He's Going To Take A Vacation After 50 Years With Golf . . .

After a half-century of being a golf professional, Lew Myers is going to take a vacation. Come November, after finishing out this season, he will leave the Ledgemont Country Club in Seekonk, where he has been the pro for 20 years. He says that he certainly won't give up golf, but he intends to take a vacation, although his future plans are still indefinite.

Mr. Myers has been a part of Rhode Island golf, since 1915 when he started as an assistant to his brother, Eddie Myers, at the Metacomet Country Club where he stayed until 1921.

In 1922 he became the first pro of the newly formed Ledgemont Country Club, which was then located in West Warwick. After ten years there, he was at the Louisquisset Country Club for three years and then stayed with the Triggs Memorial (Providence municipal) course for nine seasons. It was from there he returned to Ledgemont, then located in Seekonk.

Mr. Myers was the first Rhode Island professional, and probably the first New England professional golfer, to follow the winter tournament circuit. In the tournament tours which he followed between 1923 and 1930, he played in the Texas Open, the Los Angeles Open, and hit the entire southern golfing route. He also played as far north as Canada, and as far south as Mexico. He was rated third best playing pro in the early 20s. He also speaks of the time he tied for second in the St. Petersburg Open — with none other than Walter Hagen.

For two terms he was president of the New England Section of the Professional Golfers' Association, an organization which he helped to form. It was in 1934 that he organized a Get-Together Dinner for the members of the New England Professional Golfers' Association. And at the April 15, 1935 dinner of this group, he explained the object of the NEPGA. The object " . . . is to uplift and promote the game of Golf. Membership is based on character, ability and sportsmanship. The golf professional is not only a golf instructor, club maker, adviser to club makers and officials of various committees, but a salesman and a promoter of the Club he is employed by . . ." This dinner has become an annual fixture and other sections have embraced the idea.

One of the first to advocate the youth movement in golf, he also championed the cause of public links golf.

During World War II, Mr. Myers was active in supplying golf equipment to war hospitals to help in the rehabilitation of war casualties. He received many letters of commendation from the Ashford General Hospital in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., as well as a letter from Walter Fitzpatrick of the Defense Recreation Committee of the City of Providence thanking him for the "leadership and efforts on behalf of our committee in providing the Golf Tournament for the men of the armed forces . . . Your enthusiasm and hard work were very productive."

Among the well known golfers whom he has taught are Glenna Collet, former Rhode Island champion, with whom he won the New England Lady-Pro Championship three times; Betty Anne Hacking, City of Providence Champion; Jean Bauer, Ladies' State Champion; Howard Tryon and many others.

Mr. Myers will have a great many memories to retire with — all pleasant ones.

Murderers In Sverdlovsk Captured, Imprisoned

LONDON — The president of a synagogue in Sverdlovsk, a Soviet regional capital in the Urals, and several Jewish friends of the president, were murdered and robbed of funds they had accumulated for the construction of a new synagogue in that city, according to reliable information reaching London last week.

The murders were investigated by highest government officials from Moscow, the report stated; the killers were caught and convicted, and were given prison terms of six years each.

No names or numbers — either of the victims or of the murderers — were given in the report.

The killers had been caught and brought to trial by officials of the KGB, the Soviet political security police.

Among the victims was one non-Jew, a physician, who happened to be in the home of the synagogue official the night the murders were committed.

Women Leave For Israel Survey

Mrs. Peter H. Bardach and Mrs. Aaron J. Oster, Providence civic and welfare leaders, left New York's John F. Kennedy Airport yesterday as part of a 21-member group of United Jewish Appeal National Women's Division leaders for a three-week survey of UJA-supported welfare and immigrant aid programs in Europe and Israel.

Mrs. Bardach is co-chairman of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee of Providence. She served as co-chairman of its Pace Setters division for three years and is now vice president of the Year Round Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee. She was chairman of the Rhode Island Conference on Inter-Group Relations in 1963 and is currently chairman of the Inter-Faith Committee of the Temple Beth-El Sisterhood and director of the Work Affairs Council of the Rhode Island Repertory Theater.

Mrs. Oster has long been active in community affairs. She is a member of the board of the Women's Division of the General Jewish Committee and has served as chairman of its M-Day drive.

The group is composed of leaders of 14 major community campaigns across the United States which allocate the major portion of their campaign proceeds to the nationwide United Jewish Appeal.

Arriving first in Paris, group members will meet with leaders of the Joint Distribution Committee.

HONOR ELDER STATESMEN — Elder statesmen, left to right, Alter Boyman, Archibald Silverman and Dr. Ilie Berger, who helped found the General Jewish Committee, were honored at the Annual Campaign Dinner held Wednesday night, for their more than 50 years of work in communal organizations. All three, each over 80 years of age, are still working for community organizations, as they have constantly over the years.

GJC Fund Reaches $483,813 At Start Of Campaign

Pledges amounting to $483,813, well in excess of last year's total at the same time, were received by the General Jewish Committee at its Annual Campaign Dinner held Wednesday night at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel. According to the leaders of the campaign, if this increase in giving can be maintained, the GJC campaign this year will be one of the most successful in recent years.

Zvi Koltz, Israeli motion picture producer, addressed the more than 400 persons who attended the GJC Dinner which launched the 20th annual campaign.

Mr. Koltz called himself "security crazy" in a speech which emphasized that the Jews throughout the world would have to support the work of Israel, since its own revenue had to be spent in building up adequate military strength.

He pointed out that a fight between Israel and the Arab nations would not end simply in a victory for the Arabs, but in the complete destruction of the State of Israel. (Continued on Page 8)

First Diplomatic Representative To Israel Dies In Bronxville, N. Y.

BRONXVILLE, N.Y. — James G. McDonald, this country's first diplomatic representative to Israel and long an outspoken proponent of a Jewish state, died Sept. 28 after a long illness at the New York Hospital. Mr. McDonald, who lived at 9 Alden Place here, was 77 years old.

Mr. McDonald had long held the view that the establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine would be in the best interests of the United States and Great Britain, and had worked indefatigably for the immigration of European refugee Jews to the Holy Land.

He wrote numerous articles and pamphlets on the refugee problem, including "Palestine to the Rescue," and "Where Can the Refugees Go?" Throughout World War II, Mr. McDonald was highly critical of what he termed British "procrastination" in not permitting Jews to enter Palestine.

His active interest in the Zionist movement dated back to 1933 when he was the League of Nations High Commissioner for German Refugees. At that time, he came to see Palestine as a "great place of refuge."

Later as Ambassador, Mr. McDonald remarked: "I came to feel that Zionist ideology was right under the circumstances. I have a great admiration for the creative work of the Jews in Palestine."

At the end of 1935, he resigned his post as High Commissioner. Mr. McDonald submitted a 3,000-word letter accusing Nazi Germany of a planned policy of race extermination and charging the democratic nations with failing to face that fact and take appropriate action.

Mr. McDonald never missed an opportunity to speak up in behalf of Israel. When the first Israel bond campaign was begun in this country 16 years ago, he became active as a speaker.

The 6-foot 2-inch diplomat, slender with white hair, held audiences spellbound with his oratory as he spoke about Israel, its adherence to democratic ideals and principles, and its efforts to become a bastion of democracy in the Middle East.

During his term as High Commissioner, his organization expended $25 million for the care of some 100,000 refugees. After his assignment with the League of Nations, Mr. McDonald served on the editorial staff of The New York Times from 1936 to 1938.

His career in international affairs began in 1919 when he became board chairman of the Foreign Policy Association, Mr. McDonald made frequent trips abroad, visiting the major powers, and becoming a familiar figure at Geneva to representatives of the League of Nations.

Mr. McDonald was born in Coldwater, Ohio, received an A.B. degree from Indiana University and an A.M. there in 1910. He also did graduate work at Harvard and received an L.L.D. from Tufts College in 1932. Hebrew Union College gave him the honorary degree of Doctor of Hebrew Literature in 1936.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

by Sylvia Porter

OUR CHARITY GIVING AT RECORD HIGH
This year the average individual contribution by those of us who donate money to "public causes" will top $300.
This year our contributions to religious activities, educational and cultural pursuits, health and welfare causes will approach $11 billion, perhaps exceed this historic mark.
This year more than 62 million individuals and more than one million business corporations will contribute all-time record sums of dollars to an extraordinarily wide range of philanthropic activities, and millions of us will donate the largest share ever of our personal incomes and time.
Who's giving and how much? Who's getting and how much?
At the heart of this presidential election campaign is a major debate over the dangers of "centralized" government. As the campaign accelerates, so will the charges that we, as individuals, are becoming more and more soft and supine, are forsaking our individual and local responsibilities for education, health, welfare, etc., and are turning over the responsibilities to Washington bureaucrats.

to philanthropy against 1.8 per cent in 1950 -- and the same upturn is discernible among businesses and foundations.
What's more important is not the increase in dollars that we, as individuals, are contributing; this would logically follow the upswing in our incomes. What's more important is the increase in the percentage of our incomes that we are contributing to philanthropic activities, for this reflects our awareness of responsibility and our willingness to rise to meet it.
Government at every level is using more and more of our tax dollars to finance health, welfare, education; and debate over whether "control" will follow the money is appropriate.
To date, though, there is little -- if any -- evidence to back up fears of government "control," while there is plenty of persuasive evidence to show that we, as private individuals and organizations, are responding to urgent needs for gift-giving.
It's a point crucial to any fair debate over whether we really are defaulting on our individual and local responsibilities and "leaving it to the government."

Thus, the above estimates on our private philanthropy -- obtained from Eldredge Hiller, executive director of the non-profit American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel, Inc. -- are of unusually timely significance.
Who's giving and how much?
First on the list of givers is you, the individual. You are "by far the nation's greatest philanthropic resource," says Hiller, "and the biggest givers are individuals in the middle-lower income groups."
Nearly 80 per cent of all charity dollars are contributed by individuals, and more than 85 per cent of all individual contributors have annual incomes of $10,000 or less. Out of $10 billion the nation gave voluntarily to public causes in 1963 individuals donated the overwhelming bulk of $7.9 billion -- and individual charitable bequests amounted to another $795 million.

ISRAELI POPULATION
JERUSALEM - A statistical abstract published this week reported that Israel's population was now 2,500,000 and that 38.8 per cent of Israelis were native born. Life expectancy in 1963 was reported as 70.9 years for men, and 73 years for women, among the highest rates in the world. Jewish women in Israel average 3.4 children each, which Israeli Arabs average 7.8 during their fertility periods of life.

Next on the list are foundations. Last year 15,000 of these organizations contributed $819 million.
Third are business corporations. In 1963 over one million of these contributed $536 million -- but most of the total came from a comparative few enlightened contributors.
The Fund-Raising Counsel counted only 178 gifts from all types of contributors amounting to $1 million or more, for an overall total of $663 million.
Who's getting and how much?
Religious organizations are the chief beneficiaries of this unprecedented outpouring. These get half of all contributions.
Educational institutions get around 17 per cent. Receiving smaller but still significant gifts are health, welfare, and other agencies.
Just in the past decade philanthropic giving has more than doubled in our country to an all-time high. Today we're contributing an estimated average 2.3 per cent of our total personal income

Hakofes At Mishkon Tfiloh

By Beryl Segal

"This is beautiful", exclaimed my grandchildren as they approached the synagogue Mishkon Tfiloh, the Place of Prayer, on Summit Avenue.

And Mishkon Tfiloh is beautiful with its large front window of green and blue and red glass glowing in the night. This is what a synagogue, a Shul, was like in the little town of my birth on the Ukraine. This is how the lights in its windows always illumined the streets around it on Friday evening, on Festival evening, and on Simchas Torah night especially.

This is what I wanted my grandchildren to see and feel. I wanted them to have a taste of the religious life of their great-grandparents, of their grandparents in their childhood.

You can tell children of Simchas Torah, you can wax romantic on rejoicing with the Torah, dancing with it in your arms, singing songs to it, walking around the synagogue with the Torah, going to Hakofes. But telling about something is not the same as actually seeing it, as every teacher can tell you.

And so I took my grandchildren on the night of Simchas Torah to the Shul in their neighborhood, to Mishkon Tfiloh. Let them, I thought to myself, see what I have seen, let them hear what I have heard, let them listen to the same tunes and melodies as I did when I was a child.

My grandchildren were like dreamers when they came inside the Shul. The bright lights almost blinded their eyes. The magnificence of the Aron Kodesh in the Eastern wall of the Shul left them speechless. That Aron Kodesh which the members of the synagogue were wise enough to pack in boxes when the old Shul was demolished, and then bring over and put together piece by piece, in their new synagogue, that Holy Ark is a masterpiece in white marble and gold decorations, perhaps the most beautiful in the city. The eyes are immediately drawn toward it, and the children were standing with their mouths open gazing at it. Then the separation from their brother and grandfather, though they knew about it, was extremely strange to them. They were bewildered by all this.

But the Simchas Torah flags which a lady gave them at the entrance, and the traditional red apple, and a bar of candy, all these distracted them and they settled down in the women's gallery to watch and to listen to the traditional Simchas Torah Hakofes. They sat quietly and took in every word which the Rabbi spoke, and they were absorbed by the chanting of the Tfilos by a venerable cantor who is blessed not only with years, but with wisdom which shows in his countenance, and with a pleasant voice which he raises with a youthful vigor.

The children were enchanted with the Hakofes. The Torahs were taken out of the Holy Ark, and with the cantor at the head, the men marched in a procession, singing and chanting all the time. They marched in a procession and the little boys were marching after them waving their flags. They circled the Shul several times allowing everyone to kiss the Torahs until all the men in the congregation had their turn, and at the end of each turn they sang and several men danced, holding the Torahs in their arms, and, it seemed to me, actually forgetting their mundane troubles and tribulations.

A young Rabbi explained to me the meaning of Simchas Torah and the joy of the Hakofes, and why the old way was more suitable to the rejoicing with the Torah.

When you come to the synagogue every day, every Sabbath, and you read every Sidrah in the Torah, the weekly portion in Scripture and you actually begin to read in it at the beginning and finish it as the year goes by, then you live with it, and you know the joy of the Torah. Then it is that the years take on meaning as the Torah is being rolled from section to section, from book to book, from end to end when you come to the end of the Torah you enjoy the year that is passed, and you wish that you may live another year and finish the Torah again. And the people in the congregation actually wished each other L'shono Bahoh, may we live to see next year, another Simchas Torah, and to be here once more to the Hakofes.

But we moderns cannot with our whole heart rejoice, and still less, dance with the Torah.

The number of days that we attend Synagogue are few indeed. We hear one portion of the Torah being read and then we skip several. The Torah has lost its continuity, and it has no relation to our daily lives. We do not count the days and the weeks by the Sidrah in the Torah as did our fathers. How can we rejoice, how can we dance, how can we sing the songs of the Shul?

We have lost something very valuable, and we do not even know what we have lost. Our religious observances of a public nature are forced, sometimes even bordering on the artificial, and therefore ridiculous in our own eyes.

I wanted my grandchildren to see and hear a natural joy of the Torah, just as I have seen and heard it when I was a child, and as their great-grandparents observed it freely, flowing out of the rhythm of their living, for many generations.

Did I succeed? I hope I did. I Hope so.

The Lyons Den

by Leonard Lyons

At each fund-raising dinner, Sen. Humphrey is interrupted by a call from the White House. Then he tells the guests: "It's a message to you from the President. He wants you all to double the amounts of your contributions" . . . Mark Fein, the millionaire accused of slaying his bookie over a World Series bet last year, goes on trial during the World Series this year. . . Jose Ferrer will star in a TV special for the U.N.

Ben Gazzara, star of the Broadway drama "Traveller Without Luggage," has the first call on the movie rights. . . Frederick Lowe, composer of "My Fair Lady," took five months of golf lessons before starting to play his first round. He quit, explaining: "It's too late for me to start getting an inferiority complex" . . . A French secretary, who was late for her lunch appointment, explained: "The man who was following me walked very slowly."

Roger Stevens, the Broadway producer and realtor, was guest of honor at the Sen. Jack Javits' last Sunday. He and Mrs. Javits are co-producing an off-Broadway musical. . . Stevens discussed his new post -- special assistant to the President on the arts: "The best things about it are the White House offices and switchboard. Now I can reach Leonard Bernstein whenever I want to."

Mrs. Winthrop Rockefeller, who's been in N. Y. working on a national mental hygiene program, is returning to Arkansas this week to start campaigning with her husband. . . Charlton Heston's next movie, "War Lord," will have Eliot Elisofon, the photographer, as "visual consultant" . . . A cab-driver who saw Bobby Kennedy said: "Carpetbagger, my eye. Mickey Mantle doesn't live in New York, but he plays for the Yankees, doesn't he?"

The Cuban ambassador to Israel sent a formal announcement "to all friendly nations" -- a message to the other ambassadors in Jerusalem. He stated that Cuba was about to launch a program to eliminate illiteracy. . . Ten days later the Cuban ambassador sent a second message to the other ambassadors -- announcing that illiteracy had been eliminated in Cuba.

Louis Armstrong, Carol Channing and Tony Bennett will star in Washington's Coliseum Oct. 11, at an LBJ-HHH rally of Nobel Prize winners and 6,000 scientists. Dick Adler will produce it. . . A "Hello, Dolly!" number has been interpolated in the "Ziegfeld Follies" revue at the Thunderbird in Las Vegas. . . Even Vince Albano, the banker and Republican leader of the New York County, attended last week's Liberal Party dinner for Humphrey and Kennedy.

Dan Dailey flew here from Hollywood to see his sister, Irene Dailey, co-star in "The Subject Was Roses." She told him of the young actress in her drama class who said: "I'm so envious of you and your play, I dream about it day and night" . . . "Don't dream about my few hours of glory," Miss Dailey replied. "Have nightmares about the 22 years I worked as a waitress."

In Calro's campaign against illiteracy, a huge banner has been displayed, "Aren't You Ashamed of Yourself, Not Being Able to Read?" . . . "Accoustica," the hi-fi whose speakers are hidden in lamps, was demonstrated in N.Y. Wednesday at the Trade Show Bldg. . . Jerry Lewis is paying for the 24-piece orchestra at AGVA's tribute to him at the Winter Garden Theater Dec. 6. If the event is a success, Joey Adams may produce a series of such Sunday night shows.

Aubrey Eban, Israel's former ambassador to the U.N. now is deputy prime minister. At the 21 Club Saturday night Sen. Javits addressed him as "Ambassador Eban," and asked if this still was his proper form of address. "To refer to me as Ambassador, Senator," replied the deputy prime minister, "is the same as my addressing you as 'Congressman.'"

Israel now has 200 millionaires. The money was made in citrus and in booming realty. . . Paddy Chayefsky says of the facts of political life: "Extremism in pursuit of political office is no vice" . . . Jack Benny's accountants examined the list of his various sources of income. They noticed no movie income from the Arab states. Benny said: "Well, the reason is obvious. I'm boycotted because I'm Jewish." The accountant then asked: "But why are your films being boycotted in Israel?"

Calls On Jews To Form Over-All Organization

WASHINGTON — The head of the Zionist Organization of America called on American Jews last week to establish an over-all body, cutting across doctrinaire lines, for the express purpose of coping with Jewish problems here and the world over.

Dr. Max Nussbaum, president of the organization, charged that American Jewish community life was in "utter disarray." This condition seriously hampers efforts to aid Soviet Jews, combat anti-Semitism here and abroad and strengthen every phase of Jewish life, he said.

His address before 1,000 delegates, representing virtually every section of the country, marked the opening of his organization's four-day 67th annual convention at the Willard Hotel. The organization numbers more than 100,000 members.

In quoting a recent assertion by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, who characterized American Jewish life as "organized chaos," Dr. Nussbaum said this state of affairs "has reached alarming proportions."

As an illustration, Dr. Nussbaum called attention to a special conference on Soviet Jews here last February that was sponsored by 24 Jewish religious and secular groups.

"The objective of the conference on Soviet Jews," he said, "namely to aid 3 million Jews of the Soviet Union against discrimination, has now almost been forgotten in the shuffle."

The Zionist leader directly appealed to 5 and 1/2 million Jews "from one end of the land to the other" to persuade their own leadership to urge the convening of "an American Jewish assembly at the earliest date."

He explained in an interview that such an assembly would be empowered to establish an over-all body that would embrace American Jewish secular and religious leadership, representing all religious and ideological viewpoints covering Jewish life.

The last such over-all body was the American Jewish conference that existed from 1943 until 1947 and included 64 Jewish groups.

It was organized for the rescue of European Jews from the Hitler regime, to press for the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine, and for the rehabilitation and reconstruction of Jews after World War II. It dissolved because some groups insisted on retaining independent action in Jewish problems.

In his address, Dr. Nussbaum said that while he did not believe in "mass Jewish emigration from the United States to Israel," he would like to see 5,000 American Jews a year settle in Israel and apply "their Western skills and know-how to the building of the land."

In this connection, Dr. Nussbaum read a cabled message from Premier Levi Eshkol of Israel, who called for "a wave of immigration from the West . . . coming of their own free will who will help build our economy, enrich our cultural, intellectual, spiritual life."

TO DISCUSS AGENDA

JERUSALEM — The Jewish Agency Executive decided this week to hold an eight-day plenary meeting starting on Oct. 25. Purpose of the meeting will be to discuss the projected agenda of the 26th World Zionist Congress meeting to be held here at the end of December.

AT GJC ANNUAL CAMPAIGN DINNER — Max Alperin, Initial Gifts chairman of the General Jewish Committee campaign, shakes hands with Zvi Kolitz, guest speaker at the annual General Jewish Committee Campaign Dinner held Wednesday night at the Sheraton-Biltmore Hotel. Standing left is Robert A. Riesman, general campaign chairman, and seated, right, Bertram L. Bernhardt, dinner chairman.

Mr. Kolitz likened the silence of the world concerning the present threats to Israel's independence to the silence of the Vatican during World War II. As co-producer of "The Deputy," the much disputed play about the Pope's silence concerning the killing of the Jews during World War II, he said that the play "to me was never controversial." He pointed out that since the opening of the play the producers had been deluged with "incredible" letters. But one note of three words, he said, asked a question which Mr. Kolitz felt reflected the attitude of the world toward the Jews. The three words: "How dare you?"

The Nazis asked, says Mr. Kolitz, "How dare you live?"; the Communists ask, "How dare you survive?"; the fanatics ask, "How dare you win?"

Joseph W. Ress, honorary president of the GJC, who spoke in place of Merrill L. Hassenfeld, president of the organization, who was ill. Mr. Ress emphasized that the theme of this year's campaign had been "re-evaluation." He said that "we (as Jews) must take an inventory of our conscience . . . to see the need of growth." "We . . . must support our local organizations as well as helping the state of Israel." It is not a matter of alternatives, he said.

Sen. John O. Pastore, who also spoke at the dinner, said that he spoke "as a friend, and not as a Senator." He said that over the years he had been "excited, surprised and stimulated by the exemplification of brotherly love" which he had seen in the Jewish community. He apologized for leaving immediately after speaking pleading the press of other engagements. With a smile, he said, "You have your campaign; I have mine."

Other speakers included Gov. John H. Chafee, Robert A. Riesman, general campaign chairman, and Bertram L. Bernhardt, dinner chairman. Rabbi Eli A. Bohen, of Temple Emanu-El, gave the invocation.

First Stage Of Plan To Exploit Jordan

AMMAN, Jordan. — The first stage of an Arab plan to exploit the Jordan River and its tributaries was initiated last week at a ceremony near Al Adasiyah, about 80 miles north of here.

All Nassouh Taher, vice chairman of the Jordanian Development Board, said the Arab plan to build the Mokhetba Dam on the Yarmuk River was aimed primarily at "saving the land which would be affected by Israel's usurpation of the largest part of the River Jordan's water and diverting it out of the river's basin."

The Mokhetba Dam, a $28.7 million project, is the initial stage of the Jordan River diversion program agreed upon by delegates at the Arab conference in Alexandria last month. The program would have the effect of nullifying Israel's irrigation plans, which depend upon Jordan waters.

Israeli Forces Strip 70 Yards Of Gravel From Disputed Road In Mt. Scopus Area

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Israeli forces in the Mount Scopus area of the Israel - Jordan border stripped 70 yards of newly laid gravel from a disputed road, according to reports reaching here.

The road provides access to the Arab village of Issawiya which adjoins Augusta Victoria Hospital in the Jordanian sector of Mount Scopus. The Israeli sector, including the Hadassah Hospital and Hebrew University, forms an enclave in Jordan territory under United Nations control. The United Nations does not, however, have the right of inspection inside the Israeli sector.

The road to Issawiya was the subject of a dispute in 1953 when the Israelis claimed it was in the area under the jurisdiction of their police force while the Jordanians claimed it was part of Issawiya village.

Because the road became impassable during the winter rains, its improvement was included in a program for improvement of frontier villages jointly financed by contributions of the World Council of Churches and the United States Government.

JERUSALEM -- Taxpayers in Israel, particularly those in the medium and high earning brackets, may have their income taxes reduced by two to six per cent. Textured Stockings Spell News In Women's Hosiery

NEW YORK — The big news in women's hosiery this season is textured, or patterned, stockings. They have given renewed fashion interest to the legs and thereby stimulated additional sales volume.

Sparked by the impetus provided by textured hose — which are characterized by an intrinsic design, such as a diamond or cable link, in the material — women's hosiery dollar volume this year is expected to advance at least 10 per cent on the retail level to close to $600 million.

Textured hosiery, in which a pattern on the stockings is immediately discernible, is not by any means a new development. They were worn in the Gay Nineties, in the Roaring Twenties and, most recently, were unsuccessfully revived about five years ago.

High-Fashion Interest
However about 18 months ago, textured stockings were reintroduced in the high-fashion area. Spurred by the interest shown by some leading retailers and fashion magazines, textured hose is now being emphasized not only by hosiery manufacturers but also by designers and ready-to-wear producers when their garments are displayed.

As a result, trade sources predict that women's textured hosiery will represent 1 to 2 per cent of total sales this year. According to the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers, 1964 women's hosiery shipments — which rose 11 per cent in the first half of 1964 to 40.5 million dozen — is expected to top the record of 76 million dozen set last year.

"There are about 100 times as many textured stockings being sold now as last year," one executive vice-president and head of a company hosiery division, has stated.

"Last year, textured hardly made a dent," says another executive vice president, adding that, "This year we can hardly compute the thousands of dozens that have been sold."

Another top industry executive has asserted that "textured stockings are here to stay. It definitely is not a fad."

Hosiery people say that textured stockings can be broken down into three basic categories. The first are the very sheer nylon dress stockings that differ from conventional hosiery only in the design. These are fine-gauge stockings made of 15 to 30 denier yarn.

The second category includes the medium-sheer nylon, or Dacron, stockings.

than the conventional type. The typical markup in department store hosiery departments last year was 41 per cent, according to the Controllers' Congress of the National Retail Merchants Association.

Markups Increased
But textured hose are giving retailers markups of 42 to 50 per cent, according to one manufacturer. The average, he said, is about 45 per cent.

Some hosiery manufacturers admit that they were caught flat-footed by the surge in demand for textured stockings. Deliveries to many retailers are running three to four weeks behind schedule, because production equipment for textured hosiery has been insufficient to meet current demand.

"No one was willing to put his neck out 90 days ago to gear up," one manufacturer reported. "But we learned a lesson from this."

Retailers are generally also excited about the sales surge of textured hosiery.

A spokesman for a large department store chain noted that textured stockings are worn for all occasions and in all colors, lengths and weights.

And finally there are heavy-weight Orlon, or wool hose, generally made in bright colors, and usually worn with casual clothing for campus, leisure-time and recreational activities. Both the over-the-knee lengths of 24 to 27 inches, and the knee-high lengths of 17 inches are selling well in this category.

A Shot in the Arm
In addition to increasing hosiery volume, the textured boom has had two other important effects for the wholesale and retail segments of the industry.

Manufacturers of both branded and unbranded hose say that they have developed new retail outlets because of the attention that textured hosiery has created among consumers. They cite sportswear shops, college shops and similar outlets that never before sold hosiery as among their new distribution points.

Retail markups, too, of patterned hosiery are generally larger

Bold textures in over-the-knee stockings are planned to contrast with patterns in the new fall tweeds and plaids.

By Barney Glazer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. - More than 200 representatives of the world's press, radio and television zeroed in on this city to attend the world press premiere of Warner Bros.' movie, "Cheyenne Autumn." The film stars James Stewart, Richard Widmark, Carrol Baker, Edward G. Robinson, Karl Malden, Sal Mineo, Dolores Del Rio, Ricardo Montalban, Gilbert Roland and Arthur Kennedy, and co-stars Patrick Wayne, Elizabeth Allen and John Carradine.

We came here to see the film at the Lincoln Theater. While on hand we'll help dedicate the Cheyenne Autumn Trail, over which heroic Injuns made the epic 1,500-mile survival trek, dramatically recreated in the movie like a moving Currier and Ives print.

With bare, hard truths, the John Ford-Bernard Smith production takes the bold approach to the shabby treatment given a band of 960 northern Cheyennes after they had surrendered in 1877 to General Miles who then deported them to a barren reservation land in what is now the state of Oklahoma.

One year later, most of them died from starvation and malarial diseases, for which they had received no medical care. Even 50 children suffered the same fate.

On the night of Sept. 9, 1878, 300 men, women and children - ragged remnants of the original 960 - slipped away in the darkness in a desperate attempt to reach their Yellowstone homeland, nearly 1500 miles distant. With hope rising from tragic depths during this amazing flight the Indians refused to knuckle under to 10,000 pursuing U.S. troops.

The drama activates audience pulses like Niagara Falls. Jimmy Stewart, a hallowed name in Hollywood, brings humor to the character of legendary Wyatt Earp. This is Stewart's third picture for his good friend John Ford.

Edward G. Robinson proves a natural as Carl Schurz, Secretary of the Interior who tries to help the persecuted Cheyennes. Richard Widmark plays a nice guy, also sympathetic towards the Indians.

Carroll Baker portrays a prim, young Quaker school teacher, a radical switch for the shapely and talented actress who played the extremely interesting lead in "Baby Doll" and the curvy film star in "The Carpetbaggers."

Karl Malden has an outstanding role as the over-disciplined army officer. Now 24, Sal Mineo portrays the famous Indian warrior, Red Shirt. He's come a long way since he won an Oscar nomination for his portrayal of the young Israeli terrorist in "Exodus."

Listed for many years as one of the world's most beautiful and mysterious women, Dolores Del Rio comes out of retirement again to play the Spanish woman, Ricardo Montalban, one of our most versatile performers, plays Chief Little Wolf.

Gilbert Roland continues the popularity he established in 1927 when he played opposite Norma Talmadge in "Camille." The brilliant star sharpens the role of Chief Dull Knife.

Arthur Kennedy has come a long way since he played Jimmy Cagney's younger brother at Warner Bros. in "City for Conquest." He plays Doc Holliday, Wyatt Earp's gambler friend. Patrick Wayne, John's 24-year-old son, won his acting spurs 11 years ago in "Rio Grande," also directed by John Ford. Pat has a meaty role in "Cheyenne Autumn" as the young cavalry officer.

Our beanie hat again comes off to tough, talented, terrific Elizabeth Allen - tough because she bounced back to dance in a musical

Arab 'Army' To Train Units

JERUSALEM—Ahmad Shukairy, head of the "Palestine Liberation Organization," told reporters last week that the "Palestine Army" approved by the Arab League would train commando units.

The formation of such an army was approved in principle at the Alexandria conference but the Arab rules did not set a date for the start of the army.

Shukairy also said that his organization intends to open offices abroad, first in New York and then on all other continents.

The announced purpose of the army, to be recruited from Palestinian Arab refugees, is to "liberate Palestine."

(In Washington, Sen. Kenneth Keating, R., N.Y.) strongly denounced the aggressive policies of Nasser's United Arab Republic and declared, "The time has come to end U.S. taxpayer support for this menace."

The New York lawmaker called for an immediate cut-off of aid by the President and the State Department

New City, Planned As Industrial Town, Officially Opens In Carmiel, Israel

CARMIEL, Israel - This new city officially drew its first breath last week, but a few score pioneers already occupied flats in Carmiel's functional, four-story apartment houses.

The Government, which is promoting Carmiel, plans to develop it into an industrial town of 50,000 within 20 years.

There is no apparent economic reason for building a city here. Like many of Israel's development projects, this one was motivated by political and security considerations. It is part of a broad plan for the dispersal of the population.

Arab Reaction Mixed
About 75 per cent of Israel's inhabitants and most of her industries are now crowded in the Mediterranean coastal plain, creating a twofold security problem. State leaders have warned that this concentration exposes the country to crippling air attack, while thinly populated regions abutting Arab states may be difficult to defend.

Central Galilee, which borders Lebanon, is 90 per cent Arab, and some of the inhabitants are regarded as fifth columnists. More than 30,000 Arabs live within a six-mile radius of Carmiel. There is only one Jewish settlement, with 180 persons, in the neighborhood.

The reaction of the Arab neighbors to the new city has been mixed. There have been public expressions of satisfaction based on a belief that it will bring progress to the region. More than half the laborers employed in the construction have been villagers from the neighborhood who had previously traveled to Haifa and other coastal cities in search of jobs.

But there has also been resentment because part of the city is rising on land expropriated from Arab owners.

Resistance to the expropriation was attributed by the Israeli Minister of Development and Housing, Yosef Almog, to intimidation by Arab nationalists. Interviewed in Tel Aviv, he said that the compensation offered was fair and the land offered in exchange compared favorably in quality and location. The choice between alternative lands or monetary compensation was left to the Arabs.

Mr. Almog and Adam Tal, head of the Government team building the city, said that the Arab villagers would benefit from Carmiel. Mr. Tal said that in planning the occupational structure for the city of 50,000, provision had been made for jobs in industry and construction for 12,000 Carmelites and 4,000 Arab neighbors.

Four thousand more will be employed in services for the city and 4,000 for services in the hinterland.

Industries have been lured here by extraordinary incentives. Mr. Tal said that an $800,000 breakfast - food plant that is to employ more than 400 workers will receive a long-term Government loan of $500,000 at low interest as well as a building plot near the Acre-Safed highway at a nominal rate, tax allowances and other privileges.

Cairo Editor Says Arabs Can Not Attack Israel

CAIRO — Cairo's most influential editor has publicly taken the position that Arab states cannot attack Israel because this would invite intervention by the world powers and would run counter to the worldwide desire for peace.

Although a number of other important Egyptians have expressed this view in private conversations, Arab leaders continue to talk in public about "liberating Palestine."

Mohammed Hassanein Heikal, editor of the daily newspaper Al Ahran and confidant of President Gamal Abdel Nasser, has twice opposed an attack in his column, a development considered significant by some Western diplomats.

Mr. Heikal's column, published each Friday, is generally considered the most authoritative reflection of the highest governmental thinking in the United Arab Republic.

Analogy With U. S. Policy
Some diplomats see a possible parallel between an evolving Egyptian position on Israel, as seen in Mr. Heikal's writing, and the United States' stand toward the Soviet Union in the cold war.

They are referring, that is, to the argument that a third world war is unthinkable because of the nuclear arms balance but that the United States must build its military strength to prevent any Communist miscalculation.

Mr. Heikal has developed similar themes in his weekly columns. Heikal asserted that Cairo had achieved military superiority over Israel — a point that some knowledgeable Western diplomats contest — but he said there were limitations on the use of military power. The column cited these obstacles:

▲ Situations in other Arab countries that prevent Cairo from moving its forces around Israel as freely as would be necessary in wartime.

▲ The power of countries that support Israel and "have fleets in the sea near s and bases that can have direct results on the battle and tip the balance at critical moments," an unmistakable allusion to the United States' Sixth Fleet.

▲ The atomic balance of power and its impact on the stand of the bigger countries.

Peace Without Justice
"The era in which we live," Mr. Heikal continued, "is under the pressure of nuclear terror, making many want peace even if it is not based on justice."

This was taken as an allusion to Premier Krushchev's position, which favors the Arabs in their dispute with Israel while asserting that disputes should be settled peaceably.

"Consequently," Mr. Heikal added, "the use of military power immediately is not in itself a solution to the problem."

In an earlier article, Mr. Heikal drew a parallel between the Arab-Israeli situation and the United States had over-whelming military power and would like to see changes in the Government of Fidel Castro, it did not use military power.

"This proves beyond doubt," Mr. Heikal asserted, "that no party in our age can take up arms to settle its accounts with another party, acting under the false illusion that the battle will remain confined between the two sides."

At another point, Mr. Heikal specifically asked whether any war

Dr. Howard Sachar To Address Dinner For UJA Campaign

Dr. Howard Morley Sachar, an American scholar, who specializes in the history of the Jewish people and Israel, will be the guest speaker at the Initial Gifts Dinner of the Blackstone Valley United Jewish Appeal on Sunday evening, Oct. 18, at the Ledgemont Country Club in Seekonk, Mass.

Dr. Sachar now resides in Jerusalem, where he is serving as director of Brandeis University's Jacob Hiatt Institute in Israel, the first fully-accredited university program for training American undergraduate students in the structure of the contemporary Jewish state.

The son of Dr. Abram Sachar, president of Brandeis University, he taught at the University of Massachusetts and was Hillel director of the University of California and at Stanford University.

Harry A. Schwartz is chairman of the dinner which will start at 6 P.M. Hyman Cokin is general chairman of the drive and Mrs. Jerome Berry is chairman of the women's division.

between the Arabs and Israel over the use of the Jordan River could be confined to the Middle East.

"We would be dreaming if we imagined this," he said, "for a few hours after war broke out, the scope of the battle will be widened and become the field of international interference."

The Jordan issue centers on Israel's plan to divert the headwaters for irrigation. The Arab countries fear that this would enable Israel to increase her population and thus her strength.

Some observers suggest that Mr. Heikal is developing a public rationale for the position taken by President Nasser at Arab conferences.

Warns That Exoneration Will Not Stop Anti-Semitism

NEW YORK — "The heart of the problem of whether the Jews alone are guilty of Christ's death," the Rev. Bernard P. Donachie maintained last week, lies in the realization that "Christ died as a result of sin and the whole human race was in sin."

"To blame the Jews," Father Donachie said in his sermon at St. Patrick's Cathedral, "is like placing the blame for a crime on the hand that held the gun as though the rest of the body were innocent."

To blame the Jews alone, he said "is wrong for the further reason that it conveys an entirely incorrect picture of the Catholic doctrine of Redemption."

"It portrays Christ as an unsuspecting and helpless human being dragged all unwilling before Pilate and the Sanhedrin," Father Donachie continued, "condemned to death and patiently suffering a terrible fate that He was helpless to escape."

"Only those who deny Christ's divinity could believe such a distorted story. If Christ did not die of His own free will, we must revise our entire Catholic theology. For, if He was helplessly murdered, we have not been redeemed at all."

He said "all sinners, Jew and Gentile alike," were guilty in the death of Christ.

If the Ecumenical Council disassociated the Jews from "any special blame for the crucifixion of Christ," he said, it would not mark a change in the Church's teaching, but would rather be "merely a reaffirmation of traditional Catholic theology."

"Whether Catholics in various countries at different times lived up to the Church's teaching is a question," Father Donachie said, "we leave to unbiased historians to decide . . ."

He warned that a declaration exonerating Jews would not of itself "automatically wipe out or reduce anti-Semitism in the world."

Birth Control Comes To Stray Israeli Cats

JERUSALEM (Israeli Sector) — Contraceptive pills are being used here for a purpose that would astonish the scientists who have been working on this method of birth control.

Miriam Rohtin, a clerk employed by the Israeli Electric Corporation loves animals in general and cats in particular.

She bitterly resents attempts to control the stray cat population by poison and similar means, but at the same time realizes that the feline population explosion is a headache for public health officials.

When she heard a radio talk about oral contraceptives, it struck her that the scientists must have experimented with these pills on animals before making them available to human beings.

She contacted Prof. Felix Sulman of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and he confirmed her suppositions.

Miss Rohtin thereupon started to provide the pills for stray cats in her neighborhood.

An official publication said that results were impressive. "There were considerably less litters of kittens, adding to the feline population," it said.
