

GEZA GROSSMAN, ELLA SCHWARZKOPF, MRS. GROSSMAN

After 37 Years . . . She Sees Her Brother Again

Delighted at seeing her family again -- but always with a trace of sadness as she remembered those of her family whom she had lost in the gas chambers of Hitler's concentration camps -- Ella Schwarzkopf of Vienna is visiting the United States for the first time. It has been 37 years since she last saw her brother, Geza Grossman, now of Cranston.

"It is always with sevens," she said. It has been 17 years since she last saw her brother, Julius, who came to America by way of Israel. After they had been released from the concentration camp in the Ukraine by the Russians, her brother, fighting against the Germans with the Russian army at Danzig had lost his leg.

It has been 27 years since she saw her brother Paul who now lives in Little Neck, Long Island. She said that she found in traveling through Long Island and on the way to Providence that the trees and the small homes, "so little, so lovely," reminded her of Austria. Happy because she had spoken to her husband in Austria this Monday afternoon, she said he already wants to know when she will be home. He was unable to accompany her since he is ill.

America is "wundershein," she says. She has been in the Empire State building -- "all the way up" -- has visited the Statue of Liberty, and has attended the New York World's Fair. The beauty of the fountains and the lights and the music at the Fair impressed her particularly. "Wunderbar" she called it.

Born in Czernowitz, Rumania, (the city changed hands several times over the years), she and most of her family were taken to concentration camps early in the war. She had already lost her first husband who had been killed by the Germans; she lost her father and her child, as well as a sister (who was killed with her husband and child and 11 members of his family) to Hitler's gas chambers.

She said that her brother, Geza, who had come to America in 1928 on a business trip, had married and returned with his wife to Czernowitz, had warned her family to leave Vienna, that things would become worse. But, she says, her parents did not want to.

Mrs. Schwarzkopf, who met her present husband in the concentration camps, was the director of the group of people who watched out for the children whose parents had been killed, and who were shipped into the camp in wagons like animals. She also helped to hide many of them and get them over the border so that they could be sent to Israel.

But Mrs. Schwarzkopf does not care to dwell on the troubles of the past. Her three brothers are alive and well. Her sister and her niece (whom she thinks of as almost her own daughter) are living in the same house as she in Vienna, and life is much more pleasant now than it was.

It was difficult to tell whether Mrs. Schwarzkopf or the Grossmans were happier. Mr. and Mrs. Grossman have been tireless in their attempts to help their relatives come to America. In 1948 Mr. Grossman was able to bring his mother to America. She was able to enjoy the few years left to her in happiness and security.

Although Mrs. Schwarzkopf can understand and speak English well, she found it easier to express herself in German when she wanted to enlarge on a subject. The stores in the United States impressed her, but although she finds such items as housedresses less expensive here, she thinks other clothing is priced about the same as in Vienna. But what does delight her particularly (and we can understand it, accepting the modern electronic miracles without being able to understand them at all) are the doors of the supermarkets which open without being touched -- Vienna has no doors with electric eyes.

Mrs. Schwarzkopf's charm and enthusiasm reinforce the fact that with courage and spirit a person can always make something of his life regardless of the horrors he may have been forced to endure.

David Ben-Gurion Willing To Assume Leadership Of Mapai If Supported

TEL AVIV—Former Premier David Ben-Gurion stated Wednesday that he was ready to return to the leadership of the Mapai party "if both the nation and the party support me."

Mr. Ben-Gurion, who is 78 years old, said he was "available for the premiership," which he turned over two years ago to Levi Eshkol, with whom he has been feuding.

A week ago Mr. Ben-Gurion said Mr. Eshkol was not fit to be Premier. He said in a published interview Wednesday that "Eshkol does not represent me." He added, "I'm not aware that the nation does not want me."

He referred to Mr. Eshkol's demand that Cabinet members who agreed with Mr. Ben-Gurion resign. A statement issued by a Ben-Gurion spokesman expressed "shock and astonishment" that Mr. Eshkol would have demanded that party members make public confessions of their opinions.

The spokesman said Mr. Ben-Gurion's minority faction would insist on convening a party conference to decide who will head the party, which is a major component of the coalition Government. A general election is scheduled for November.

Premier Eshkol was closely associated with Mr. Ben-Gurion for decades and was his chosen successor in 1963.

Friction between them grew last year, however, over Mr. Ben-Gurion's insistence that the Eshkol Government re-examine a dispute between former Defense Minister Pinhas Lavon and a former chief of military intelligence, Col. Benjamin Gibli, over which of them had ordered a series of abortive "cloak and dagger" attacks against United States and British institutions in Egypt in 1954. The attacks, poorly executed, resulted in a loss of lives.

Mr. Eshkol was a member of a committee of ministers that investigated the matter in 1960 and recommended a Cabinet decision exonerating Mr. Lavon. Accordingly, he has resisted Mr. Ben-Gurion's demands for a new inquiry. Mr. Ben-Gurion has denounced the ministerial investigation as an infringement of judicial authority and a miscarriage of justice.

At the latest Mapai party conference, in February, about 60 per cent of the delegates supported Mr. Eshkol on the issue.

Levi Eshkol Says Israel Can't Accept Bourguiba's Conditions For Settlement

JERUSALEM — Israel cannot accept the conditions suggested by President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia, Premier Levi Eshkol said in an address to Parliament last week.

The Premier wished to encourage whatever trends to moderation might grow out of Bourguiba's peace proposals, but he said firmly that any peace settlement will be established on the basis of Israel as it is. The conditions proposed by the Tunisian leader included territorial concessions and the repatriation of Arab refugees by Israel.

Although the majority of the Arab states have publicly denounced President Bourguiba for advocating recognition of Israel, Premier Eshkol said he believed that the proposals for peace and coexistence were not isolated exceptions.

"Without giving way to premature optimism," he said, "we are entitled to assume that among its political leadership there are still thinking men and prominent personalities who accept in their hearts the inevitability of coexistence."

Premier Eshkol proposed that direct negotiations toward agreements for peace be conducted between Israel and the countries that signed the 1949 transitional armistice accords. The Arab signatories to the agreements were Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and Egypt. From such a beginning, Premier Eshkol argued, could come enormous benefits in the economic, cultural and social sectors for the region and to its people.

He gave two reasons for turning down the Bourguiba conditions. On the question of territorial concessions, he observed that the territory held by Israel represented only 1.5 per cent of the total area possessed by the four neighboring Arab states.

"In this situation," he declared, "there is neither sense nor justice in territorial changes to Israel's disadvantage and there is neither the power nor the possibility—judicial or practical—to carry them out."

On the repatriation of the Arab refugees, he asserted that "the only solution compatible with their true and basic interests as well as ours" is to settle the refugees among "their brethren in nationality, tongue, customs, outlook and faith" in the Arab states "with their extensive territories and wealth of water resources."

The Premier said that Israel was prepared in conjunction with the major powers to help finance an Arab resettlement and rehabilitation program even though Israel had "perhaps already fulfilled her obligations" legally by settling 500,000 Jewish refugees from Arab states in Israel.

But while waiting for peace, Premier Eshkol went on, Israel must continue to strengthen her defenses in the face of an Arab build up.

He spoke out strongly against President Gamal Abdel Nasser, charging the United Arab Republic with subversive activities against other Arab states.

"A day will come when the Arab countries . . . will realize that the true division is not between Israel and the Arabs but between lovers of peace and aggressors," Premier Eshkol said.

Luxury Goods Add Sparkle To Israel's Young Economy

TEL-AVIV — Israel was at one time a place to which visitors brought gifts.

Many travelers came loaded with foodstuffs, CARE packages, sweets, used clothing and other basic items to this young hard-pressed country, whose population in the first days of its Statehood lived on short rations, and whose industry was in its infancy.

Today things have changed a bit. Though still short of raw materials the standard of living has blossomed along with products available. And Israel is today a country from which many carry home choice goods; these include fashions, jewelry, furs, art works and diamonds. Particularly diamonds, Israel's leading export, have become a new item for purchasing by wise visitors.

Diamonds cut and polished here are gaining a reputation as an international bargain. It is said that the cost of production, plus the absence of duties, broker and retailer fees, permits an Israeli factory to sell to visitors at an impressively low cost — low enough in contrast to resale value to save the cost of a trip to Israel for many buyers.

With exports mainly to the United States in excess of $110 million annually Israel supplies one third of the total world demand for polished diamonds. Sales at the retail level to Israelis in Israeli currency is not permitted.

A November 14 wedding is planned.

Reports State Arabs Using Poison Gases

WASHINGTON — The State Department has been informed recently that Egypt has been using poison gas and making chemical warfare preparations.

The department is aware of mounting evidence that Egyptian forces have used chemical warfare in Yemen.

Reports have described the supply of toxic gas and gas masks by Egypt to Iraq for use against the Kurds.

Recent Egyptian Army maneuvers involved training and experimentation with chemical warfare. It is known that former German Army chemical experts have been in Cairo as technical advisers.

This escalation of weapons of mass destruction arises from President Nasser's desperate search for super-weapons. His expensive missile research produced third-rate missiles with primitive guidance system.

The Egyptian ground-to-ground missiles are considered by U.S. military observers as no better than the "V" type rockets Hitler flung against England in the closing days of World War II.

Nasser's deteriorating economic situation is bringing Egypt closer to desperate military moves. His dream is that expansion and seizure of neighboring assets will solve the dilemma of Egypt's population explosion and a crumbling economy.

The State Department still dreams of a relationship with Nasser that will serve as a key to American identification with emerging Arab power factors. The department is uncomfortable over developments of the United Arab Command and the emerging Egyptian military relationship with Iraq.

This spells trouble not only for Israel but also threatens Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Iran and the Persian Gulf oil sheikdoms of Kuwait, Qatar, and the Bahrein Islands. Pro-Western Arab regimes fear developing Egyptian-Iraqi military cooperation.

JOINT SPRAYING

TEL AVIV — A face to face confrontation took place between Israelis and Jordanians not long ago on the border between the two countries. Representatives of the towns of Ellath and Akaba met, shook hands, and laid plans for joint spraying on both sides of the border to eliminate breeding places of mosquitoes. A similar meeting two years ago resulted in a plan to wipe out flies and foul odors by mutual cooperation.

Arab Bloc Split

For the second time in as many months, the Arab bloc has been split.

The first time the fault appeared in the cohesive Arab fortress was in April when Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba called for the Arab League to recognize Israel.

Last Thursday it was announced by Israel and West Germany that diplomatic relations had been established.

And again, the previously strong Arab fortress was shaken.

True, the Arab League will not crumble because of these two splits, but it could be the start of a situation that could cause an eventual break between the member nations.

Members who dropped all relations with Bonn were again led by Egypt and included Syria, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Algeria, Lebanon and Yemen. Kuwait, which was to establish relations with Bonn, has changed its mind.

Nations that will continue to recognize West Germany along with Israel, are Libya, Morocco and Tunisia.

This is the second time that Libya and Morocco have sided with Tunisia concerning Israel. As the unending Egyptian hate against Israel continues, more of the Arab League Nations could follow Tunisian leadership and eventually Egypt could be the only member of the Arab League.

The Israel-West German recognition should have contributed to peace and commerce in the Middle East, but several Arab nations do not want it that way.

The Twelfth Season Of The Artist Series

By Beryl Segal

On Sunday afternoon, May 9, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra had a guest violinist. Directed by William Steinberg, the orchestra began the first strains of Max Bruch's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in G minor. Then the violinist, a 19 year-old young man with a physical handicap, was heard for the first time with this world famous orchestra where only the seasoned and the promising musicians are permitted to appear. The hushed audience broke out with applause and an ovation that lasted for minutes.

This young man was Itzhak Perlman of Israel. He will appear on the Artist Series in Providence next fall.

Despite all the eloquent talk about music heard these days among amateurs, in the last analysis there are only two kinds of music, good and bad.

And good music is always heard at the Artist Series held at Temple Beth El on Orchard Street. Whether played by world famous artists or by not-yet-famous, the music is at all times superb and the listening is a treat.

This year, on the 12th season of the Artist Series, the season of 1965-1966, the program is especially good. The very first artist on the program, appearing on October the 8th, is the very exciting young violinist Itzhak Perlman. I write about him at length both because he is so young yet has achieved so much, and because he is handicapped and walks on the stage on crutches, yet walks so erect in his music. Already the critics are talking about him in raptures. They use such terms as "Heavenly," and "Already a Master," and his playing is pronounced "Beautiful" and they place him "In the Front of the Very Few Great Artists of Our Day."

Itzhak Perlman appeared in Washington, D.C., and what they say about him in the Nation's Capitol is typical of the reviews his concerts received wherever he was heard in recital.

Says Mr. Paul Hume who heard Itzhak Perlman playing with the National Symphony Orchestra, in the Washington Post of May 26, 1964:

"Courage comes in many forms. Last night, National Symphony subscribers had an unusual opportunity to salute courage coupled with a superior display of musical art, when Itzhak Perlman made his debut with the orchestra.

"Perlman is an 18 year-old Israeli violinist who, a few weeks ago, won the Leventritt Award in New York City. Last night he played the Tchaikovsky Concerto that helped him to win the big prize in New York. He played with a powerful bowing arm, one held especially close to his body, but with which he had no difficulty surmounting the hurdles of this famous challenge.

"Perlman is already a performer of mature views, clearly headed for a large career.

"Where, then, does the courage come in?

"Perlman plays sitting down. He was hit by polio when he was a child. Last night, he came out on the stage using crutches. As Howard Mitchell, with generous graciousness carried his violin, he mounted the platform set out for him next to the conductor's stand, acknowledged the growing tumultuous applause, tuned his violin, and was ready to play.

"This takes a kind of guts that those who have not been faced with a similar challenge cannot begin to comprehend.

"When the concerto was over last night, the audience was applauding both Tchaikovsky and Perlman."

And the reviewer of the Washington Evening Star, Mr. Irving Lowens, writes about the same appearance of Itzhak Perlman:

"It is good to be able to report that this young man has not the slightest need to capitalize on his physical disability. He earned the standing ovation he received fairly; it was merited on the basis of his talent alone.

"Yesterday's concert marked Mr. Perlman's debut with a major symphony orchestra. He will bear close watching in the future—he already has the potential of a major virtuoso."

FINANCE FORUM FOR TEEN-AGERS

A couple of weeks ago I lunched with three officers of the Chase Manhattan Bank in the bank's executive quarters 60 stories above street level overlooking New York's downtown harbor. It was a working lunch at which we debated such somber questions as:

Should interest rates be raised here to help keep dollars in the U.S. and thus help narrow the deficit in our balance of payments? Our tentative agreement: probably not at this time.

Are sharp increases in state and local taxes now partially nullifying cuts in federal taxes, and might the scheduled $5 billion jump in Social Security taxes next January jolt our economy in 1966? Our agreement: state and local tax hikes are offsetting federal tax cuts to an appreciable degree and the Social Security tax boost slated for 1966 could slow down our economy's rise.

Are we about to develop a new world monetary system? Our agreement: we will do this within the next few years. The system probably will be based on dollars, other key currencies and gold.

"Quite a range of subjects," I remarked as I thanked the Chase Manhattan vice president who had invited me. "It's a good thing we didn't get into the 'tougher' questions."

He nodded, then said, "As a contrast, let's spend five minutes in the first floor auditorium and

Visiting Professor At Brown University Pioneered Israel's Computing System

DR. PHILIP RABINOWITZ

Dr. Philip Rabinowitz, one of the many young scientists who answered Israel's call after she declared her independence in 1948, pioneered his country's computing system in the 1950's.

Upon his arrival in Israel, he joined the famed Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovoth.

Currently a visiting professor of applied mathematics at Brown University, Dr. Rabinowitz was among the scientists who constructed Israel's first computer, the Golem, at the institute. He also programmed the computer after its construction.

Dr. Rabinowitz was born in Philadelphia in 1926, the son of Rabbi and Mrs. Jacob Rabinowitz. He met his wife Esther in Boston in 1948 when he was doing research at M.I.T. He has five children: Yehoshua, 12; Yaffa, 11; Yehuda, nine; Yona, five and Yoel, one.

He graduated Phi Beta Kappa at the University of Pennsylvania, where he received his Bachelor's, Doctor's and Master's degrees.

Before going to Israel in 1955, he worked five years for the National Bureau of Standards in Washington D.C.

Rabbi and Mrs. Rabinowitz joined their son two years later in Israel.

At the institute, he is in charge of programming in the computing center and conducts a research program in numerical analysis. He also taught at the Hebrew and Bar-Ilan Universities.

His activities in Israel have included advisor to the Israeli Defense Department in the scientific use of computers.

During his visiting professorship at Brown, he is collaborating with Dr. Philip Davis in writing a book titled "Numerical Integration." Dr. Davis was instrumental in getting the Israeli mathematician to come to Brown for the year.

While at Brown, Dr. Rabinowitz has given lectures in several parts of the country including Washington D.C., Chicago, New York and Dayton.

Like many young Israelites, Professor Rabinowitz enjoys modern Israeli Art as his hobby. When he returns to Israel in August, he will also begin work on his second book, "A Source Book of Numerical Analysis."

Asked to comment on the new Israel Museum which opened last week in Jerusalem and the protest art show staged by the new line of young Israeli artists next to the museum, Dr. Rabinowitz stated:

"The museum wanted to attract world-wide attention at their opening and in obtaining famed art they did that. However, the Israeli artists wanted more of their art

New Israel Museum Opened In Jerusalem Last Week

JERUSALEM—The new Israel Museum, in planning and construction stages for the past 15 years, was opened last week in this city.

In a typical Israeli ceremony devoid of pomp, more than 1,000 persons from Israel and abroad participated in the inauguration of a museum whose treasures reach from prehistoric times to today's pop art.

There were many speeches. Common to them all was a sense of pride that this country's new museum marked a significant milestone in the rebirth of Jewish culture and in the appreciation of all cultures.

President Johnson sent a message of congratulations to Teddy Kollek, the museum's board chairman, "on the success of your plans and efforts which have culminated in the opening of the magnificent new Israel Museum."

The message praised the "vision and hard work" that had created "an enduring legacy to

Bonn Will Study New Restitutions

BONN — The Bundestag, the lower house of West German's Parliament, this month will consider an amendment to provide individual compensation for World War II victims who were trapped in Iron Curtain countries and could not file claims before the 1953 deadline.

The proposed amendment to the West German compensation legislation could cost another $1,000,000,000 and bring the total outlay for individual reparations by West Germany to $7,500,000,000.

Under the Government proposal, a special fund would be opened for the victims of the Nazi era who were able to migrate to the Western world, and particularly to Israel, after the 1953 deadline for filing.

The Bundestag committee handling the issue has projected the sum needed for such reparations at $150,000,000 to $175,000,000. However, Social Democrat Martin Hirsch, head of the Bundestag indemnification committee, favors a settlement which would provide $575,000,000 to $625,000,000.

The Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany has demanded full indemnity for these victims. It has been said that fulfillment of this demand would cost West Germany another $1,500,000,000.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

Look at all four hands shown below. Play them double dummy if you like. There is apparently a loser in every suit. However, by good manipulation of her cards and some help from the defenders, declarer was able to make 12 tricks for a top score. Mr. and Mrs. David Daniels of Woonsocket were North and South in today's hand. They were vulnerable with this bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1C	1D
1H	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

North (Mr. Daniels)
 ♠ J, 7, 5, 2
 ♥ A, Q, 10, 7, 6
 ♦ J, 8, 3, 2
 ♣ Void

West
 ♠ A, 10, 9, 8
 ♦ K, 10, 9, 6, 4
 ♣ 10, 9, 8

East
 ♠ 6, 4, 3
 ♥ K, 9, 8, 5, 2
 ♣ J, 5, 3, 2

South
 ♠ K, Q
 ♥ J, 3
 ♦ A, Q, 7
 ♣ A, K, Q, 7, 6, 4

The Diamond 10 was led, won by Declarer's Queen. Mrs. Daniels saw that she had many things to do and no communication between the two hands so she started by playing the King and Queen of Spades, both ducked by West. Next came the Heart Jack which was quite properly permitted to hold by East with no hesitation whatsoever. He saw that if he won it, he would set up several tricks for Declarer. A sixth sense seemed to warn Mrs. Daniels that the King was offside and she now turned her attention to her best suit, Clubs. No matter how they were distributed, a trick had to be lost and by first playing the high honors, two things would happen: one, the defenders would obtain a clear picture of the hand, and two, three embarrassing discards would have to be made from the dummy. So Mrs. Daniels now made the excellent play of a low Club which West had to win with his 8. Hoping Declarer's Diamond Ace was now alone, he led another small Diamond which Mrs. Daniels won in dummy with the Jack. She returned to her hand with the Diamond Ace and when the Clubs broke evenly, she claimed the balance.

Today's moral: By not giving any clues, a wise Declarer can enlist the aid of the defenders. Give them every chance to go wrong and never help them.

Mrs. Leslie Stephen Weinstein

Miss Bette Ann Shapiro, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shapiro of 534 Lloyd Avenue, became the bride of Leslie Stephen Weinstein, son of Mrs. Herman Weinstein of 31 Exeter Street and the late Mr. Weinstein, on May 1 at Temple Beth El. Rabbi William G. Braude officiated, and Cantor Norman Gewirtz assisted, at the 8:30 P.M. candlelight ceremony, which was followed by a reception.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a peau de sole gown fashioned with a Sabrina neckline, short sleeves and a dome-shaped skirt. Her mantilla was of silk. She carried a cascade bouquet of rosebuds and stephanotis.

Mrs. Arnold Saslavsky was matron of honor, and the bridegroom's sister, Miss Natalie Weinstein, was maid of honor.

Kenneth M. Weinstein, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Steven Shapiro, the bride's brother, Norman Bolotow, Elliot Cohen, Jerrold Cohen, Gerald Lubusky, Morton Markovitz, Steven Markovitz, Kenneth Perlow, Jordan Richman and Dr. Herbert Yollin.

The bridegroom's mother was escorted by her brother, Louis Cohen.

After a wedding trip to Puerto Rico and St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, the couple will live in Providence.

American Rabbi Visits Native Germany, Reports Present Generation's Attitudes

NEW YORK — "I am a religious Jew who grew up in Germany and felt the terror of Nazism. Yet I felt that the time has come for those who hate Germany and the Germans to take a new look at their feelings," wrote Rabbi Joseph Asher of Temple Emanuel, Greensboro, N.C., in a recent issue of Look Magazine.

Rabbi Asher was driven out of school three years after Hitler came to power. His father, an Orthodox rabbi in Wiesbaden, perished at Buchenwald.

For years Rabbi Asher felt it necessary to keep alive among America Jews the memory of those years, and of German responsibility for the crimes committed against the Jewish people. Then, wondering how the generation felt which grew up after Hitler, he determined to visit Germany.

The German Ambassador in Washington, Dr. Heinrich Knappstein, arranged for him to visit Gutenberg Gymnasium, the school from which Rabbi Asher was expelled for the "crime" of being Jewish. Talking with German students there convinced him that guilt for Nazi crimes must not fall on the shoulders of German youth.

One class had made a field trip to the trial of Auschwitz concentration-camp officials. "Why prosecute them?" asked one student. "They are no more guilty than all the Germans." The principal lost his composure. "That is not true!" he shouted. "They must be prosecuted and punished. All Germans are not guilty of their crimes."

"Well, Rabbi," asked another student, still shaken by his experience in Frankfurt. "Do you consider me guilty?"

"Of course, I cannot burden you with the guilt of the past," I answered. "You were not even born when all this horror occurred. Your question weighs me with great sorrow. For I ask myself, what could I have said or done that could conceivably make you feel that I hold you responsible? I, too, must search my heart, lest I commit the historic error of unending retribution."

"How much of a burden of guilt can you lay on the shoulders of an 18-year-old boy without damaging his soul almost beyond repair? Is he not entitled to the benefit of the doubt. Didn't he ask what must be on the minds of so many who are either unable or unwilling to ask themselves the same question? What kind of hostility must there be hidden under this involuntary assumption of guilt by the German people? How indeed would someone feel in whose mind, even if only subconsciously, there arose the question of that 18-year-old: 'Am I guilty?' There must always remain a bill of particulars, but there must come a time—and the time may very well be now—when we must stop presenting it for payment."

Since little or nothing is taught in German schools about the story of the Jews and Judaism, Rabbi Asher proposed in Look that a number of German-speaking American rabbis be asked each to devote a month to teaching in German secondary schools.

Neo-Nazi Given Trial By Jury

LOS ANGELES — Ralph Forbes, American Nazi Party member who established a local party headquarters in adjoining Glendale, was recently convicted by a jury of violating the Glendale city building code by converting a residence to an assembly area.

The jury of five men and seven women found two other Nazi defendants, Allen Vincent and Robert Giles, not guilty.

Forbes also was convicted on charges of conducting meetings without a permit. Municipal Judge Lee Stanton imposed a 60-day suspended jail sentence on Forbes.

Urges Base Be Moved To Israel

WASHINGTON — Senator Ernest Gruening, Alaska Democrat, has urged the United States to move the Wheelus Air Base from Libya to Israel and conclude a mutual defense pact with Israel.

In a Senate speech, Sen. Gruening said the time has come for a defensive agreement with Israel similar to the United States arrangements with Taiwan and the Philippines because vital United States security interests were involved in the survival of Israel.

Sen. Gruening called on President Johnson to lessen tensions in the Middle East by helping to end the Arab hostilities against Israel. The Senator said the United States policy in the Middle East was vacillating, weak and ineffectual.

Better Golf The E. Z. Way

By Eddie Zaretsky

It seems to me that at least once during a teaching day I can expect someone to ask me what the difference is in swinging a two iron as compared to a driver, or a nine iron compared to a four iron, etc. There are some who have the mistaken notion that there are different swings with the various clubs. This obviously cannot be true, as I mentioned in my previous articles. A swing is a swing no matter what club is being used, but the length of the arc may vary because of the different length in shafts. A shorter shafted club such as the nine iron would naturally swing in a smaller radius than, for example, the longer shafted driver. Then again, there are some who line up to the ball differently for each club.

Some play the ball in line with the left heel for the driver and gradually move the ball toward the right foot as the numbers of the clubs increase. This tends to complicate things and it is unnecessary to have different positions for each of the fourteen clubs that we are allowed to use.

I would suggest to most golfers that until they become expert players, they should play the ball in one of two positions. When playing an iron shot, play the ball midway between the feet. If the player is using a wood for a good lie in the fairway, or if the ball is teed up, play the ball slightly to the left of the midway point of the feet. The reason is that the woods should be swept off the grass, while the irons should make contact with the ball when it is descending.

Of course there are variations that some professionals use to meet the elements, such as the wind, etc., but until one has acquired the knack of swinging so it has become habitual, I suggest he keep things as simple as possible.

Police Force Briefed On Toronto Religions

TORONTO — An applicable knowledge of the religions in Toronto has been given to all 2,600 members of the police force. Police Chief James Mackey recently told an Ontario Royal Commission on civil rights.

He rejected a charge by the Jewish Canadian Congress that the Toronto police were not observing the recommendations of another Royal Commission that three years ago had investigated the alleged rough handling by the police of a rabbi who had been arrested by mistake.

In that case, Rabbi Norbert Leiner, after his arrest, refused to sign his name on a police document, contending that because the day was the Jewish Sabbath his actions were restricted. He then was roughed up, it was charged.

Chief Mackey said that after he had read the recommendations of the inquiry commission, he consulted religious groups, and educational lectures were prepared for his men.

Among other things, the police have been advised that Jews may not write on the Sabbath. "It has never been decided whether a Jew is a member of an ethnic group, a religious group or a cultural way of life," according to the briefing.

"The only practical definition is that if he considers himself a Jew, then he is one," it said.

The third member of the panel, originally from Pawtucket, is Professor William Schwartz, Professor of Law at Boston University Law School, who will speak on the impact of Israel's educational progress upon American universities.

A large delegation from Providence will attend the symposium.

WASHINGTON—Senator Frank Church (D., Idaho), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, recently took the Senate floor to praise President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia for advocating Arab-Israel peace. Church said that Bourguiba

"deserves high commendation for statesmanship for making his recent statement about Arab-Israel relations." The Senator noted that Bourguiba urged "his Fellow Arabs to quite stockpiling arms for war against Israel."

Cairo Univ. Debate On War With Israel

LONDON — The advisability of an Arab war of aggression against Israel was debated at a symposium held in the Cairo University, in which the former English deputy foreign minister, Anthony Nutting, and former India defense minister, Krishna Menon, participated. Nutting maintained that Arab countries need not wage a war with Israel, because "Israel has no possibility for survival."

Krishna Menon opposed this view, stating that only with the aid of arms will the Arabs liberate their "homeland."

listen to what's being asked at the Finance Forum we're holding today for high school students."

So we stopped by — and instead of staying five minutes, I sat throughout the session listening in delighted silence to the teen-agers ask questions astoundingly parallel to those the four of us had been pondering 60 floors above. Here is a sampling — in the precise words of the high school students.

"Wouldn't an increase in interest rates in the long run help the balance of payments?"

"The federal government is reducing taxes while states are increasing them. How will this affect the economy?"

"If the economy keeps moving ahead and trade increases, what will be necessary to stop the gold drain we're suffering now in the U.S.?" (The answer naturally led into comment about the development of a new world monetary system.)

"If we were to find an equitable total disarmament plan, wouldn't this destroy a good portion of our economy?"

"This is fantastic," I said to my host. "What's the explanation?"

The explanation is that these were 350 youngsters who had had some classroom work in economics and who had been selected by principals at 60 high schools to attend a one-day Finance Forum the bank conducted in cooperation with the New York City Board of Education. A forum along these lines, the Chase Manhattan believes, has not been tried before in New York or elsewhere in our country.

Rarely have I listened to such informed talk even among intelligent adults I know—much less teen-agers.

This forum represents economic education at its best. This level of economic literacy among youngsters represents a new record of achievement in our country.

This forum easily could be copied by other banks in New York and throughout the country—with what could only be positive results.

As the students left the hall, I heard one say, "I didn't get a chance to ask some of my tougher questions." Parallel indeed!

Klein, who was this year's winner of the annual Israeli science model contest, described his computer as an elementary adding and subtracting machine with a capacity of two digits, able to perform any number of both operations in any order within certain limits. His electronic circuitry comprises 968 assorted components.

Of the 4656 employees, 1,546 are non-Jews belonging to 41 various nationalities. Of the 90 Israeli ships plying the seas, only on one does the crew consist entirely of Jews.

Catholic-Jewish Dialogues Planned

NEW YORK — Dore Schary, chairman of the national Anti-Defamation League, has announced that at least 20 Catholic-Jewish clergy and lay dialogues are being sponsored jointly this year by the League and Catholic colleges.

He said the discussions, to be held on various Catholic campuses, would cover a wide range of subjects, including social justice, race relations, anti-Semitism, church-state relationships, family life, cultural motivations and economic concerns.

The scheduled 20 meetings, he noted, compare with a total of 21 held since 1959, when the dialogues were started. The 21 include eight held in 1964, Religious News Service reports.

In the beginning, he said, "the meetings took place more for the record" than for really exploring common subjects and problems. Now, he said, "we are frank with each other, probing to extract our differences and similarities and to air grievances to achieve a way of life based on mutual respect and cooperation."

Mr. Schary, who addressed the league's national executive committee, observed that while the "new era," for Catholic-Jewish relations in this country began before Vatican II opened, such relations were "greatly accelerated" by the Council's draft declaration renouncing the ancient charge of deicide against the Jewish people.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

David Lean directed, for Sam Spiegel, "Bridge on the River Kwai" and "Lawrence of Arabia." He now is in Europe filming "Dr. Zhivago." In Paris he had lunch with Robert Parrish, the director now working for Spiegel's UN film on Pakistan. Lean told Parrish he wanted their lunch to be peaceful.

"Not a mention of Spiegel," said Lean. "First one to mention Sam pays the other $500." Parrish agreed.

It is no secret that Spiegel, who produced three Academy Award-winning films, believes good movies are born of struggle and argument, dissatisfaction and remake, rather than of peaceful co-existence. Such are the scars that Lean said to Parrish: "Okay, Bob, you've got the $500. Now, about Sam . . ."

Mrs. Robert Kennedy came up from Virginia to find a new home for their family. They're not content with Glen Cove, and are looking in the Rye area . . . Stan Musial, in charge of the nation's Physical Fitness program, told Toots Shor: "I'm putting you in charge of our Physical Fitness progress. And Jackie Gleason is your deputy" . . . Jim Aubrey, who was fired from CBS, is telling his story to Life.

After her Broadway debut as "Flora, the Red Menace," Liza Minnelli joined the Sardi's table where her parents sat—Judy Garland, with Mark Herron, and Vincent Minnelli, with his wife, Denise . . . Herron, who'll soon be Liza's step-father, said to Liza's step-mother: "Denise, do you think you and I have as much right to be so proud of Liza?"

Joan Fontaine skipped along 52d St. happily the other day because she'd just found the play for a 12-week tour, Agatha Christie's "Unexpected Guest." If the reaction is good, she'll bring it to Broadway . . . Billy Rose bought the Grand Street Boys building on W. 55th St., thereby increasing the size of his Ziegfeld Theater realty parcel . . . Jack Albertson turned down the "Hello, Dolly!" tour, and will tour instead with the Pulitzer Prize play, "The Subject Was Roses."

Hedy Lamarr, who filed suit to divorce her sixth husband, told the court that she is broke. Miss Lamarr has been unfortunate about her finances, although some of her husbands have been wealthy men . . . One romance, with a prominent N.Y. banker, ended when her psychiatrist sent for him to question him about his financial holdings—as a way of calming Miss Lamarr.

Connie Stevens, now making "Never Too Late," is conferring with Garson Kanin about starring in Norman Krasna's play, "Naked Mary Will You Come Out?" . . . Barbara Cook, star of the comedy, "Any Wednesday," just recorded a song, "Any Wednesday," composed by Albert Hague. Miss Cook starred in his musical, "Plain and Fancy" . . . Xavier Cugat and his singer, Charo, now at the Paramount, signed to headline at the Latin Quarter July 7.

Austria's ex-Chancellor, the late Leopold Figl, spent more than six years in a concentration camp. He once was asked to name some of the things people could do without. "People can live without air for a few minutes," Figl replied, "without water for two weeks, without food sometimes for two months—but without new ideas for decades."

The baby picture used as the cover photo for Barbra Streisand's new album, "My Name is Barbra," was taken by her older brother, Sheldon. It shows her clothes conscious even at such an early age: she removed the satin bow from a candy box and wore it for the photo . . . Jack Richardson's play, "Xmas in Las Vegas," will be produced by Youngstein, Coe & Karr . . . Peter Lind Hayes, who cruises on a tugboat he owns, just bought a cement island abandoned by CBS.

Some of the Pop Art movement can be credited to Stuart Davis, the American painter who died in N.Y. recently. It was Davis who pioneered with paintings featuring lettering . . . Just before he died he finished his last painting. It consists of the one word, "Finis."

Fulton Freeman, the U.S. Ambassador to Mexico, just joined Mexico's Musicians Union. He plays the saxophone, bass and guitar . . . Patti Page, who's appeared in all other media of entertainment, finally will make her stage debut—in "Annie Get Your Gun" at the Dallas State Fair . . . Natalie Wood will appear at the Indianapolis Raceway on Memorial Day, behind the wheel of one of the vintage cars used in the film, "The Great Race."

In "Fiddler on the Roof" the role of Zero Mostel's eldest daughter is played by Joanna Merlin. She's betrothed first to the village's butcher, then to the tailor . . . She soon will be leaving the musical, for motherhood. When the stage manager was writing correction notes to the cast, Mostel told him: "Joanna's baby just kicked. Send baby a note—not to kick."

Dana Andrews and Susan Oliver will co-star in Leonard Speigass' play for the Theater Guild, "A Remedy for Winter" . . . Joel Grey will play Tommy Steele's role in "Half a Sixpence," when Steele vacations in August . . . To signal the first night party for "Flora, the Red Menace," at Ruby Foo's, Chinese firecrackers were exploded. Joan Bennett, standing near ex-husband, Walter Wanger, said, "I haven't heard such goings on since Walter shot Jennings Lang."

Teaching Of Zionism 'Taboo' In Hungary

LONDON — Despite some difficulties, the Jews of Hungary have managed to keep the communal organization intact. Col. Marcus Lipton, a Labor Member of Parliament who recently visited Hungary, reported to a Poale Zion meeting here.

delegation to a meeting of inter-parliamentary Union, said that the synagogue in Budapest was used and that the Government placed no obstacle in the way of religious observances. He also reported that the Government placed no obstacle in the way of religious observances. He also reported that the Jewish community has institutions in which students were trained for the rabbinate and that Jewish community leaders were allowed to visit Western countries.

He explained that because the Hungarian Government has made Zionism taboo, Jewish religious teachers had difficulties in teaching religion to their pupils without mentioning Zionism or Israel. He added that the Government still allows a good many Jewish one-man businesses to continue. Col. Lipton also expressed the opinion that if Hungarian Jews were allowed to emigrate, many would leave and settle in Israel.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Writer-producer Ric Hardman would rather be writer-director Ric Hardman. Towards that end he has fancied up "The Chaplains Raid" (Coward-McCann), a very funny novel about an 18-year-old Marine private whose imagination leads him into paths of unrighteousness that not even three chaplains can unbend.

If Hollywood purchases Hardman's book—and he thinks his chances verge on reasonable certainty—his contract definitely will provide that he write the screenplay and direct the film. Once done, it will launch his directing career.

Why does a successful writer-producer want to switch to writer-director? Said Hardman, "Production has failed to deliver a creative reward. My significant goal in life is to write and direct anything that will make a quality motion picture."

His last film was the recently completed "The Rare Breed" with James Stewart.

Like young Pfc. Charlie Danborn in "The Chaplains Raid," the author also was an orphan and Marine. But unlike agnostic Charlie, Unitarian Hardman believes that God is known and knowable.

"My faith's complete freedom of religious opinion and the importance it lends to personal character gave me a lot of latitude in writing the book," he said. "The three chaplains—Protestant, Catholic and Jew—all take a different view of God. As the book ends, they have mellowed considerably and blown together a good bit."

Asked if his book and its eventual movie fall into the increasing and continued sex plateau and will attempt to keep pace with the industry's supply and the public's demand, Hardman bristled, "Definitely not. The book fights that flax with tooth and nail, particularly those aspects of prurience and snide exploitation that frequently appear." He thinks the book and picture are designed especially for a young audience that has been vastly overlooked. "We have these beach pictures and all that kind of stuff made cheaply and on an exploitation basis. But our young people are intelligent people and they have live problems."

"I hope that this book, and I'm certain that the screenplay, will deal with these problems in an amusing way. Kids are faced with going to war and lots of moral questions. By and large, they're ahead—way ahead of adult interpretations of how they meet their problems."

"I don't put down our young audience and neither do I think that they have a mental age of 12. I just don't believe that at all. Our youngsters today are a lot more intelligent than most adults care to acknowledge."

Questioned about Hollywood's approach to the sex aspect in relation to our youngsters, the author thinks that kids are much more relaxed and much more honest about the subject than the movies ever have been.

He said, "The use of sex in contemporary screen comedies goes back to the kind of inhibitions that we had in the 1930s. I can't accept that kids think that way anymore. Much of their behavior is a big put-on and a put-down for their elders who are still wrapped in a lot of antiquated, puritanical and frigid notions. In this respect, kids are much more realistic and much healthier."

Will it prove a difficult task trying to educate adults along these lines? Hardman thinks so. "They won't be educated and they will continue to point out how depraved the modern generation is. I disagree. I don't think that the modern generation is depraved at all."

"Today's kids are more realistic than we are and I think it's time that we did a lot more listening to them about real things instead of constantly fighting them."

It is 14 inches in diameter, and launch weight is 1,295 pounds.

Jewish Congress President Sees

Need For Improved German Democracy

NEW YORK — The president of the American Jewish Congress said recently that West Germany possessed the basic institutions of democracy but that too few Germans were concerned with making democracy work.

Dr. Joachim Prinz of Newark, N. J., who conferred with Chancellor Ludwig Erhard in West Germany recently, told a news conference in Stephen Wise Congress House.

"There are hopeful signs of progress in West Germany — a free and liberal press, TV and radio; courageous and determined government officials; and young people with a deep commitment to freedom.

"At the same time, however, the typical German appears more interested in enjoying prosperity than in seeking his country's moral rebirth; more concerned with sweeping the Nazi era under the rug than with confronting the meaning of Hitlerism; more eager to forget the past than to make sure it will not happen again."

Dr. Prinz, a former rabbi of Berlin expelled by the Hitler regime for anti-Nazi activities, was invited to West Germany in his position as chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, made up of 20 religious and lay groups.

At his news conference, Dr. Prinz expressed "sharp disappointment" with the action of the German Bundestag last month in extending the statute of limitations on Nazi murderers for only four and one-half years.

The Jewish leader noted, however, that the last word had not been spoken on the subject and that Chancellor Erhard had indicated efforts would be made to extend the statute on its new expiration date at the end of 1969.

"There is some comfort to be derived," he said, "from the Bundestag's acceptance of the principle that the statute of limitations can be extended. Meanwhile the world will carefully appraise the zeal with which West German authorities use this extra time to seek out and apprehend Nazi war criminals not yet brought to justice." He added:

"It is distressing," he said, "that even our own government had adopted a policy of impeding rather than abetting the task of finding Nazi criminals still at large and bringing them to trial."

"Now that additional time has been obtained for the prosecution of Nazi war criminals, it is imperative that the resources of every government — including our own — be made freely available to all qualified and reputable groups devoted to the task of bringing Nazi war criminals still at large to account."

Speaking in behalf of the Presidents' Conference, Dr. Prinz expressed "satisfaction" at the decision by Chancellor Erhard to seek full diplomatic relations with Israel. Dr. Prinz said he was hopeful that the action would help ease mid-East tensions, in view of the political support from West Germany that he said Israel could "reasonably expect."

Speaking as chairman of the Presidents' Conference, Dr. Prinz said the task of bringing Nazi criminals to justice had been "inexplicably hampered" by the "long-standing refusal" of officials of the U.S. Document Center in Alexandria, Va., to furnish material on Nazi war criminals to qualified private scholarly and civic agencies and to the news media.

Mrs. Paul B. Fishbein

Miss Susan Ann Froman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Froman of 275 North Adams Street, Manchester, N.H., became the bride of Paul B. Fishbein, son of Mrs. Max Fishbein of 102 Moore

Street and the late Mr. Fishbein, on May 2 at Temple Israel in Manchester. Rabbi Joel T. Klein officiated at the 6:30 P.M. double-ring ceremony, which was followed by a reception.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a traditional gown of silk organza over taffeta, with bateau neckline and long sleeves with bridal points at the wrist. The fitted bodice was trimmed with embroidered silk appliques, pearls and silk braid. Her controlled skirt was fashioned with unpressed pleats. The front skirt was styled with matching trim. A detachable chapel-length train was attached at the waist under self bows. Her bouffant chapel-length veil of silk illusion fell from a coronet of imported orange blossoms. She carried a white orchid with Stephanotis on a Bible.

Miss Barbara Katz was maid of honor. She wore a samaron rose long crepe gown and carried a colonial bouquet of roses and deep pink and white carnations. Bridesmaids were Miss Ronnie Cutler and Miss Joan Gollis. Miss Marlene Froman, the bride's sister, was junior bridesmaid. Their gowns were fashioned with bodices of pink chiffon and long white crepe skirts. Their colonial bouquets were of roses and pink and white carnations.

Milton Bolski was best man, and Michael Kavky, ring bearer. Ushers were Norman Bolski, Jordan Richman, Paul Sachs, John Shea, Sumner Fishbein and Arnold Shapiro.

The bridegroom's mother wore a long crepe gown of soft pink, embroidered with deeper pink and white bugle beads. The mother of the bride wore a long pale pink gown of silk worsted with pink crystal beaded bodice.

The bride, a 1963 graduate of Manchester Central High School, attended Northeastern University. The bridegroom, a 1960 graduate of Hope High School, served with the United States Air Force as a member of the Continental Air Command Band.

After a wedding trip to The Nevele Country Club in Ellenville, N.Y., they are living at 28 Norton Street, Pawtucket.

'Fiddler On The Roof' Best Musical Of Year

NEW YORK — "Fiddler on the Roof," a musical drama based on stories by Sholem Aleichem, depicting Jewish life in Czarist Russian "shtetl," was voted here last week by the New York Drama Critics Circle as the best musical on the Broadway stage during the current season. Of the 19 critics present and voting, 14 cast their ballots for "Fiddler on the Roof."

The play, which opened last September 22, has been a huge box office and critical success, tickets having been sold out in advance well into 1966. It stars Zero Mostel as Tevya the Milkman. Joseph Stein wrote the book for the play, music was composed by Jerry Brock, while Jerome Robbins staged and choreographed the production.

HONORED — Mrs. Louis B. Levovsky, the former Deborah Susan Smira, was recently elected by the Boston University School of Nursing to the National Honor Society for college nurses, Sigma Theta Tau. Mrs. Levovsky graduated from Boston University last year and is currently working at the Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. William Smira of 287 Cole Avenue.

Post-War Sanctuary In Spain Enjoyed By Fleeing Fascists

MADRID — Many Nazi and fascist bigwigs, fleeing after World War II, found refuge here and in other parts of Spain. A few of them have lived here ever since, generally out of the limelight.

The Belgian Quisling, Leon Degrelle, is one of these. Founder of a Fascist movement, he fought on the German side during the war in the Hitler SS. A Belgian court, trying him in absentia, sentenced Degrelle to death for crimes against civilians during the Battle of the Bulge offensive in the winter of 1944-45. Degrelle evaded capture at the end of the war by a thin margin of 11 miles when the plane in which he fled from Denmark ran out of fuel and crash-landed on the beach at San Sebastian, just this side of the French frontier.

For a time he lived in discreet obscurity, but in 1955 he broke into the news when the Spanish press listed "the Belgian politician Leon Degrelle" as being among those present at a meeting of veterans of the Blue Division, the Spanish unit that fought alongside the Germans in World War II.

The incident revived Belgian pressure for Degrelle's extradition and Brussels temporarily recalled its ambassador.

After that Degrelle lived more quietly, near the village of Constantina, 50 miles from Seville, under the name of Juan Sanchez-Dupre.

He is reported to be doing well in the flour and spaghetti business.

Members of the Rumanian Fascist Iron Guard, who sometimes call themselves "Legionnaires of the Archangel Michael," have found refuge here.

Their leader, Horia Sima, lives in Madrid. Last year he showed up at a memorial service for Benito Mussolini, along with Otto Skorzeny and an assortment of displaced Balkan and Italian fascists.

Otto Skorzeny, the Austrian-born Waffen-SS officer who snatched Mussolini from Allied hands in a daring raid masterminded by himself, is in the export business in Madrid.

He has been cleared by West German courts but is "wanted" in Austria.

He owns a farm in Ireland but is persona non grata in Britain. Recently he was given a visitor's visa to South Africa.

The most notorious fascist to seek refuge in Spain was the Croatian dictator, Ante Pavelich.

As "Poglavnik" (Fuehrer) of the "Independent state of Croatia" created by Hitler and Mussolini in 1941, Pavelich declared war on the Allies.

He was responsible for the slaughter of half a million Serbs of the Orthodox faith, and of Jews, including women and children, who were herded into extermination camps at Jasenovac and Stara-Gadicko.

His regime resorted to terror and torture to force the conversion of Yugoslav Orthodox Christians to the Catholic faith.

When the Hitler-Mussolini Axis collapsed in May, 1945, Pavelich disappeared. A year later he surfaced briefly in Italy and reappeared in Argentina, then ruled by former dictator Juan Peron (who today is himself a political refugee in Spain).

On April 4, 1957, Pavelich was shot by an unknown assailant. After a time under guard in a hospital; he was spirited away to Paraguay, then lost sight of again.

On Dec. 29, 1959, less than a week after President Eisenhower's state visit to Franco, Pavelich's name appeared in the "deaths" column of a Madrid newspaper.

It was revealed that Ante Pavelich had come to Spain secretly, that he had been harbored by the Monastery of San Francisco el Grandern Madrid, and that he had died at the German hospital, age 70.

He is now in the San Isidro cemetery mausoleum, gallery four, niche 106.

scored that those gathered for the Vigil were neither "Communist sympathisers or frontiers."

"We are opposed to Communism and to its expansion by force or subversion. We are not muddle-headed idealists. We are not asking for the unilateral withdrawal of the United States nor for the abandonment of those alongside whom we have been fighting. We believe that we are far more realistic than those who think that military solutions are possible in today's world.

"We are opposed to napalm bombing, terror explosions, sneak attacks, the intimidation of civilians, and torture. We detest these things, we detest violence, no matter who practices it not only because we believe it to be cruel but because it does not work and leaves nothing in its wake but hatred and the desire for reprisal. We are people who believe that if reason and discussion and the requirements of justice and the quest for peace are really allowed an opportunity for full play, they will ultimately prevail."

Conference Of Rabbis Calls For Debate On President Johnson's Vietnam Aims

WASHINGTON — Rabbi Leon I. Feuer, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, last week called for an immediate open debate by our government of our Vietnam objectives before "it is too late" and the American public finds itself in "a worse and bloodier situation than we are already engaged."

The Reform Jewish spiritual leader, keynoted a two-day religious Peace Vigil by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish laymen and clergymen, at the Mt. Vernon Methodist Church, 9th & Massachusetts Ave. N.W., and told the assembled religionists from various parts of the country that they were gathered in the nation's capitol to express "to our government our deep misgiving with regard to the policies which it has been following in Vietnam and in South-East Asia generally."

Rabbi Feuer said that instead of steering towards peaceful solution, "we seem to be moving farther from, rather than nearer to, its attainment."

He urged President Johnson to cease the bombings and "announce a time interlude during which there would be no bombing and thus provide a breathing spell, an opportunity for those nations and leaders and forces in the world not unfriendly to the United States—Pope Paul, Prime Minister Shastri, the Secretary General of the United Nations Mr. U. Thant, Mr. Lester Pearson of Canada and others to seek a formula for a cease-fire and then for negotiations toward the neutralization of Vietnam."

At the same time he criticized Secretary of State Dean Rusk and others who have taken the position "that there can be only one right approach to this problem, and to charge those who disagree with being misguided or soft on Communism" as a means of stifling the debate.

He termed as "not helpful," Mr. Rusk's recent answer to protests by academicians when the Secretary called their statement "nonsense" and "muddleheaded."

Rabbi Feuer said that he personally admired the President and has "generally supported Mr. Johnson. He undoubtedly has capable advisors. They are in possession of more technical information than are we, presumably. But they are not omniscient. And the American public which is paying a heavy bill in money and may be called upon to pay an increasingly heavy one in the lives of its sons is entitled to a free and full discussion of the issue."

"Granted the President has inherited a difficult situation from which the United States must be honorably extricated," Rabbi Feuer said, "but is it a solution to make it worse, to become more and more involved, to spread the area of the conflict, and perhaps to run the risk of a huge land war in Asia, and even worse, the dreaded consequence of a third World War?"

60th Anniversary Celebration Salad

NEW YORK—The 60th Anniversary of Labor Zionism in America will be inaugurated Saturday, May 22, when members and friends gather at the Barbizon Plaza Theatre in New York City for an anniversary celebration and concert.

The New York event will initiate celebrations throughout the United States and Canada, according to Hy Falne, president of the LZOA-Poale Zion.

Featured in the New York program will be an address by Dr. Ezra Spicandler, professor of Hebrew literature at the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati, a national vice president of the LZOA and a deputy member of the World Zionist Actions Committee.
