States dollar. Basketballs cost between 55 and 60 pounds.

Birnszweig said that despite the handicaps, Israel is making remarkable progress on the court. Its national team won the right to go to Moscow for the final round of the European championships in May.

When Birnszweig returns to Israel he will conduct youth and coaches clinics at the Wingate Institute, all under the government sports department supervision. There will be 150 youngsters and approximately 10 coaches. "I really can't wait to get back and get started," he said. "In the meantime, I'd like to thank all the coaches here in the United States who have been so gracious and helpful."

Then Yehuda Birnszweig said shalom and boarded his plane.

Czechoslovakia Notes Acts Of Anti-Semitism

VIENNA — Czechoslovakia, one of Hitler's first national victims, has recently experienced anti-Semitic acts by its own citizens, according to Czechoslovak newspapers. The offenders were young people born during or since World War II.

The newspaper Prace reported early this year that 50 tombstones dating from the 13th and 14th centuries had been destroyed before Christmas in the Jewish cemetery in Trebic. Investigation led to the arrest of two young men, both born in 1946.

About the same time, Rude Pravo mentioned briefly that a group of boys aged 13 to 15, and led by a 17-year-old youth, had broken into the synagogue in Pilsen.

In Kuznurni Tvorba of last Dec. 12 appeared a more descriptive account of juvenile anti-Semitism under the title, "The Limits of a Game."

The writer, Jeri Billy, said that in one school boys saluted each other, "Heil Hitler!" He said they cursed Jews and sang "Today Germany is Ours—Tomorrow the World!"

The writer said a family in the neighborhood had preserved an old record player and many recordings of Nazi marches. These were learned, he said by the children.

EDUCATIONAL GAINS — Education Minister Zalman Aranne told Parliament that 9,000 teachers will be trained in the next three years to meet the shortage in Israel.

Model To Show Old Jerusalem

JERUSALEM— Anyone who would like to see Jerusalem as it was 1900 years ago should be able to do so in about a year.

By April, 1966, a detailed model of the ancient city should be complete. Most of it has already been built, on a hillside west of modern Jerusalem.

The project was conceived by Hans Kroch, an 80-year-old businessman. The rebuilding of ancient Jerusalem is intended by Mr. Kroch to fill a historical gap. Unlike other great cities or Athens, ancient Jerusalem has left few traces of its physical form.

No palaces, no public buildings and no walls have survived.

Doctors Describe Anxieties Of Nazi Camp Survivors

NEW YORK— Clinical observations of 2,000 Nazi camp survivors over the past 17 years, show a "syndrome characterized by the persistence of symptoms of withdrawal from social life, insomnia, nightmares, chronic depressive and anxiety reactions and far reaching somatization," according to a study recently completed by several universities.

The findings were submitted to the five-day conference by Dr. Henry Krystal of Wayne State University and Dr. William G. Niederland of the State University of New York.

A feeling of anxiety was said to be predominant among the chronic complaints of the patients studied. Also, an inability to enjoy anything in their lives was described as a major problem.

"In fact," the two psychiatrists said, "many of our patients were not only unable to afford themselves some of the most innocent types of pleasure (for example, going to a movie, concert or social gathering with others) but even considered it outright immoral that they should enjoy themselves when most of their families had been killed."

The problem of survivor guilt is especially strong in cases where parents, mates and children were killed, the psychiatrists added. Their report was based on a detailed analysis of the case records of 149 survivors of death camps.

"Of our patients, 92 per cent expressed self-reproach for failing to have their relatives," Dr. Krystal and Dr. Niederland said in their report. Nine per cent expressed the wish that they had been killed instead of their relatives, they added.

The anxiety felt by the survivors was said to take the form of a chronic tendency to worry, vigilance and multiple phobias, fears about renewed persecutions and a general "expectation of catastrophe."

"The survivor guilt is a form of pathological mourning," the psychiatrists' report continued. "The survivor is stuck in a

Better Golf The E. Z. Way

One of the most misunderstood concepts in golf is the application of power. Indeed, one of the great thrills in the game is to feel the clubhead hit the ball solidly and watch it sail away far and straight. But take a ride some sunny Sunday to the golf course and listen to the grunts and groans, and watch the tug of war that goes on.

Have you ever swung at a ball easily after you've exhausted all your power missing shots, and found the ball flying much farther? The answer is—you are NOT supposed to use power to hit a golf ball—you must use force!

Scientists tell us that force is speed squared multiplied by weight. There is weight in the clubhead and your power must produce speed for a forceful impact. The immortal Leonardo Da Vinci, who I'm sure was not a golfer, described a blow as follows: "The blow is the son of motion and the grandson of force, whilst their mutual ancestor is weight." I think this should be kept in mind when considering the way to hit a golf ball.

Some people feel strong when they brace their legs and grip a club tightly. Those who do, usually cannot hit a ball too far because they are not in a condition to create speed. You cannot crack a stiff whip! One must be supple and relaxed to swing a club with speed. Your body contains a great deal of strength and energy. Your legs, back, shoulders and arms all have power; however, your HANDS are the medium through which all this power can create speed in swinging the club. Your body should be alive and responsive to your hands. Whether you throw a stone, cast a rod, or pitch horseshoes, it is your hands initiating the movement with the rest of your body responding instinctively in balance to that movement.

To hit the ball effectively with the clubhead, you must move the clubhead in a manner which will develop the greatest force. That force is centrifugal in nature and it is achieved by swinging. Even David knew it when he killed Goliath!

Israel's 17th Anniversary Dinner Will Honor Judge Frank Licht

Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, Vice President of the Israel Bond Organization, and a key figure in the past two decades in directing a massive program of relief and migration of Jews overseas, will be the principal speaker at the dinner celebrating Israel's seventeenth anniversary, at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel, Thursday, May 20. It was announced by Joseph Thaler, dinner chairman.

Sponsored by State of Israel Bonds, a highlight of the gathering will be presentation of the Herbert Lehman Israel Award to Judge Frank Licht of Providence, for his outstanding efforts in helping to strengthen the economic development of the Jewish State.

Judge Licht will be the first New Englander to receive the award, which is made in memory of the late Senator Herbert Lehman of New York, who was a leading supporter of the Israel Bond program since it was launched in 1951.

Members of bench and bar will join distinguished business leaders, members of the clergy, educators and Federal, State and municipal officials in paying homage to Judge Licht, who has long been active in communal endeavors.

Dr. Schwartz, as overseas chief of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, directed the transfer to Israel of more than

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

Girls Say Boys Pick On Them

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "I have a real problem for you. My problem is boys. A couple of boys in my room are always getting after my girlfriend and me. We hate these boys and have told them so, yet they still keep picking on us. We tell them to pick on someone else, but they say they are allergic to other girls. How can we get them off our minds? We hate them all."

OUR REPLY: Many of your schoolmates would probably be happy to exchange places with you. More often the complaint of teenage girls is that they get no attention at all from boys.

Actually, the boys are not really "picking on you." They are just trying for attention and, because they are just boys, they get this attention by teasing you and your girlfriend. You shouldn't hate them for it. They probably don't tease you because they dislike you: instead it is because they do like you... otherwise they would pay you no attention. If they "picked on" girls just for the fun of it, they would give their attention to other girls as well.

You and your girlfriend can adjust to their teasing. Begin by recognizing that it is done good-naturedly. Do not let them know that it annoys you so much. Ignore them if you wish — but don't tell them that you hate them. This only brings on more teasing, whatever their purpose. The best way to stop their attentions, if you want to stop them, is to convince them that they are just wasting their time.

If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an observation to make, address your letter to FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS, COMMUNITY AND SUBURBAN PRESS SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.

Mrs. Harry M. Saltzman

Miss Gail Weiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Weiner of 16 Nichols Avenue, Lynn, Mass., became the bride of Harry M. Saltzman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sigmund Saltzman of 137 Lancaster Street, Providence, on Sunday evening, May 2, at Congregation Ahabat Shalom. Rabbi Samuel Zaitchick officiated at the double ring ceremony, which was followed by a reception.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a full-length gown of white peau de soie appliqued with Alencon lace and seed pearls, with scalloped neckline and chapel train. Her bouffant illusion veil fell from a crown of crystals, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Stephen R. Weiner, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a full-length yellow silk linen gown with a back panel, and a headpiece of matching flowers. Her bouquet was of yellow cymbidium orchids with miniature turquoise carnations.

Bridesmaids were Miss Elaine

Lipson, Miss Phyllis Robinson, Miss Marjorie Raitman and Miss Janet Michelson. They wore full-length gowns of turquoise silk linen with back panels and matching petal headpieces, and carried bouquets of yellow roses and yellow miniature carnations.

Alan Pearlman of Providence was best man. Ushers were Stephen Weiner, the bride's brother; Samuel Olevson, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Gilbert Cohen and Michael Thaler. Other attendants were the grandparents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Rosenthal and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Silverman.

The mother of the bride wore a full-length aqua crepe gown with beaded bodice. The bridegroom's mother wore a similar gown of chiffon. Their corsages were of cymbidium orchids.

The bride is a graduate of Lynn English High and attended Boston University. The bridegroom was graduated from the Wharton School of Finance.

After a wedding trip to the Virgin Islands, they will live in Norwood, R.I.

Survey Reveals English-Jewish Weeklies Vital To Community

WASHINGTON—If the English-Jewish weekly press suddenly disappeared, the effect would be a weakened American Jewry.

This is the finding of a survey reported in the current issue of The National Jewish Monthly, published by B'nai B'rith.

Without English-Jewish newspapers, the survey notes:

1. Jewish organizations and synagogues would lose an important community-wide means for publicizing their activities and attracting new members.

2. Fund-raising drives would be less effective.

3. The blackout on news of Jewish interest could not be replaced by any existing medium.

The survey by Harold Eidlin, news writer and editor for the "Voice of America" and former staff member of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, was based on questionnaires sent to congregational rabbis, public relations directors of Jewish national organizations and to Jewish weekly publishers themselves.

Most respondents considered the disappearance of the Jewish weekly press "unthinkable." But they were also unsparing in their criticism of it.

Rabbis and public relations experts agreed with the aims and goals of the Jewish press, but barely 10% saw these as "actual accomplishments."

The weeklies were widely criticized for placing "disproportionate" emphasis on social news, and for "sensationalizing small matters into great issues"—particularly anti-Semitic incidents.

Another criticism was that most weeklies give "favored news treatment for Israel"—that is, over-emphasizing news items from or about Israel.

Some 65% of the rabbis who were polled lauded the Jewish press for doing a "good to excellent" job of reporting religious news. Three out of five said that without the Jewish press much of what is called "Jewish news" would go unreported.

Publishers who responded to the questionnaire admitted many of the charges. But they also maintained that the shortcomings "stem not from a lack of response to community needs or lack of personal commitment, but rather are the result of financial squeeze which makes qualitative improvements difficult."

About 80% reported that their papers had enjoyed circulation gains during the past five to ten years.

Publishers of independently-owned newspapers, many of the rabbis and most of the publicists expressed misgivings about the trend to community ownership of Jewish weeklies. Jewish federations or welfare funds now own weekly papers in six major cities.

Continued growth in the number of such papers "could spell the end of a free English-Jewish press," their critics declared.

R. I. Needs More Volunteer Services

homemaker service. There is general agreement now that older people should be kept in their own homes as long as possible. Home aides are vital to such a program, but the few home aides in Rhode Island are used primarily for families with children.
"We've had several studies to determine the need for homemaker services, and are about to have another. We do this well," commented Matilda Litwin.
Rhode Island's over-65 population is 10.4% — higher than the national average of 9.3%. To serve this tenth of our people, a broad band of services, made up primarily of volunteers under a professional head, is needed. Friendly visiting is necessary to the well-being of older persons who live alone, have been relocated from their old neighborhoods or have outlived all the rest of their family. Even in "bright communities of alert elderly people, 25% had no one who ever visited them."
A shopping and escort service are necessary, and a telephone service so that persons who live alone will be telephoned at least once daily. "It should be set up so that if a social worker finds a need, she knows where to go. Such services as there are, are not coordinated, nor too well advertised."
Also needed are protective case-work services. This is accepted for children but the need of it for older persons is just beginning to be recognized.

Rhode Island is gradually showing considerable movement in public housing for the elderly, but "we have yet to see private or church organizations taking advantage of federal housing, especially for the middle-income group, which are not as well-off in this respect as people with lower incomes."
Matilda Litwin was a science major at the University of Rhode Island when she went on a Community Chest "Come and See" Tour. The following day she conducted the same tour, and that summer "marched into the Jewish Family agency, talked to the director, and worked as a volunteer." When she finished college, she went to work in the Department of Social Welfare.
"I've never had a regret. I can't imagine doing anything else. Social work is a very satisfying field. . . We're not always able to help to the degree we'd like to, and not all people can use our help. I've had to learn that change and progress sometimes are slow."
Miss Litwin, who holds the M.S.S.W. from Boston University School of Social Work, has done graduate work at Boston College, Simmons College, Smith College and the University of Chicago. She was the first woman president in 25 years of Pinewoods Institute, a regional conference group that meets annually near Plymouth, Mass.

She is a member of the American Public Welfare Committee on Aging, a past president of the R.I. Conference of Social Work, past chairman of the R.I. Chapter, National Association of Social Workers, and a board or advisory committee member of practically every national or state organization concerned with social work. Miss Litwin is also first vice-president of the New England Committee of the International Conference of Social Work.

Social workers are generally extremely mobile, but Matilda Litwin has always felt that Rhode Island offers her all the challenges and experiences she could have had in any other community, and she has been near her family.

A member of the Advisory Committee to the Division on Aging, Miss Litwin sketched broadly programs in effect elsewhere for retired persons.
Her whole emphasis in working with senior adults and the chronically ill is not the traditional "keep them comfortable" attitude. Older persons can be helped to better adjustment, and can change, which nobody used to think possible. The problem is broader, however, than helping people after the damage is done, when they don't know what to do with their leisure time or how in retirement to be a vital member of the community.

"We must eliminate the kinds of conditions that cause social problems," said Matilda Litwin, who has written religious leaders throughout the state asking them to preach during "Senior Citizens Month" on the subject of age, which is, like death and taxes, certain to come to us all.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — When the Friars Club Charity Foundation recently staged its testimonial charity dinner at the Beverly Hilton Hotel honoring Jack L. Warner, head of Warner Bros. Studio, little did the assembled guests dream that they would witness one of the most bizarre evenings in the history of the entertainment world.

After George Jessel, Frank Sinatra, Jack Benny, George Burns, Dean Martin, Harry Karl and Allan Sherman had unloosed their big guns at the target for the evening, guests came away from the International Ballroom shaking their heads in disbelief.

The slaughter proved devastatingly complete but the victim emerged victorious.

Never before had the assembly witnessed the honored head of a major film studio, especially one who only recently had garnered many Oscar honors with his "My Fair Lady" achievement, receive the full brunt of so thorough a roasting by the crown heads of comedy and insult.

But through it all, he refused to be stilled. In the end, his attackers had run out of gas but he was still primed for bear.

Many in the huge audience who had never heard "the other side" of Jack L. Warner finally got their chance and couldn't believe their ears. They were familiar with the business tycoon who runs his massive studio with a firm and knowledgeable hand. But the glib-tongued fellow who drew on Joe Miller's joke book and gabbed on and on, shook them to their teeth.

To this moment, they can't bring the respected business leader into focus with the loquacious joker who chatted with himself in undertones and switched to loud and running-at-the-mouth meditations that in the early days of vaudeville would have quickly brought out the hook.

Jack Benny listened as long as he could, grabbed a bottle of booze, shouted, "I never drank before in my life," put the bottle to his mouth and downed a long shot. Not to be outdone, Warner promptly drank a toast to himself.

In a quick move, George Jessel arose and sang "Sweet Adeline" in a voice known to stop trains and wars but with no effect whatsoever on Warner's filibuster. Dean Martin poured champagne over his own head to put out the fires that were raging within. Frank Sinatra pleaded with Warner to sit down. George Burns poured all the honey in his voice begging the studio head to relinquish the microphone.

Only Debbie Reynolds sided with Warner. She yelled at Jessel, "Shut up!" but Debbie's husband, Harry Karl, who is president of the Friars Club, groaned, "I hope I'm assassinated before my term expires."

But Warner—he kept telling one gloomy joke after another until the guests were holding their sides from the pain of laughter. They weren't laughing at the jokes. It was the man. More appropriately, it was "the other man."

Just when it appeared that Warner had mercifully run out of material, he started it all over again with, "Wait till you hear my next line. This will kill you."

There were many who hoped it would. They were sure they couldn't take any more.

Not even George Jessel was safe on this wild evening. Before working over Warner, Benny drew his sights on Jessel, accusing the Friars' toastmaster of repeatedly talking about the "halcyon days of Caruso and Sam Spiegel."

"I looked up halcyon in the dictionary," said Jack, "and it means a bird usually identified with a kingfisher."

Benny also protested Jessel's continuous references to "the robes of Penelope woven in the morning and unraveled at night." Shrieked Jack, "How that fits Jack Warner I'll never know!"

New Scotch Marketed By Seagram Distillers

NEW YORK — Seagram Distillers put a new Scotch on the market this month, 100 Pipers, imported in the bottle from Scotland. It is being marketed at a price level in direct competition with present leading Scotch brands.

This is the first time since 1948 that Seagram, the nation's largest distributor of distilled spirits, has introduced a totally new brand. Plans for introducing the new Scotch were first formulated nearly 12 years ago, when Seagram began building inventories to help establish a blend specifically tailored to the American taste in whiskeys. The company will spend $3 million this year to advertise the new product.

SHRINE OF THE BOOK—The hills of Jerusalem are the setting for the new Israel Museum which made its debut Tuesday and will be open to visitors from all parts of the world. One of the unique buildings forming part of the museum complex is the Shrine of the Book, seen above. The top resembles a cover of the clay urns in which the original Dead Sea Scrolls were found.

Biased Testing To End, Says State Department

WASHINGTON — The State Department has promised to cease requirement of "psychological" tests that compel employees to answer "true" or "false" to such assertions as "Christ performed miracles."

Questions on the divinity of Christ and theological concepts pertaining to Christianity were posed in deciding suitability of personnel for overseas assignment.

Responding to protests from Congress, the State Department wrote Rep. Cornelius Gallagher, New Jersey Democrat, that "effective immediately, we have discontinued this policy."

Rep. Gallagher, chairman of a Government Operations Subcommittee, had warned the Department he planned a special investigation into its "insidious and illegal search of the human mind."

Rep. Gallagher lauded the State Department's decision but noted that some other Federal agencies are now using similar tests for selecting personnel.

Among the agencies, he said, are the Departments of Defense and Labor, the Export-Import Bank and the Peace Corps.

New Israel Museum Opened Recently In Jerusalem

On a hilltop in Jerusalem, where stones dating back perhaps to the Second Temple had to be cleared away, a new Israel Museum is welcoming visitors.

Tuesday this added testimony to Israel's devotion to culture and the arts was officially opened amid ceremonies which were attended by leading art patrons, dignitaries and other notables from Israel and abroad.

The hill, on which the Museum is located, is on the western edge of the venerable city which has been revered by Christians and Jews over the centuries. In keeping with the plan for new Jerusalem it is in the midst of a recently-developed area, Jakiya, which contains the new Israel parliament (Knesset) building, the Hebrew University and other new government structures.

In scope the Israel Museum is truly international. For its opening, exhibitions will concentrate on Biblical subjects. There will be works on loan from museums and private collections from various parts of the world. Donations will be from the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, Austria, Holland, Italy and Germany.

Included will be a collection of 50 drawings and prints by Rembrandt on the Old Testament themes, paintings and sculptures inspired by the Bible by Marc Chagall and Jacques Lipschitz and a collection of antiquities from the latest archaeological excavations in various parts of Israel.

Perhaps the impact of this new museum, which is divided into four major divisions, can be appreciated by the statement that it is the "largest museum between Athens and Tokyo." The four divisions of the Museum are:

The Samuel Bronfman Biblical and Archaeological Museum, 15 pavilions containing exhibits from all parts of the Holy Land in which the history of the Land of the Bible is portrayed from prehistoric times to the beginning of the 17th century;

Bezalel National Art Museum, 13 pavilions containing outstanding collections of Jewish ceremonial objects and Persian art, in addition to collections of paintings, sculpture and graphics;

Billy Rose Art Garden, five acres of terraces and walks designed by Isamu Noguchi to contain the modern sculpture collection of Billy Rose with closed pavilions for the plasters collection of Sir Jacob Epstein and other objects requiring shelter from the elements;

Shrine of the Book, resembling the top of the clay urns in which the original Dead Sea Scrolls were found, and containing the Scrolls, the letters of Bar Kochba, the heroic Hebrew warrior who with his soldiers withstood the Legions of Rome, and other documents of the Biblical period.

Director and chief curator of this new plant is Karl Katz, formerly on the staff of New York's Metropolitan Museum. Dr. Willem Sandberg, former director of the Stedelijk Museum in Amsterdam, has been appointed advisor on art for this cultural complex which following its debut will house some of the world's finest art as well as serve as a repository for archaeological findings which reveal the history of an ancient land and its peoples.

It is expected that the Israel Museum will attract hundreds of thousands of visitors yearly who will come to see what has been described as fulfilling the "historic role of a museum as a place for cultivation and learning" . . . and which "will help promote universal understanding, a step towards world peace."

Deutschland-Berichte Reports Escape Group Investigation

BERLIN — The New York Herald Tribune asserted in February that a secret Nazi organization known as "the Spider" operated out of a Spanish fishing village. The organization, according to the report, was financed by money from West German industrialists and "concealed Hitler treasures," and had smuggled at least 500 war criminals and leading Nazi officials out of Germany. Its activity had increased as the possibility grew that the government might extend the time limit for war crimes prosecution.

Deutschland-Berichte, in its latest issue, reports that these charges have been checked by competent authorities, and there is no evidence that "any organizations exist in the Federal Republic for aiding former National Socialists to escape or smuggling them out of the country. The assertion made again and again that there is still a secret organization" at work in Germany today is "one of the numerous legends that have sprung up since the war."

The magazine remarks that if former Nazis are helped to escape today, it is a matter of improvisation by individuals acting on their own initiative.

Investigation revealed that around the beginning of 1949 such an organization, a very small group, did exist, but found no indication that it was involved in escape activities, or that it continued for very long.

Two other organizations, "Stille Hilfe" and "Odessa," were mentioned in connection with the organized escape of Nazis. "Stille Hilfe" describes its work as "purely social aid for the families and relatives of convicted Nazi criminals." "Odessa," which reportedly helped Adolf Eichmann escape, has long since ceased to function, "since the death of its active members and protectors."

Rabbi Urges Lifting Of '5 O'clock Curtain'

NEW YORK — Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, inter-religious affairs director of the American Jewish Committee, has urged the lifting of what he termed the "5 o'clock iron curtain" that separates Roman Catholics, Jews and Protestants after they have been working all day.

Rabbi Tanenbaum pointed out that all children of all religions played together and their parents worked and collaborated in community affairs—until evening, when barriers suddenly rose.

"We live side by side without really knowing much about each other," he observed in an address to a leadership institute here of the National Council of Catholic Women.

Worldwide Baha'i Religion Keeps Haifa Headquarters

HAIFA, Israel— A golden-domed shrine surrounded by gardens on the slopes of Mount Carmel is the world headquarters of the Baha'i religion.

Founded in Iran more than 100 years ago, Baha'ism numbers more than a million adherents in nearly 300 countries. It is not officially recognized in Iran today.

Baha'i leaders say its teachings have been translated into 270 languages and dialects. Members include American educators, Canadian Eskimos, Japanese businessmen and Indian doctors.

Beneath the golden dome lies the body of the "Bab" (gate), the martyr-herald of the faith, who was executed by the Persians in 1850 because of his religious teachings.

Before his death, the Bab predicted that a promised one would some day lead the faithful. This right was claimed by the son of a Teheran cabinet minister, Mirza Husayn Ali, who took the name of Baha'U'llah (glory to God).

Baha'U'llah was exiled to Baghdad, and later was moved to Constantinople (now Istanbul) and Adrianople before his final imprisonment at Acre in Palestine.

He was still under virtual house arrest in Turkey when he died in 1892 at the age of 75. His tomb at Bahji is, for the believers the holiest spot on earth. Hundreds make pilgrimages to the tomb each year.

Baha'ism "is not a mysterious Eastern cult," according to David Hofman, a London publisher who is a member of the nine-member Universal House of Justice, the supreme legislative and spiritual body of the faith.

"We have no rituals, no priesthood, no creed or sacrament," he continued. "We have no baptism."

The baha'is respect all the world's great religions. They believe that God educates mankind through a series of prophets who appear at intervals in man's history. Moses, Zoroaster, Buddha, Christ, Mohammed, and now Baha'U'llah are those who have appeared to date.

They say their religion is the only truly modern one, born in the last century. The faith teaches compulsory education, equality of men and women and elimination of all forms of prejudice.

Baha'is find no contradiction between science and religion.

They believe in the eventual unity of mankind, and world peace. In time there will be a world order, world economy, one race and one religion under God, they contend.

There are 69 national Baha'i Assemblies, comprised of local spiritual assemblies in 1,500 centers. The national groups elect

Israel Radio Program To Air Life In U.S.

NEW YORK — Kol Yisroel, Israel's radio network, and the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds are co-operating to develop a pilot radio program which if successful, will represent the first in a series to be broadcast in Israel on Jewish life in North America.

Israeli radio executives are completing this pilot project in an attempt to answer some of their listeners' questions about the United States and Canada—about American-Jewish identification, Jewish commitment, Jewish communal organization and Jewish youth. Work on this project began late in January when an Israeli program representative met with executives of the CJFWF.

BETH ISRAEL MEN'S CLUB
Joseph M. Finkle will speak and show slides on "The Story of the Anti-Defamation League and the Extreme Right Groups" at a meeting on Monday evening of the Men's Club of Temple Beth Israel.

Judge Peter K. Rosedale is chairman of the program, which will be preceded by a business meeting and election of officers. Presiding will be Julius Lightman, president of the Men's Club. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

the ruling body. The Universal House of Justice now comprises four Americans, three Iranians and two Britons.

"This is just how the voting came out," Mr. Hofman said. "The body could consist of nine Eskimos for there are no set nationalities."

The House of Justice members who serve five-year terms, receive expenses but no salaries.

"For some of the younger people it's quite a sacrifice," said Hugh Chance, an Iowa lawyer who served at the United States Baha'i headquarters at Wilmette, Ill., before his election in 1963.

One of the other American members is Charles Wolcott, a former Hollywood musical director. All nine members of the House of Justice live in Haifa in housing furnished by the faith.

How do they get along with the Israelis?

"We have excellent relations with them," said Mushmand Fathea'Zam, an Iranian who was secretary of the national Baha'i Assembly in India before his election to the house. Mr. Fathea'Zam, a teacher, was employed by All India Radio in New Delhi.

However, the Baha'is do no proselytizing in Israel and number only a handful of Israelis—all pre-independence—among their membership.

Canadians Seek Legal Means To Block Mailing Privileges For 'Hate' Sheets

TORONTO — A campaign for Federal legislation to ban dissemination of material inciting hatred of racial and religious groups and of members of such groups is making concrete and steady progress, a Jewish leader in the campaign reported to a community rally here.

The report was made by Sidney M. Harris, chairman of the Joint Community Relations Committee of the Canadian Jewish Congress and B'nai B'rith.

In recent months, many major Canadian cities have been flooded with such hate literature. Many Christian religious groups, as well as civic organizations, have protested the material and have asked authorities for action.

Aim at Public Opinion
Harris told the rally that the Congress "intends to proceed fearlessly and with full vigor" in its efforts to obtain such legislation.

He said that, in addition to pressing the Federal Government for such laws, the Congress was seeking to stimulate public opinion on the issue.

He added that "the responses from municipal councils, national organizations, church groups, national trade movements and countless local service clubs, congregations and associations have played no small part in arousing the favor with which our approach to Parliament has been met."

He said that present laws were not sufficient and that amendments were needed "to accomplish our purpose."

He said the approach was that peddlers of hate should be brought under "legal quarantine or control, even as the law of the state recognizes its duty to protect its citizens from contact with plague, disease and crime."

"Hate is all of these and more. Its epidemic propensity for evil is all too well known to us Jews."

In a related report, the CJ Congress summarized efforts to cope with the problem, which it said included the task of disabusing public opinion of the idea that "the law upholds some kind of inalienable right to convey patent lies, incitement to violence and the advocacy of forceable suppression of the rights of others."

The CJ Congress said that the legislation it sought would give individuals "a completely free choice in expressing themselves" but with notification to them of "the legal risks they run if their use of freedom of expression goes too far in the circumstances."

Among advances cited by the organization was the suspension

Rep. Ford Cites Progress Of Israel

Representative Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, Minority Leader of the House of Representatives, declared recently that Israel's "tremendous progress" during the seventeen years of its existence has placed it "well on the way to complete self-reliance and stability."

Speaking at a dinner in honor of Sheriff Richard B. Oglvie of Cook County, held under the auspices of the Chicago Israel Bond campaign, Congressman Ford said:

"A courageous and dedicated people have almost miraculously transformed a largely arid and undeveloped land into a modern industrial nation."

The Michigan legislator lauded the Israel Bond campaign for its role in helping Israel overcome many problems and difficulties and in providing the economic facilities for the immigration and absorption of many hundreds of thousands of immigrants.

Among the outstanding Israel Bond purchases announced at the dinner were $150,000 by the American National Bank and $10,000 by Charles Percy, Chairman of the Board of Bell and Howell, and 1964 Republican Candidate for Governor of Illinois.

of mail privileges of the National States Rights Party of Birmingham, Ala., and the sustaining of the ban by a Board of Review in Ottawa.

Two private bills are before the Parliamentary Committee on External Affairs. The committee has heard several witnesses.

In its decision to ban the hate mailings by the National States Rights Party of Birmingham, the Board of Review had called that organization's materials "indecent," "obscene" and "immoral."

The three-man board, headed by Justice Dalton Wells, of the Ontario Supreme Court, compared some of the publications sent out here by the Alabama racists as comparable to the "obscene" anti-Semitic publications of the German Nazis under Hitler.

A committee of specialists in law and social sciences has been set up under the chairmanship of Prof. Maxwell Cohen, dean of the McGill University Law School, with the task of working out an effective bill to deal with the problem.

The committee is responsible to Minister of Justice Guy Favreau.

The CJ Congress meanwhile has been making representations to provincial attorneys general on enforcement of existing laws, and has presented evidence to Attorney General Wishart on 16 persons known to be distributing neo-Nazi material.

Protest Meeting Of Extremists In Italy

MILAN, Italy — Raffael Joan, president of the Jewish Documentation Center here, telegraphed a protest to Interior Minister Taviani, in Rome, requesting that the Government halt the "provocation" of a Europe-wide meeting of neo-nazis and other right-wing elements, convened here by the Veterans of Mussolini's Final Republic.

The two-day sessions is being attended by about 24 representatives of extremist groups from Italy, Britain, Belgium, Holland, Sweden, West Germany, Switzerland, France and Austria.

The official "host" of the gathering is Antonio Monaco, who was arrested here in 1960 for desecrating the Milan synagogue with a swastika and sending threatening letters to Jews. It was doubtful whether Government authorities would take steps against the meeting since, according to officials, it must be viewed legally as a "private gathering."

U.S.-Israel Scientific Team Tackles Incurable Diseases

REHOVOTH — A concentrated attack on incurable diseases known as sphingolipidoses, connected with disturbances in the fat metabolism, almost exclusive to children whose forefathers came from certain areas in Eastern Europe, is being mounted jointly by the Weizmann Institute of Science at Rehovoth, Israel, and the National Institutes of Health of the United States.

The team is headed in Israel by Professor David Shapiro, a member of the Organic Chemistry Department of the Weizmann Institute of Science, a Research Associate of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, and at Bethesda, Maryland, by Dr. R. O. Brady of the National Institutes of Health.

Last year Dr. Shapiro visited Dr. Brady's team and received a three-year IL 300,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health to develop certain vital compounds to deal with the diseases.

Due to a disturbance in the metabolism, an abnormally dangerous quantity of compounds accumulates in several organs of the body which, in certain pathological conditions, for unknown reasons become abnormally dangerous.

Dr. Julian N. Kanfer, a member of Dr. Brady's group, is now in Israel to train a member of the Weizmann Institute's staff in the application of radioactive elements to the synthetic compounds developed by Professor Shapiro, Dr. H. M. Flowers, and their collaborators on the Institute's staff.

Council of Jews of Germany wants to clear, is the officer who, in the first scene of the now world-famous play "The Deputy," breaks into the office of the Papal Nuncio in Berlin with his tale of the horrors of Auschwitz. It is this story which forces the young priest, who is the hero of the play, to begin his fruitless struggle to move the Pope to action.

Who was Gerstein who gave himself up to the Allies in 1945 and volunteered to act as a witness for the prosecution in the Nuremberg trials; who was posthumously labelled a Nazi accomplice by his country's courts, praised as a "Spy of God" by the Evangelical church and a martyr
by leading Jews?

He was born in Muenster in 1905, the son of a Prussian judge.
He imbibed nationalist sentiments from his childhood and joined the Nazis in 1933, believing, like many other Germans, that they offered the solution to his country's woes.
But he was soon repelled by their practices which he could not reconcile with his strong religious beliefs. He began distributing anti-Nazi pamphlets, which led to his arrest by the Gestapo in 1936.
After his release from prison, he continued his opposition to regime while studying medicine.
He was arrested a second time and sent to the concentration camp at Welzheim.

After his sister-in-law was killed under the "euthanasia program" he decided to enter the ranks of the SS, in order to sabotage the machinery. He told his pastor of this decision, and the latter vainly tried to dissuade him.

But Gerstein would not be dissuaded. He had the technical training — he had studied engineering before he came to medicine — that made him extremely useful to the regime. He managed to convince the authorities of his change of heart and was accepted by the SS. After he demonstrated his usefulness by successfully containing an epidemic in a concentration camp, he quickly rose to the position of chief of the technical disinfection services, which included a section for extremely toxic gases. In this capacity, he was ordered to procure large quantities of the deadly Zyklon B gas for Auschwitz.

At this point he began his frantic efforts to communicate with the outside world. He spoke to more than 100 persons, including leading diplomats and clergymen. He had connections with the Dutch underground. By chance he met the secretary of the Swedish embassy in a train and begged him to publicize the horrors he had witnessed. The secretary's efforts, however, resulted in little more than a deterioration in the relations between Germany and Sweden. The failure of Gerstein's efforts to reach the Pope through the Nuncio in Berlin is documented by Hochhuth.

The report which Gerstein compiled for the Allies after Germany's surrender became one of the most important and terrible documents submitted by the prosecution both in the Nuremberg trials and 16 years later at the trial in Jerusalem.

Gerstein did not live to be a witness at the second of these trials. He died mysteriously in a French prison not long after the war. The French authorities reported suicide, but others, including his widow Elfriede and Hochhuth believe it was murder—that he was silenced by SS fanatics before he could give still more damning testimony.

Periodic attempts on the part of the widow to claim for herself and her two children the pension that others who were no counterfeit Nazis, have long been collecting in West Germany, served to keep the name of Gerstein alive.
The pension was refused and he was posthumously condemned for having entered the SS, despite the testimony of prominent churchmen.

In 1956 Elfriede Gerstein found an unexpected ally in her fight to rehabilitate her husband's name in Issy Wygoda, a Frankfurt Jew who read about the matter in the newspapers. Wygoda, a concentration camp survivor, has thrown himself into the struggle to reverse the 1950 decision of the court in Baden-Wuerttemberg.

Recently he has been joined by the spokesman for Jews in Germany, Dr. Hendrik van Dam, who reaffirmed the importance of Gerstein's attempts to inform the world about the incredible crimes of the Nazis and supported the widow's claim for her pension.

AJC Receives Grant From Ford Foundation

NEW YORK — A $100,000
check made out to the American Jewish Congress was received at Stephen Wise Congress House this week—the first payment of a $300,000 grant by the Ford Foundation to support the work of the Interracial Council for Business Opportunity (ICBO).

The interracial project was established jointly last year by AJC and the Urban League of Greater New York "to help give real meaning, in bread-and-butter terms, to the struggle for racial equality," according to Murray
A. Gordon, chairman of the Congress' New York Metropolitan Council.

The ICBO project offers guidance and counseling for Negroes seeking help.

Center Plans Annual Meeting

ard Carp, Ben Luftman and Irving Fain, Dr. Bernard Bernstein, Julius Michaelson, Thomas Pearlman, Joseph Schwartz, Ray Cohen and Mr. Bernhardt.

"Accent of the Future" will be the theme of the meeting, which will be preceded by a reception honoring the "Leadership of Tomorrow," at which Center youth leaders will be introduced.

Officers nominated for the coming year are Sidney Meyer, president; Maurice Dressler, William B. Glass and Mr. Hopfenberg, vice-presidents; Mrs. Leo Gleken, recording secretary, and Maurice Share, treasurer.

Board of directors nominees for terms ending in 1968 are Melvin Chernick, Raymond Cohen,

Gerald Goldstein

June 1964 he stated that one of the aims of his administration was to promote Warwick as a convention city. Several months later he lost the party endorsement by one vote.

But, that wasn't the last to be heard on his idea of Warwick—the convention city.

His idea proved so popular that the Democrats installed the convention city plan in their 21 plank platform. This platform was released October 1964, four months after Gerald Goldstein's plan.

And then just last month, April 1965, a bill was docketed by Democrat Philip W. Noel, Ward 5 of Warwick, asking the mayor to appoint a five man committee to promote Warwick as the convention city of Rhode Island.

Concerning his methods in running the community if he wins the election next year he stated "I will run the town on a business like basis, appoint well-qualified men to key positions and use sound business principles in the administration of Warwick."

Gerald Goldstein's character, enthusiasm and aims can be best described in the following excerpts from his statement of candidacy for the 1966 election.

"In the months ahead I intend to criticize constructively, when necessary, those things I feel which are not in the best interest of Warwick. I also intend to be positive by presenting my own proposals which will help to make Warwick a better place in which to live and work.

"I intend to invite the people to this community to participate in the affairs of municipal government and to make their voices heard, realizing that is their civic duty - to speak out when they are dissatisfied with the actions of the city fathers.

"I am confident that with proper direction and guidance, the citizens will rise to the occasion and help restore pride and confidence in our community."

"I pledge to work on a planned program that will help the progress of Warwick, not only for a few years ahead, but rather for a long period of years, so that future generations will benefit from our efforts."

ITALY RECEIVES FUNDS

The Italian Olympic Committee has allocated about $27,000 to the Italian Maccabi Committee to enable it to send a team to the Seventh World Maccabiah Games.

Harlan Espo, Joseph Gladstone, Irwin Hamin, Max Leach, Mrs. Sidney Meyer, Solomon E. Selinker, Harry Shore, Mrs. Louis Sod, Dr. Gustaf Sweet, Sol White and Samuel Wintman. Howard R. Lewis has been nominated to fill one ending in 1966.

Members of the nominating committee are Mr. Bernhardt, chairman, Mrs. Benjamin Brier, Leonard Engle, Mr. Espo, Murry Halpert, David Meyers, Dr. Pritzker, Joseph Schwartz, Mr. White and Peter Bardach.

honored and Esther awards will be bestowed for various chapter achievements. Professor Harold Fisch, visiting professor at Brown University, from Bar-Ilan University in Israel, will be speaker at the final luncheon.

Mrs. Theodore B. Feinberg, Regional president, is introducing a National conference format this year. There will be a pre-conference Regional board meeting at 11 A.M. on Sunday, and presidents will breakfast with Mrs. Salpeter on Monday and Tuesday mornings to consult with her. Workshops on youth activities, education, organization and membership, H.M.O. medical center, Youth Aliyah and other aspects of Hadassah will be features of morning and afternoon sessions on the three days. On Tuesday morning there will also be a regional business meeting with nominations and elections and a special workshop give and take session entitled "The Delegate Wants To Know."

Reservations for all of the conference at a package price including over-night accommodations and meals, or for any part of it, may be made through any local chapter or by calling Mrs. Louis Cokin, 725-2535. All meals will be kosher and all attending will have opportunities to view current Hadassah films, visual aid displays and an Israel Art Exhibit.

Diorama Presented To General Holland

A large diorama of Hasbro's "G. I. Joe Soldiers" depicting an historical action scene of the 43rd Division during World War II was presented to Major General Leonard Holland, adjutant general of the R. I. National Guard, on Thursday at the North Main Street Armory by Merrill Hassenfeld, President of Hasbro, Pawtucket toy manufacturers. The display will be used during 1965 Armed Forces Day celebration on Sunday.

The orchestra, to be conducted by Rebecca T. Trullit, is managed by Abraham Wald. Robert Revicki is conductor of the chorus; William Riley Smith, accompanist, and Stanley L. Freedman, manager. Band conductor is John H. Halliwell, and Phillip A. Magnus is manager.

Herald Recipes

CHEESE CAKE

Ingredients for Crust:
1 cup corn flakes or graham crackers
1/4 lb. butter
3 tablespoons of sugar
1 teaspoonful of cinnamon
1 cup pineapple pie filling or cherry pie filling Ingredients for Cheese Mix:
1 teaspoonful vanilla
1 lb. cream cheese
1 cup sugar
6 eggs
1 cup sour cream
1 tablespoon flour
Grated skin of one lemon
Pinch of salt

Start to make the crust by crushing the corn flakes or the crackers into small pieces. Then mix with butter, sugar and cinnamon. Spread out on bottom of springform pan. Add fruit filling on top. Mix egg yolks with sugar, cream cheese, sour cream and a pinch of salt. Then add lemon, flour and vanilla. Beat egg whites to a snow and fold into mixture. Place mixture on top of the fruit filling and bake at 350 degrees for one hour. Let cool by opening door of stove. Serves twelve.

CHICKEN WITH GOLDEN APPLES

1/4 cup peanut oil
1 3-to-4 lb. frying chicken, cut in serving pieces
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup orange juice
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1-1/2 cups orange sections
1/2 cup slivered almonds
Heat peanut oil in heavy skillet over medium heat. Add chicken; brown on both sides. Add onion; cook until onion is tender. Stir in orange juice, salt, orange peel and pepper. Cover tightly; cook over low heat about 30 minutes, or until tender. Add orange sections and almonds. Cover; cook 5 to 10 minutes 1/2 ger. Serves 4 to 6 in style.

ENGAGED—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newman of Providence, Rhode Island, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Arlene Carole Newman, to David E. Maharam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Maharam of Flushing, New York.

MRS. LEONARD I. SALMANSON

Mrs. Salmanson To Head Campaign Of GJC Women

The appointment of Mrs. Leonard I. Salmanson as chairman of the 1965 campaign of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee was announced today by Mrs. Merrill L. Hassenfeld, GJC Women's Division president.

Mrs. Salmanson, a vice president of the GJC Women's Division, has been active in the Women's Division since its inception and has played an active role in previous fund raising drives.

Mrs. Hassenfeld said that because of the continuing large number of immigrants to Israel and the end of reparation payments from West Germany (amounting to seven million dollars a year), the needs of Israel are greater than ever. In order to meet these needs, the National UJA Women's Division has raised its goal by one million dollars.

Because of a change in the by-laws, Mrs. Hassenfeld announced, the Women's Division annual meeting will be held January 31, 1966. The present officers and directors will continue in office until that time.

MARRIAGES FORBIDDEN
CHICAGO, ILL. — No weddings may be performed on Jewish holidays, and according to Orthodox law may not be performed during the mourning period called Sefira, between April 18 and May 20 (except for Rosh Chodosh Sivan, Saturday evening, May 1, and Sunday, May 2).
Another mourning period is the three weeks before Tisha B'Av, July 24-Aug. 8. Conservative congregations, however, do permit small, informal weddings without music during the Sefira and before Tisha B'Av.

The Lyons Den
by Leonard Lyons

The drama rights to all of T. S. Eliot's works, except the plays already produced, have been acquired by Donald Seawell, the lawyer-producer. Mrs. Eliot asked him to wait a year before starting work on them. . . . Sen. Long's subcommittee will start its investigation of the Internal Revenue Service with hearings in Pittsburgh. . . . Warren Beatty, who will marry Leslie Caron in June, plans to make their residence in London so that she can be near her children.
Carl Foreman, who made "Guns of Navarone," was just named by Britain's secretary of state for education and science to the board of governors of the British Film Industry. He's the first American so honored. . . . Barbra Streisand is being profiled by the New Yorker. . . . Vladimir Horowitz's comeback concert at Carnegie Hall created such a demand for tickets that even his brother-in-law, Walter Toscanini, stood in line at 6 a.m. to buy a pair.

artist whose World War II books were "Studio Europe" and "Studio Asia." will fly to Viet Nam soon.
Tennessee Williams sat in a booth at Downey's, writing quick analyses of people around him — analyses which were quite accurate. Williams told me: "In so many cases, the longer you know someone, the less you really know about him. And people often know so little about themselves."
Antonio Ordenez, who shed 20 pounds by dieting for his bullfight comeback, will be the star of the Madrid bull ring this week. . . . Larry Collins and Dominique Lapierre, authors of "Is Paris Burning?," have been assigned by Reader's Digest to do one on the Berlin Wall. . . . Zsa Zsa Gabor was told in the Little Club about an editor's threat to ruin her. Zsa Zsa said: "That's impossible. Only one person ever can ruin Zsa Zsa — and that's Zsa Zsa."

James Michener has been in Spain attending the festival and bullfights in Sevilla. I. P. Lazar, the literary agent, saw Michener dancing a flamenco and buying drinks for the house. "Enjoying yourself?" Lazar asked the author. . . . Michener replied: "I was having the most wonderful time of my life until 10 minutes ago, when I discovered that 1,000 pesetas is $16 — and not, as I'd thought, $1.60."

Alan King, eager to act in a play on Broadway, searched for a suitable script for over a year in vain. The day after he opened at the City Center in "Guys and Dolls," eight good scripts were on his desk. . . . It was Sheila MacRae, as Adelaide, who gave King the line, not in the script, describing Room 244 to a dice player: "244 — snake eyes and an 8 the hard way."

The Beatles' director, Richard Lester, is being brought to Hollywood by Lazar. . . . Janice Rule, co-starring with Marlon Brando in "The Chase," flew to N.Y. just for her daughter Kate's birthday on Sunday, then flew right back to resume filming. . . . Jean Negulesco will do the film version of Peter Viertel's "Love Lies Bleeding," with Luis Miguel Dominguin playing the bullfighter. . . . Dominguin, incidentally, just bought an island off Panama.

Nightclub and restaurant owners will request rulings from the police and fire commissioners that their men remove their hats while on inspection visits. Otherwise it looks like a raid. . . . The big social event last week was the Plaza luncheon Thursday for the American Cancer Society — with Princess Benedikte of Norway as guest of honor. . . . Gypsy Rose Lee's townhouse, which she bought from a Vanderbilt, recently was sold to Dr. Ferruccio diCori. He found a series of panels by Marcel Vertes under a coat of paint he washed away; a velvet ladder to a hidden bedroom; copies of "Interpretation of Dreams" — not Freud's, but illustrated; and the handles on the inside of the bedroom were each clearly marked "Public School."

Bronfman Stresses Diaspora Jewry's Responsibility

JERUSALEM — Weakness among Diaspora Jewry would jeopardize the support now being extended to Israel, a World Jewish Congress leader warned in an address to a gathering of Israeli notables in Jerusalem this week. Speaking at the opening ceremony of the Biblical and Archaeological Museum bearing his name, Samuel Bronfman, vice president of the WJC, said that there were two Jewish worlds: the State of Israel and the Diaspora.

"Israel and the Diaspora will always be with us," Mr. Bronfman declared, added "we must vouchsafe a good life for the present and future generations. The Diaspora is as necessary to the well-being of Israel as Israel is to the spiritual and moral welfare of Jews elsewhere. These two simultaneous freedoms, as they have been called, must be carefully nurtured if a continuing Jewish life is to persist."

Commenting upon the advances made by Israel, Mr. Bronfman said that the opening of the Museum helped forge "a very strong link in the chain of connection between world Jewry and Israel itself."

Reflecting on what he called the position of "two important Jewish worlds," Mr. Bronfman praised Israel for "its tenacity and will to succeed." Israel would not be daunted by difficulties or threats to its sovereignty, Israel added "lustre to the Jew, be he in Israel or the Diaspora."
