'Older Years Can Be Best Of Your Life'

The Jewish Family and Children's Service has invited the public to attend the Arthur J. Levy Memorial Lecture on Tuesday, May 11, at 7:45 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center.

A memorial fund for annual lectures was established by friends of Mr. Levy, a noted Providence attorney, who was a founder and the first president of the Jewish Family and Children's Service.

Mrs. Eleanor F. Slater, chief of the division on aging of the state of Rhode Island, will speak on "The Older Years Can Be The Best of Your Life — in the United States and Israel." Mrs. Slater, who has recently returned from Israel, is a former RI state representative and RI state senator. Mrs. Slater introduced the community mental clinic act, which passed in the RI legislature in 1962, and introduced the fair housing act in 1968, the first open-housing act in the United States. She was appointed by Governor Frank Licht as administrator, Services to the Aging in the Department of Community Affairs in 1969.

Among her many volunteer interests have been the Gerontological Society, the United Way, the Corporation of Blue Cross-Blue Shield and her service as commissioner of the mayor's Senior Citizen Task Force in Providence.

Paul L. Segal, executive director of the Jewish Family and Children's Service, said this week, "Our services to the Jewish elderly are a vital part of our agency program. Our professional social workers staff the Day Care Program at the Home for the Aged and the Golden Agers meetings at the Jewish Community Center. We bring direct aid and counseling to scores of older persons who live alone. It is particularly appropriate that our agency is sponsoring this lecture by such an outstanding expert on aging as Mrs. Eleanor Slater."

Mrs. Norman M. Fain is chairman of the evening. Norman Orodener chairs the planning committee which includes Rabbi Leslie Y. Gutterman, Rabbi Richard Marker, Mrs. Harold A. Winsten, Alvin Pansey, Mrs. Max Alperin and Mrs. Karl Foss.

Search For Peace Holds Key To Jewish Solidarity

JERUSALEM: "The search for peace" was described by Premier Yitzhak Rabin as "the supreme priority" among the "five major challenges" which "together hold the key" to the "collective welfare" of Israel and world Jewry on the 28th anniversary of independence of the State of Israel.

The anniversary will be celebrated May 9.

In a message to fellow Israelis and Jews all over the world, Rabin elucidated on the meaning of Israel's Independence Day. He said, "it draws a line between past survival by chance and future existence by will, of being helplessly controlled by events and of controlling events by our own choice, means and purpose."

It is, Rabin's message said, "a celebration of the victory of the Jewish spirit over every suppressor and despot, past and present. It is a Jewish festival of freedom as lasting and as indestructible as the values, the faith and the heritage which inspired it."

As the second "major challenge" after the search for peace, Rabin listed "the strengthening of our defensive capacity" because "so long as the basic attitude of our neighbors remains one of hostility, we have no choice but to continue to invest heavily in our self-defense."

The third challenge, Rabin said, was "the further consolidation of our economic infrastructure.

"An essential component of Israel's strength is its economic development which must continue to expand. This requires of us to work even harder, export more and consume less. It requires of the free Jewish world to invest in Israel in an unprecedented fashion and share, thereby, in its upbuilding."

Rabin listed as the fourth challenge "the closing of the social gap" in Israel.

He noted that after 28 years of independence, "we are still engaged in the great human effort to give all our citizens equality of opportunity through better education, better skills, better housing and a better quality of life. Here too," his message said, "Israel continues to look to the generosity of the free Jewish world to give of its self in helping to create with us the instruments to meet the human needs of our society."

The premier said that the fifth challenge was to further strengthen the ties that bind the Jewish people.

"Herein lies the real strength of Israel and of our people everywhere," he said. "Our future, like our past, is one. It must be forged ever stronger and ever deeper through a new priority for Jewish education.

"It has to express itself through a new commitment to Aliya. And it must be reflected in closer ties of intimacy through volunteer efforts in Israel, visits to Israel in unprecedented numbers, the sharing of material means, public solidarity and an ever meaningful dialogue of thinking."

Rabin said that these Jewish priorities "relate to the welfare of all of us and not least to our brethren in countries where freedom is denied them — the remnants of communities in Arab countries where they are held hostages and the great Jewish community of the Soviet Union."

The Premier's message also paid tribute to Israel's "sons and daughters who sacrificed all so that we might celebrate this day — those who fell in the struggle for our freedom and in the subsequent battles to protect it. Their legacy is precious, and it imposes upon us the common obligation to build a better, more beautiful and a stronger Israel."

Problems Facing Prepaid Legal Plans

From zero a mere couple of years ago, prepaid legal insurance plans — which bring inexpensive legal service to members of specific groups — have climbed into the thousands, already cover an estimated 500,000 individuals and are slated to benefit millions more before 1976 is out. Under your eyes, one of the most profound, meaningful reforms of our system of jurisprudence is taking place.

In some plans, as outlined before, participants pay the costs; in others, employers provide the new fringe benefit as part of a package; in still others, costs are shared.

But as might be expected in any breakthrough of this magnitude, problems exist which must be resolved.

(1) Cost control. It is too early to determine whether the very low rates set by the various plans are adequate to cover costs. Vital facts are unavailable because of the plans' newness.

(2) The Internal Revenue Service has not yet ruled on the request of several prepaid groups for clarification of the plans' tax status — whether they are to get the tax deductible status of health and hospital insurance programs. Before Congress is a bill to exempt legal services under union plans, and says Phillip J. Murphy, Santa Barbara-based attorney who is staff director of the American Bar Assn.'s special committee on prepaid legal services:

"If Congress really wants to help the middle class, this is one way to do it."

The almost universal worry is that an adverse IRS ruling could torpedo legislation before millions of potential beneficiaries can take advantage of the benefits. The fear is that an individual would have to pay taxes on money paid into the plan and on benefits realized. The damage could be devastating.

(3) Possible violation of the anti-trust laws because of the fixed fees paid to attorneys under many plans.

(4) The opposition of lawyers who see this bold venture as a threat to their livelihood. While the ABA and the National Bar Assn. (representing black lawyers) basically approve the programs, there is concern that the "closed panel" concept might be structured so tight as to limit access to attorneys. Smaller law firms are particularly apprehensive; so are many black lawyers.

Closed panels, with limited lawyer selection, do help the programs overcome initial start-up costs by permitting easy surveillance of legal fees. But local bar associations have begun to endorse the more competitive open panel programs, under which prepaid plan members select their own lawyer who then bills the insurance plan.

The open panel parallels the popular concept of prepaid health insurance, familiar in most American homes. You, the subscriber, either through a group plan or individually, would pay a yearly premium. When you require a lawyer's services, you would be free to select any attorney you wish. Under a schedule of benefits, reimbursement would be made upon the presentation of bills.

Several of these programs are in the blueprint stage. Under a program sponsored by the New York County Lawyers Assn., for instance, New York City residents, within certain income-net worth limits, can draw down $1,000 of services for $100 yearly. A spouse is covered for an additional $25; children can obtain benefits for $10 each.

Also under legislation being considered by nearly two dozen states, insurance companies would be permitted to sell prepaid legal policies — great, good news for the millions who do not have access to a union group plan. This legislation would allow coverage of individuals as well as groups.

To illustrate, Equitable Life Assurance Society has a group plan under which you, an individual participant, would pay $10 a month for a policy offering a schedule of compensation for such services as drawing a will or litigation in which the policyholder is a plaintiff. If you are a defendant, Equitable would cover 80 per cent of legal costs up to $1,500 for the individual and up to $2,500 for the family of the insured. Prudential and Insurance company of North America are developing programs, too.

Seen Through Her Own Eyes, The Life Of Golda Meir

BY JOHN K. HUTCHENS

She was a feisty little girl and, some would say, became a feisty woman, which was all to the good, considering the stormy years that lay ahead.

Her first memory goes back to the night in early childhood in Kiev when she heard the hoofbeats of Cossacks' horses, with their threat of a pogrom. At 70, she was Prime Minister of Israel, in whose founding she had played an historic role.

Now Golda Meir is an elder stateswoman looking back across 50 years of public service in "My Life," a chronicle wonderfully rich in candor, warmth and invaluable portraiture of her contemporaries. It is a document that will raise hackles as well as cheers — which is not surprising, considering the fighter she has always been.

As a matter of fact, much that is important about Golda Meir began well before that half-century of devotion to Zionism and the creation of a new state.

From a Russian girlhood marked by cold, hunger and fear, she was suddenly and happily transported to America and what seemed to her the marvelous city of Milwaukee: ice cream, new clothes, seven-story skyscrapers and, most of all, the schools she came to love and the friends she acquired there, some of whom today are her neighbors in Israel.

At that time, Golda was already both rebel and pioneer. She ran away from her parents and went to live with a sister in Denver. Here her introduction to her future took place.

To the home of that sister, who was an even more stubborn rebel than Golda, came Zionist-Socialists, anarchists and notable some Palestinian visitors, among them David Ben-Gurion. Thanks to long nights of talk and debate, Zionism quickly captured Golda's mind and dreams.

She cherished America and Take a map of Russia and look up the city of Vilno. From there mark with your pencil a line going to the city of Kaunas, or as Jews called it Kovno, in what was once Lithuania. From there draw a line to the city of Grodno, also a famous city in that region. Inside this triangle is the place of origin of the disease called Tay-Sachs.

Why is the disease confined to people living in that part of Eastern Europe? No one knows. Why are so many Jews afflicted with this disease so as to call it a Jewish disease? That is not known either.

At the time when the disease was studied it was traced back to that region, and carriers of the disease were Jews. It is quite conceivable that the non-Jewish population is equally afflicted with the disease. Since Jews moved around over the globe, they carried the would return to it often — it gave her "an understanding of the meaning of freedom, an awareness of the opportunities offered to the individual in a true democracy." But she knew as early as 1921 where her real home was to be.

She arrived at Tel Aviv with her sister and with her husband, Morris, a kindly, music-loving man whom she had met in Denver. Tel Aviv was something less than utopia. Heat, bedbugs, meat tasting of soap. No matter. Golda and her husband pushed on to the kibbutz at Merhaviah, which did not welcome them with enthusiasm.

These Americans, the early settlers said, could not be rugged enough to endure the kibbutz life of intense physical labor and scarcely edible food. The kibbutzniks underestimated Golda, who took over the kitchen, substituted nutritious if bourgeois hot American oatmeal for herring at breakfast, entered enthusiastically into the communal world of sharing and lively dialogue, and presently felt herself "absolutely fulfilled." The dream was coming true.

Had it not been for her husband's ill health, which necessitated their move to Jerusalem, she might have stayed indefinitely at Merhaviah, and a major figure in Israel's history might have remained offstage.

Instead, there were four dreary years of worry and something close to poverty in Jerusalem before she came to another turn in the road: She joined the Histadrut, the General Federation of Jewish Labor, which was to shape her intellectual, political and social career. When she became secretary of its women's labor committee, her life suddenly took on an all but frantic pace as she assumed a more and more active role in the society that was moving toward independent statehood. She was in the company of the men who would create that state.

disease with them. And so, Dr. Warren Tay, in London, and Dr. Bernard Sachs, in New York, came in contact with immigrants from that region, mostly Jews, studied it, identified it and independently described it.

The disease therefore is called Tay-Sachs disease. It is also known as the Jewish disease.

The disease is not very common, but when it strikes a family, it is awesome and devastating to the life of the people affected. It concerns the birth of a baby, a Tay-Sachs baby. The parents are perfectly normal. The baby itself is normal at the beginning. After six months, however, the baby loses its eyesight. It cannot walk. It can hardly turn over. The nervous system deteriorates. The brain does not function. In the fourth or fifth year, the child dies. There is no cure for the disease. There is only the agony and the pain for the parents watching their baby dying limp and helpless.

Fortunately, there are ways to avoid the agony. By means of a simple blood test the doctor can determine the carrier of the disease. Both parents must be carriers for Tay-Sachs offspring to be brought into the world. However, if a pregnancy does occur, a sample of some amniotic fluid from the uterus of the mother determines whether the fetus is to be a Tay-Sachs baby.

The tests, both of the blood of the carriers and the fluid from a pregnant woman, are simple, but they involve laboratory techniques that are quite complicated and require the skill of specialists.

The disease is caused by the absence of an enzyme in the blood and the fluid, called Hex A. The enzyme when present dissolves, or breaks down the fatty substances in the brain. The brain and the nervous system develop normally. If, however, the level of the enzyme is below 50% of the normal, the brain will not develop and the fatty substances will accumulate and the baby will be born with the disease. Pregnancy must be prevented or terminated in the early stages.

It must be said, however, that the chance for a Tay-Sachs baby to be born is quite remote. But that must not prevent any young people of child-bearing age from taking the test.

If both parents are of Ashkenazic origin, that is their parents or grandparents came from Eastern Europe, they should take the Tay-Sachs test.

If one of the parents is a carrier of the disease, although he or she is normal in every respect, the test should be taken, for the sake of the children already born. One of them may be a carrier and pass on the gene to their children.

If both parents are of child-bearing age and they are found to be carriers they should be under constant care of their physicians. And when all these "ifs" are checked out, isn't it worth it to make sure of your status?

So for the peace of your mind, it is good to mark the date of testing in Providence: May 23 at 9 o'clock in the morning at the Miriam Hospital. The screening is under the auspices of the Jewish Family & Children's Service and anyone interested may call the agency for further details.

The question is usually asked: why didn't we hear of Tay-Sachs disease before? Why this sudden interest in the disease?

The disease was identified about 90 years ago, but the prevention of the birth of Tay-Sachs babies was not known until recently. The discovery that the disease is caused by the absence or deficiency of Hex A enzyme in Tay-Sachs babies and their inability to break down the fatty materials in the brain gave medical science a simple means of detection and prevention of such babies.

The process of detection is relatively new, and only through a concerted effort of various agencies can the word be spread around. The tests are simple and inexpensive, and the peace of mind it brings to the child-bearing parents is great.

During the mass detection days do take your time to find out whether you are a carrier of Tay-Sachs or not. Even if you do not expect any more children, and even if all your children are normal, all who are of Eastern European ancestry cannot afford to pass up the opportunity of screening for Tay-Sachs.

Egypt Assails Israel in UN Middle East Session

NEW YORK: Another debate on the situation in the occupied Arab territories took place in the Security Council when Egypt accused Israel of "barbaric measures" against Palestinians.

There was some uncertainty as to where the Palestinian should sit at the session of the 15-nation council. Representatives of Israel and the Palestinian Liberation Organization were present.

The chief delegate of Israel faced the permanent observer of the PLO for the first time in the Council chamber during an earlier Middle East debate last March.

'Terrorism' Is Charged
That debate ended inconclusively when the United States vetoed a resolution that would have deplored Israeli policies in Jerusalem and on the West Bank of the Jordan River.

Today the Egyptian chief delegate, Ahmed Esmat Abdel Meguid, urged the Council to adopt a resolution condemning "Israel's brutal and illegal actions" in the occupied areas and calling for "immediate and effective steps" to put an end to what he said were violations of international law.

Mr. Meguid particularly denounced the establishment of new Jewish settlements in the occupied Arab territories and said that Israeli authorities were pursuing "terrorist policies."

The Council meeting that began today was held at the request of Egypt, which is not a member. Cairo's move for another debate on the occupied areas was interpreted by Middle East experts as an Egyptian effort to win the favor of militant Palestinians.

Sectors of the Palestinian guerrilla movement, which is said to be undergoing internal strains, reportedly advocate improved relations with Egypt as a counterweight to Syrian influence.

A formal request by Egypt yesterday for an urgent Security Council meeting contained a demand for Palestinian participation.

At the beginning of today's meeting, the United States again registered its protest, as it had done on three previous occasions, against the seating of a Palestinian with a status similar to that enjoyed by delegates of member nations.

As in the previous instances, the Council overruled the American objection by 11 votes to that of the United States, Britain, France, and Italy abstained from voting.

The President of the Council, Louis de Guiringaud of France, assigned seats at the side of the horseshoe table to the delegate of Israel, Chaim Herzog, and to the acting observer of the P. L. O., Zehdi Labib Terzi.

"ONLY 30 MINUTES DRIVE FROM PROVIDENCE"

Not Automatic Endorsement Says Israeli Delegate

NEW YORK: Criticism of a recent visit to his country by the South African prime minister was rejected recently by Israel's chief delegate to the United Nations. He denied that the visit

"automatically" meant Israeli endorsement of South African policies.

Chaim Herzog, the Israeli representative, told the Social and Economic Council that, "Israel is a sovereign country and has invariably refrained from commenting on whom other countries receive as visitors."

Mr. Herzog continued in regard to Prime Minister John Vorster's trip to Israel in early April:

"If anybody here suggests that the visit of a national leader automatically implies the acquiescence of the host state in the political, social or economic policies of the visitor, then I fear we may all find ourselves in a rather awkward, embarrassing and untenable situation."

Mr. Herzog spoke during the Council's debate on the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, a United Nations program spanning the period from 1973 to 1983. He was answering Arab and Communist representatives, who had earlier denounced what they described as increasing collaboration between Israel and South Africa.

Today, the acting permanent observer of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Zehdi Labib Terzi, who spoke after the Israeli delegate, charged that a "Pretoria-Tel Aviv Axis" had been established.

BRIDGE

By Robert E. Starr

False carding is a seldom discussed fact of Bridge. A good Declarer can often confuse the issue by the play of his cards safe in the fact that his partner is the Dummy and therefore cannot be taken in. However, most of the time the Defenders, when they false-card, fool their partner more than the Declarer. After all, Declarer usually knows what is out against him, the Defenders have to try to construct their own hand to give this information to the other Defender. False-carding hurts more than it helps in almost all cases. Therefore, the Defenders should always play the "correct" card. Unless they are certain that by not doing so they will convey a special message to their partner for just that purpose. Such was the case in today's hand played recently in a Team of Four Match. Both sides ended in the same sacrifice but because one team defended woeonly they made one trick less than the more imaginative Defender, who purposely false-carded.

East was Dealer, East and West vulnerable with this bidding:

1♠	1♠	2♣	2♣
3♥	P	4♥	4♣
P	P	5♥	P
P	5♠	Dbl	End

As you can see, the bidding was highly competitive and went exactly the same at both tables. Of course, the vulnerability has much to do with how high North and South went. Had it been reversed they probably would have dropped off earlier.

After South overcalled, West was not strong enough to mention his Hearts so raised Clubs. When North raised the overcall, East now bid his Hearts, he was quite strong. South waited now; they hadn't reached game yet but West took care of that. North now decided to sacrifice, confident the opponents could make their game and that he wouldn't go down much. East let that go around to West who had a problem whether to Double then or go one higher. He did go on and made the right decision when South sacrificed again. Now he doubled and led his singleton Diamond.

So far the same at both tables and both Declarers immediately led a Trump won by West's Ace. A low Club was played and here is the key play by East. At one table East played the correct card, the King, and dutifully gave West a Diamond ruff. Now West had to get back to East for another ruff and knowing East still had the Club Ace, led another Club only this time Declarer ruffed, drew Trumps, had to lose a Heart for down two. An excellent score against a vulnerable game for East and West can make five Hearts.

However, at the other table, East did better. He was aware that West's lead was a singleton and wanted to make sure he could get both Diamond ruffs. To make sure of getting in again in case Declarer had a singleton Club, very likely when he could count him for four Diamonds, he false-carded by winning the first Club with the ACE not the King. Now when West ruffed he felt his partner didn't have the Club King so must have the Heart Ace. So a Heart was led and the other ruff obtained. This pair scored 200 points more than their opponents.

Thousands March For Soviet Jewry

NEW YORK: Chanting "Let my people go" from 68th Street and Fifth Avenue to the shadows of the United Nations, tens of thousands of people from the metropolitan area marched on behalf of Soviet Jewry recently. Outside the UN, speaker after speaker proclaimed it the duty of Americans to speak out against oppression.

Governor Carey announced to the masses gathered in Dag Hammarskjold Plaza that he had designated May 2 as Solidarity Sunday in New York.

"Right is on our side. Almighty God is on the side that brings us here today and we are here in greater numbers than we ever have before," he said, his voice rising and trembling as he spoke.

"We shall return," he added, "until freedom for Soviet Jews and other oppressed peoples is obtained."

Sponsored by Conference

It was the fifth annual Solidarity Sunday here, sponsored by the Greater New York Conference on Soviet Jewry, a coordinating agency that represents 85 Jewish organizations and more than two million people.

Yesterday, however, as the program at the sunny, crowded plaza went into its second hour, streams of marchers were still starting out on 68th Street, and organizers of the rally proclaimed it the largest ever.

"This is the largest demonstration of any kind in the history of the City of New York," said Eugene Gold, Kings County District Attorney, who is chairman of the Greater New York Conference on Soviet Jewry. "The crowd today well exceeds 200,000."

If there was anything to distinguish so large a crowd, enjoying the good weather, it was the sense of quiet purpose that persisted from noon, when the rally started, until after 4 P.M., when the last speech had ended.

Very important in a team match.

Moral: As Defender, always play the correct card unless you are absolutely certain a false card cannot damage your partner.

that a decision to cancel the trip had been made on the advice of Foreign Minister Yigal Allon.

MODEL SEDER HELD

The annual model Seder at the Medical Center in Cranston was held on Tuesday, April 13, sponsored by the United Moes Chitim Fund. Rabbi Jacob Handler of Temple Beth Israel, the chaplain of the institution, conducted the service.

Approximately 75 residents of the Institute of Mental Health and the General Hospital took part. Those unable to attend the service were brought special Passover trays for their dinners.

Food for the Seder was purchased through contributions to the annual Passover appeal. Arrangements were handled by Mrs. Moe Cohen and Mrs. Samuel Sheffres of the Jewish Festival Committee. This year volunteers from the USY of Temple Emanu-El assisted as waiters and waitresses: Lisa Biener, Alan Harlam, Helene Lewis, David Levitt, Robin Lightman, Richard Shuster, Jeff Stoltzberg, Anna Winograd and Sam Viner.

Director of the RI Department of Mental Health, Retardation and Hospitals, Dr. Joseph Bevilacqua, along with Mrs. Bevilacqua and many officials of the institutions and the state government participated in the Seder, as well as Mr. Paul Segal, executive director of the Jewish Family and Children's Service; Mr. Edmund Wexler; Mrs. Walter J. Nelson; and Mrs. Robert A. Riesman.

Ladd School patients had their Seder on April 12, also through the efforts of the Festival Committee.

Rev. Webb Honored by AJC For Outstanding Leadership

The American Jewish Committee recently honored Rev. James M. Webb, the General Secretary of the Rhode Island Council of Churches, for his "creative and consistent leadership in building bridges of understanding between Christians and Jews." Rev. Webb was presented with a copy of the Hebrew Scriptures that was inscribed by Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, the AJC's National Interreligious Affairs Director; Rabbi A. James Rudin, Assistant Interreligious Affairs Director, and Seymour Brief, the New England Regional Director of the AJC, and Mrs. Sheldon S. Sollosy, Chairperson of the Rhode Island Unit. Rev. Webb, a long time leader in Christian-Jewish relations, has recently concluded a six year term as a member of the Governing Board of the National Council of Churches where he was a founder of the Interreligious Coalition. Rev. Webb has been active in the human rights struggle for Soviet Jewry, and he has been a strong advocate on behalf of Israel's survival and security. Prior to his current position in Rhode Island, Rev. Webb, an American Baptist, was General Secretary of the Connecticut Council of Churches. In presenting the Bible to Rev.

Webb, Rabbi Rudin and Mr. Brief saluted the Christian clergyman as one of "America's foremost leaders in promoting better relations between our two faith communities."

Founded in 1906, the American Jewish Committee is this country's pioneer human relations organization. It combats bigotry, protects the civil and religious rights of Jews at home and abroad, and seeks improved human relations for all people everywhere.

Make Mother's Day Simply Delicious

TRIPLE BONUS IN MOTHER'S DAY BREAKFAST FROM MIRIAM COOKBOOK

Mother's Day is upon us! Whenever you look for special menu ideas for special occasions, Simply Delicious, published by The Miriam Hospital Women's Association, provides the answer.

For the cooks or non-cooks in the family, no matter what the age or sex, here's an elegant and exceptionally simple breakfast (or brunch) in bed for mother. The breakfast has a triple bonus: First, it can (the souffle must) be made the day before. Second, both recipes are not only outstandingly simple, they are absolutely foolproof! And third, there's enough for the whole family.

MELON VICE VERSA

Colorful, simple, refreshing — a great summer dish.

- 1 cantaloupe
- 1 honeydew
- fresh mint sprigs
- Sauce
- 1/2 cup light corn syrup
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 2 T. snipped mint
- dash of freshly grated nutmeg

Cut melons in half lengthwise and remove seeds. Cut each half into 4 wedges (2 if small).

With melon ball cutter, remove 3-4 balls from each wedge in a straight line. Fit honeydew balls into cantaloupe and vice versa. Refrigerate.

At serving time, place melon wedges on platter alternately in circle. Garnish with mint sprigs. Serve

Egypt Considering Purchase Of Dutch Defense Aircraft

AMSTERDAM: Egypt is showing interest in buying three or four Dutch "Fokker Friendship" naval patrol aircraft in their new coastal patrol version which was shown publicly only a few weeks ago.

The Dutch government has approved negotiations between Fokker and Egypt, though this does not mean it will automatically grant an export license if negotiations succeed. A government license is required for export of military material from Holland. The total amount involved is forty to 50 million Guilders.

IN A RADIO interview the previous minister of defense, the liberal Hendrik den Toom, strongly advocated selling the Fokkers to sauce separately.

Sauce
Stir together corn syrup, lemon juice and mint. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Refrigerate. Makes 8 to 16 servings.

JOAN'S SOUFFLE

Great, easy lunch dish with green salad, salade Nicoise, or brunch dish with smoked salmon.

- 16 slices Pepperidge Farm white bread
- 8 oz. sharp cheddar cheese, grated
- 1/4 lb. butter
- 6 eggs
- 2 cups milk
- 1 tsp. salt

Remove crusts and cube bread. Butter 2 qt. souffle dish. Layer bread, cheese, bread, cheese in dish. Melt butter and let cool. Beat eggs with fork or wire whisk. Combine butter eggs, milk and salt. Pour over bread and cheese. Refrigerate overnight.

Remove from refrigerator 1 hour before cooking. Set dish in pan 1 inch full of hot water. Bake at 400° for 45 minutes, or until brown and bubbly.

On May 21, look for a soup (hot or cold) — and — salad luncheon or light supper. As you must expect by now, the recipes are simple to make, unusual, and simply delicious!

Egypt. He stressed that they are defensive aircraft only and equipped with electronic apparatus for spotting enemy submarines.

He pointed to the precarious position of Dutch industry at the moment and the heavy burdens of the Dutch economy and urged that this substantial order should not be rejected by a government veto against an export license.

Moreover, in case of a Dutch refusal other Euromarket countries would be glad to take over, he said, adding that the United States also supplies military material to Egypt.

Newspapers attract more active readership from teenagers in higher income families.

Israelis Thwart Arab March

JERUSALEM: Israeli occupation authorities thwarted a protest march on Jerusalem by West Bank Arabs recently by breaking up several demonstrations in Ramallah and cordoning off the scheduled starting point with border guards.

Reporters attempting to reach the scene were turned back at an army checkpoint just north of Jerusalem. Authorities had set up roadblocks to prevent buses and truckloads of would-be demonstrators from reaching the area. Foreign and Israeli reporters were also barred from entering the town.

No explanations were given for the cordon around the town. However, the measure follows a recent order by Defense Minister Shimon Peres authorizing local commanders to seal off an area to reporters when trouble is expected.

A total curfew was imposed for several hours this morning on the West Bank town of Tulkaram after the residents staged a demonstration against the Israeli occupation. Yossi Greenberg, an NBC cameraman, was taken in by Israeli soldiers when he attempted to film the empty streets and shuttered shops during the curfew. He was detained briefly at the military governor's headquarters and then released after his bureau chief appealed to the army spokesman's office in Tel Aviv.

LACK OF FUNDS

JERUSALEM: A United Jewish Appeal study mission was told of the concern that the Jewish population of the Galilee may remain a minority because the Jewish Agency lacks the funds to provide the necessary industrial plants and educational facilities.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

DAVID R. SARGENT

TWO BOND FUNDS FOR INCOME

Q: I will soon receive a $20,000 settlement from some property I sold. Your guidance on investing this money would be appreciated. My aim is additional income and security as I am 69 and about to retire. I have been thinking about Rowe Price New Income Fund. N. M.

A: Price New Income Fund, a no-load bond fund, yields 7.9% currently, a somewhat less generous return than the 8.6% available in Northeast Investors Trust, also a no-load. The latter fund was established in 1950, which allows a more accurate judgment as to management's ability. Price, founded in 1973, is more difficult to assess. However, in its first full year, 1974, Price New Income managed to buck the downtrend and came through with about a 1% increase in net asset value. The average fund dropped 22% and Northeast, 7%. Of course, in the fast paced rise in 1975 and the first quarter of this year, the average fund has far outpaced these two bond funds.

Rather than putting your entire $20,000 in either one of these funds, why not split the amount equally between them. Both hold portfolios of high quality bonds.

Q: I hold 200 shares of Damon Corp. (NYSE) for which I paid 17 per share last year. Should I hold on the assumption that profits will improve? M. F.

A: That depends on how patient you are. Damon has been having a problem striking a balance between current profitability and building for the future. Excluding nonrecurring adjustments, there was an operating loss of 6¢ a share in the August quarter. Results for the November and February quarters — the first half of the current fiscal year — were in the black but only to the extent of 10¢ a share total. This compares with a 52¢ profit in the first half of the 1974-75 fiscal year.

Much still remains to be done in strengthening the organization and developing the laboratory data management system. The process of positioning Damon for a major new growth phase is expected to take 18 to 24 months. Also, though there are high hopes for the TPA cancer test, the firm still has not filed an application with the FDA for U. S. marketing of the test. Thus, the outlook for the short term at least is relatively unimpressive. The stock seems to be a good candidate for switching to a more aggressive issue with greater promise of appreciation.

FROM LOAD TO NO-LOAD

Q: I have two questions for you. Does an investor making steady monthly investments over a five or ten year period in a fund do better in a mutual which more or less just goes up or in one that fluctuates widely? Is there any chance of a change in the laws so that an individual who has decided on his own to buy a fund does not have to pay a sales load to a salesman whose advice is unsought and unwanted? I had heard that such a proposal was in the wind. G. H.

A: In answer to question one, a steady monthly buying program would probably do well in a fund which shows a great deal of up and down travel. In theory, you can then buy to maximum advantage at low prices assuming an equal dollar amount is invested each time. Within reasonable limits, a volatile fund is often the best for those engaged in a long-term dollar averaging program.

As for question two, there have been some moves by the SEC and in Congress to lower the amounts customarily charged by the load funds, say perhaps to 5% from 9.3%. But so far, this has not borne fruit. To the best of my knowledge, there is no plan to eliminate the sales load altogether. However, there have been occasional shifts from load to no-load status by individual funds. Although this tendency seems to be growing, it is not a tidal wave by any means. Load funds still outnumber no-loads by a better than 10-to-1 ratio in asset size.

Q: As a frequent reader of your column, I would like your opinion on Mary Kay Cosmetics as an investment opportunity? Do you have any information on this company? I understand they have over-the-counter stock. H. M.

A: Mary Kay, a direct sales cosmetics company, has been in business since 1963. For the year just ended, sales reached $35 million and earnings $1.04 a share. The firm has typically shown annual growth of 20% to 30% in sales and earnings. Last year, the rate of increase was lower, but it looks as though this year should see the rate return to the higher level. Several factors will contribute to this acceleration — a 14% boost in the number of consultants (sales representatives), across the line price increases and the introduction of a new hair-care line. The latter is particularly important as replacement of the product is more frequent than with skin care products which last an average of four to six months.

An expansion program in 1975 which doubled capacity was paid for in cash. Finances are strong; current assets are 3.5 times current liabilities and cash items alone exceed current liabilities. Long-term debt is under $50,000. The dividend was recently raised from 6¢ to 8¢ a share quarterly. Shares are interesting for long-term growth investors.

Pro Nationalists, Communists Sweep Municipal Elections

JERUSALEM: The municipal elections on the West Bank were won overwhelmingly by pro-Palestinian Liberation Organization nationalists and Communists. About 63,000 persons voted — 72.3 percent of the registered voters — including 22,000 women who were allowed to vote for the first time. The voters rejected the older traditional leaders, most of them from wealthy families, who have close ties with the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan and who have generally cooperated with Israeli authorities. They elected a younger generation of professionals, academicians and intellectuals, some of them radicals and some relatively moderate, but all with strong Palestinian nationalist sentiments. The nationalistic bloc won all 10 seats in Hebron's council, swamping the slate supported by former Mayor Mohammed Ali el-Jabari, who declined to stand for reelection. First place in Hebron went to Phaled Kuassma, a moderate, but he is expected to be challenged for the mayoralty by the runner-up, Dr. Awani Zayer, a leftist radical. Nationalists won eight out of 10 seats in Nablus, the largest town on the West Bank. Communists won a majority of the council seats in Jericho and Communist or PLO-supporters won substantial majorities in Tulkarem, Ramallah, El Birah and Beit Jallah. The nationalists failed, however in Bethlehem where they took only two seats on the town council and where the incumbent mayor, a traditionalist, is assured of reelection. In Jenin, the mayor was reelected.

The heavy turn-out of voters was all the more impressive because of the heavy rains that swept the West Bank on the election day. The high proportion of women voters was seen as a strong break with tradition and a revolt against male conservatism. In the Samaritan town of Kabatyam the local men, supported by Major Muhammed Khalil, prevented women from voting by refusing to register them on the grounds that elections were not "women's business." Order throughout the West Bank was maintained by Arab policemen. Israeli security forces were evacuated from the West Bank on election eve. But Defense Minister Shimon Peres paid a surprise visit to polling stations in Ramallah and Bethlehem and was appalled by young voters, mostly women. They had gained the right to vote by Israel's amendment of the Jordanian law that limited the electorate to male property owners.

A&P Leaflet Gives Recipes For Kosher Favorites

Traditional Jewish culinary delights such as sweet and sour whitefish, pickled salmon and broiled honey chicken, are among the tested recipes being offered free to all customers in A&P stores.

The latest publication in A&P's "Operation Aware" series is "Traditional Jewish Recipes," a leaflet which gives recipes and directions for preparing ten favorite kosher recipes, ranging from borscht to rugelach.

"Operation Aware" is a service of A&P's National Department of Consumer Affairs. The "Operation Aware" center in each store offers leaflets which help customers to become well-informed shoppers. More than 450 products which carry the A&P or Ann Page label are certified kosher products which carry the (U) symbol.

"Traditional Jewish Recipes" is the first in "Operation Awarer's" new series of international cooking brochures.

Here is a recipe for rugelach from "Traditional Jewish Recipes":

Rugelach

- 1 pound sweet butter
  - ½ pound cream cheese
  - 3 tablespoons sour cream
  - 3 ½ cups flour
  - ¼ teaspoon salt
  - 1 pound jar Ann Page Pure Orange marmalade
  - ½ cup chopped walnuts
- Cream butter and cream cheese together. Add flour. Add sour cream, sugar, and salt. Knead into a dough and refrigerate for several hours until firm. Roll into 9-inch

Abortion Issue Touches Off Debate Between AJC, Catholic League

AJC Accused of Legal Positivism In Support of Abortion

MILWAUKEE: An official of the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights has accused the American Jewish Congress of "adopting the posture of legal positivism, the very ideology that enabled Hitler to pursue his genocidal policies," by its support for legalized abortion.

Dr. Lowell A. Dunlop, the League's assistant executive director, made that charge in a study titled "Neo-Nazism in America?"

Specifically, he took issue with arguments presented by Pfeffer, counsel to the AJC Congress, in a brief filed by the AJC Congress and seven other groups before the Massachusetts Supreme Court seeking reversal of the manslaughter conviction of Dr. Kenneth Edelin, who was charged with causing the death of a fetus.

Dunlop defines "legal positivism" as objections to the basic premise that natural rights due all men are fundamental values which law must serve.

By relying "heavily on the law and public policy," the ethical values have no place in positivistic view that moral and AJC Congress and other groups that favor legalized abortion are using "the ideological basis for the rise of Nazism" under Hitler, Dunlop contended.

"It is only a culture's conviction that law must be judged in the light of moral and ethical values that prevents any society from succumbing to Nazi madness," and therefore the AJC Congress position "is surely a dangerous precedent for the Jewish community," the writer claimed.

"Simply, the only cogent objection to the Holocaust is that it as an egregious assault on the natural rights of man. Without appealing to these fundamental moral and ethical values, there can be no compelling judgment that Hitler was wrong or that the Nazis who perpetrated the Holocaust should be punished," Dunlop wrote.

AJC Rejects It Endorses Genocidal Policies Akin To Those of Hitler

NEW YORK: The American Jewish Congress has strongly rejected a charge that its support of legalized abortion meant it had adopted "the posture of legal positivism, the very ideology that enabled Hitler to pursue his genocidal policies."

Naomi Levine, executive director of the AJC Congress, said that "any comparison between the right of a woman to have an abortion and the Nazi slaughter of the Jews is an obscene and outrageous slur on the memory of the six million murdered in the Holocaust."

The charge against the AJC Congress was made by Dr. Lowell A. Dunlop, assistant executive director of the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights, in a study called "Neo-Nazism in America?"

He specifically took issue with arguments presented by Leo Pfeffer, counsel to the AJC Congress, in a brief filed by the AJC Congress and seven other groups before the Massachusetts Supreme Court seeking reversal of the manslaughter conviction of Dr. Kenneth Edelin, who was charged with causing the death of a fetus.

In a statement issued by Mrs. Levine, she said: "Dr. Dunlop's irresponsible statement, while singling out the American Jewish Congress, is in fact an attack on all the organizations that with us signed the friend-of-the-court brief in the Edelin case — the American Ethical Union, American Humanist Association, Board of Church and Society of the United Methodist Church, National Women's Conference of the American Ethical Union, Union of American Hebrew Congregations, Unitarian Universalist Association and United Church Board for Homeland Ministries."

Continuing, Mrs. Levine said: "The kind of mentality represented by Dr. Dunlop underscores the need for a nationwide educational effort to insure that Americans understand how the drive for anti-abortion laws impairs the basic rights of religious freedom privacy and equality. We respect the religious and conscientious scruples of those who reject the practice of abortion. However, to the extent that these persons would embody those scruples in law binding on all persons, we vigorously oppose them."

Kissinger Predicts Strategy To Solve Conflict

WASHINGTON: Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger predicted "a year or so down the road a basic strategy will begin to emerge" on a solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

He made his statement in the course of defending his step-by-step diplomacy in the Middle East over the past three years. He appeared to indicate that the US would put forward the "basic strategy" aimed at a "comprehensive solution."

He did not specify any elements of strategy or say in what form it might arise during his appearance before the American Society of Newspaper Editors at the Shoreham Hotel here.

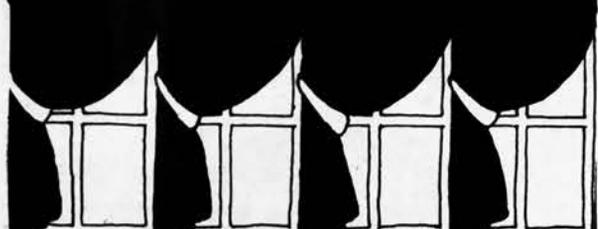

Kissinger made his remarks in response to a question and criticism of his step-by-step approach was begun at the "wrong end," maintaining that it should have put forward a long-term objective for a stable peace in the area and that the belligerents should have been told. "Here it is — let's have your remarks on this solution of your problems."

He said the differences between his views and those of his critics were "very significantly" the question of timing. He said that "at some point the comprehensive approach was needed instead of the step-by-step approach." Kissinger said that at the time of the Yom Kippur War if "we put forward a comprehensive scheme we thought the danger of failing would sharpen the (Arab oil) embargo, increase Soviet domination" in Arab countries, including Egypt, and "enhance radicalism" in the area.

The step-by-step approach, he said, has "given us time to think and a more comprehensive solution. I think it is now generally agreed — an Israel agrees too — that the time for individual steps with individual countries is probably over and we now have to work on a wider canvas." Kissinger said.

Chief Assails Ford On Israeli Issue

WASHINGTON: James R. Schlesinger, former secretary of defense, recently claimed that America's "moral support" of Israel was waning due to undermining on the part of the Ford Administration which was putting undue pressure on Israel to make concessions to the Arabs.

Mr. Schlesinger, in one of his strongest statements in support of Israel, said the country was being treated as South Vietnam was treated during the 1972-73 peace negotiations and being blamed for failure to make progress toward a settlement.

Mr. Schlesinger has not endorsed any Presidential candidate. When asked at today's meeting, he declined to say who was best qualified in his view, on national security issues. He said last month that he has been "in communication intimately" with the staffs of Ronald Reagan, Senator Henry M. Jackson and one other candidate whom he has not named. He said he has had contact with the Ford Administration.

Views for a Phone Call

"I've made myself available to anybody who wants my opinion," he said in a television interview last month. "If they want to dial my number, they can have my views on any particular subject."

In his speech today, Mr. Schlesinger deplored what he called "a condition that I view as the Vietnamization of Israel in recent years."

"Allies can sometimes appear to be inconvenient from the standpoint of United States policy," he said. But he added that "it is improper, even pernicious to blame the failure to achieve a settlement on the one nation prepared to accept a settlement."

Mr. Schlesinger did not mention Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger by name, but his remarks seemed to be a criticism of Mr. Kissinger's negotiating tactics.

Mr. Kissinger, during the Paris negotiations for a Vietnam settlement, often complained that the Saigon regime of President Nguyen Van Thieu was holding up a settlement by demands for things like the removal of all North Vietnamese troops from the South.

Ultimately, Mr. Thieu gave in as a result of major promises of American aid and implicit threats from President Richard M. Nixon.

After a breakdown in negotiations between Israel and Egypt in March 1975, Mr. Kissinger blamed Israel. But the criticism on Israel seemed to diminish after a Sinai accord was achieved in September 1975, largely the result of American pressure and promises of a major aid package.

Mr. Schlesinger spoke to the annual meeting of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a leading pro-Israel organization, particularly active in support of legislation favorable to Israel.

As Secretary of Defense until his ouster by President Ford last November, Mr. Schlesinger was regarded by Israelis as a sympathizer for their defense needs but one whose actions were carefully controlled by Mr. Kissinger.

An underlying source of tension between Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Schlesinger was their attitude toward Israel, particularly during the war in October 1973.

Mr. Kissinger and his aides have blamed Mr. Schlesinger and the Defense Department for being slow in starting an airlift of military supplies to Israel.

Mr. Schlesinger has always resented that, and he said today in answer to questions that "United States policy" for the first six days of the 1973 war was limited to assisting Israel on a "cash-and-carry" basis. In other words, he asserted that he was under orders from Mr. Nixon and Mr. Kissinger not to undertake a major airlift.

He said that not until 1 a.m. on Oct. 13, the seventh day of the war, was the decision made to start the airlift, using United States Air Force planes. Until then, he said, the Nixon Administration "had been hesitating because it did not want to show its hand."

Mr. Schlesinger's comments followed a bitter attack on the Ford Administration's policies toward Israel by Senator Hubert H. Humphrey in a speech last night to the same group.

Mr. Humphrey, who until now has supported Mr. Kissinger's policies, said the Ford Administration had taken steps "which have the effect of eroding the historical bonds of trust and confidence between the United States and Israel."

Mr. Humphrey was particularly angered by Mr. Ford's intention to veto an appropriations bill if it came to him containing provisions for $550 million in additional aid for Israel above the $2.2 billion already approved. Mr. Humphrey said that Mr. Ford and his budget advisers had overruled Mr. Kissinger who had given his support.

On another aid bill, authorizing $4.4 billion for the current fiscal year including the Israeli aid, the White House said that Mr. Ford would definitely veto it because of provisions putting limits on his foreign policy flexibility. The White House said that a veto message outlining Mr. Ford's views would be sent to Congress by tomorrow.

Sephardic Jews Are Mixture Of Cultures, Focus On Youth

The Sephardic Temple on Branch Boulevard, Long Island, New York, which houses a tiny minority within the larger Jewish community, will become Bar Mitzvah May 8. In its 13 year history, the synagogue has increasingly become a center of religious life for many segments of the widely scattered and varied Sephardic Jewish community in the metropolitan area.

Sephardic Jews have looked to Congregation Shearith Israel, the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue on Manhattan's West Side, much as one would traditionally regard a patriarch. For years they have congregated in smaller temples, first on the lower East Side, later in the Brighton, Canarsie and Coney Island sections of Brooklyn, and to a small extent in Queens and in parts of the Bronx.

Oldest in the Country

The Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, the oldest Jewish congregation in the United States, was founded by Sephardic Jews who came to New Amsterdam in 1654 with the Dutch East India Company and it endures to this day.

The Sephardim are traditionalists and for centuries, since they fled the Inquisition in Spain in 1492, many have kept their Spanish-oriented Ladino language, their Spanish, Portuguese and Italianate names and their orthodox customs. But in contrast to the Ashkenazi, or Central European, Jews they have not increased in numbers. Congregations often existed without rabbis, and services were conducted by the "chachom," the learned man.

The Sephardic Temple in Cedarhurst is a strikingly modern parabolic — roofed building that has within it a copy of a Moorish-style chapel created in Toledo in Spain. It is an attempt by a group of Sephardic Jews to achieve modernism and status while at the same time preserving their traditions.

The Old and The New

What is striking about the temple and its outlook is its accent on youth. As its leader, Rabbi Arnold B. Marans, said in a recent interview: "The young people, having proved their point, no longer need to make change their reason for existence. They are proving that it is possible to mix the old and the new."

It is estimated that there are 175,000 Sephardic Jews in the United States. They represent about 3 percent of American Jewry. About 100,000 of them are of the Spanish tradition, about 50,000 are of Arabic origin and 25,000 are the so-called newly arrived who have come here in recent years from Israel and Lebanon, many by way of Cuba.

About 75 percent of all of the Sephardim in the United States, or about 130,000, are in the New York area. The rest live in Los Angeles, Atlanta and Seattle.

"Sephard" is the Hebrew word for Iberia, or Spain, and the Spanish tradition is readily apparent in the customs and traditions of the Sephardim.

Where the customs and usages of the Ashkenazim are German and Central European, and the language is Yiddish, those of the Sephardim include Ladino prayers chanted and sung at services, sermons in Ladino and words of greeting between the rabbi and his congregation in that language.

A Rich Mixture

Ladino is a mixture of Spanish and Portuguese, transliterated into Hebrew characters with touches of Greek, Turkish and Arabic. It was added to as the Jews fled from country to country, outward bound from Spain in the latter part of the 15th century.

Many of those who left Spain went to Brazil and from there came to North America; these were the first Sephardim to come to America. Most of the others came from the Balkans, from Greece and from Turkey at the beginning of the 20th century.

Some, such as the Tarragano family, began in the city of Taragona in Spain, fled to England, to France and to Turkey and thence to New York's Lower East Side.

Others, including the Rouso family, went from Spain to Yugoslavia, Egypt and then America. Still others, such as the Trapido family, went from country to country carrying with them a "great book" of the history of the family to preserve it for their descendants.

The Sephardic Temple in Cedarhurst owes its origins to the rush of immigrants in the early part of this century who came from Monastir in Yugoslavia, from Castoria in Greece and from Ankara in Turkey and settled in the New Lots section of Brooklyn, while maintaining contact with other Sephardim on the Lower East Side.

How They Lived

They opened restaurants in Luna Park, in Coney Island. They patronized the coffee-houses on Allen Street and smoked water pipes as they played barbut, a dice game. The men danced Greek-fashion, connected by handkerchiefs, and the women did the belly dance. The men did the shopping and the women walked several paces behind them. The men went into selling and into the manufacture of clothing. The women stayed home, raised families and were forbidden to work outside.

And then came World War II, and change came to the Sephardim in New Lots.

"They had heard chaplains," Rabbi Marans said. "They had never had rabbis. They came home convinced they had to break out of their ghettos, create a new congregation, join the modern American scene."

In 1954 the young men sought out Rabbi Marans (then a 24-year-old graduate of Yeshiva University) who was not a Sephardic Jew, to head their congregation. It was called the United Sephardim of Brooklyn, Congregation Glory of Youth.

"Fears that modernization and liberalization would breach the commitment to Sephardic traditions were not realized," Rabbi Marans said.

Rare Transcripts Uncovered At Jewish Seminary

NEW YORK: Two Hebrew copies of a historical medical-botanical text which standardized drug names and provided new warnings against drug adulteration to 13th-century doctors and chemists have been uncovered at the library of the Jewish Theological Seminary. The manuscript was located by Dr. Alexander Tobias, Manuscript Cataloguer of the Seminary.

Several weeks ago, the New York Botanical Gardens announced the acquisition of two rare manuscripts of "Circa Instans" ("About the Present"), the historic Latin text. According to the eminent 19th-century bibliographer, Moritz Steinschneider, the Hebrew versions of this landmark text were more complete in their duplication of the original than Latin manuscripts still available.

Dr. Menahem Schmelzer, Seminary librarian, said the Seminary's two texts may be the only Hebrew ones available in the world. One was transcribed around 1250, about a half a century after the Botanical Gardens' manuscripts, believed to be the oldest Latin copies. The second, a condensed version entitled "Sefer Ha-Ezer" ("Book of Help"), was transcribed in the 1500's.

"Circa Instans" is fundamental in the development of modern botany, and had major historic importance in medicine. It was the first major new work of pharmacology in the post-classical

Geneva Conference Revival Sought By Soviet

MOSCOW: The Soviet government is again trying to convene a Middle East conference in Geneva, proposing this time that it should be launched in two stages.

Moscow, in a government statement, declared that "all the organizational questions that may arise" could be resolved during the initial stage. The second stage would seek a peace settlement.

A similar approach was advanced privately by the Soviets last spring in an attempt to reach settlement with the Arabs. Moscow tried but failed to convene the conference.

The Soviet Government continued to insist on Palestinian participation in both sessions, a condition that has been unacceptable to the United States. Last December, Washington proposed a preliminary meeting that would not include the Palestinians. This in turn was rejected by Moscow and the plans have lain dormant since.

The United States and the Soviet Union are co-chairmen of the conference, which met for two days in December 1973 and has not reconvened since. Today's statement, which was circulated by the press agency Tass, appealed to other governments "to facilitate efforts" to reach a Middle East settlement.

The Geneva peace conference lies at the heart of the Soviet Union's Middle East policy. Such a conference would give the Russians a direct voice in the future of the Middle East. So far Moscow has yielded to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's successful diplomacy that produced a disengagement of Israeli and Egyptian forces in the Sinai peninsula.

The new call comes at a time when Soviet influence has dipped further in the region as a result of

A Fresh Beginning

After using existing facilities — three small temples in the area — the concept of beginning completely fresh in another place arose, and the Sephardic Temple was organized 800 paper in 1961. Three years and $1.5 million later the new temple in Cedarhurst was opened. Three hundred fifty families are members, but the rabbi said that "many thousands look here for spiritual leadership and their numbers are increasing."

Moscow's split with Cairo. Today's statement appeared, in part at least, aimed at fostering Moscow's credibility in the Middle East.

Separate Deals Assailed

But it was also possible that the proposal was meant to upstage Mr. Kissinger's current two-week African trip, reminding him and others of the unstable situation remaining in the Middle East.

Renewing Moscow's criticism of Mr. Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy, the Government statement said:

"While last year's separate deals concerning some small sections of Israeli-occupied territories did create the illusion in some quarters of a calming down in the Middle East, now everybody sees that these deals, which sidestepped cardinal questions of a Middle East settlement not only failed to defuse the situation, but further aggravated it."

As proof that broader measures were needed, Moscow pointed to "the tragic and bloody events in Lebanon," but did not go further in suggesting how the Lebanese violence might be resolved.

The sharpest language on the United States was directed at its military aid to Israel.

"The United States is sending there various modern arms, including rockets capable of carrying both conventional and nuclear warheads," the statement said.

"Alarming in this respect are reports that Israel is creating or has already created its own nuclear warheads," it continued. "It is not difficult to see what a potential danger to peace is posed by this."

Sov. Jews' Condition Blamed On Ford Administration

NEW YORK: A group of leading Soviet Jewish activists has accused the Ford Administration of "worsening" the condition of Soviet Jews by its outspoken opposition to the Jackson-Vanik Amendment to the Foreign Trade Act, which links U.S. trade benefits to the USSR with Soviet emigration policies.

According to the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry, 57 activists from 11 Russian cities issued a declaration stating:

"It seems to us that statements by some leading representatives of the American Administration that support of Soviet Jews by the American Congress would lead to the worsening of their situation, were among the most important factors that made the Soviet leadership confident that it can, with impunity, continue repression and blackmail intended to smother emigration." The activists rejected as "far removed from reality" the argument that the trade-emigration linkage is harmful to them, the SSSJ reported.

Their declaration added, "It is very difficult to change our condition by one specific action. But we think that specific actions by the U.S. Congress connected with foreign trade forced the Soviet government to suspend its sinister plan to smother Jewish emigration using an education tax, and in this way helped the emigration of tens of thousands of Jews."

This Jew Claims That He Understands Arabs

By MICHAEL GETLER

VIENNA: "It has been one of the most unpleasant experiences of my life," says Austria's colorful and complex chancellor, Bruno Kreisky.

He is talking of his enduring and increasingly bitter feud with what he calls "a special group of Jews, a small group, some Israelis, Zionists, who see me as a traitor, who believe I am dangerous and have to disappear."

"I don't like these professional Jews," the chancellor adds in an interview. "There is no difference among Jews and other people as far as morals are concerned. It is only a question of individual character, and they are not better and not worse."

Kreisky was born a Jew in a comfortable, well established Austrian family 65 years ago. Whatever loose religious beliefs he may have held as a boy were quickly shed as a young Socialist revolutionary in the 1930s.

Today, Kreisky's political skills, experience and intellect have made him one of Europe's most interesting politicians and socialist leaders; a rather remarkable achievement for the chancellor of a small, neutral country that still projects a "comic opera" image to many people.

Yet it is precisely because Kreisky's influence extends beyond Austria that his relationship to his Jewish origin has become an important but probably unfathomable question to those trying to evaluate the integrity of his position on a number of issues.

It is because Kreisky was born a Jew that his generally pro-Arab position on the Middle East — he takes part in active consultations with Egypt and other Arab countries — infuriates most Israelis, especially former Prime Minister Golda Meir.

It is because of his roots Kreisky's vicious battle with another famous Viennese Jew, Nazi-hunter Simon Wiesenthal, produced such sharp reaction in Jewish circles around the world, and, for different reasons, in Austria itself.

To his critics, Kreisky appears to be the ultimate assimilated Jew, bending over backward to prove his non-Jewishness. His very political success — he has been elected three times as chancellor — and his willingness to take on Wiesenthal and the Israelis are worrisome to some because they fear it could give respectability to a new form of anti-semitism.

Kreisky sharply rejects that. He is an agnostic and does not want to be judged as a Jew. "For me, Israel is not a religious problem. It is primarily a very sincere political problem in which Europe is involved because Europe is also close to the Arabs as well as to the Jews."

"I feel no conflict because I cannot accept any double loyalty. I am obligated to my own country and my own people. This is my duty as a Social Democrat and I would act the same way if there were non-Jews in this problem."

"As a Socialist," Kreisky adds, "I am an anti-Zionist. For me, Zionism is a kind of nationalism that is not acceptable as a solution or a philosophy."

In September 1973, Arab guerrillas held four hostages at the Vienna airport and used them to get Kreisky to pledge that he would close down the Schoenau transit camp in Austria that was being used to receive and process Jewish emigres from the Soviet Union.

Kreisky drew substantial criticism in some quarters. Yet, he says, "everyone who was well informed understood" what really happened. Schoenau was very slow to close down. Jews kept coming. Eventually another transit point was opened and today the flow continues, although Kreisky says the bigger problem now is what to do with Jews who want to go back.

Referring to his war years as an exile in Sweden, Kreisky says "I have been a refugee and our policy is that people can take refuge here. This is our philosophy as a neutral country. It is the most liberal of any country in Europe and as a result probably a quarter million Jews have come through here."

"So what is more important? That each day there is an expression of love for Jews, or that there are Jews arriving daily at the railroad station? I have to say this because there is a certain bitterness, this reaction that I am an enemy or a traitor."

Although Jews such as Viktor Adler and Otto Bauer played leading roles in Austrian political life at the turn of the century, it seems extraordinary to have a Jewish-born chancellor today in a country that was the acknowledged cradle of a particularly virulent form of anti-semitism.

As a Socialist, Kreisky presides over a basically conservative country. As an agnostic, he leads a nation of 7.5 million. 90 per cent of whom are Catholic. There are now only about 10,000 Jews left in Austria out of the 200,000 before the war.

Last month, there was more irony when the chancellor and his wife Vera walked solemnly through the former Nazi concentration camp at Terezin (Theresienstadt), Czechoslovakia. It was part of a state visit to Prague, the first by an Austrian chancellor since World War II.

Thousands of Austrians had been imprisoned at the camp. Many died there. Among the inmates were 19 members of Kreisky's family. He stopped and placed flowers in front of a memorial to the Jewish dead. Reprinted from The Guardian.

More than any other one person, Ben-Gurion is at the center of this amazing and vividly presented drama in which Mrs. Meir was both observer and participant. Her frank assessment of him inevitably will be essential to his biographers — a man remote, humorless, intuitively right on momentous issues, unforgivable in his abuse of old comrades who opposed him (but surely to be pardoned for errors or judgment in his old age as senility closed in).

Historians will be no less grateful to Mrs. Meir for her tersely rendered eyewitness account of Jews returning to their homeland — the refugees from Nazism who streamed into Palestine in 1934, some 60,000 of them, utterly unprepared for the kind of existence that awaited them, chemists and musicians who had no choice but to become bricklayers or farmers if they were to survive. They were followed by other refugees, ironically denied entry by Britain under the British mandate over Palestine at the very time Britain was fighting their oppressors in Europe.

There are unforgettable pictures here, notably of the day in 1948 when Ben-Gurion, standing in the Tel Aviv Museum, read the Scroll of Independence that established the State of Israel. "Israel was a reality," she says simply. But then: "In a few hours we would be at war."

It was the first of five wars that would be fought, and won, and Israel's conduct of each is vigorously defended by Mrs. Meir, including the right to wage a preventive war, as in 1956 in conjunction with Britain and France.

Well before that critical year of 1956 she had become a leader at a high government level. For seven months she was Israel's ambassador to the Soviet Union, a weird experience in the course of which she found still present the anti-Semitism prevalent in her childhood in Czarist Russia.

Among those she met here was Ivy Molotov, wife of the Soviet Foreign Minister. Their conversation was cordial — and shortly afterward Mrs. Molotov, who was Jewish, was arrested and vanished from public view.

Back in Israel, newly appointed as Minister of Labor, Mrs. Meir began what she calls the seven happiest, most satisfying years of her career. Certainly they were challenging ones. Again the immigrants were pouring in, this time destitute and broken in health, some of them from lands long cut off from life as the rest of the world knows it, like those from Yemen in southwest Arabia, where Jews had somehow survived for 2,000 years as serfs of the Moslems.

Mrs. Meir is justly proud of the record of her department in the building of the state: old age pensions industrial accident insurance, vocational training.

Then, for nine tempestuous years, she was Israel's Foreign Minister, a post she accepted reluctantly. Whereupon she "retired." But for Golda Meir, as anyone might have guessed, there was no such thing as retirement.

At the Biblical three score and ten she became Prime Minister in time to prepare the defense of her country in its fourth war with the Arabs, the so-called Egyptian War of Attrition in 1968. About Israel's fifth war, the Yom Kippur War in 1973, she confesses that she finds it hard to write. With typical and winning honesty she admits that she and her government were caught by surprise.

Israel won, but at unprecedented cost in her short history and amid charges of incompetent leadership.

After five years as Prime Minister, she again was ready to retire, this time permanently. Her successor is Yitzhak Rabin, born in the year Golda Meir came from across the world. A sabra (native-born Israeli), he represents a generation different from her own in style and approach. And that, she concludes eloquently, is as it should be in a land of growth and change — a land, as every reader of this remarkable life story will surely agree, that will be unceasingly in her debt.

'Zionism Is Not Racism' Asserts Scranton

NEW YORK: In a recent United Nations session, the US reaffirmed its stand that it "will never accept" an equation of Zionism and racism.

Addressing the Economic and Social Council during a debate on the current UN Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, 1973-83, William W. Scranton, chief American delegate, stressed that, "Zionism is not racism."

According to Mr. Scranton, "Zionism is a justifiable and understandable manifestation of national feeling on the part of a people entitled to a homeland, whose claim to a homeland was recognized by the United Nations almost 30 years ago."

The United States delegate spoke as radical Arab and Communist countries were pressing to link the United Nations project, primarily meant to fight the system of separation of races in South Africa and Rhodesia, to an anti-Zionism resolution adopted last fall by the General Assembly by a 72-to-35 vote, with 32 abstentions.

The resolution condemned Zionism as "a form of racism and racial discrimination." The United States declared then that it would never recognize the resolution.

Today, Mr. Scranton called the anti-Zionism resolution "unwise, unjust and completely unacceptable."

'A View Strongly Held'

He told the 54-country Council that the rejection of the text was not the policy of a particular Administration at a particular moment, but "a view strongly held throughout the Congress, the executive branch and the nation."

Mr. Scranton affirmed that the United States felt so strongly about the anti-Zionism resolution that it had decided it could no longer participate in the United Nations program against racism and could not attend a planned antiracism conference in Ghana in 1978 unless all references to the resolution were dropped.

Speaking about the Zionist movement's aim for a Jewish homeland, the American delegate noted that "the final borders of that homeland have not been agreed upon and the search for a just and lasting settlement of this dispute had absorbed our energies and attentions for a number of years."

During the racism debate in the Council, which opened last week, Arab and Communist speakers brought up the Zionism issue in connection with what they said was increased collaboration between Israel and South Africa.

Zionism Attacked Again In UN

NEW YORK: Denouncing what it termed accelerating collaboration between Israel and South Africa, Syria recently introduced the issue of Zionism into a tense debate on racism in the United Nations.

The Economic and Social Council was told that the ties between the "racist regimes of Pretoria and Tel Aviv" proved that last November's General Assembly resolution equating Zionism with racism was

Jerusalem Blast Leaves 29 Injured

JERUSALEM: At least 29 persons were injured, recently, according to hospital reports, when a booby trapped motor scooter exploded on Ben Jehuda Street, Jerusalem's main thoroughfare. Arab terrorists were blamed for the incident and dozens of suspects were rounded up across the city by local police.

Thousands of people had gathered at the Wailing Wall a mile away for annual ceremonies honoring Israeli war dead when the explosion occurred. It blew out store windows and left pools of blood in the street. Witnesses reported that police cordoned off the blast area shortly after the occurrence.

The explosion went off not far from Zion Square, the site of justified. The comment was made by Riad Siage, the Syrian representative.

Many diplomats saw the attack on Israel and South Africa by Syria as the start of a new drive by radical Arab governments to denounce Zionism as a system of racial discrimination against the Palestinians.

Iraq, Libya and Syria were reported to have called for a new campaign against Zionism in United Nations bodies during a conference of Arab and African foreign ministers in Dakar, Senegal, last week.

Diplomatic information reaching here indicated that Egypt, Jordan and other Arab governments as well as many African countries opposed the proposal.

African governments are said to fear that the injection of the Zionism controversy into their fight against the system of racial separation in South Africa and Rhodesia would do more harm than good.

Today's address by the Syrian representative was interpreted as a sign that the hard-line Arab countries wanted to launch a new anti-Zionism drive nevertheless.

The Syrian, who has observer status in the 54-country Economic and Social Council, spoke during a debate on the current Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination, 1973-83. This United Nations program was aimed at the racial situation in Southern Africa.

Last year, Arab delegations, backed by other third-world countries and by the Communist powers, used debates on the decade against racism to bring up the issue of Zionism.

After weeks of increasing tension at the United Nations, the General Assembly on Nov. 10 adopted a resolution determining that "Zionism is a form of racism and racial discrimination." The vote was 72 to 35 with 32 abstentions.

The benefits of South African trade haven't been visibly great in the past. At least 14 other nations — including Switzerland, Sweden, Denmark and Rumania — in recent years have been more important trading partners than South Africa, which accounts for only 3% of Israel's overall trade. (It should be pointed out, however, that Israel does provide South Africa with a market such as in textile-finishing, where goods frequently have re-exported to black African nations. Arms sales also aren't computed in the trade figures.)

The South African connection is particularly ironic following the public rage displayed by the government (and most Israelis) when the UN condemned Zionists a form of racism akin to apartheid. In this light, the political blurring of the two policies today could be seen benefiting only South Africa, at the expense of Israel.

Mr. Vorster tried to emphasize this point by noting at a press conference — at which he evaded most questions — that Israel and South Africa enjoyed "similarities in many, many instances, from climatic conditions upwards."

Exposure to newspaper ad pages in newspapers is consistent by day of the week frequent bombings by Arab extremists.

"It set fire to another motor scooter and a Peugeot car," Ishayahu Cohen, who works at a taxi stand 500 yards away, related. "It blew out the windows of a clothing and a sports store."

"But there were not many people in the street because the cinemas were closed due to Remembrance Day," he added. "That is what saved us."

An official communique said that the blast came only 15 minutes before Israelis began evening ceremonies for Remembrance Day, which is one day before Independence Day, when Arab guerrilla attacks have been made against Israel in the past.

Strengthened South African Ties Do Not Imply Moral Endorsement

JERUSALEM: "What do we have in common with South Africa?" says the young Israeli secretary. "Well, their neighbors want to throw them into the sea, too."

The question of what Israel seeks in promoting closer ties with South Africa increasingly is being asked here, following South African Prime Minister John Vorster's recent visit and the announcement that both countries envisage greater cooperation and trade links.

It is a question that troubles many Israelis, on moral and practical grounds. One high government official provides an emotional glimpse into some of these self-doubts when he sputters about the "hypocrisy" and "moral ambivalence" of many other nations, particularly European, on such issues.

"Here are the British, the French and now even the Italians falling over themselves trying to sell more arms to the Arabs," he says, "and then they lecture us about Vorster."

Yet there's no denying that he, like many Israelis, is troubled by some implications of Israel's deepening South African connection. South Africa's racial policies aren't "morally right," he says. "We don't approve of apartheid and are absolutely appalled" at its social implications. There's a political background to his indignation. He's particularly incensed over an American television program that recently depicted Israel's treatment of its large Arab minority as a form of "unofficial apartheid."

Israel doesn't, of course, have an official (or even unofficial) policy remotely resembling South Africa's stringent racial laws and customs.

Legally, Israel's Arab citizens are entitled to the same rights as Jews. In practice, however, this Jewish-oriented society has provided Arabs with more limited educational, economic and political opportunities.

Most Israelis acknowledge this, though their consciences aren't necessarily troubled by this development. One view, as stated by a writer in The Jerusalem Post, holds that "Israel's Arabs should remember that they have no less than 20 states of all conceivable political shades dedicated to Arab nationalist goals. The Jews have only one state in which to express their national identity." In other words, Israel is a Jewish state—love it or leave it.

This isn't, of course, the only Israeli viewpoint. Others find it self-destructive for Israel, surrounded by hostile neighboring states, to alienate those Arab citizens who seek the benefits of fuller integration within Jewish state, not its annihilation. "It's our luck that they want to share the advantage of being Israelis," says Matti-ahu Peled, a former Israeli general and a dovish critic of government policy.

Mr. Peled is sardonic about the "sudden love for South Africa" exhibited by many Israelis and, apparently, the government. In the past, he recalls, Israel had consistently voted in the United Nations to condemn South African racial policies. Today, he says, many Israelis tend to exaggerate the similarities between the countries, perhaps because each appears increasingly besieged and friendless.

Much criticism voiced here of the government's new-found kinship with South Africa is based on fears that it helps paint Israel deeper into its political corner. Some critics find such friendship as a form of political bravado, perhaps an outgrowth of Israel's siege mentality, to embark on this alliance with its predictable adverse consequences, and then to rail against international criticism.

The terms of the new economic cooperation pact between Israel and South Africa haven't been spelled out. Although Mr. Vorster toured Israeli aircraft and naval facilities, he denied reports that the visit heralded a major arms-supply Israel with uranium, and that Israel was training South Africans in security techniques.

Israel is in the survival business," says an American-born Israeli. "Survival is harsh. Not everybody is our friend, and we're kind of isolated. Now we're in a tight corner and that kind of cuts your priorities."

Those Israelis who justify the growing South African links do so in long-term, pragmatic terms. Yet
