

Dr. Sidney Goldstein, Noted Sociologist, Leaves For Israel

Dr. Sidney Goldstein, a recognized expert in the field of Sociology, departed Wednesday for Israel where he will present a paper on "The Changing Social and Demographic Characteristics of an American Jewish Community" at the Fourth World Congress of Jewish Studies.

Head of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Brown University, Dr. Goldstein's work, "A Population Study" has been acclaimed in the United States, and several copies turned up in Israel at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

After a study of the local professor's book, University officials invited Dr. Goldstein to Israel to discuss his works at the congress of Jewish Studies.

The world-wide congress will begin this Sunday and last until August 1st.

At the close of the world conference, Dr. Goldstein and his wife Alice who is making the trip with him, will tour Israel for two weeks.

The sociologist will divide his time between sightseeing and study of the population trends in one of the world's newest nations to see if it parallels other world Jewish centers, namely Greater Providence.

After another two weeks in Turkey and Greece, the Goldsteins will depart for Belgrade, Yugoslavia, where he will take part in the United Nations sponsored World Population Conference.

At this conference he will present his study completed several years ago on the "Rural-Suburban Urban Population Redistricting In Denmark" — the results of a study the sociologist completed as a Guggenheim Fellow and a Fullbright Scholar in Denmark.

"A Population Survey" one of Dr. Goldstein's major works, is a complete, comprehensive study of the Providence Jewish community completed in 1964 after a

Justice Arthur J. Goldberg Is Named By President Johnson To Replace Stevenson

WASHINGTON — President Lyndon B. Johnson Tuesday named Justice Arthur J. Goldberg of the Supreme Court to succeed Adlai E. Stevenson as United States Representative to the United Nations.

The appointment was announced by the president at a press conference at the White House at 10:30 A.M.

White House reporters were ushered out to the Rose Garden to watch the President greet United States Ambassadors to four African countries who are here for consultation. This over, Mr. Johnson turned back towards his office saying over his shoulder, "I'll be back in a moment."

Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Under Secretary of State George W. Ball and McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to the President on foreign affairs, then entered from the wings. Mr. Johnson came out of his office a minute later, followed by Justice Goldberg, his wife, Dorothy, and their son, Robert.

In announcing his selection of Mr. Goldberg, the President said: "Each President has reflected the faith and the firmness of our commitment to the United Nations by always calling upon distinguished citizens of very high achievement to serve in this honored office."

Mr. Johnson said that Mr. Goldberg had "accepted this call to duty" at his insistence.

Mr. Goldberg did not attempt to conceal what he characterized as "the pain" with which he was leaving the Court. The former labor lawyer served in President Kennedy's Cabinet as Secretary of Labor from 1961 until he was named to the Supreme Court by Mr. Kennedy in August of 1962.

The Justice said that his Court service had been "the richest and most satisfying period of my career."

"Throughout my life," he declared, "I have been deeply committed to the rule of law. The law gives form and substance to the spirit of liberty and to mankind's sacred stir for justice."

"It now comes that the President has asked me to join in the greatest adventure of man's history — the effort to bring the rule of law to govern the relations between sovereign states."

"It is that or doom — and we all know it. I have accepted, as one simply must."

Later Mr. Goldberg told newsmen:

"In all candor, I would rather the President had not asked me to undertake this duty. But it appears perhaps I can at this stage of our national life make a contribution, I hope, in this area of foreign affairs."

Mr. Goldberg has long had an interest in foreign affairs, but little practical experience in the field.

As Labor Secretary, he was involved with the International Labor Organization, an agency of the United Nations. He represented President Kennedy on occasional foreign missions, and since his appointment to the Court has traveled extensively and spoken on a number of occasions abroad.

Goldberg Choice Is Questioned

UNITED NATIONS — The recent appointment of Justice Arthur J. Goldberg to succeed Adlai E. Stevenson as the United States representative to the United Nations caused great surprise here by many with several UN members showing dismay.

To delegates of most foreign missions, the new head of the United States Mission to the United Nations was merely a name that many of them said was completely unknown in their countries.

Not knowing much about Mr. Goldberg, most delegates were reluctant to comment for publication, although they talked about his choice in huddles in the lounge and in the corridors.

In some quarters, the wisdom of appointing a Jew who is a Zionist as chief of the United States mission was questioned. This was especially true among representatives of some Arab states, although none would be quoted.

Dr. Izzat Tannous, the New York representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization, did say that "if Mr. Goldberg proves to be a Zionist it would be a bad thing."

On the other hand, another Arab delegate speaking off the record expressed the view that it did not matter whether Mr. Goldberg were a Zionist because as Ambassador he would be supporting the policies of his Government.

Nevertheless, belief was widely expressed that the new Permanent Representative would find personal difficulty in viewing any disputes between Israel and its neighbors with impartiality.

One delegate who took the trouble to consult Current Biography noted that Mr. Goldberg's favorite quotation by the late Italian historian Gaetano Salvemini, was: "We cannot be impartial; only intellectually honest. Impartiality is a dream, honesty a duty."

"Perhaps," the delegate declared, "he will be happier here than on the Supreme Court."

General Jewish Committee Sponsors Study Of Aged Jewish Population

A study is being undertaken of the aged of the Jewish population of Rhode Island in order to assure adequate facilities and care for the aged both for the present and the future.

The survey, which came about at the request of Herman J. Aisenberg, president of the Jewish Home for the Aged, was approved by the Planning and Executive Committees of the General Jewish Committee.

The study is being sponsored by the General Jewish Committee with the cooperation of the health, welfare and recreational agencies in Jewish community; namely, the Jewish Home for the Aged, the Miriam Hospital, the Jewish Family and Children's Service and the Jewish Community Center.

Simon Krakow, associate director of the combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston and considered an authority on community planning, was named survey director. At the beginning of this week, he started his fact-finding conferences and expects to have the groundwork of study completed by early fall. Mr. Krakow was recommended by the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds in New York, the central body of Jewish federations of which Providence is a member.

Merrill L. Hassenfeld, president of the General Jewish Committee, said the survey is planned to determine both the immediate and long range needs of the aged. He said it will be of great help to the entire community in coordinating resources and programs in behalf of the aged and determining what additional facilities, if any, are necessary.

The survey also was prompted by the findings of the GJC Population Study. The Population Study showed that during the next 15 years the proportion in the Jewish population of persons 65 years old and over in the Greater Providence area will increase markedly. The study showed that there will be 3,400 persons 65 years old and over in 1978. This compares to less than 2,000 persons 65 years old and over at present.

Mr. Krakow has been instrumental in developing a study and demonstration program financed by government grants involving the waiting list of the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center in Boston utilizing resources of Beth Israel Hospital, Jewish Memorial Hospital, the Jewish Family and Children's Service as well as the combined Jewish Philanthropies.

Mr. Krakow is secretary of the Long Range Planning Commission, financed by private foundations as well as grants from the United Community Services and the Division of Chronic Diseases of the Public Health Service. He is secretary of the CJF's Inter-Agency Committee on Aging which is developing a coordinated program for aged and the chronically ill in Boston.

They Like Professional Attitude Displayed At Circle Theatre

By CELIA ZUCKERBERG

She only came to watch her friend, Libby, rehearse—and they needed someone to play Jenny. She read for them and sang—had four days to rehearse—and she has now been performing for two weeks in "The Threepenny Opera" at the Hummock's Circle Theatre.

Gayle Goodman of Tucson, Arizona, looks too young to have had the experience and training she has had in Modern Dance. A cum laude graduate of the University of Utah, and a teacher of Modern Dance at the University of Rhode Island this past year, she started her dancing at the age of 13. By age 14, she was professionally reviewed in an original composition.

Although she had already been dancing for two years, her real training started when Frances Smith Cohen, a Bennington College graduate who had married a Tucson lawyer, started a class in Modern Dance with ten pupils in a small empty room at the Tucson Jewish Community Center. There are now 300 pupils in this group at the Tucson Center. They have toured much of the Southwest, giving performances in San Diego, Los Angeles, El Paso, Phoenix. Of the ten original members of the class, Miss Goodman says all have either gone into professional Modern Dancing or still continue in it as an avocation. It was due to foresight and initiative that this group could start and continue growing as it has at the Tucson Jewish Community Center. The Center now has built a new theater and a new stage for its Modern Dance Group.

For five years, Miss Goodman served as an assistant teacher with Mrs. Cohen at the Center. Since that time, she has studied with Martha Graham; she has performed with Alwin Nicolais of the Henry Street Playhouse in New York City; she has choreographed and performed in the Tucson Corral Theatre's production of "The World of Suzie Wong," and has danced in the Playbox Theatre's production of "The Boy Friend;" she has taught at the Jewish Community Center at Salt Lake City, while she was

London Rabbi Asks Watchers To Avert Arson

LONDON — London rabbis urged congregations last week to organize watches in their synagogues following a wave of arson at Jewish places of worship in the city.

They asked synagogue members to form groups that would stay in the synagogues overnight and report any incidents to the police.

The remains of gasoline bombs were found after fires at synagogues last month. A week ago another synagogue was set afire.

Sir Barnett Janner, a Member of Parliament and president of the Jewish Board of Deputies, said the board and the Association of Jewish Servicemen had advised synagogues to take security measures.

Talbot Says UN Plan Could Be Revised

WASHINGTON — The plan offering Palestine Arab refugees a choice of repatriation to Israel or resettlement in other lands with compensation paid by Israel — submitted to the United Nations some years ago — is not necessarily permanently dead and could be revised, Assistant Secretary of State Philip Talbot has informed Congress.

The plan had been rejected before it was even presented for discussion at the UN. However, in testimony given to the House Appropriations Committee and made public, Talbot is quoted as declaring:

"I personally do not believe that just because the Joseph Johnson plan was not acceptable to the parties when he offered it, it is necessarily permanently dead."

"I personally believe that some day the Joseph Johnson plan could become a yardstick as indeed the Eric Johnston plan for the Jordan waters has become a yardstick."

The latter, drafted by Johnston as an envoy of former President Eisenhower, set forth a formula for allocating waters of the Jordan River to Israel and her neighbors). He defined the Joseph Johnson plan as providing the Arab refugees "a clear opportunity to make a realistic choice" between repatriation and resettlement.

He said that initiative to push the plan in the immediate future "would seem particularly difficult because of the current high level of tension in the area generally, arising out of the water question and other questions."

In testimony which sought to advance both the Johnson and Johnston plans, in a sense linking them as a constructive plan regional countries "all followed the Johnston plan the waters of the Jordan Valley would be used most efficiently and equitably as compared to any other plan we have seen."

"We have been urging strongly on the Lebanese that they not take those (diversions) actions which would upset the 1955 Johnston plan."

We regard that plan as the best and, indeed, the only framework for equitable division of the waters of the Jordan Valley in the absence of any other framework or any agreed at all."

In today's hand, Mrs. Samuel Starr, of Providence, paired with Mrs. Casper Sutton, also of Providence, found herself declarer in a Diamond slam with but one Diamond.

West's preemptive 3 Spades opening was meant to disrupt communications between his opponents and so it did but Mrs. Sutton decided no one was going to talk her out of something if her partner had an Ace and if not she would be quite content to stop at 5 Diamonds. When South showed 1 Ace and no Kings in response to Blackwood, North signed off at 6 Diamonds and strangely enough, on the bidding South was declarer with but one trump.

West led the Spade Queen and South took a moment to figure how to play the hand. She then decided that West's preemptive bid indicated a lack of high cards and she would play East for the Heart King. Furthermore, if East also had the Club King she could make 7 by means of the little known Vienna Coup, process whereby you cash a high card establishing a trick for opponent and then proceed to squeeze him out of it.

Dummy's King won the first trick followed by a trump to the Queen. Next, a Club to dummy's Ace (Vienna Coup setting up East's King). Next came the other 6 Diamonds. A total of 9 tricks had been played and East was starting to feel the pressure of discarding. His last 4 cards were the Club King and the King, 9 and 8 of Hearts. South, who was discarding after East, had the Ace, Queen and 10 of Hearts and the Club Queen.

The 10th trick was the Spade Ace and East found this unbearable. Throwing the Club King would make the Queen good and if he threw a Heart all the Hearts might be good. South would discard whatever East held.

Now came the Heart Jack which was not covered but was overtaken by the Queen and with the Heart King falling, Mrs. Starr made all 13 tricks.

Moral: As declarer, before playing to the first trick, decide where the cards are likely to be or where they have to be to make the hand, and then play accordingly.

Truman Loans Historic Items To Pavilion

NEW YORK — Former President Harry S. Truman is lending the American Israel Pavilion at the World's Fair an historic Torah and a unique document which signaled American recognition of Israel three hours after it became a state.

The United States, under Mr. Truman's administration, dramatically recognized Israel's statehood almost at the instant that the declaration of existence reached the White House. A search was made by the American Israel Pavilion to find the formal document of recognition. There was none.

It finally became apparent that the instrument of recognition was an unsigned press release which Mr. Truman had issued. The original release is now in the Truman Library in Independence, Mo. Mr. Truman has had a photo copy of this made and he has signed it. It is this, the only signed copy, which will be displayed at the Fair.

This document along with a Torah, presented to the then president by the late first President of Israel, Chaim Weizman, was unveiled on May 14, marking the 17th anniversary of U.S. recognition. The Torah was a gift of Israel.

Mr. Truman authorized the loan after Nathan Straus, III, chairman of the Pavilion's advisory board, and Bechariah Stchin, president of the Pavilion, visited him in Independence, Mo.

Because of the Weybosset Hill Redevelopment plans, the Bureau of Jewish Education has been forced to vacate its offices on Westminster Street. They are now renting quarters on the fifth floor in the Case Mead building at 76 Dorrance Street, corner of Weybosset Street.

The quarters have been renovated and adjusted to the needs of the Bureau. The Bureau moved to its new location on July 9.

The Bureau library is already functioning at the new address. It will be open during the summer months except for the two weeks from July 26 through Aug. 8.

Bundesrat In Final Claims Approval

BONN — The Bundesrat, the upper house of the West German Parliament approved last week a final indemnification bill previously passed by the Bundestag providing a fund of 1,200,000,000 deutschmarks ($300,000,000) for the compensation of those Nazi victims who were unable to file claims by the Oct. 1, 1953 deadline because they were in Iron Curtain countries.

West German President Heinrich Lübke is now expected to sign the measure into law and it will probably come into effect this week.

The measure was first opposed by the Bundestag but was given approval by a mediation committee of the two houses of the Bonn Parliament.

Monbaz Named Consul

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Lt. Col. Jacob Monbaz, Israeli expert on armistice affairs and, for the last three years, a member of the Israeli delegation here, left his post last week, having been promoted by the Israeli Foreign Ministry to the mission in Johannesburg, where he will represent his country as Consul-General in South Africa.

During his tenure here, Col. Monbaz also filled the post of delegation information officer.

Charge Cultural Suppression Still In Russia

ATLANTIC CITY — Jewish leaders expressed here the view that patterns of changes in Soviet policy against its Jewish citizens by granting permission to bake matzos, appearance of two Yiddish publications, has not markedly changed the plight of religious and cultural suppression of the U.S.S.R.'s almost 3,000,000 Jews.

On the contrary, the NCRAC representatives said they saw "no substantial evidence that the Soviet leadership is disposed to end the unjust disabilities and denials which are visited upon the Jewish citizens of that land and which are aimed at destroying the cultural identity of Jews."

Delegates attending the 21st Annual Convention of the National Community Relations Advisory Council, representing eight national Jewish agencies and 76 local community councils, adopted a resolution calling attention to the continued religious and cultural persecution by the U.S.S.R.

The Jewish groups observed that during the past year the Soviet authorities created the impression of a changing attitude in restrictions imposed upon their Jewish nationals by granting permission for matzos (unleavened bread) to be baked in Moscow and Leningrad for Passover; publication of two Yiddish books—a collection of essays "This is How We Live" describing Jewish life, published in November of 1964; an anthology of poetry by contemporary Jewish poets, "Horizons", published in the early part of this year; and a decline in the use of capital punishment for economic crimes and the exploitation of Jewish names in these cases.

The Soviet authorities "have not effected any fundamental changes in the tragic situation of its Jewish population, nor do they in and of themselves justify the hope that the new Soviet leadership is removing the barriers of discrimination which apply to Jews", the resolution stated.

They interpreted recent developments as an indication that "the Soviet Union has become increasingly sensitive to world public opinion on the issue of its treatment of its Jewish citizens."

The Jewish organizations called for a continued mobilization of protest meetings throughout the country to make known the views of the American people.

Jewish citizens in the Soviet Union are regarded both as a nationality and a religious group. As a nationality, they are treated as second class citizens as compared to other Soviet nationality groups.

Until 1961 Jews did not have any Yiddish publication. This year a bi-monthly Sovietish Heimland was printed with a circulation of 25,000 and distributed throughout the world. Jews also do not have their own language newspaper, books, theatre groups, and other cultural activities and are discriminated against in elevating themselves in various phases of Soviet professional, political and public life.

Israel Restrains Use Of Force

TEL AVIV — "The Israel Defense Forces is the only army in the entire Middle East that is not a political force; the only army that accepts absolutely the rule of the democratic, elected civilian authority," Prime Minister Eshkol declared, recently.

"The principle of using our might not to submit to the force of others, and in order to prevent force from being used against us — but not for more than this — was reflected even in the details of the recent warning actions against the Fatah in Jordan," the Prime Minister said.

"We were restrained in response to certain provocations along the Syrian border. But when the Syrians began to exploit their topographical advantage to shell our settlements and attack civilians, we sent our Air Force into action — not as retaliation but to hit the base from which the Syrian offensive came and prevent it from recurring."

The Prime Minister said that Israel's strength was increasing while the Arab countries were falling into ever greater disunity.

Developments from the breakdown of the Egyptian-Syrian United Arab Republic, to the difficulties in Algeria, and the bloodshed in Yemen, indicate ever-widening cracks in the Arab wall.

Mrs. Melvin D. Goldfine

Miss Marsha Paula Forman became the bride of Dr. Melvin David Goldfine on Tuesday, July 6, at the Chateau Garod in Brookline. Miss Forman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kalman Forman of Mattapan, Mass. Dr. Goldfine is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Goldfine of Woonsocket. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goldberg of Pawtucket. Rabbi Samuel I. Korff officiated at the 7 P.M. ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her empire gown of peau d'ange and imported French lace was fashioned with hand-beaded sleeves, and her veil fell from a beaded crown. She carried white orchids and stephanotis on a prayer book.

Miss Elaine Goldfine, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. She wore a gown in hot pink with a bow to match, and she carried a cascade of white and pink roses and stephanotis. Bridesmaids were Miss Linda Cohen and Miss Linda Kalish who wore matching empire gowns of pink and candy with light pink bows. They carried cascades of pink roses and white carnations.

Spencer Forman, brother of the bride, was best man. Ushers were Jeffrey Forman, brother of the bride, Irwin Fischer, Richard Cohen, Erich Hoffman, William Dubinsky, Harvey Goldberg, David Goldberg and Fredric Kamin.

The bride, a graduate of the Boston Dispensary of the New England Medical Center, was employed in the chemistry department of the Children's Hospital Medical Center. Dr. Goldfine received his A.B. degree from Brown University in 1961, and his degree of Doctor of Medical Dentistry from Tufts School of Medical Dentistry in 1965. He was a member of Alpha Omega fraternity.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in New Mexico where Dr. Goldfine will take up his duties as a Captain in the Air Force.

Anti-Semitism Is Not Serious In South Africa

JOHANNESBURG — Since the National Party came into power it has honored the pledge given by the late Dr. D. F. Malan (Prime Minister of its first cabinet in 1948) to remove the "Jewish issue" from the political life of the country, says a report of the South African Jewish Board issued here last week.

"Nonetheless," the report adds, "in the period since the last Congress — nearly three years ago — there were a number of occasions when Jews became 'news'; when public discussion and controversy relating to the Jewish community suddenly flared up, revealing dormant or suppressed tensions that came into the open."

"This is not altogether surprising. South Africa has been exposed to unprecedented pressures, both from without and within. This has been a period of heightened political partisanship and often of sharp controversy within the Republic.

It also draws attention to "the mischievous anti-Semitic propaganda originating overseas, under the guise of combating communism." Such propaganda material seems to be on the increase, the report noted.

The report recorded a number of occasions when the Board of Deputies took steps to correct false reports overseas which alleged that there was a serious anti-Semitic menace in South Africa.

It noted that extreme right-wing groups in the Republic turn for inspiration to similar groups abroad, especially in the United States, which often flirts with anti-Semitism.

The report recorded the manifold work which the South African Jewish Board of Deputies does in various directions toward strengthening Jewish life, running cultural programs, conducting work for Jewish University students and non-student youth, helping to organize chaplaincy services for Jewish recruits in training in the army, etc.

A Worthy Successor

President Johnson achieved complete surprise with his announcement this week that Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg will succeed the late Adlai E. Stevenson as United States Ambassador to the United Nations. Once the initial shock of astonishment wore off, many an American must have wondered to himself why he hadn't thought of Justice Goldberg too — because the more one ponders this selection the more logical, even the more brilliant, it appears.

In his extraordinarily warm statement making the announcement, President Johnson emphasized that Arthur Goldberg "is an old and trusted friend and counselor" who will have "direct and ready access" to the President and the Secretary of State. These words underline both President Johnson's high estimate of the importance of the United Nations and his strong personal affinity with his new envoy.

The American representative at the U.N. must be a skilled and flexible negotiator, an effective advocate and an able politician in the best sense of the word. Justice Goldberg is all of these. His tact, persuasiveness and ingenuity, his ability to arrange a compromise without sacrifice of principle, his activism, enthusiasm and pragmatism — these are qualities as applicable at the United Nations as in the world of labor, the law and government.

There is apt symbolism in the fact that Justice Goldberg, who rose from the slums of Chicago to his present national and international eminence, now goes to the United Nations as spokesman for all Americans. He personifies the continuing opportunity afforded by American democracy to its ablest sons. While it is true that he has had little experience in the complexities of international diplomacy — and his lack of background in this field is the very reason his name never appeared in speculation over Mr. Stevenson's probable successor — it is also true that he is not bound by pre-judgments or inhibited by previous positions on most major questions of foreign policy. Of course he will be carrying out the President's orders but his voice will be heard and respected at the White House as well as at the United Nations. He is a worthy successor to Adlai Stevenson.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

FOUR CHOICES FOR '66
 Which of these four fundamental policies would you choose for 1966? (1) Another multi-billion dollar personal income tax cut on top of the income tax and excise tax cuts already voted in 1964-65? (2) A multi-billion dollar increase in federal government spending to improve and expand our health, welfare, education, conservation programs? (3) A combination of tax cuts and higher government spending, with each on a more moderate scale, of course? Or (4) neither additional tax cuts nor additional government spending but, instead, use of rising tax revenues to try to balance the federal budget and reduce the debt for the first time in years?

This choice must be made by the White House in the remaining months of 1965 and by Congress in the first months of 1966.

This choice will be made on the basis that, at the pace jobs, paychecks and profits are rising today, the Treasury will collect $6 to $7 billion more in taxes next year than this and this "extra" money will be available for: (1) tax cuts, (2) more government spending, (3) a combination of both, (4) budget balancing and debt reduction.

What's the logic of each choice? At this stage, what are the probabilities? The answers rest on one of two assumptions about our economy in early 1966.

If we assume that our economy will be in an all-out boom in the first part of 1966, the logic would be on number 4 — using rising tax revenues to balance the budget. This is because in an all-out boom, industry would be operating at a feasible maximum and joblessness would be at a feasible minimum. Adding to demands for goods by tax cuts or higher government spending under these circumstances would not accelerate production; industry already would be producing as much as it could. Adding to demands for goods under these circumstances would simply put more upward pressure on prices and intensify dangerous inflationary forces.

So if the economy is straining at capacity in early 1966, logic would dictate a serious stab at balancing the budget. In this sort of boom, "liberal" as well as "conservative" economists would strongly approve of the decision.

But if we assume that our economy's rate of growth will be slackening in the first part of 1966, the logic would be on number 1 or 2 or 3, and budget balancing would be the worst possible policy to adopt.

A slackening rate of growth would be boosting our jobless rate, narrowing profit margins and cutting into the rise in the Treasury's tax revenues.

Additional income tax cuts would help expand consumer demands for goods and thus help sustain business production and investment. This would be particularly so if the tax cuts were concentrated among lower-middle income families who would spend almost every extra penny in their pay envelopes.

Additional federal government spending would help us meet obviously desirable public needs — expanded health care, vastly im-

Ten Weird Ways In Which To Kill Summer Boredom

The idea that the summer is a time filled with enjoyment, a time when endless questions about the world and its people can be answered, is, for kids, a lot of humok.

This column is strictly for kids, so if you're over 12, flake off.

Okay, kids, these are the ten best answers to your constant question, "What's to do?"

1. SUPERJELLO: Take all your mother's packages of gelatin and put them in a big pot of water. Mix completely, until the powder is completely dissolved. Go in the bathroom and open the window. Throw all your mother's ice in the tub and fill the tub with cold water. Then throw the jello in. Won't mom be surprised with the mold YOU make!

2. REDEVELOPMENT: Take all your mother's sugar and toothpicks and head for the anthill nearest to your worst enemy's house. Then get a shovel and dig up the whole hill. Throw the sugar in the hole, then put back the sand. Won't everybody be surprised at the big housing project the ants will make with their new food!

3. SKYFISHING: Get your father to buy you a great big balloon in Roger Williams Park. Make sure it's filled with helium. When you get home, tie the balloon to the end of your father's fishing line, sit on the porch, and let 'er go! The balloon will go real high, and your father will be proud of your interest in fishing.

4. DRIVE-A-KITE: Get your folks to take you to the drive-in. When you get there, get your kite from the trunk and start flying it in front of somebody else's car, so they can see how good you fly kites!

5. GREAT WALL: Next time you go to the beach, build a high mud wall all around where you sit, so the relatives will mind their own business. After all, you deserve your parents' attention, and why let relatives get it? Don't forget a deep moat.

6. BIG SURPRISE: Tell your mother you're going to let your hair grow real long, like the Beatles. When she finishes hollering, go to the barber and ask for a MOHAWK CUT. It's like a crew cut only better. If he won't do it, whip out your cap gun and shoot him.

7. HIDE AND: Hide your mother's favorite shoes. Then, when she finds out you hid them, hide under her bed. Put the shoes in the refrigerator, she'll never look there.

8. POPPY FRIENDS: Next time your older brother or sister is making out in the living room with his or her steady, sneak up behind them and pop a bag loudly. They'll be glad to know you care.

9. NEVER TALK: Next time your mother is on the phone and you want to talk to her, go out and ring the front doorbell. She won't know who it is, so she'll have to hang up to find out. Won't she be surprised!

10. DAMMITALL: Next time it rains, put on your bathing suit and go outside to a big puddle. Stay away from the street, where it is too dirty and cars get in the way. Take some mud and put it where the water comes from; then make a hole in the dam. Don't forget to put the sand you make the hole with in your pocket, so you can show your mother what you did. Boy, will she be happy.

And if you do all these things, please let me know how they make out. I am resting at a padded office at the Herald.

By the way, I'm running out of toothpicks and sugar. So, if you can spare some, send it to me. Always remember the saying by an old and stupid philosopher: "The toothpick, when accompanied by sugar, is lots stronger than any leaky old pen."

year of hard work by himself and many other energetic leaders and citizens of the Jewish community.

Its partial contents include the history of the Providence Jewish community, age and sex compositions, marriage patterns, education, synagogue and organizational memberships, intermarriage and religious training and practices.

The study is rated as one of the best in the United States and many other communities are using the book as an outline for their own studies.

National Jewish organizations such as the National Jewish Foundation for Jewish Culture praised the book and stated that "the study provides a wealth of insight on the Jewish Community in the United States."

Dr. Goldstein was informed just last week that the foundation has approved support for a study of changing generational patterns in the Jewish population of Greater Providence.

This study will be based on a re-analysis of the material collected in the "Population Study", focusing on generational differences in the social, demographic and Jewish characteristics of the population.

Prof. Goldstein is a graduate of the University of Connecticut where he received his Bachelor's and Master's degrees and then attended the University of Pennsylvania where he received his Doctor's.

He was named Assistant Professor at Brown in 1955, Associate Professor in 1957, Professor in 1960 and department head in 1963.

He has written many books and monographs including the Migration and Economic Development in Rhode Island, The First Two Years: Problems of Small Business Growth and Survival, Metropolitanization and Population Change in Rhode Island and The People of Rhode Island.

Brendan Behan's widow, Beatrice, and their beautiful blonde 14 month old daughter. Because she no longer needs a two-story home, Mrs. Behan is converting the upstairs section into an apartment to be rented. . . Behan, she said, left no manuscripts. In her presence he burned . . . except for four pages, which she salvaged. . . the script of his "Borstal Boy." Behan told her: "I want no strangers pokin' around my things when I'm gone."

The obits which compared Porfirio Rubirosa to Aly Khan were inaccurate: Aly Khan worked. He had two jobs, breeding horses and representing Pakistan at the UN. Rubirosa was a — well, he never worked, and he searched for rich women to marry. Most of them, in fact, were pushovers. They were lonely women, and Rubirosa was always available.

Because availability at all hours is of prime importance in a lover-boy career, Rubirosa accepted that so-called diplomatic post from his father-in-law. He trained for his lover-boy career with the same application as others do for law and medicine. He learned to dance, ride and master the small talk. And he always, of course, kept in condition.

Barbara Hutton once told me about their brief marriage: "Oh, he sang and danced and played music so well." After the divorce Miss Hutton asked Doris Duke, who'd recommended him to her: "Then why didn't you stay married to him?" . . . "Oh, Rubi?" Miss Duke had shrugged, and used the same term used by Flor Trujillo, in Look: "He's just a mixed-up boy."

After Aly Khan and Rubirosa were named ambassadors, a rumor spread in Brazil that Baby Pignatari would be named ambassador too. Lenore Lemmon was heard to ask, in the Little Club, "Do the Big Lovers now have a nation of proved educational systems, reclamation of our polluted water and air resources. This spending also would fan out to expand consumer demands and to prop business production and sales.

What are the probabilities? One probability is that in the first half of 1966 our economy's rate of growth will be slackening. A second probability is that, as a result, our highest policymakers will be seeking the soundest ways to stimulate the economy, not to curb inflationary forces.

A third probability, therefore, is that the White House will be proposing and Congress will be approving number 3 — a combination of more personal tax cuts and higher government spending.

their own?"
 Zsa Zsa Gabor, who was punched by him in a publicized black-eye incident, sat with him fearlessly years later, and said: "I'm safe. Rubi doesn't love me any more. A man must love a woman to hit her." When they were in the Stork Club one night, Zsa Zsa described Rubirosa as the Robin Hood of his set. "That is," said my wife, "he takes from the brunettes and gives to the blondes."

Shelley Winters once introduced Rubirosa to her mother, who whispered to the star: "Shelley, what's so special about him?" Rubirosa heard her and supplied the answer: "Madam, the day that I don't make love, I consider wasted."

"By you that's so special?" Mrs. Winters replied. "Why don't you work?"

Mayor Wagner will be offered the late Eric Johnston's job as head of the motion picture industry. . . Jean Paul Sartre's play, "Aitoona," which was filmed last year with Sophia Loren, will be revived on the Paris stage with Claude Dauphin. . . Mrs. LBJ finished the taping of her Washington special for ABC-TV, then entertained the crew with a surprise show; she showed them home movies she had taken over 20 years ago.

Raoul Levy's film, "Marco Polo," was made with the help of Marshal Tito — a $2,000,000 investment and the use of the Yugoslav army. They're suing each other now. . . The film was previewed in Dublin July Fourth. To make sure that Tito would not attach it, Levy handed each friend traveling to and from Ireland with him a different reel on "Marco Polo."

Woody Allen, who wrote and costarred in his first movie, "What's New, Pussycat?" will also direct his new movie, "Take the Money and Run" . . . Producer Stuart Miller and director Arthur Penn will do the film version of Thomas Berger's prize novel, "Little Big Man" . . . Eugene Ionesco's new play, "Hunger and Thirst," has been accepted by the Comedie Francaise. It will mark his departure from the ranks of the avant garde.

Better Golf The E. Z. Way

By Eddie Zaretsky

On the practice tee you are taught the fundamentals and mechanics of the golf swing, but there are other aspects of golf that are difficult to grasp except under actual playing conditions.

Playing lessons from your Pro can serve many purposes. For the new golfer, the correct etiquette can be learned. This is a much neglected part of the beginner's education. While on the course, your Pro can tell you where to stand while others are taking a shot, how to walk in and out of sand traps and smooth footprints, how to mark your ball on the putting green. You will likely learn many things which if not done properly will mark you as a novice.

A playing lesson will teach you more about strategy, how to examine a hole from the tee, and visualize how to play it so as to avoid hazards and other risks, and thus improve your score.

You can learn when and when not to gamble, how to judge distance, select the right club, how to read the contour of the green, and the effect it will have on the ball. Playing a round with a professional can take many a stroke off your score by just observing and absorbing.

Recently I gave a playing lesson to a very conscientious pupil who had developed a fine golf swing through the years. He had been hitting the ball well, but he couldn't improve his score. After playing a few holes with him, it was obvious why he scored badly. He started playing too hard too early. He didn't pace himself. He had no plan of attack, no consideration of where the trouble was on any hole. He gambled when the odds were against him. In sort, he hit the ball without purpose. Once this was pointed out to him, and he started organizing his game, there was rapid improvement.

You can learn from experience, but it might take too long. It is quicker and wiser to learn from your Pro's experience.

Sabbath, Autopsy Bills Face Tough Sledding In Knesset

TEL AVIV — The National Religious Party recently anticipated reaping a major achievement for its participation in the Government, as two major religious-motivated bills were being prepared for the Knesset.

The first calls for the fixing of the Sabbath as an official day of rest and the second is an amendment limiting the right to make autopsies.

The draft Sabbath Law, which was adopted in principle by the Cabinet received most interest. Included in the original coalition agreement of November 1961, on which the present Eshkol Government is based, the matter was given low priority both by Mr. Eshkol and his predecessor.

The loosely worded bill leaves many questions unanswered.

What will be the relationship between the national law and long-standing local ordinances?

Will Friday night theater performances be prohibited?

Will gas stations be permitted to remain open on the Sabbath?

The autopsy measure which was tabled in the Knesset faces similar tough sledding. The measure is designed to prohibit a physician from making a post-mortem if the relatives of the deceased object. It will also prohibit an autopsy before the nearest relative has been allowed five hours after notice of death to enter an objection.

It was strongly attacked by the Israel Medical Association (IMA) as a threat to the nation. IMA declared it would raise the mortality rate and hamper the profession. The Association said it would go so far as to call a strike to prevent passage of the bill.

In Hollywood . . .

By Barney Glazer

Hollywood, Calif. (TCNS) — Are Hollywood Negroes anti-Semitic, did Theodore Bikel strike Stuart Whitman, are Martin Rackin and Al Manuel egomaniacs and will Samuel Goldwyn abandon his golden legend with his entry into television?

THE GOSSIP: "Negro workers in Hollywood are violently anti-Semitic, displaying open resentment against Jews who, they claim, dominate the film industry."

THE TRUTH: Wrong on both counts. The gossip stemmed from a recent film Guild meeting where one Negro writer voiced anti-Semitic allegations. A Jewish writer was restrained from hitting him. Other Negroes apologized, making it clear that the offender did not speak for them. Although many Jews hold prominent positions in the industry, they still constitute a minority by total count.

THE GOSSIP: "Theodore Bikel bloodied Stuart Whitman's lips with a punch in the mouth at a posh party because Stu fooled around with Bikel's guitar and broke it."

THE TRUTH: At the Beverly Hills home of his parents, Cece and Joseph Whitman, Stuart said, "Bikel and I spent two months in Africa and one month in London making Joseph Levine's movie, 'The Sands of the Kalahari' for Paramount. The closest to this ridiculous untruth occurred in a scene where I push Bikel around and then send him out into the desert. Nobody was hit, no blood was shed and no guitar was involved. We never attended a party where Bikel struck me. We are the best of friends and never had a disagreement. He is an intellect and a great person. I love this man."

THE GOSSIP: "Martin Rackin and his partner Al Manuel are opportunists, egomaniacs and fast-buck operators who dare tamper with greatness by remaking 'Stagecoach.'"

THE TRUTH: Rackin and Manuel reason that if their respective Yiddish mommas had a delicious recipe 30 years ago for kneidlech it should be just as tasty today. They call "Stagecoach" a great recipe 30 years old and intend to let today's filmgoers taste it again, this time in wide screen and color with an updated script, released through 20th-Fox. Using Ann-Margret, Red Buttons, Michael Connors, Alex Cord, Bing Crosby, Robert Cummings and Van Heflin, they naturally won't play it as naively as the original.

Said the producers, "Today, things are quite different. With sex way out in the open, John Wayne's apple-cheeked portrayal in the original, for example, would draw audience snickers by today's standards. Many great films have been remade three and four times. When Billy Wilder remade 'Ben Hur' everyone laughed but Billy topped the original in every department. We hope to be around 30 years from now and do it again. At that time, undoubtedly, we'll do it differently again."

THE GOSSIP: "Samuel Goldwyn's decision to finally dive into the television production pool won't do a thing to correct the medium's homogeneous pattern and resultant dullness. If others are making westerns or spy shows, undoubtedly Goldwyn will do the same and destroy the golden legend he created with motion pictures."

THE TRUTH: Goldwyn made it clear with his announced entry in television production that he won't follow the pack. He said, "I must first make certain which forms catch the public's fancy, not the producer's. I don't follow trends." What the man is trying to say is that he makes them.

Always the advocate of the family-type picture with the popular ingredients of romance and conflict, Goldwyn probably will apply it to television, disproving the inexactness of other television producers who have avoided the formula in favor of brash comedies and shows saturated with murder and mayhem.

250,000 Illiterates Danger To Israel

JERUSALEM — At the ideological conference held under the auspices of the Ben-Gurionite minority, the Hebrew writer, Yizhar Smlanski, stated that Israel has a quarter-million illiterates. The writer emphasized that "this is one of the greatest dangers threatening the existence of the State, whose urgent task is the launching of a systematic educational program among these masses."

Additional Vandalism, Culprits Still Free

BAMBERG, West Germany — The wave of anti-Semitic incidents in this area is continuing with none of the culprits apprehended. Sunday a pastor bearing the slogan "Death to the Jews" was discovered on an overpass of the Frankfurt-Nuremberg autobahn, about 25 miles south of here.

In Krefeld, trade unionists from the nearby industrial city of Duisberg heckled a rally of the ultra right-wing National Democratic party, shouting "nazis get out."

In Marburg, meanwhile, 56 girls, students at the Friedrich Ebert High School, completed today a three day self-imposed task of cleaning up the Jewish cemetery there. The cemetery has not been desecrated but the student action has been undertaken as a symbol of solidarity with Jews.

TWIN DAUGHTERS, Ina and Janice Swartz, of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Swartz of Pawtucket, are shown on one of Bermuda's beaches during the family's two-week vacation. Ben-Gurion Faces Fight In Move To Unseat Levi Eshkol

TEL AVIV — The bitter election fight between Premier Levi Eshkol and David Ben-Gurion, who were close political associates until just recently, is rising in tempo and the showdown is set for the Fall — when the country's election will be held.

The internal problems of the nation's largest party is also threatening the stability of the country.

The contest became inevitable after Ben Gurion announced his unequivocal decision to enter an independent list of candidates for the Knesset (Parliament) elections in November.

His action has split the Mapai Party, whose firmly established leadership since 1948 has been regarded by many as a reassuring guarantee of Israel's stability.

Israel's election system is proportional representation. Voters cast ballots for entire lists of candidates, not for individuals, and the 120 seats in Parliament are then divided among the parties in proportion to the number of votes each polls.

Hence every Mapai supporter will have to make a clear choice. There is no possibility of straddling.

In the last Knesset elections in 1961, the Mapai list obtained 42 of the 120 seats in the Knesset. To assure a parliamentary majority that would enable him to govern, Ben Gurion had to form a coalition that included the National Religious Front (12 seats), Ahdut Haavodah (eight) and Agudat Israel Workers (two). Four Arab members associated with Mapai also supported the coalition, so the Government had a majority of eight.

In 1963, Ben Gurion resigned and designated Eshkol as his successor. Eshkol retained the same coalition.

Never in Israel's history has any single party obtained enough seats to govern without a coalition.

Under those circumstances, Ben Gurion's prospects of wresting power from Eshkol in November are dim. Even if his list should get more votes than Eshkol's and should emerge as the largest party in the Knesset, he would not get the premiership.

To do so, he would have to find other parties willing to join a coalition government under his leadership.

The smaller parties naturally prefer association with the easy-going and conciliatory Eshkol who listens to their views and is often influenced by them. Their experience in governments headed by the tough-minded and strong-willed Ben Gurion has not been so pleasant.

In fact, when the late President Itzhak Ben Zvi gave Ben Gurion the mandate to form a Government after the 1961 elections, Ben Gurion failed to find coalition partners.

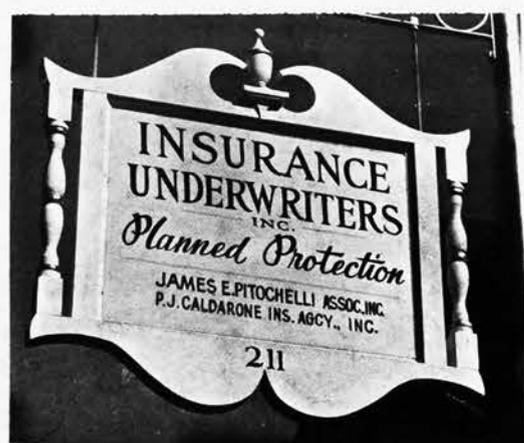

The President then gave the mandate to Eshkol who succeeded in coaxing the National Religious Front and Ahdut Haavodah into joining a coalition Government with Ben Gurion as premier.

Ben Gurion is even less popular with the smaller parties today than he was in 1961. Of the two principle issues that caused the rift with Eshkol, the smaller parties are solidly on the side of the Premier.

They all oppose Ben Gurion's persistent demand for a judicial re-examination of the Cabinet decision of 1960 clearing ex-Defense Minister Pinhas Lavon of having instructed a GHQ colonel to launch an operation that turned out to be disastrous.

The Knesset has endorsed the Cabinet's 1960 findings and there has been strong resentment against Ben Gurion's efforts to tamper with that decision.

Secondly, Ben Gurion's demand for the replacement of the proportional representation system by one of direct constituency elections like in the United States is naturally anathema to the smaller parties.

African Services To Be Expanded

JOHANNESBURG — The South African Jewish Board of Deputies closed its biennial congress here recently with a decision to expand its services, particularly in the fields of public relations aimed at promoting good will between Jews and non-Jews in this country and in expanding its Jewish culture and youth programs. Among the resolutions adopted was one reaffirming the loyalty of the Jewish community to South Africa and expressing the hope that the Republic would continue its progress to benefit all its people. The board also reaffirmed the community's cultural and religious ties with Israel and pledged all possible assistance to the humanitarian work of immigrant settlement in Israel.

The board called upon the South African Government to ban the entry of nazis into this country in the same way that communists are barred. Dr. Teddy Schneider, outgoing chairman of the board, was elected president, succeeding Naomi Phillips who was named national chairman of the United Communal Fund.

A bitter controversy between Orthodox and Reform factions which had plagued the South African Jewish community for years was formally ended with the announcement of an agreement between Rabbi Bernard Casper, Orthodox Chief Rabbi, and Reform Chief Rabbi Arthur S. Super, to cooperate in secular activities.

While recognizing the irreconcilable theological differences between the two groups, the agreement provides for cooperation in secular affairs and in the ministrations by chaplains to Jewish servicemen.

Poles Criticize German Justice

LUDWIGSBURG — Erwin Schuele, chief prosecutor of West Germany's Central Office for the Prosecution of Nazi War Criminals said here last week that he failed to understand charges made by the Polish News Agency in Warsaw, in which West Germany was accused of not being "intensive enough" in pursuing judicial proceedings against nazi war criminals.

The Polish article alleged that, when Dr. Schuele and a group of other officials visited Poland recently, to examine archives in connection with the Frankfurt trial of former Auschwitz death camp personnel, they were given masses of new materials, but have not informed Poland how those data would be used.

Israel's Newest Enemy - Communist China

UNITED NATIONS — According to latest reports here, Israel has a new, but powerful enemy — Red China.

The Peking regime, long the outstanding pariah here, has cynically undertaken a drive to ingratiate itself with the Arab nations by furnishing vigorous backing to their anti-Israeli campaign.

Those here who know of Israel's skills in diplomacy, its vast progress in obtaining the friendship of Latin American, African and Asian nations, do not expect Red Chinese troops to march against Israel. But they do see overt signs of Peking's wily hand in the Arab stand against Israel.

As Middle East dispatches are read here, reporting sabotage attacks inside Israel by the recently formed El Fatah movement, Red China's tie with El Fatah is recalled. About a dozen members of El Fatah have recently received training, encouragement, orientation — and perhaps funds — in Peking.

El Fatah is the terrorist arm of the so-called "Palestine Liberation Army." Its members, operating from bases in Jordan and Syria, with the connivance of the governments in Amman and Damascus, strike in the dark against civilians inside Israel.

In Damascus, the former Grand Mufti, who was a friend of Hitler during World War II, has lined up with El Fatah, and has become one of the chief Arabs linking the goal of "Palestine Liberation" with Peking's aim to influence the Arabs and to gain their friendship.

Red China's campaign against Israel, began only about a year ago, has now extended to most of Asia, much of Africa, and large sections of Latin America. In Latin America, where Arabs make use of native, neo-nazi and fascist movements to help spread anti-Semitic and anti-Israel propaganda, the Chinese tentacles have now been noticed.

Communist opposition to Israel, since 1952, is now an old story. Moscow has been following an old tradition, established in Czarist days, of trying to meddle in the Middle East as part of Russia's spearhead in that region.

The Chinese are even more cynical than the Kremlin, since Peking has had no direct interest in the Middle East. Peking just doesn't care whom it hurts, or how, as long as the expected results promise firmer friendships among the Arabs, among the African people and among the Latin American nations.

Peking's drive against Israel could rebound here against its years-long aim to gain UN membership. That drive had gained many allies here.

A number of negative developments have, however, also taken place. Peking's split with the Kremlin has obviously cooled off Moscow's interest in getting Red China into the UN. Peking's nuclear threat has not helped gain friends here. Now its drive against Israel is another reason for hesitation.

Dead Sea Scrolls Will Be Studied

NEW YORK — The fourth annual Study Tour of Israel, sponsored by the Inter-University Committee on Israel will include 48 university faculty members and Christian clergymen, it was announced by Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin of Baltimore, president of the Society.

"It is appropriate," said Mayor McKeldin, "that our two peoples, sharing as they do a common spiritual and democratic heritage, should meet in this people-to-people program."

Our study tour to Israel, "he emphasized, "is designed to probe in some depth the historic background and contemporary significance of Israel. The group will study subjects varying from the Dead Sea Scrolls to the modern kibbutzim, and from Israel's ancient cultural contribution to the world, to her present partnership with the new nations of Africa and Asia."

The group of distinguished leaders, coming from 13 states and the District of Columbia, represent the major religious bodies of the United States.

Infant Circumcision Held Valueless By Chicago MD

CHICAGO — A Maryland physician says that "there is no valid reason" for routine circumcision of male babies.

The practice has become such a customary matter of keeping up with the Joneses, says Dr. William Keith C. Morgan of Baltimore, "That it is no longer much of a status symbol."

"The reasons usually given for circumcision in infants have been examined and found wanting (and) 98 times out of 100 there is no valid indication given for this mutilation other than religion."

Writing in the current Journal of the American Medical Assn., Dr. Morgan, of the University of Maryland School of Medicine, says that even the religious ground is not exclusive.

"Male infant circumcision is practiced by all the Semitic races, Jew and Arab alike," he says.

"It would be a cause of surprise to those of Semitic origin to find out that the Australian aborigine has practiced circumcision as long, if not longer, and for the same basic reasons as his more civilized brethren," Dr. Morgan asserts.

As for reasons given for the operation, he says, fear of venereal disease susceptibility does not seem justified by the Middle East VD rate "which is second to none."

As to hygienic reasons in general, Dr. Morgan comments that "soap and water work wonders" and, although the ears collect dirt, "removal of the external ears does not find favor as a routine measure of hygiene."

The operation, he said, actually impedes the sexual union of the circumcised adult with his marriage partner through removal of a natural lubrication sheath.

Say Reform Movement Is Growing In Israel

LONDON — The World Union for Progressive Judaism, at the semi-annual meeting of its governing council, reported that there were now six Progressive congregations in Israel, that a new synagogue was in the process of formation and that the Reform youth movement there was growing.

Attending the parley were representatives from twelve countries. In the report on the growth of the Reform movement in Israel, the need was stressed for larger funds and for more rabbis.

In Britain, it was reported, the Reform movement has grown to 40 congregations, including Ireland. In France, three congregations were reported functioning. One of the developments was disclosure that the World Union had assigned a Reform rabbi to Mexico for the first time.

YOUR VALUES AT AGE 55 DON'T PAY OFF AFTER 65

The values of your working career and the values of your retirement years are two different kinds of apricots.

Few people at 65 can believe this. Which may be why so few of them make the best of their retirement.

A dramatic example of these values was revealed at one of the sunshine retirement communities. It was one of the smaller projects with several cottages scattered around the grounds and a 20-unit apartment house in the center. There was a community center in the apartment building, with hobbies, card tables, etc., and out front was a small swimming pool.

In charge of the grounds of this community is a man of 71 who would like to be called Mr. J. Mike Sawyer. He does the lighter jobs, such as tending the flowers and evergreens, watching over the pool, and keeping the community center in operation. He supervises the workmen who are brought in to do the major jobs.

Mr. Sawyer, a widower, has a rent-free apartment of two rooms adjoining the community center. He is paid a salary of $90 a month. He is the happiest man in the retirement community.

But six years ago, he retired as a vice president of a small corporation in the Midwest, had Social Security and a pension that came to $485 a month, and investments of better than $40,000.

Here is his story, as he told it: "My wife and I moved to a retirement community similar to this one soon after I retired. Two months later I decided I didn't like it. Every couple living there was trying to live an extension of the working career . . . trying to keep the same standards, same status and prestige, the same importance as when they worked. There was no profit in it, of course, because while such tactics could have brought a promotion and pay raise on a job they brought nothing now. Furthermore, the more the people pretended the more everybody else did, and after a while everybody was a bore to everybody . . ."

Mr. Sawyer discussed these matters with his wife. She apparently loved him dearly but she couldn't quite accept the idea of throwing away the status in life they had spent 40 years building. She wanted to live as the others were living.

When she died three years after Mr. Sawyer retired, he sought out another retirement community. But instead of moving in as a distinguished retired man with a distinguished past career, he sought — and got — a job as supervisor of the grounds.

"I'm sure that I'm a nut of sorts. Everybody who used to know me would say I've turned miser — which I haven't — or should go see a psychiatrist. And that's what's wrong with retirement — everybody feeling pressure to be the same omelet they were when they were working. Which they aren't . . ."

Mr. Sawyer has been a bit extreme. But he has sighted a truth that is the keystone of a wholesome retirement.

Feel Circle Theatre Is Professional

at the University of Utah, and she has choreographed two children's television shows, as well as teaching a program of dance for deaf children.

Why did she come to Rhode Island? She had had the opportunity to teach at another University, but she thought she would rather teach for just the one year. Her next year will be spent in Los Angeles as graduate assistant in Modern Dance at UCLA where she will also work toward her Master's degree in Modern Dance, choreographing, costuming and performing in an original composition for her Master's thesis.

Of the Circle Theatre, she says, "They are some of the most professional people in attitude, I think that I have worked with." She has enjoyed working in "The Threepenny Opera," even though there is only one dance in the musical.

Asked her plans for the more distant future, the beautiful, dark-haired Miss Goodman said that she never plans her life for more than one year in advance—sometimes, she added, "It is more like one week in advance only... I never know from one week to another what I will do."

In dancing, it is better, she feels, to be able to take advantage of the best opportunity as it appears. "As an artist it's the best way to be." However, whatever her future may bring, she insists that it will be in some phase of Modern Dance.

Her family has been magnificent, she says. Their attitude is the sort which stimulates her to follow her talent, rather than to bury it.

As an example of her mother's attitude, she cites the time her parents picked her up at the Tucson airport and she made some remark about the expense and trouble she was causing. Her mother replied, "If you weren't the way you are, who would there be for us to pick up at airports, or ship suitcases for..." They have visited her wherever she has stayed for any length of time, and although they make no fuss about it, she says, she always sees them someplace in the back of the theatre at her performances.

And her friend, Libby, whom she came to watch? Libby Coken Gerhardt, who plays the role of Molly, one of the girls in the Circle Theatre's production of "The Threepenny Opera," is the Mrs. Gerhardt who worked so hard on the choreography, lighting, costuming and several other things of the Temple Beth Israel presentation of "The Last Sabbath," one of the Temple's very beautiful, and very successful, offerings as part of their "Creative Arts in Judaism" program presented this past year.

At the present time, Mrs. Gerhardt, wife of Edmund Gerhardt, an interior architect and designer, is teaching Modern Dance at Irene Owen School of Dance, the only school teaching Modern Dance professionally in Rhode Island, she says.

She attended Adelphi College in New York where she majored in Modern Dance, and she has studied at Pembroke College and Rhode Island College. She has also performed with the Rhode Island College Modern Dance Group and the Looking Glass Theatre.

She agrees with Miss Goodman that the Circle Theatre is run on a professional basis. The Theatre, she says, is self-supporting and depends on its patrons who pay their way in, not on grants.

Perhaps, a note from Gordon Argo, the producer, on how he feels a legitimate theater enterprise should be run, will explain even more clearly what Miss Goodman and Mrs. Gerhardt meant.

"The Hummocks Circle Theatre is a 'profit-making organization.' Not that there is a great deal of money left in the till at the end of a season, what with ever-increasing production costs! Still we do manage to pay our own way and to grow a little stronger each year..."

"We feel that the legitimate theatre, however, can and must pay its own way. Government subsidies and large grants from various foundations can only rob us of our strength and vitality. For a moment we are in any way independent of our audience, we become a mere museum—a bit of history."

Hasidim Celebrate Freeing Of Rebe

NEW YORK — The liberation of the late Lubavitcher Rebe, Rabbi Joseph Isaac Schneersoh, from Soviet prison 38 years ago, was celebrated Monday by the Lubavitcher Hasidim here at their world headquarters in Brooklyn, with the incumbent Lubavitcher Rebe, Rabbi Menachem M. Schneersohn, delivering a public address.

The 12th day of the Jewish month of Tammuz, the liberation day of the Rebe, has become a memorable date on the calendar for the thousands of followers of the Lubavitcher movement throughout the world.

Arrested by the Soviet authorities for defying their warnings against teaching Jewish religion, the Rebe was imprisoned and sentenced to death. However, due to intervention from abroad, his death sentence was commuted.

He was freed from the notorious Spalermi prison in Leningrad and exiled to Kostroma, a small town in the Urals, from where he was later released on the 12th of Tammuz under foreign diplomatic pressure. He settled in the United States in 1940.
